

Isaiah Testifies of Christ

3rd Edition

Gregorio Billikopf

ISAIAH TESTIFIES OF CHRIST

GREGORIO BILLIKOPF

3RD EDITION

4 OCTOBER 2017

© 1996–1999, 2000–2017, 2017 Gregorio Billikopf

A study of Isaiah from the perspective of a member of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. My writings are not endorsed by the Church nor do they claim to represent the Church. If there is anything that is not doctrinally correct, please point it out to me so I can make the corrections. Every effort has been made to stay doctrinally true.

This book may only be distributed as long as it is done in its entirety, including this copyright notice, and no charge is made for it.

The official download page for this book is: <http://isaiah.awardspace.biz/>

Cover Art, Doré Bible Illustrations
On The Road to Emmaus

“And beginning at Moses and all the prophets, he expounded unto them in all the scriptures the things concerning himself” (Luke 24:27).

Surely the words of Isaiah must have played a vital role in such exposition. How I wish I could have been there to hear the words of our Savior and Redeemer.

This book is dedicated with much love

To my Jewish grandparents:

Jacob Billikopf & Ruth Marshall and Judah and his companions

And to my Chilean grandparents:

Carlos Encina Pinochet & Marta Bezanilla Rojas and Ephraim and his companions

—Ezekiel 37:16

מִי הוּא זֶה מֶלֶךְ הַכְּבוֹד יְהוָה צְבָאוֹת הוּא מֶלֶךְ הַכְּבוֹד סֶלָה

—Psalm 24:10

SELECTED KEY TO AUTHORITIES

Here are some of the resources used in the study of Isaiah for this work. Sometimes I utilized multiple versions of the same reference, such as electronic vs. hard copy; or two or more hard copies or electronic copies of a resource. Much of the bibliography is found as footnotes within the text itself. Some of the references do not fit as cleanly or nicely under a specific category, but I wished to refrain from creating additional categories. Since this book is in electronic format, please use the search capabilities.

Special thanks to SIL FONTS INTERNATIONAL for the use of their fonts throughout this book

SIGLA

Only the most basic and generalized siglum were used. For instance, for the Q we indicate separately the Great Isaiah Roll (1QIsa^a) and other rolls utilized (e.g., 1QIsa^b, 4QIsa^c). Peshitta and Syriac share the same siglum.

ⲓ	Pseudepigrapha
Ⲛ	Septuagint, LXX
ⲙ	Masoretic text
Ⲙ	Dead Sea Scrolls, DSS
ⲥ	Peshitta
Ⲥ	Syriac
ⲧ	Targum / Chaldee
ⲉ	Vulgate

ANCIENT MANUSCRIPTS AND TRANSLATIONS

Pseudepigrapha

- Charles, R.H. (1900) The Ascension of Isaiah. From the Pseudepigrapha. Translated from the Ethiopic Version, which, together with the new Greek fragment, the Latin Versions and the Latin Translation of the Slavonic, is here published in full. The Clarendon Press, Oxford. Asc Isa

Ⲛ Septuagint, LXX

- A New Translation of the Septuagint: And the other Greek Translations Traditionally Included under that Title*. A new translation of the Greek into contemporary English—An essential resource for Biblical studies. Albert Pietersma and Benjamin G. Wright, Editors (2007). Ⲛ
- International Organization for Septuagint and Cognate Studies. Esaias translated by Moisés Silva. NETS. Ⲛ
- Isaiah according to the Septuagint*. Codex Alexandrinus. Translated by R.R. Ottley. 2nd Edition, 1909. Cambridge. (Logos Bible Software) Ⲛ
- Rahlfs, A., & Hanhart, R. (Eds.). (2006). Septuaginta: SESB Edition (Is 44:24–25). Stuttgart: Deutsche Bibelgesellschaft. (Logos Bible Software) Ⲛ
- Tan, R., & deSilva, D. A., Logos Bible Software. (2009). The Lexham Greek-English Interlinear Septuagint. (Logos Bible Software) Ⲛ
- The Old Testament Greek Interlinear. Esaias Septuagint begins on page 912 out of 1242. Author not mentioned. URL <http://septuagint-interlinear-greek-bible.com/OldTestament.pdf> Ⲛ
- The Septuagint Version of the Old Testament and Apocrypha with an English Translation and with Various Readings and Critical Notes*. Also known as Brenton's 1851 translation of the LXX. Zondervan Publishing House, Second Zondervan printing, 1975. Ⲛ

- The Septuagint: The Bible used by our Savior and the Apostles. Used in the Christian church for a thousand years. First English Translation. Translated by Charles Thomson. A new edition, S.F. Pells. Volume II. London, Skeffington & Son, 1904. Reprint of 1883 edition. 📖
- Ziegler, J. (Ed.). (1983). Isaias (Vol. XIV, Is 36:13–16). Göttingen: Vandenhoeck & Ruprecht. Hard copy as well as Logos Bible Software. Also electronic Göttingen Septuagint collection including critical apparatus. 📖

㊦ Masoretic or related texts

- Bibles, also see under.
- Biblia Hebraica Stuttgartensia : SESB Version. (2003). (electronic ed., Jos 6:5). Stuttgart: German Bible Society. (Logos Bible Software) ㊦
- Biblia Hebraica Stuttgartensia. H.P. Rüger et J. Ziegler, Editio secunda emendate W. Rudolph et H.P. Rüger. Deutsche Bibelgesellschaft, Stuttgart. 1967/77, 1984. ㊦
- Biblia Hebraica, Editor, Rud Kittel. Privilegierte Wurtembergische Bibelanstalt, Stuttgart. 1929–1937. ㊦
- Boothroyd, Benjamin. Biblia Hebraica, or, the Hebrew scriptures of the Old Testament: without points, after the text of Kennicott, with the chief various readings, selected from his collation of Hebrew mss., from that of De Rossi, and from the ancient versions: accompanied with English notes, critical, philological, and explanatory.
- Hebrew Bible (BHS). (Accordance Bible Software) ㊦
- Hebrew Bible (Biblia Hebraica). (Accordance Bible Software) ㊦
- Jay Green, The Interlinear Hebrew-English Bible (3 Volumes), APGA Associated Publishers and Authors, Wilmington, Delaware, 1976. ㊦
- The Hebrew Bible: Andersen-Forbes Analyzed Text. (2008). (Jos 6:5). Francis I. Andersen; A. Dean Forbes. (Logos Bible Software) ㊦
- Van der Merwe, C. (2004). The Lexham Hebrew-English Interlinear Bible. Bellingham, WA: Lexham Press. (Logos Bible Software) ㊦
- Weil, G. E., Elliger, K., & Rudolph, W., Deutsche Bibelgesellschaft. (1997). Biblia Hebraica Stuttgartensia Apparatus Criticus (5. Aufl., rev., p. 361). Stuttgart: Deutsche Bibelgesellschaft. (Logos Bible Software) ㊦

📜 Dead Sea Scrolls, DSS

- Dead Sea Scrolls Biblical Corpus in Canonical order. (Accordance Bible Software) 📜
- Dead Sea Scrolls Biblical Corpus in Manuscript order. (Accordance Bible Software) 📜
- Discoveries in the Judean Desert, XXXII, Qumran Cave 1, II, The Isaiah Scrolls (Part 1: Plates and Transcriptions; Part 2: Introductions, commentary and textual variants), by Eugene Ulrich, Peter W. Flint and contributions by Martin G. Abegg (2010), Jr. Oxford, At the Clarendon Press. 📜
- Eugene Ulrich (2010). The Biblical Qumran Scolls: Transcriptions and Textual Variants. Supplements to Vetus Testamentum: The Text of the Bible at Qumran. Volume 134. Brill, Leiden, Netherlands. 📜
- Fred Miller, Dead Sea Scrolls. URL <http://www.moellerhaus.com/qumdir.htm> 📜
- Martin G. Abegg Jr., Peter Flint, Eugene Ulrich (1999), The Dead Sea Scrolls Bible: The Oldest Known Bible Translated for the First Time into English. San Francisco: Harper. 📜
- Qumran Biblical Dead Sea Scrolls Database by Lexham Press • Lexham Press (2011). (Logos Bible Software) 📜
- The Great Isaiah Scroll (online). The Israel Museum, Jerusalem. Enlargeable. URL <http://dss.collections.imj.org.il/isaiah#1:1>. 📜

§ Peshitta / Syriac

- Biblia Peshitta en Español: Traducción de los Antiguos Manuscritos Arameos (2006). Holman Bible Publishers. §
- LBP – The Holy Bible from the Ancient Eastern Texts: Aramaic from the Peshitta (e-Sword) §
- Leiden Peshitta. (2008). Leiden: Peshitta Institute Leiden. (Logos Bible Software) §
- Old Testament in Syriac (1913). Trinitarian Bible Society. §
- Peshitta Syriac Version of the Bible, George M. Lamsa (1957). A.J. Holman Company. §
- Syriac Peshitta Old Testament (Peshot T) (Accordance Bible Software) §
- The Aramaic-English Interlinear Peshitta Old Testament (2013). An Interlinear Translation Translated (with notes and commentary) by Rev. Glenn David Bauscher. Lulu Publishing. §

ⲧ Targum / Chaldee

- Alexander Sperber, The Bible in Aramaic based on old manuscripts and printed texts. The Pentateuch according to Targum Onkelos; the Former Prophets according to Targum Jonathan; The Latter Prophets according to Targum Jonathan. Third impression Brill, Leiden 2004. ⲧ
- Etheridge, John Wesley (1865), The Targums of Onkelos and Jonathan ben Uzziel on the Pentateuch; with the fragments of the Jerusalem Targum: from the Chaldee.
- Targum Onkelos, Jonathan, and the Writings (English) TARG-E, 2015. (Accordance Bible Software) ⲧ
- Targums Tagged. Aramaic Targums (Onkelos, Jonathan, and the Writings) (TARG-T) (2014). Based on the electronic text of The Complete Aramaic Lexicon Project (CAL) of Hebrew Union College, Cincinnati, OH, USA. (Accordance Bible Software) ⲧ
- The Aramaic Bible (22 Volumes, including Volume 11, edited by Bruce D. Chilton on Isaiah (1990–2007). (Logos Bible Software) ⲧ
- The Chaldee Paraphrase of the Prophet Isaiah, translated by the Rev. C.W. Pauli (1871). London Society House. ⲧ
- The Isaiah Targum: Introduction, Translation, Apparatus and Notes by Bruce D. Chilton (1987). Volume 11 in The Aramaic Bible: The Targums, series. A Michael Glazier Book: The Liturgical Press, Collegeville, Minnesota. ⲧ
- The Targum of Isaiah, edited with a translation by John F. Stenning (1949). Oxford, At the Clarendon Press. Printed in Great Britain. ⲧ

¶ Vulgate

- Bibbia. La Sacra Bibbia (Italian, Tradotti da Giovanni Diodati). Cambridge. La Societa Biblica Americana di New York. ¶
- Biblia Sacra, Vulgatae Editionis, Sixti V. et Clementis VIII, Jussu Recognita Atque Edita, Editio Nova, Londini: 1857. ¶
- DRB – 1899 Douay-Rheims Bible (e-Sword) ¶
- La Biblia ó El Antiguo Testamento traducidos al Español de la Vulgata Latina por el RMO. P. Phelipe Scio de S. Miguel de las escuelas pias, obispo electo de Segovia. Londres: Impreso 1823. ¶
- The Holy Bible Douay Version. Translated from the Latin Vulgate (Douay, A.D. 1609: Rheims, A.D. 1582. London Catholic Truth Society (14 Septembris 1955). ¶
- Vulgate – Latin Vulgate (e-Sword) ¶
- Weber, R., & Gryson, R. (1969). Biblia Sacra iuxta Vulgatam versionem (5th revised edition). Stuttgart: Deutsche Bibelgesellschaft with critical apparatus. (Logos Bible Software) ¶

BIBLES (BASED ON ...)

• AAT	American Translation, J.M. Powis Smith, U. of Chicago Press 1951 𐤀
• AMP	Amplified Bible, Frances Siewert (e-Sword) 𐤀
• AMPC	Amplified Bible Classic (e-Sword) 𐤀
• ASV	American Standard Version (e-Sword) 𐤀
• BBE	Bible in Basic English (1965) (e-Sword) 𐤀
• Berkeley	The Berkeley Version in Modern English – Zondervan 1959 𐤀
• Bishops	Bishops' Bible (1568) (e-Sword) 𐤀
• Brenton	Brenton's English Septuagint (e-Sword) 𐤄
• CEV	Contemporary English Version (e-Sword) 𐤀
• CJB	Complete Jewish Bible (e-Sword) 𐤀
• Darby	1889 Darby English Bible 𐤀
• DRB	1899 Douay-Rheims Bible (e-Sword) 𐤃
• EMTV	English Majority Text Version (e-Sword) Greek New Testament
• ERV	Easy to Read Version (e-Sword) 𐤀
• ESV	English Standard Version (e-Sword) 𐤀
• FDB	French Darby Bible (e-Sword) 𐤀
• FLS	French Louis Segond (e-Sword) 𐤀
• Geneva	Geneva Bible (1587) (e-Sword) 𐤀
• GLB	German Luther Bible (e-Sword) 𐤀
• GNB	Good News Bible (e-Sword) 𐤀
• GW	God's Word (e-Sword) 𐤀
• HCSB	Holman Christian Standard Bible (e-Sword) 𐤀
• HNV	Hebrew Names Version 𐤀
• ISV	International Standard Version (e-Sword) 𐤀
• JPS	Jewish Publication Society Bible 1955 (e-Sword) 𐤀
• JUB	Jubilee Bible (e-Sword) 𐤀
• KJV	King James Version (AV) 𐤀
• KJV1611	King James Version 1611 (e-Sword) 𐤀
• KJV1900	1900 Cambridge Edition of the King James Version 𐤀
• KoJB	Koren Publishers, The Jerusalem Bible, Jerusalem, 1998 𐤀
• LBLA	La Biblia de las Américas (e-Sword) 𐤀
• LBP	The Holy Bible from the Ancient Eastern Texts – Peshitta (e-Sword) 𐤄
• LEB	Lexham English Bible (e-Sword) 𐤀
• Leeser	Leeser Old Testament (e-Sword) 𐤀
• LITV	Literal Translation of the Holy Bible (e-Sword) 𐤀
• Moffatt	The Books of the Prophets (1939) Hodder & Stoughton: London. 𐤀
• Murdock	James Murdock New Testament (e-Sword) Greek New Testament
• NAS77	1977 New American Standard (e-Sword) 𐤀
• NASB	New American Standard Bible (e-Sword) 𐤀
• NBLH	Nueva Biblia Latinoamericana de Hoy (e-Sword) 𐤀
• NVI	La Santa Biblia: Nueva Versión Internacional (1984) (e-Sword) 𐤀
• Rotherham	Rotherham Emphasized Bible (e-Sword) 𐤀
• RV	Revised Version (e-Sword) 𐤀
• RV1865	Reina Valera 1865 – NABC 𐤀
• RV1865	Reina Valera 1865 (e-Sword) 𐤀
• RV1906	Reina Valera 1906 – Sociedad Bíblica Americana 𐤀
• RV1909	Reina Valera 1909 – Broadman & Holman Publishers 𐤀
• RV1960	Reina Valera 1960 – Broadman & Holman Publishers 𐤀
• RV2009 SUD	LDS Spanish 2009 Translation – Salt Lake City 𐤀
• RV60	La Santa Biblia Reina Valera (1960) (e-Sword) 𐤀

- RV95 La Santa Biblia Reina Valera (1995) (e-Sword) RV95
- RVG Reina Valera Gómez (e-Sword) RVG
- Spurrell A Translation of the OT Scriptures by Helen Spurrell, London 1985 Spurrell
- SRV Spanish Reina Valera 1909 (e-Sword) SRV
- SSE Spanish Sagradas Escrituras (e-Sword) SSE
- Tanakh A New Translation of The Holy Scriptures 1985(Jewish PS) Tanakh
- TLV Tree of Life Version (e-Sword) TLV
- TS2009 The Scriptures 2009 (e-Sword) TS2009
- WEB World English Bible (e-Sword) WEB
- Webster 1833 Webster Bible (e-Sword) Webster
- Wuest Wuest's Expanded Translation (e-Sword) Wuest
- Young 1898 Young's Literal Translation (e-Sword) Young

LEXICONS (INCLUDING SHORT TITLE)

- (2012). The Lexham Analytical Lexicon of the Septuagint. Bellingham, WA: Lexham Press.
- (2017). The Lexham Analytical Lexicon of the Hebrew Bible. Bellingham, WA: Lexham Press.
- Arndt, W., Danker, F. W., Bauer, W., & Gingrich, F. W. (2000). A Greek-English lexicon of the New Testament and other early Christian literature (3rd ed.). Chicago: University of Chicago Press. BDAG
- Bosman, H. J., Oosting, R., & Potsma, F. (2009). Wörterbuch zum Alten Testament: Hebräisch/Aramäisch-Deutsch und Hebräisch/Aramäisch-Englisch (A Hebrew/Aramaic-English and Hebrew/Aramaic-German Lexicon of the Old Testament). Deutsche Bibelgesellschaft.
- Botterweck, G. J., Ringgren, H., & Fabry, H.-J. (Eds.). (1977–2012). J. T. Willis, G. W. Bromiley, D. E. Green, & D. W. Stott (Trans.), Theological Dictionary of the Old Testament (Revised Edition, Vol. I–XV). Grand Rapids, MI; Cambridge, U.K.: William B. Eerdmans Publishing Company. TDOT.
- Brown, F., Driver, S. R., & Briggs, C. A. (1977). Enhanced Brown-Driver-Briggs Hebrew and English Lexicon. Oxford: Clarendon Press. BDB
- Chávez, Moisés (1992). Diccionario de hebreo biblico (1. ed.). El Paso, Tx: Editorial Mundo Hispano.
- Cheyne,
- Clines, D. J. A. (Ed.). (1993–2011). The Dictionary of Classical Hebrew (Vol. I–VIII). Sheffield, England: Sheffield Academic Press; Sheffield Phoenix Press. DCH
- Comprehensive Aramaic Lexicon. (2004). Targum Lexicon. Hebrew Union College. TgLex
- Davidson, Benjamin (1979). The Analytical Hebrew and Chaldee Lexicon. Zondervan Publishing House, Grand Rapids, Michigan.
- Davies, Benjamin (1876). Student's Hebrew Lexicon: A Compendious and Complete Hebrew and Chaldee Lexicon to The Old Testament. 2nd Edition, London, Published by Albert Cohn.
- Fuerst, Julius (1867). A Hebrew and Chaldee Lexicon to the Old Testament. 3rd Edition, translated by Samuel Davidson. London, Williams and Norgate. Fuerst
- Gesenius, W., & Tregelles, S. P. (2003). Gesenius' Hebrew and Chaldee lexicon to the Old Testament Scriptures. Bellingham, WA: Logos Bible Software. Gesenius
- Harris, R. L., Archer, G. L., Jr., & Waltke, B. K. (Eds.). (1999). Theological Wordbook of the Old Testament (electronic ed.). Chicago: Moody Press. TWOT
- Holladay, W. L., & Köhler, L. (2000). A concise Hebrew and Aramaic lexicon of the Old Testament. Leiden: Brill. CHAL or Holladay

- Jastrow, M. (1903). A Dictionary of the Targumim, the Talmud Babli and Yerushalmi, and the Midrashic Literature and II (Vol. 1). London; New York: Luzac & Co.; G. P. Putnam's Sons. Jastrow
- Jenni, E., & Westermann, C. (1997). Theological lexicon of the Old Testament. Peabody, MA: Hendrickson Publishers. TLOT
- Judit Targarona Borrás (1995). Diccionario Hebreo Español Bíblico, Rabínico, Medieval y Moderno. Riopiedras, Barcelona, España.
- Koehler, L., Baumgartner, W. (1958). Lexicon in Veteris Testamenti Libros & Supplementum Leiden: E.J. Brill. HAL
- Koehler, L., Baumgartner, W., Richardson, M. E. J., & Stamm, J. J. (1994–2000). The Hebrew and Aramaic lexicon of the Old Testament (electronic ed.). Leiden: E.J. Brill. HAL
- Koehler, L., Baumgartner, W., Richardson, M. E. J., & Stamm, J. J. (1994–2000). The Hebrew and Aramaic lexicon of the Old Testament: Aramaic (electronic ed., Vol. 5). Leiden; New York: E.J. Brill. HAL
- Pick, Aaron (1977). Dictionary of Old Testament for English Readers, Kregel Publications, Grand Rapids, Michigan.
- Strong, J. (2009). A Concise Dictionary of the Words in the Greek Testament and The Hebrew Bible. Bellingham, WA: Logos Bible Software. Strong
- Thomas, R. L. (1998). New American Standard Hebrew-Aramaic and Greek dictionaries: updated edition. Anaheim: Foundation Publications, Inc.
- Vine, W. E., Unger, M. F., & White, W., Jr. (1996). Vine's Complete Expository Dictionary of Old and New Testament Words. Nashville, TN: T. Nelson. Vine
- Young's Analytical Concordance to the Bible (1970).

BIBLE DICTIONARIES AND ENCYCLOPEDIAS

- Barry, J. D., Bomar, D., Brown, D. R., Klippenstein, R., Mangum, D., Sinclair Wolcott, C., Widder, W. (Eds.). (2016). In The Lexham Bible Dictionary. Bellingham, WA: Lexham Press.
- Beale, G. K., & Carson, D. A. (2007). Commentary on the New Testament use of the Old Testament. Grand Rapids, MI; Nottingham, UK: Baker Academic; Apollos.
- Brand, C., Draper, C., England, A., Bond, S., Clendenen, E. R., Butler, T. C., & Latta, B. (Eds.). (2003). In Holman Illustrated Bible Dictionary. Nashville, TN: Holman Bible Publishers.
- Easton, M. G. (1893). In Easton's Bible dictionary. New York: Harper & Brothers.
- Hastings, J., Selbie, J. A., Lambert, J. C., & Mathews, S. (1909). In Dictionary of the Bible. New York: Charles Scribner's Sons.
- LDS Library 2009 (electronic library)
- LDS Scripture Citation Index (electronic and app) URL <http://scriptures.byu.edu/>
- Ludlow, Daniel (Editor). Encyclopedia of Mormonism.
- M'Clintock, J., & Strong, J. (1891–1894). In Cyclopædia of Biblical, Theological, and Ecclesiastical Literature (Vol. I–X). New York: Harper & Brothers, Publishers.
- Orr, J. (Ed.). (1999). In The International standard Bible encyclopedia: 1915 edition. Albany, OR: Ages Software. ISBE
- Pick, Aaron (1977) Dictionary of Old Testament Words. Kregel Publications, Grand Rapids, Michigan.
- Pritchard, James B. (editor), The Ancient Near East, Volume 1: Anthology of Texts and Pictures. Princeton University Press, 6th Paperback printing, 1973,
- Singer, I. (Ed.). (1901–1906). In The Jewish Encyclopedia: A Descriptive Record of the History, Religion, Literature, and Customs of the Jewish People from the Earliest Times to the Present Day, 12 Volumes. New York; London: Funk & Wagnalls.

- Smith, William (1884). A Dictionary of the Bible: comprising its antiquities, biography, geography, natural history and literature. The John C. Winston Company, Chicago. Teacher's Edition.
- Smith's Bible Dictionary
- Wood, D. R. W., & Marshall, I. H. (1996). In New Bible dictionary (3rd ed.). Leicester, England; Downers Grove, IL: InterVarsity Press.

COMMENTARIES

- Alexander, Joseph Addison (1870). The Prophecies of Isaiah Translated and Explained (Vols. 1–2). New York: Charles Scribner & Co. (Hard copy, Zondervan Publishing, Grand Rapids, Michigan, 1962). Alexander
- Allis, Oswald T. (1974). The Unity of Isaiah: A Study in Prophecy. The Presbyterian and Reformed Publishing Company.
- Ancient Christian Commentary on Scripture (ACCS) (29 vols.)
- Baltzer, K. (2001). Deutero-Isaiah: a commentary on Isaiah 40–55. (P. Machinist, Ed.). Minneapolis, MN: Fortress Press.
- Baltzer, K. (2001). Deutero-Isaiah: a commentary on Isaiah 40–55. (P. Machinist, Ed.). Minneapolis, MN: Fortress Press. Hermeneia. Baltzer
- Barnes, Albert. Notes on the Whole Bible, Isaiah. Barnes
- Box, G. H., & Driver, S. R. (1909). The Book of Isaiah: Translated from a Text Revised in Accordance with the Results of Recent Criticism. New York: The Macmillan Co.
- Brown, J. (1853). The Sufferings and Glories of the Messiah: An Exposition of Psalm 18, and Isaiah, 52:13–53:12. New York: Robert Carter & Brothers.
- Bullinger, E. W. (1898). Figures of speech used in the Bible. London; New York: Eyre & Spottiswoode; E. & J. B. Young & Co.
- Bullinger, E. W. (1968). Figures of speech used in the Bible. Baker Book House, Grand Rapids, Michigan.
- Calvin, John. Calvin's Commentaries: Isaiah. APGA. Grand Rapids, Michigan. Calvin
- Cheyne, T. K. (1880). The Prophecies of Isaiah: A New Translation with Commentary and Appendices (Vols. 1–2). London: C. Kegan Paul & Co. Cheyne
- Cheyne, T. K. (1889). The Prophecies of Isaiah: A New Translation with Commentary and Appendices (Vols. 1–2). 5th Edition, Revised. London: C. Kegan Paul & Co. Cheyne
- Clarke, Adam. The Holy Bible: A Commentary and Critical Notes (Volume IV, Isaiah to Malachi). Abingdon Press, Nashville, New York. Clarke
- Cowles, Henry (1869). Isaiah with Notes: Critical, Explanatory, and Practical. New York, D. Appleton & Company. Cowles
- Driver, S.R. & Neubauer, AD. (1877). The Fifty-Third Chapter of Isaiah according to Jewish Interpreters. (Vols. I & II). Oxford and London: James Parker and Co. Neubauer & Driver
- Ensign, The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. Conference issues and other articles pertinent to the study of Isaiah and related matters.
- Ezra, A. I. (1873). The Commentary of IBN Ezra on Isaiah. (M. Friedländer, Ed.) (Vols. 1–2). London: Trübner & Co. Ibn Ezra
- General Conference (General Conference talks by Church leaders of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, where they have quoted Isaiah or taught related topics). General Conference
- Gill, John. Exposition of the Entire Bible. Gill
- Govett, R. (1841). Isaiah Unfulfilled: Being an Exposition of the Prophet. James Nisbet and Co. London.
- Gray, George Buchanan (1980). A Critical and Exegetical Commentary on the Book of Isaiah (Vol. I, I–XXVII). The International Critical Commentary (ICC). Edinburgh. Printed in Scotland. T&T Clark LTD. Gray

- Hawker, Robert (1816–1820). Poor Man’s Old Testament Commentary, Especially Volume 5.
- Henderson, Ebenezer (1857). The Book of the Prophet Isaiah: Translated from the Original Hebrew with a Commentary, Critical, Philological, and Exegetical. 2nd Edition. London: Hamilton, Adams, and Co. Henderson
- Henry, Matthew. Matthew Henry’s Commentary, Vol. IV Isaiah-Malachi. Henry
- Hertz, J.H., ed. (1978). The Pentateuch and Haftorahs. 2nd Ed, 1978, Commentary. Hertz
- Horsley, Samuel (1844). Isaiah (Biblical Criticism on the Nine Prophetical Books). 2nd Edition. Longman, Brown, Green and Longmans and F&J Riverton, London. Horsley
- Horsley, Samuel. Critical Disquisitions on the Eighteenth Chapter of Isaiah: In a letter to Edward King. From the London copy of 1799, Re-printed by James Humphreys, Philadelphia 1800. Horsley
- Institute Student Manual for the Old Testament, Vol. II (LDS)
- Ironside, H.A. (1985). Expository Notes on the Prophet Isaiah. Loizeaux Brothers, Neptune, New Jersey. Ironside
- Isaiah, Abraham Ben & Sharfman, Benjamin (1949), The Pentateuch and Rashi’s Commentary: A Linear Translation into English. (Vols. 1–5) Published by S.S. & R. Publishing Company, Brooklyn, New York.
- Jackson, Kent P., editor. Studies in Scripture (Especially Vol. 4, Kings to Malachi)
- Jennings, Frederic Charles (1966). Studies in Isaiah. Loizeaux Brothers, Neptune, New Jersey. Jennings
- Jenour, Alfred (1830). The Book of the Prophet Isaiah translated from the Hebrew; with Critical and Explanatory notes and practical remarks on the nature and use of prophecy. (Vols. 1–2). Seeley and Burnside, London. Jenour
- Journal of Discourses (26 vols., teachings by the early leaders of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints on Isaiah or related topics). JD
- Kaiser, Otto (1963). Isaiah 1–12 (Vol. 1). Part of the Old Testament Library series. The Westminster Press, Philadelphia. (Also see Westermann, for Vol. 3) Kaiser
- Kaiser, Otto (1974). Isaiah 13–39 (Vol. 2). Part of the Old Testament Library series. The Westminster Press, Philadelphia. (Also see Westermann, for Vol. 3) Kaiser
- Kay, W. (1893). Isaiah. The Holy Bible according to the Authorized Version (AD 1611) with explanatory and critical commentary by Bishops and other Clergy of the Anglican Church, Volume V, Isaiah-Jeremiah-Lamentations. New York: Charles Scribner’s Sons. Kay
- Keil-Delitzsch Commentary on the Old Testament
- Keil-Delitzsch Commentary on the Old Testament, Isaiah. Delitzsch
- Keith, Alexadner (1850). Isaiah as it is: or Judah and Jerusalem the subjects of Isaiah’s Prophesying. London: Longman and Co. Keith
- Lowth, Robert (1834). Isaiah: A New Translation, with A Preliminary Dissertation and Notes. Boston;Cambridge: William Hilliard;James Munroe and Company. Lowth
- Lowth, Robert (1848). Isaiah: A New Translation, with A Preliminary Dissertation and Notes. 14th Edition. London; Printed for William Tegg and Co. Lowth
- Ludlow, Daniel H. A Companion to Your Study of the Old Testament. Salt Lake City, Utah: Desert Book, 1981.
- Ludlow, Victor L. Isaiah: Prophet, Seer, and Poet. Ludlow
- Luther, M. Isaiah. Luther’s Works, Volume 16 & 17. Concordia Publishing House, Fortress Press. Luther
- Margalioth, Rachel (1964). The Indivisible Isaiah: Evidence for the Single Authorship of the Prophetic Book. Sura Institute for Research, Jerusalem; Yeshiva University, New York. Margalioth
- McConkie, Bruce R. A New Witness for the Articles of Faith. Salt Lake City, Utah: Deseret Book Company, 1985.
- McConkie, Bruce R. Doctrinal New Testament Commentary. (3 vols.). Salt Lake City, Utah: Bookcraft, 1965–1973.

- McConkie, Bruce R. The Messiah Series. Salt Lake City, Utah: Deseret Book Company, 1978–82. The Promised Messiah; The Millennial Messiah: The Second Coming of the Son of Man
- McDonogh, T.M. & Manton, Thomas (1858). Isaiah’s Report of The Messiah as revealed in the 53rd Chapter of his prophecy; Expounded in a series of twenty-four lectures. London: Wertheim, Macintosh, and Hunt. McDonough & Manton
- McFadyen, J. E. (1910). The Book of the Prophecies of Isaiah. New York: MacMillan Co. McFadyen
- McFadyen, John Edgar (1910). The Book of the Prophecies of Isaiah. New York, The MacMillan Company.
- Nägelsbach, Carl Wilhelm Eduard (1878). Lange’s Commentary on the Holy Scriptures, (Volume 11). The Prophet Isaiah. Zondervan Publishing House, Grand Rapids, Michigan. Nägelsbach
- Nyman, Monte S., & Charles D. Tate, Jr., eds. Isaiah and the Prophets: Inspired Voices from the Old Testament.
- Nyman, Monte. Great are the Words of Isaiah. Nyman
- Orelli, C. Von (1889). The Prophecies of Isaiah. Edinburgh, T&T Clark. Orelli
- Oswalt, J. N. (1986). The Book of Isaiah, Chapters 1–39. Grand Rapids, MI: Wm. B. Eerdmans Publishing Co. Oswalt
- Oswalt, J. N. (1986). The Book of Isaiah, Chapters 1–39. Grand Rapids, MI: Wm. B. Eerdmans Publishing Co. Oswalt
- Parry, Donald W.; Parry, Jay A.; & Peterson, Tina M. Understanding Isaiah.
- Paul, S. M. (2012). Isaiah 40–66: Translation and Commentary. Grand Rapids, MI; Cambridge, UK: William B. Eerdmans Publishing Company. Shalom Paul
- Peterson, Mark E. (1981). Isaiah for Today. Deseret Book Company, Salt Lake City, Utah.
- Poole, M. (1853). Annotations upon the Holy Bible (Vols. 1–3). New York: Robert Carter and Brothers. Poole
- Pratt, Parley P. A Voice of Warning and Instruction to All People Or, an Introduction to the Faith and Doctrine of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints New Edition. (1846) Salt Lake City: The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, 1957. Included is the preface to the First American Edition (1837) and the Second European Edition (December 4, 1846).
- Rawlinson, George (1910). The Pulpit Commentary: Isaiah (Vols. 1–2). Spence-Jones, H. D. M. (Ed.). London; New York: Funk & Wagnalls Company. (No date on hard copy.) Rawlinson
- Roberts, J. J. M. (2015). First Isaiah: A Commentary. (P. Machinist, Ed.). Minneapolis, MN: Fortress Press. Hermenaia.
- Rosenberg, Rabbi A.J. (2007). The Book of Isaiah: A new English Translation of the Text, Rashi, and a Commentary Digest (includes Redak, Ibn Ezra, Kimhi, and others). (Vols. 1–3) The Judaica Press, 5th Printing, Brooklyn, New York. Rosenberg
- Shaye J.D. Cohen, a professor of Hebrew Literature and Philosophy at Harvard, online courses, The Hebrew Scriptures in Judaism & Christianity and The Hebrew Bible.
- Simeon, Charles (1832). Isaiah. Horae Homileticae or discourses forming a commentary upon every book of the Old and New Testament. Volume 7 (Proverbs to Isaiah). Simeon
- Skinner, J. (1930) The Book of the Prophet Isaiah: In the Revised Version with Introduction and Notes. Cambridge: At the University Press. Part of The Cambridge Bible for Schools and Colleges. Skinner
- Slotki, Israel Wolf (1983). Isaiah. The Soncino Books of the Bible: Hebrew Text & English translation. (Revised by Rabbi A. J. Rosenberg). The Soncino Press Limited, London, Jerusalem, New York. Slotki-Rosenberg
- Smith, Joseph Fielding (1946). Church History and Modern Revelation. Salt Lake City, Utah: The Council of The Twelve Apostles of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints.

- Smith, Joseph Fielding (1957). Answers to Gospel Questions. Salt Lake City: Deseret Book.
- Smith, Joseph Fielding (1973). The Restoration of All Things. Salt Lake City: Deseret Book,
- Smith, Joseph Fielding. The Signs of the Times. “Restoration of Israel and Judah.” Salt Lake City, Utah: Deseret News Press, 1952.
- Smith, Joseph Fielding. The Way to Perfection: Short Discourses on Gospel Themes. 9th ed. Salt Lake City: Genealogical Society of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, 1951,
- Smith, Joseph Jr. History of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. Edited by B. H. Roberts. 2nd ed., Salt Lake City, Utah: The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.
- Smith, Joseph. History of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, (Vols. 1-7). Introduction and notes by B. H. Roberts.
- Standard works of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints: Bible, Book of Mormon, Pearl of Great Price.
- Talmage, James E. Jesus the Christ: A Study of the Messiah and His Mission According to Holy Scriptures Both Ancient and Modern.
- Teachings of the Prophet Joseph Smith, TPJS
- The Babylonian Talmud, Complete Soncino English Translation (online). But also see Neusner, J. (2011). The Babylonian Talmud: A Translation and Commentary. Peabody, MA: Hendrickson Publishers; Neusner, J. (2008). The Jerusalem Talmud: A Translation and Commentary. Peabody, Massachusetts: Hendrickson Publishers; Neusner, J. (1988). The Mishnah : A new translation. New Haven, CT: Yale University Press.
- The Jamieson, Fausset, and Brown Commentary JFB (Isaiah). Fausset
- Tov, Emanuel. Textual Criticism of the Hebrew Bible (2nd Edition), Augsburg Fortress Press, Minneapolis, MN, 2001. Also see Third edition.
- Urwick, William (1877). עֶבֶד יְהוָה. The Servant of Jehovah: A Commentary, Grammatical and Critical upon Isaiah 52:13–53:12. Edinburgh. T&T Clark LTD. Urwick
- Wade, G. W. (1911). The Book of the Prophet Isaiah with Introduction and Notes. London: Methuen & Co. Wade
- Westermann, Claus (1969). Isaiah 40–66 (Vol. 3). Part of the Old Testament Library series. The Westminster Press, Philadelphia. (Also see Kaiser, for Vols. 1–2) Westermann
- Whitehouse, Owen C. (1905). The Century Bible, Isaiah (Vols. 1–2). Edinburgh, London. Whitehouse
- Wildberger, H. (1997). A Continental Commentary: Isaiah 13-27. Minneapolis, MN: Fortress Press. Wildberger
- Wolk, Herbert & Stek, John. The New International Version Study Bible (Isaiah).
- Wordsworth, CHR. (1871) The Holy Bible in the Authorized Version with Notes and Introductions. Volume 5 (Isaiah, Jeremiah, Lamentations, and Ezekiel). London, Rivingtons, Waterloo Place. Wordsworth
- Young, Edward J. (1993). The Book of Isaiah: A Commentary: The English Text, with Introduction, Exposition, and Notes (Vols. 1–3). Eerdmans Publishing Company, Grand Rapids, Michigan. Young
- Zimmerli, W. & Jeremias, J. (1957). The Servant of God. Alec R. Allenson, Inc., Naperville, Illinois.

JST – INSPIRED VERSION

- Joseph Smith's "New Translation" of the Bible (1970). Edwards, Henry F. (introduction). Herald Publishing House, Independence, Missouri.
- Joseph Smith's Translation of the Bible (2010) – Electronic Library
- LDS Bible JST notes
- The Complete Joseph Smith Translation of the New Testament: A Side-by-Side Comparison with the King James Version. Wayment, Thomas A.
- The Complete Joseph Smith Translation of the Old Testament: A Side-by-Side Comparison with the King James Version. Wayment, Thomas A.

Great are the Words of Isaiah

*AND now, behold, I say unto you, that ye ought to search these things.
Yea, a commandment I give unto you that ye search these things diligently; for great are the words of Isaiah* —Words of the Savior in His visit to the ancient inhabitants of America, 3 Nephi 23:1

I have always had a curiosity for the scriptures, especially the Hebrew Scriptures (or the Old Testament). My paternal grandfather was a Lithuanian Jew and grandmother a German Jew. My maternal grandparents are both Chilean. I was converted and baptized into The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints in 1974, when I was 19, after reading the Book of Mormon: Another Testament of Christ. It was the Book of Mormon that compelled me to go back and become more interested in my Jewish roots.

Between my first reading of the Book of Mormon and my baptism three months later, the missionaries encouraged me to write my questions on the margins. I accepted that challenge and filled my Book of Mormon with questions and notes. I am a very slow reader but over the years devoured the writings of as many of the modern-day prophets as I could get my hands on, as well as the scriptures. It did not take long to fill the margins of my scriptures with notes, quotes and testimonies.

My interest in the Hebrew Scriptures grew after I joined the Church. In my personal journal I talk about studying the great Prophet Isaiah as early as 1983. While the writings of Isaiah and the Prophets have always held a special appeal for me, it was in 1996, while reading the Book of Mormon, that the words of our Savior sank deep into my heart: “And now, behold, I say unto you, that ye ought to search these things. Yeah, a commandment I give unto you that ye search these things diligently; for great are the words of Isaiah” (3 Nephi 23:1). I was somewhat surprised and asked myself: why did the Lord want me to study Isaiah? The Savior also admonished: “Search the prophets” (3 Nephi 23:5b), נְבִיאִים or NEVI’IM (the Jewish Scriptures are divided into three major categories, the law, the prophets and the writings).

These admonitions turned into a labor of love. I wrote this book, above all, as one of reflections for myself. When the margins of my scriptures could no longer hold my notes, my wife suggested that I keep a separate journal. These notes represent my electronic Scripture journal. I finished my handwritten journal on Isaiah on 6 October 1999. I finished my first electronic chapter in my Isaiah study on 12 March 2000; and the last on 7 May 2017. My next steps, beginning with 7 May 2017, are to edit each chapter and then compile these into book form. It is my hope to revise this book from time to time, as I gain additional insights.

This book reflects my own understanding and does not represent the views of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. Having said that, if there is anything that seems contrary to the teachings of the Church, I hope you will point these out to me so I can make the necessary corrections.

There is quite a bit of repetition in these pages. This is in part because similar topics rise from time to time. I have even thought of someday producing an electronic version with special links to these repetitive topics. I have also included parts of my journal entries as well as testimonies along the way. You will also notice that some of the topics that were prominent at the time I was writing find themselves into these pages.

This book is written directly to members of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints who have an interest in the Prophet Isaiah. It is hoped that both members, as well as our friends from other faiths, may find some value in these pages. I have a deep and abiding testimony of our Heavenly Father; His Son, our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ; the Prophet Joseph Smith; and The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints and the living prophets.

Great effort required

The first thing I learned was that this labor would be demanding. Like Oliver Cowdery, I had supposed that all I had to do was ask. When Oliver could not carry out the work of translation, the Lord said, “Behold, you have not understood; you have supposed that I would give it unto you, when you took no thought save it was to ask me” (D&C 9:7).

Elder B. H. Roberts taught that “It requires striving—intellectual and spiritual—to comprehend the things of God—even the revealed things of God. In no department of human endeavor is the aphorism ‘no excellence without labor’—more in force than in acquiring knowledge of the things of God. The Lord has placed no premium upon idleness or indifference here ... the truth here contended for—achievement in divine things, progress in the knowledge of them, comes only with hard striving, earnest endeavor, determined seeking.”¹

For the first several chapters of Isaiah, I kept telling myself. “I will never understand this chapter.” Yet eventually I would get an understanding of sorts. I eventually changed my notion to: “This chapter is just as hard as the ones I have completed, yet with work and God’s help I will, in time, come to an understanding.”

Towards the end of the project I was surprised when on occasion I received guidance from the Lord before I had put in the effort to understand.

This effort would take over two decades of joyous enterprise. Not to finish or complete, for I can see how I could profitably spend the rest of my days cherishing the words of Isaiah and continually revising what I have written.

At first it was taking me seven months to complete a chapter and post it on the Internet. This was when I was limited to about two or so hours of study per day. I have become more efficient and now that I am retired, have more time to devote to the work.

Scripture study is much like entering a room and finding that there are adjoining doors and windows that offer additional insights. And those new rooms have yet more doors and windows, and so on.

“For precept must be upon precept, precept upon precept; line upon line, line upon line; here a little, and there a little” (ISAIAH 28:10).

It seems that almost every time I reread a scripture I find additional meaning and inspiration. I particularly love reading and rereading the same passage over and over throughout several weeks. The scriptures seem to form one eternal round.

As I got ready to post each chapter on the Internet in PDF format, I included two dates. The first posted date as well as a last revised date. I have accurate first posted dates for some of the chapters but for others, approximations. Some of these posting dates are wrong. These dates are sometimes important as I was working on these chapters during 11 September 2001 or some other important event that often had some relation to what was happening in the world around me and what I was reading in Isaiah.²

The last revised date is particularly important because it sends the message that I plan to keep correcting, adding and changing what I have written as I continue to learn. While these dates have been removed from the book, the idea that I am going to be continually learning and revising has not disappeared.

Some of my notes from the handwritten journal have worked themselves into the main text; most have not.

Because so few people, relatively speaking, are interested in Isaiah, I found that writing was a little like talking to myself when nobody else might want to listen.

Prayerful analysis has been the key to this study, especially as I am exposed to so very many perspectives.

Scripture and Teachings of the Brethren

Gladly, we have both other Scriptures and the teachings of the Brethren on many of Isaiah’s writings. There are several sources I have used to find these. At first I made special use of the LDS Library, getting each new edition until the last one in the series, the LDS Library 2009. I was very sad the software was discontinued.

I have kept my old Windows XP computer just so I could use this library as well as a program where I can “fly over the Holy Land,” the Holy Land Satellite Atlas and CD (produced by Rohr Productions).

More recently, I have made constant use of the LDS Scripture Citation Index. In this way I can see what has been said in the Journal of Discourses as well as in the General Conferences, on every verse in Isaiah. It is a wonderful resource—so much so that I also use it in my daily study of the Book of Mormon. It also includes the Teachings of the Prophet Joseph Smith, but unfortunately at this time the Index makes no

² I put aside my Isaiah project for about 30 months (around 2004–2006) to translate the prophetic books into Spanish as a help to the translation committee of the Church, for the LDS Reina Valera 2009. I think the only contribution that was mine, at the end, was the pronunciation guide I provided for the Sister who read the Hebrew alphabet included in Psalm 119. This translation exercise was of great learning value to me and I am grateful for the opportunity.

¶ IMPORTANT NOTE: The Spanish LDS version, Reina Valera 2009, did not set out to give the literal meaning of the Hebrew Bible, but rather, to generally follow the text of the 1909 Reina Valera with as few changes as possible. While the LDS edition is a remarkable and beautiful translation, especially given the speed with which it was accomplished, Church members should not think that it is better than the KJV or that it automatically renders better translations than the Reina Valera 1960 in every instance. The greatest contribution of the LDS edition, in my mind, was to have the priceless JST notes and LDS chapter headings. Contrary to the KJV, Reina Valera 1960 was copyrighted material and as such could not be used.

¹ Elder Brigham Henry Roberts, The Seventy’s Course in Theology (1907-1912). Fifth year, p. iv.

differentiation between the Prophet's use of scriptural expressions and his comments on the scriptures.

The Book of Mormon, the Inspired Version or JST, and the explanations of the Brethren constitute the best commentaries on Isaiah.

You will note that I have carefully compared the King James Version (KJV, also known as the Authorized Version or AV) with both the Book of Mormon and the Inspired Version and noted every change in the body of this work, through a color coding system.

There are numerous verses where the Brethren have made no comments on Isaiah. Had this not been the case, this tome probably would not have been needed.

I am also grateful for the LDS Library App. I no longer have to worry about margins! Under every word I can add extensive commentaries and testimonies; link verses to other Scriptures; and tag certain types of contents for quick study and comparison. I can also bookmark important scriptures. Finally, all of my work on my phone can be transferred easily to my iPad and vice versa. It took me several years to transfer my notes from the margins of my English and Spanish Scriptures to the electronic version but it has been wonderful to have them handy.

Hebrew Masoretic text (מ)

My next effort was to compare the Hebrew Masoretic text (מ) to the KJV. I was most likely to do this when the text of the KJV seemed difficult to comprehend.

I should quickly note that in my opinion, the KJV is the best translation into English from the Hebrew Masoretic text (מ). There are other translations that from time to time, in my opinion, have a better translation of a particular verse or clause, but these improved translations tend to come from various English versions rather than from the same one.

I have a particular like for translations that are more literal, such as the KJV, NASB, LITV, ASV, HCSB, Rotherham, and I have a special affection for Leeser. Please note that I am speaking of the Hebrew Bible. Some of these same translations are quite unfortunate in terms of how they handle the New Testament.³

The KJV preserves the Messianic testimony of Scripture more than any other version I have encountered, and that is another reason why I love it so much.

Other ancient Scriptures

While we can well assume that the Hebrew was the original text for most of the Jewish Bible, we do not have any extant original signatures of any of these Scriptures. What we have are copies of copies of copies. So it is possible, for instance, that in some instances another ancient manuscript will have preserved the original meaning more accurately than the Hebrew Masoretic text (מ).

Beside the Masoretic text (מ) we have a number of important translations of the Old Testament including the Syriac (ܣ), Peshitta (ܫ), Targum (ܬ), LXX (Λ), Vulgate (V), and Dead Sea Scrolls (DSS) (Q)—as well as their translations into English or Spanish. I love the contributions of the Inspired Version or the Joseph Smith Translation (JST) and have given them the highest priority in this study while recognizing that the KJV is our official Bible.

I spend a considerable amount of time comparing the DSS (Q) to each other as well as to the Masoretic text (מ). One of the great interests for this effort was to see how frequently there are small changes of the type that the Prophet Joseph Smith included in both the Book of Mormon and in the Inspired Version (no, I am not suggesting that these changes frequently agreed with these version, but rather, that these changes were quite typical). With this edition, however, I realized that most readers will not want to read each and every one of the changes I noted, so I have deleted most of them, leaving only a few samples here and there. In ISAIAH 30:19, for instance, I had originally included this note: The Masoretic text (מ) is usually translated as “He will be gracious &c.” while the DSS 1QIsa^a (Q) adds YHWH, יהוה, or LORD so it reads, “The LORD will be gracious &c.”

Lexicons

I am grateful for the extensive collection of Hebrew-to-English Lexicons (dictionaries that translate foreign words) that are available to us. These vary in their thoroughness but are a great help in working through and comparing difficult translations.

Commentaries and other books

There are dozens of commentaries—or exegetical works—on Isaiah. Some of them specialize on Isaiah, some on particular portions of Isaiah and others cover larger portions of Scripture and include Isaiah. These include books written by Jewish authors or by Christians of other faiths.

Among the exegetes, or Biblical scholars, we often find excellent insights. I have come to expect these pearls of wisdom from several of them. In some instances observations are mentioned as an aside—or even when arguing an opposite perspective. Even these contrary perspectives are often quite useful.

³ I particularly recommend Elder J. Reuben Clarke's book, Why the King James Version when considering Biblical versions of the New Testament. And even in the Old Testament, the KJV best preserves the Christ-centered meaning of the scriptures.

In ISAIAH 9:1, the KJV speaks of “the way of the sea.” The Prophet Joseph Smith, in the Inspired Version has “the way of the Red Sea.” Most all exegetes think the reference is to the Mediterranean or the Sea of Galilee—and do not even mention the Red Sea—so it is interesting to have someone mention the Red Sea even if it is to discard the idea. I am pleased to have found a defense for the Prophet Joseph Smith and for the Book of Mormon in the ancient Targum Jonathan (Ⲯ).

Or, take ISAIAH 52:15. The word ⲙⲓⲣⲓⲛ is translated as sprinkle in the KJV, and even in the Book of Mormon. Almost all exegetes and translators think of the word as sprinkle. When a Biblical scholar, seemingly out of nowhere, rejects the idea of translating it as gathering, as we find it in the Inspired Version, I find this worth noting. I have found additional support for the Prophet’s translation in these two instances.

I found that I am not alone in making such arguments on the usefulness of contrary opinions. For instance, Jenour has, in his notes on ISAIAH 59: “To use the words of Vitranga (although his view of the general meaning of the prophecy is entirely different from that which I have taken),” after which he goes on to make a point.

And of course there are those instances where there seems to be no backing of the Inspired Version or of the Book of Mormon alternate renderings. I have a testimony of both the Book of Moron and the Inspired Version and am not concerned when we cannot find additional confirmation at this time. My testimony is not based on scholarly proofs.

There have been Bible dictionaries and atlases, as well as other books that have also been most useful. Finally, at times LDS scholarly authors have contributed brilliant observations to my study.

Where all these books and resources are found

I began collecting books by frequent visits to used bookstores. Then I was able to use electronic computer programs such as e-Sword. E-Sword makes available numerous translations for easy comparison as well as commentaries. Most of the materials are free but I have also purchased many of their modules.

The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints produced an excellent program entitled LDS Scriptures Resource. For basic scripture look-ups I have used a number of programs, some of which are no longer available. The latest I have settled on for quick searches is WORDSearch. I also use Accordance for work on the Dead Sea Scrolls (Ⲯ) and other ancient languages.

I lean most heavily on Logos Bible Software for my day-to-day analysis, even though some of their books have been sloppily reproduced and are filled with typos. Logos has been a wonderful time saver and I have purchased hundreds of titles from them. These include Lexicons as well as commentaries and Bible versions.

I have found a treasure in the thousands of Biblical books from the Internet Archive. Among these books one can find lexicons, commentaries, atlases, dictionaries, ancient language grammars and LDS references. Two other sources of note include the Christian Classics Ethereal Library and Google Books in PDF format.

Transliterations or Hebrew

I have noticed that a great number of works use transliterations to represent the letters or characters of the Hebrew language. I have an antipathy for transliterations and use them very sparingly. I have been successful in teaching most people to pronounce Hebrew in less than two hours, and it is so easy to learn the basics of pronunciation, that there is really no need for transliterations. There are now wonderful apps that you can use to learn how to pronounce words in Hebrew, build your vocabulary, and much more. In some instances I have color coded words in Hebrew to the corresponding English words to facilitate understanding.

Specific dates, tree and animal names

This work does not attempt to make out specific dates, nor distinguish between precious stones, species of trees, or names of animals. When I deal with these subjects, no accuracy is implied.

Multiple frames of reference

Some of the prophecies of Isaiah had their fulfillment at the time of Isaiah or soon thereafter; others are intimately related to the restoration of the Gospel; yet others have reference to the Millennium and thereafter. Many of the prophecies are to be fulfilled at various times in history. A focus on one particular timeframe in this work is not intended to deny fulfillment at other times.

The Holy Temple

As we study Isaiah we will note multiple occasions where there are allusions to sacred temple ordinances. As you study Isaiah, keep these things in mind because we will not speak about them in this book—unless they are direct quotes from the mouth of the Brethren. President Boyd K. Packer taught: “We do not discuss the temple ordinances outside the temples. It was never intended that knowledge of these temple ceremonies would be limited to a select few who would be obliged to ensure that others never learn of them. It is quite the opposite, in fact. With great effort we urge every soul to qualify and prepare for the temple experience.”⁴

Unity of Isaiah

Originally, I had planned to write a chapter on the Unity of Isaiah. There has, however, been so much wonderful material written on the unity of this great book that I hardly find it necessary.

The arguments against its unity border on the absurd. For instance, in one chapter assigned to second Isaiah by the critical school, one such author is overwhelmed by the similarities in writing with the first Isaiah. So, he suggests, it must have been an imitator of the first Isaiah!

Those from the critical school, by the way, agree very little between each other: each one trying to outdo the next in their bizarre propositions.

I was 42 when I began in earnest to write the first edition of this book, and I am now an old man of almost 63. I do not know how many more years the Lord will grant me to live upon this earth, and I rather spend them studying the scriptures. Perhaps my next book will be on the Prophet Zechariah. I have a great desire to study Jeremiah, Ezekiel, Daniel, and the Minor Prophets yet I realize that I am unlikely to get very far using the careful and methodical approach I have so much enjoyed. So I do not wish to waste my time defending the unity of Isaiah with intellectual arguments.

It reminds me of the great words of Nehemiah, who did not wish to be distracted from building the walls of Jerusalem: “I am doing a great work, so that I cannot come down: why should the work cease, whilst I leave it, and come down to you?” (Nehemiah 6:3b).

Not only are there excellent books written on the subject of the unity of Isaiah, but it all boils down to one single point—one admitted by both sides of the controversy: the existence of divine inspiration. I testify that the Lord speaks to mankind through living prophets, through inspiration, and through the scriptures. I testify that divine inspiration exists and that prophets of old as well as modern-day prophets speak by divine inspiration.⁵

Divine Investiture

A careful reading of the Old Testament seems to indicate that the word Elohim is often used as an exalted title for deity as well as a noun meaning God or angels. It is at times also used to speak of pagan gods. Both titles, Elohim (אֱלֹהִים) and Adonai (אֲדֹנָי) have been applied to each God the Father and God the Son. In the Old Testament, it needs to be pointed out, Elohim is almost always associated with Jehovah or Yahweh (JHVH or YHWH). For instance, in the KJV, we frequently encounter the expression LORD God, which literally, in Hebrew, would be rendered Jehovah Elohim (יְהוָה אֱלֹהִים). Furthermore, we come across scriptures that say that the “LORD he is God,” (Deuteronomy 4:35), יְהוָה הוּא הָאֱלֹהִים. Or rather, the more literal rendition is “Jehovah, He the God.” This last statement is given a double emphasis in 1 Kings 18:39:

יְהוָה הוּא הָאֱלֹהִים יְהוָה הוּא הָאֱלֹהִים.

Once again, it becomes clear that when Elohim is used as an exalted title in the Jewish Holy Scriptures or Old Covenant, and that it almost always refers to Jehovah, Jeshua, or the promised Messiah, Jesus the Christ. This does not mean that God the Father is absent from the Old Covenant. As we shall see, he is intimately present.

In Genesis 1:1 we read: “In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth.” Or rather, “In the beginning Elohim created the heaven and the earth.” Analyzing the Hebrew for the expression ‘in the beginning’ (BERESHIT, בְּרֵאשִׁית), the Prophet Joseph Smith taught us that בְּרֵאשִׁית, based on the word ROSH (רֹאשׁ), head, originally was missing the BETH (ב) and meant “The Head One of the Gods.” This is interesting to me because—although I realize Brother Joseph was not speaking of Elohim the FATHER here—the expression Elohim has been defined precisely as the head God in the Ugaritic tradition (TWOT).

Lest anyone be confused, the word Elohim does not appear in our Standard Works in English. It emerges hundreds of times in Hebrew and almost always represents the LORD God, or Jehovah God, the Christ. In General Conference and LDS writings (including the LDS Topical Guide and the writings of the Brethren), when the exalted title Elohim is used, it almost always represents the Father.

But returning to the topic of Divine Investiture, the Savior makes it clear that none of His words are His own, but rather, He glorifies the Father: “For I have not spoken of myself; but the Father which sent me, he gave me a commandment, what I should say, and what I should speak” (John 12:49, emphasis added). We also read: “Now they have known that all things whatsoever thou hast given me are of thee. For I have given unto them the words which thou gavest me...” (John 17:7–8a).

The Sweetness of the Unity between the Godhead. The Father and the Son and the Holy Spirit are three distinct beings who are one in purpose. There is no envy between them. They are of one mind. This truth was powerfully revealed to me by the Holy Spirit on the way home from school, as a young boy of thirteen or so, years before I ever saw, heard of, or handled the Book of Mormon (or any literature published by The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints).

⁴ President Boyd K. Packer, “The Holy Temple,” October 2010 General Conference.

⁵ “The Prophet Joseph Smith taught that ‘a prophet [is] a prophet only when he [is] acting as such.’” The Doctrine of Christ, by Elder D. Todd Christofferson, April 2012 General Conference.

It is understandable that some—when taking the scriptures out of context—are confused: “Philip saith unto him, Lord, shew us the Father, and it sufficeth us. Jesus saith unto him, Have I been so long time with you, and yet hast thou not known me, Philip? he that hath seen me hath seen the Father; and how sayest thou then, Shew us the Father? Believest thou not that I am in the Father, and the Father in me? the words that I speak unto you I speak not of myself: but the Father that dwelleth in me, he doeth the works. Believe me that I am in the Father, and the Father in me: or else believe me for the very works’ sake” (John 14:8–11).

As LDS we believe that the Savior of mankind, Jehovah, was made in the similitude of Elohim, God the Father. The person who has seen the Son has also seen the Father because of their likeness. But the primary purpose of these verses are not to speak just of the physical similarity between the Father and the Son, but to make it clear that the Father and the Son are one in purpose—despite being different individuals. The next verse makes this plain: “Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that believeth on me, the works that I do shall he do also; and greater works than these shall he do; because I go unto my Father. And whatsoever ye shall ask in my name, that will I do, that the Father may be glorified in the Son. If ye shall ask any thing in my name, I will do it” (John 14:12–14). In other words, just as the Savior does the works of the Father, we can do the works of the Savior, which in turn are the works the Father would have us do.

So also we have the words of the Savior: “Verily, verily, I say unto you, this is my gospel; and ye know the things that ye must do in my church; for the works which ye have seen me do that shall ye also do; for that which ye have seen me do even that shall ye do; Therefore, if ye do these things blessed are ye, for ye shall be lifted up at the last day” (3 Nephi 27:21–22, emphasis added).

This is essentially a message of unity of purpose, as we find in D&C 50:43, “And the Father and I are one. I am in the Father and the Father in me; and inasmuch as ye have received me, ye are in me and I in you.” And John 17:11b; 17:21–22 make this point even clearer, beyond any doubt, that the question is one of unity of purpose: “Holy Father, keep through thine own name those whom thou hast given me, that they may be one, as we are,” and “That they all may be one; as thou, Father, art in me, and I in thee, that they also may be one in us: that the world may believe that thou hast sent me. And the glory which thou gavest me I have given them; that they may be one, even as we are one.” Well is it said that “For there are three that bear record in heaven, the Father, the Word, and the Holy Ghost: and these three are one” (1 John 5:7).

Joseph Fielding Smith taught: “All revelation since the fall has come through Jesus Christ, who is the Jehovah of the Old Testament. In all of the scriptures, where God is mentioned and where he has appeared, it was Jehovah who talked with Abraham, with Noah, Enoch, Moses and all the prophets. He is the God of Israel, the Holy One of Israel; the one who led that nation out of Egyptian bondage, and who gave and fulfilled the Law of Moses. The Father has never dealt with man directly and personally since the fall, and he has never appeared except to introduce and bear record of the Son” (Doctrines of Salvation 1:27).

Elder McConkie explains: “How does God reveal himself? Though the ways may be infinite, the perfect and crowning way is by direct revelation, by visions, by personal visitations. According to the laws of mediation and intercession which the Father himself ordained, he has chosen to reveal himself through the Son, ordaining that all revelation shall come through the Son, though that holy personage frequently speaks in the Father’s name by divine investiture of authority; that is, he speaks in the first person as though he were the Father, because the Father has placed his name upon the Son.”⁶

Except for those times when the Father is introducing the Son, then, the words of the Father are pronounced and brought to us by the Son. The Son delights in giving all honor and glory to the Father. For instance, in the Book of Mormon, when referring to words given by Jehovah to Malachi, the Savior reminds us that these words, the words spoken in the Old Covenant by the Holy Prophets, are truly the words of the Father—even if delivered by the Son: “And it came to pass that he commanded them that they should write the words which the Father had given unto Malachi, which he should tell unto them ... Thus said the Father unto Malachi—Behold, I will send my messenger, and he shall prepare the way before me, and the Lord whom ye seek shall suddenly come to his temple, even the messenger of the covenant ... ” (3 Nephi 24:1, emphasis added).

As disciples of Christ, we pray to the Father, in the name of the Son. We receive an answer through Christ who manifests it unto us by the power of the Holy Ghost. Note the perfect pattern of prayer: “And when ye shall receive these things, I would exhort you that ye would ask God, the Eternal Father, in the name of Christ, if these things are not true; and if ye shall ask with a sincere heart, with real intent, having faith in ⁶ McConkie, Elder Bruce R. Doctrinal New Testament Commentary. The Epistle of Paul to Titus – God has a body of flesh and bones.

Christ, he [I interpret this to mean, He, Christ] will manifest the truth of it unto you, by the power of the Holy Ghost” (Moroni 10:4). The revelations received by the Prophet Joseph Smith in the Doctrine and Covenants were given by the Savior (either directly, or through the Holy Ghost).

For example, “listen to the words of Jesus Christ, your Lord and your Redeemer” (D&C 15:1b, also see D&C 6:21; 10:57; 14:9; 16:1; 17:9; 18:47; etc.). Nephi, similarly, explains that the words he has spoken come from the Son: “if ye shall believe in Christ ye will believe in these words, for they are the words of Christ” (2 Nephi 33:10b). We might well say that the Holy Ghost speaks for the Son as the Son speaks for the Father. Each of these represents instances of Divine Investiture.

And so also when a Prophet speaks, he speaks through Divine Investiture. We read: “And, behold, and lo, this is an ensample unto all those who were ordained unto this priesthood, whose mission is appointed unto them to go forth—And this is the ensample unto them, that they shall speak as they are moved upon by the Holy Ghost. And whatsoever they shall speak when moved upon by the Holy Ghost shall be scripture, shall be the will of the Lord, shall be the mind of the Lord, shall be the word of the Lord, shall be the voice of the Lord, and the power of God unto salvation. Behold, this is the promise of the Lord unto you, O ye my servants. Wherefore, be of good cheer, and do not fear, for I the Lord am with you, and will stand by you; and ye shall bear record of me, even Jesus Christ, that I am the Son of the living God, that I was, that I am, and that I am to come” (D&C 68:2–6).

It follows, then, that when a Priesthood holder gives a blessing, he speaks the words of Christ as received through the power of the Holy Ghost, through Divine Investiture. So also, when members deliver a talk or give a lesson as moved by the Holy Ghost. This is why it is so vital to teach by the Spirit and bless by the Spirit and live by the Spirit. Each one of these will be justified by the Holy Spirit of Promise when we so act, and be brought to the hearts of the people we teach, serve and bless.

Divine Investiture, then, is like a power of attorney: “Search these commandments, for they are true and faithful, and the prophecies and promises which are in them shall all be fulfilled. What I the Lord have spoken, I have spoken, and I excuse not myself; and though the heavens and the earth pass away, my word shall not pass away, but shall all be fulfilled, whether by mine own voice or by the voice of my servants, it is the same. For behold, and lo, the Lord is God, and the Spirit beareth record, and the record is true, and the truth abideth forever and ever. Amen” (D&C 1:37–39, emphasis added).

In Isaiah we hear the Son speaking about His own mission as the mortal Messiah as if it was the Father who was speaking. Thus we have Jehovah speaking in Isaiah 53:6 and 53:10, “and the LORD (Jehovah, יהוה) hath laid on him the iniquity of us all,” and “Yet it pleased the LORD (Jehovah, יהוה) to bruise him.” It is the Lord speaking, but He (Jehovah, Christ) is speaking for the Father in first person about Himself (Christ) in his future Messianic role.

When I am asked to be a language interpreter at a meeting, when the speaker says, “I have a testimony,” I do not say, “He has a testimony,” but rather, “I have a testimony” (not, él tiene un testimonio but rather yo tengo un testimonio). The Son, as our advocate before the Father, likewise speaks the words of the Father precisely as spoken by the Father.

So it is in the Book of Moses: “And I have a work for thee, Moses, my son; and thou art in the similitude of mine Only Begotten; and mine Only Begotten is and shall be the Savior, for he is full of grace and truth; but there is no God beside me, and all things are present with me, for I know them all” (Moses 1:6). Once again, it is the Son who speaks the words of the Father throughout the book of Moses.

There are notable exceptions, where the Father is introducing or bearing witness of the Son. For instance, in the New Covenant, when Christ is upon the earth, we hear the Father glorifying the Son (e.g., Matthew 3:17, John 12:28). In Joseph Smith History—1:17b, Elohim the Eternal Father introduces the Son to the boy Prophet Joseph Smith: “When the light rested upon me I saw two Personages, whose brightness and glory defy all description, standing above me in the air. One of them spake unto me, calling me by name and said, pointing to the other—This is My Beloved Son. Hear Him!”

The Book of Revelation gives a perfect example of Divine Investiture. In this case, an angel speaks the words of Christ. John distinctly hears the words of the Savior in first person from the angelic messenger who is clothed in great glory (see a similar event in the Ascension of Isaiah): “Behold, I come quickly: blessed is he that keepeth the sayings of the prophecy of this book” (Revelation 22:7). John thought himself in the presence of our Redeemer. Scripture tells us that he fell down to worship, but was prevented from doing so: “Then saith he [the angel] unto me, See thou do it not: for I am thy fellowservant, and of thy brethren the prophets, and of them which keep the sayings of this book: worship God” (Revelation 22:9).

It is not possible to understand Isaiah without understanding that the Savior often explicitly speaks to Isaiah as if He were the Father. And even when He does not appear to be speaking for the Father, the Savior is still speaking for the Father. “Jesus ... said unto them, Verily, verily, I say unto you, The Son can do nothing of himself, but what he seeth the Father do: for what things soever he doeth, these also doeth the Son likewise. For the Father loveth the Son, and sheweth him all things that himself doeth ... That all men should honour the Son, even as they honour the Father. He that honoureth not the Son honoureth not the Father which hath sent him” (John 5:19b–20a, 23).

In summary, the principle of Divine Investiture is everywhere in our lives as followers and disciples of Jesus Christ. We speak in His name often, as moved upon by the Holy Ghost. In the Hebrew Bible, in almost every instance that the word Elohim is used, it is used as a title of honor for Christ, who “Who, being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God” (Philippians 2:6).⁷

Hosea Principle

In essence, the Hosea Principle is the idea that the Lord is filled with compassion towards us, and after speaking words of reprimand, He is filled with love. See notes in Rain in Due Season, our second introduction.

How Beautiful upon the Mountains Principle

The Lord frequently shares his titles of honor with his servants. For more details, see notes under ISAIAH 52:7.

Ezekiel Principle

If a person is warned and repents, then both the one giving warning and the one warned have reason to rejoice. However, if a person is not warned, he who should have warned his brother is also condemned (see Ezekiel 3:16–21).

Biblical Text Evaluation

The field of Biblical criticism or is often divided into (1) lower criticism or textual criticism (we will prefer the latter term) and (2) higher criticism or literary criticism. In these contexts, the word criticism means analysis or evaluation (as compared to censure and disapproval).

Textual criticism is the attempt to determine what the original Scriptures (also called an autograph) may have looked like. No autograph of any portion of the Bible exists today. Instead, we have copies of copies of copies, etc. These copies are corruptions of the original autographs.

The Prophet Joseph Smith explained: “I believe the Bible as it read when it came from the pen of the original writers. Ignorant translators, careless transcribers, or designing and corrupt priests have committed many errors” (History of the Church 6:57.),”

The textual critic is interested in comparing ancient manuscripts or textual variants in an effort to improve the text, through such ancient resources as the Masoretic text (ⲙ), Syriac (Ⲥ), Peshitta (ⲩ), Targum (Ⲫ), LXX (Ⲭ), Vulgate (ⲱ) and Dead Sea Scrolls (DSSB) (Ⲙ). Such records are not composed of a single representative text, but of multiple sources or variants.

The Book of Mormon, Doctrine and Covenants, and Pearl of Great Price are priceless sources of more accurate texts.

If someone wished to come to a better understanding of what the Prophet Joseph Smith meant regarding the flawed transmission of the Biblical text in the quote above, I would recommend Textual Criticism of the Hebrew Bible by Emanuel Tov (Judah Leon Magnes⁸ Professor of Bible at the Hebrew University of Jerusalem). I also commend Invitation to the Septuagint by Karen H. Jobes and Moisés Silva, for a book focused on the LXX (Ⲭ).

Emanuel Tov well says about textual criticism: “This procedure is subjective as subjective can be ... In modern times, scholars are often reluctant to admit the subjective nature of textual evaluation, so that an attempt is often made, conscious or unconscious, to create a level of artificial objectivity by the frequent application of abstract rules” (2nd Edition, p. 310). Elsewhere he notes that “textual traditions have all been influenced by abstract assumptions and prejudices” (2nd Edition, p. 181). Tov speaks extensively about textual corruptions, false conclusions, dogmatic approaches, subjective opinions and the like.

Much scholarship is affected by personal opinion. I do not claim that Isaiah Testifies of Christ is free from these. We simply cannot get away from bias in translating or analyzing Scripture, any more than we can in conducting most scholarly work.

In contrast to textual criticism, higher criticism deals with the authenticity, inspiration and genuineness of these Biblical texts. Some higher critics, though not of our faith, are faithful believers in God and strong advocates for the divinity of Jesus Christ and the inspiration of Scripture. I have a large collection of such books and love reading them.

There are other higher critics—often wolves in sheep’s clothing—that do not believe that God reveals Himself to humans—not now, not then, not ever. What is worrisome is that their theories are making their way into the homes of Christian families and even into the hearts of some members of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

⁷ Adapted from my blog, Elohim, Adonai and Divine Investiture, 24 July 2010. Also see, McConkie, Bruce. The Promised Messiah. Deseret Book Company, 1978. Smith, Joseph Fielding. Doctrines of Salvation. Talmage, James E. Jesus the Christ. (Including notes from The Father and The Son: A Doctrinal Exposition by The First Presidency and The Twelve, set forth in 1916).

⁸ My great grandmother’s sister (or great grandaunt) on my Jewish side of the family, Beatrice Lowenstein, was the wife of Judah Magnes.

When it comes specifically to Isaiah, I have gained much from books written from multiple perspectives. When comments were made against our beliefs as LDS by any Gentile or Jewish author, I have discarded these.

There is safety in holding on to the Standard Works and the words of our Prophets, Seers, and Revelators—that is my bias. Always pay attention to what the Prophet, the First Presidency, and the Quorum of the Twelve have to teach us. Never cease to call upon God, the Eternal Father, in the name of Jesus Christ, pouring out your questions and letting Him know of your desire to learn. And remember, some things we not know now: “Yea, verily I say unto you, in that day when the Lord shall come, he shall reveal all things—Things which have passed, and hidden things which no man knew, things of the earth, by which it was made, and the purpose and the end thereof” (D&C 101:32–33).

I have made every effort to make Isaiah Testifies of Christ an uplifting, faith-promoting experience. There is much I have to learn.

Isaiah in the Book of Mormon

In 1903 President Joseph F. Smith received an inquiry as to why there were portions of the Isaiah chapters in the Book of Mormon that were identical to those in the King James Version. The letter came from a Mr. H. Chamberlain, of Spencer, Iowa. Chamberlain noticed that even the words “supplied by the translators” were included in the KJV. (In the Rain in Due Season introduction we review the fact that italics in the Authorized Version stand for words or expressions not found in the Hebrew text but that are supplied by the translators to help us understand the Bible. Chamberlain rightly points out that it is unimaginable for two translators of the same text to coincide perfectly with each other—and even more improbable when we are dealing with different text sources (i.e., the Book of Mormon plates vs. the Masoretic text מ). Chamberlain fittingly maintains that the only way that this could be so was if the Prophet Joseph Smith made use of the KJV in translating the Book of Mormon.

President Joseph F. Smith delegated the task of answering Mr. H. Chamberlain’s concerns to Elder B. H. Roberts who agreed with Chamberlain’s concerns and deductions. Elder Roberts responded in part: “while Joseph Smith obtained the facts and ideas from the Nephite characters through the inspiration of God, he was left to express those facts and ideas, in the main, in such language as he could command; and when he found that parts of the Nephite record closely paralleled passages in the Bible, and being conscious that the language of our English Bible was superior to his own, he adopted it, except for those differences indicated in the Nephite original which here and there make the Book of Mormon passages superior in sense and clearness. Of course, I recognize the fact that this is but a conjecture ...”⁹

Dr. Sidney B. Sperry likewise wrote: “There are 433 verses of Isaiah in the Nephite record. Of these, 234 verses were changed or modified by the Prophet Joseph Smith so that they do not conform with the King James version. Some of the changes made were slight, others were radical. However, 199 verses are word for word the same as the old English version. We therefore freely admit that Joseph Smith used the King James version when he came to the text of Isaiah on the gold plates. As long as the familiar version substantially agreed with the text on the gold plates record he let it pass; when it differed too much, he translated the Nephite version and dictated the necessary changes.”¹⁰

Dr. Sperry elsewhere elucidated: “When Joseph Smith came to these quotations he very wisely followed the King James Version except in points where the record before him differed sufficiently, whereupon he made the appropriate changes to conform to the ancient version. The fact that he made changes is in itself quite remarkable. No real evidence exists that he had at that time been expertly taught about textual criticism and the history of the Bible text. My own experience has been that very few intelligent people in the Church even today recognize fully the implications that follow from the presence of Isaiah texts in the Book of Mormon. Any Bible scholar knows the text followed by the King James Version contained corruptions.”¹¹ Brother Sperry goes on to give numerous examples of how the Prophet Joseph Smith’s translation is supported either by other ancient manuscripts or by more literal translations.

BYU Professor Daniel H. Ludlow also explained: “When Joseph Smith translated the Isaiah references from the small plates of Nephi, he evidently opened his King James Version of the Bible and compared the impression he had received in translating with the words of the King James scholars. If his translation was essentially the same as that of the King James Version, he apparently quoted the verse from the Bible; then his scribe, Oliver Cowdery, copied it down. However, if Joseph Smith’s translation did not agree precisely with that of the King James scholars, he would dictate his own translation to the scribe. This procedure in translation would account for both the 234 verses of Isaiah that were changed or modified by the Prophet Joseph and the 199 verses that were translated word-for-word the same. Although some critics might question this procedure of translation, scholars today frequently use this same procedure in translating the biblical manuscripts among the Dead Sea Scrolls.”¹² And may I suggest that this is the very procedure adopted in most if not all Biblical translations, such as the recently produced LDS Spanish Reina Valera 2009. The same technique was also clearly used by the Authorized Version translators as they compared the text of previous Bibles to the Hebrew.

⁹ B. H. Roberts, Defense of the Faith and the Saints, 2 vols., 1:269–274.

¹⁰ Dr. Sidney B. Sperry, The “Isaiah Problem” in the Book of Mormon by Dr. Sidney B. Sperry), Improvement Era 1939-1

¹¹ Sidney B. Sperry, Evidence of Translation: Comparison with Ancient Versions, Journal of Book of Mormon Studies 4/1 (Spring 1995): 211–14.

Contact

I have included my e-mail address in case you wish to engage in conversation on any related topic, suggest corrections or offer other perspectives. I rejoice in being rectified. Over the years I hope to keep making improvements. I would be particularly honored to be able to share my testimony of Jesus Christ, the Book of Mormon or of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, answer any questions or put you in contact with Elders or Sister Missionaries who might visit you in your home. No joy has been greater in my life than that of membership in the Lord’s Church.

Why did the Lord want me to study Isaiah?

I am not entirely certain why the Lord wanted me to study Isaiah and the Prophets. Elder Bruce R. McConkie wondered: “If our eternal salvation depends upon our ability to understand the writings of Isaiah as fully and truly as Nephi understood them—and who shall say such is not the case!—how shall we fare in that great day when with Nephi we shall stand before the pleasing bar of Him who said: ‘Great are the words of Isaiah’ (3 Nephi 23:1)?”¹³

While I am not entirely sure how to interpret Elder McConkie’s quote, I am certain that I needed to engage in this lifelong study of Isaiah and the prophets. Some of the benefits I have derived so far, almost all related to being a defender of the faith, include a:

1. Better appreciation of how the scriptures testify of the divinity of Jesus Christ. And how specific Scripture in the New Testament speaks of Christ as being the very Jehovah mentioned in Isaiah (see ISAIAH 6:9–10; Matthew 13:10–15).

2. Understanding of how Scriptures are sometimes distorted by those who do not believe in the divinity of Jesus Christ or do not believe in prophecy—as well as by those who have not accepted the restoration of the Gospel in these, the latter days.

3. Ability to stand firm and confident in the teachings of the Prophet Joseph Smith and the Brethren—and withstand philosophical idolatry. And finding external evidences of the Restored Gospel of Jesus Christ, as received by the Prophet Joseph Smith.

4. Increase in my love for the Book of Mormon and the rest of Scripture, as well as the teachings of the Brethren. Throughout the years I have discovered “wisdom and great treasures of knowledge, even hidden treasures” (D&C 89:19b) in both of these. They have brought me joy untold and a sensing of the thinness of the veil.

5. Coming to an enhanced understanding that the gifts that God has given us need to be developed—they are not poured out on us without effort. As Elder B.H. Robert teaches, “[It] requires striving—intellectual and spiritual—to comprehend the things of God.”

6. Intensifying of my understanding of eternal and spiritual matters so I can better withstand the fiery darts of the adversary.

7. A hope that this book will help Judah and Ephraim come unto Christ, both on this and the other side of the veil.

Gregorio Billikopf
Llanquihue, Lake Region, Chile
WhatsApp: +56 9 94559913
bielikov@yahoo.com bielikov2@yahoo.cl

VERSION 3.00: 4 October 2017

FIRST POSTED: 7 December 2016

¹² Daniel H. Ludlow, A Companion to Your Study of the Book of Mormon, p.141.

¹³ Elder Bruce R. McConkie, “Ten Keys to Understanding Isaiah,” October 1973 Ensign.

Rain in Due Season

“What was the object of gathering the Jews, or the people of God in any age of the world? ... The main object was to build unto the Lord a house whereby He could reveal unto His people the ordinances of His house and the glories of His kingdom, and teach the people the way of salvation ... It is for the same purpose that God gathers together His people in the last days, to build unto the Lord a house to prepare them for the ordinances and endowments, washings and anointings” —Joseph Smith the Prophet, HC 5:422

The subject of the gathering is a thrilling and glorious one and has occupied my mind for much of the last few decades, especially as I embarked on writing Isaiah Testifies of Christ. The Book of Mormon, according to the Old Testament (as well as the Book of Mormon itself), will play a vital role in the gathering of Israel in the latter days. Here we look at a few of the prophecies regarding the gathering of Israel as they relate to the Book of Mormon. The Old Testament has much to say about the Book of Mormon and these words are but a brief overview.

In order to understand the promises made to the twelve tribes of Israel we will set off on an exciting journey with some terrain that must first be traversed in order to come to a better understanding of these glorious prophecies. We will review some of the most pertinent aspects of the history of Israel, come to an understanding of multiple prophecies as well as the prophetic voice. I have come to love the Holy Scriptures, Hebrew Bible or Tanakh, as the Old Testament is called by the Jews. As we begin, some of the topics will not immediately seem connected. I will attempt to tie the loose ends before we are done.

Truth is one eternal round (D&C 35:1) and so we shall begin with the quote given by the Prophet Joseph Smith, above, about the importance of temples, and end with this very concept as it relates to the Book of Mormon as an instrument to help Israel (1) gather back unto Christ, (2) be restored to the Abrahamic covenant, and (3) be brought to the temples of our God. The Holy Scriptures truly testify of Jesus Christ. The Hebrew Bible also testifies of the role the Book of Mormon would play in the gathering of Israel from spiritual Babylon unto Zion.

“And I saw another angel fly in the midst of heaven, having the everlasting gospel to preach unto them that dwell on the earth, and to every nation, and kindred, and tongue, and people” (Revelation 14:6).

Ellipses

A few years before I retired from the University of California, my supervisor and I were both putting our lunches in the office refrigerator. Noting there was little space she laughingly commented: “It must be the end of the month.” It took me a moment to realize what she was saying before I could join in the laughter.

An ellipsis is something that is understood even though it is not said. They are present in all of our conversations and in everything we read or hear. Much of humor relies on people understanding the gap between what is expressed and what is implied. An ellipsis consists of an omission of one or more words. It is sometimes reflected in writing by three points (...). In Spanish, they are called puntos suspensivos.

Martha Koln suggested, “When well used, ellipses can create a bond of sorts between the writer and the reader. The writer is saying, in effect, I needn’t spell everything out for you; I know you’ll understand” (Rhetorical Grammar, 5th ed. Pearson, 2007).

As we fall in love with the scriptures, we begin to see more and more of these elliptical points that are not written, but whose meanings we must prayerfully discern ourselves. Not just words, but often much more.

The elliptical expressions included in my supervisor’s humor required an understanding that: (1) people often go out to lunch; (2) individuals are paid at the beginning of the month; (3) people live from paycheck to paycheck; (4) individuals have less disposable money towards the end of the month because few budget carefully; (5) going out to lunch is more expensive than bringing something from home; and therefore: (6) people have brought in their lunches because it is the end of the month. This is a cultural ellipsis.

Someone in a biblical agrarian society might not get this at all. And conversely, there are many cultural ellipses in Scripture that we do not easily understand—especially if we have been raised far removed from an agrarian society.

New wine in new bottles

In Matthew 9:17 we read: “Neither do men put new wine into old bottles: else the bottles break, and the wine runneth out, and the bottles perish: but they put new wine into new bottles, and both are preserved.”

To understand this verse we must comprehend that (1) grape juice turns into wine through a primary and a secondary fermentation process; (2) new wine has not totally finished fermenting (i.e., the secondary fermentation has not yet taken place); (3) and that old bottles (rather, animal skins or leather used as containers) have previously been expanded to their limit.

If new wine is put in these old wineskins that cannot stretch any further, they burst, spilling out all of their contents. New skins, on the other hand, can stretch along with the secondary fermentation process, and are well suited to new wine.

It has been said that Joseph Smith, the young boy prophet of the restoration, was like a new bottle into which the Lord's doctrine could be poured.

To understand ellipses, then, we must understand the culture, the theology, and the language. When the Bible was translated from the ancient languages into our modern texts, such as the King James Version, they did much to fill in the gaps for us. In other words, the translators gladly provided much of the missing text we would need to understand. Even so, there are plenty of areas that require further understanding.

Italics in the Bible

We can open our KJV of the Bible to almost any page and find that some of the text is in italics. (Some Biblical translations do not show these italics in the text but rather give the illusion that the whole text is part of the original. Other versions provide additional expansions, such as the Amplified Version.)

Without the ellipsis being filled in for us, ISAIAH 2:12 would read: "For the day of the LORD of hosts upon every proud and lofty, and upon every lifted up; and he shall be brought low." With the ellipsis filled in, we have: "For the day of the LORD of hosts shall be upon every one that is proud and lofty, and upon every one that is lifted up; and he shall be brought low."

Genesis 30:30 would read: "For little which thou hadst before I, and it is increased unto a multitude; and the LORD hath blessed thee since my coming: and now when shall I provide for mine own house also?" With the ellipses filled in: "For it was little which thou hadst before I came, and it is now increased unto a multitude; and the LORD hath blessed thee since my coming: and now when shall I provide for mine own house also?"

There are many ellipses in the Bible and the book Figures of Speech used in the Bible by Ethelbert W. Bullinger, D.D. is quite interesting and instructive.¹ The problem, of course, is that ellipses are subject to interpretation. Not all of the ellipses, as they are filled in our KJV, are correct. The same can be said of other Biblical translations. Furthermore, even though I have recommended Bullinger, I have filled the margins of the book with differences of opinion.

The Prophet Joseph Smith approved many of the elliptical expressions we find in our KJV, but not all. Ellipses may be completely misunderstood and become false ellipsis. There really is a danger that translators and interpreters of Scripture will misunderstand ellipses. Even though the Inspired Version is not the official Bible for English speakers, gladly we can lean heavily on the Joseph Smith Translation (JST) as we study the word. In some instances, we may even think of the JST as elliptical expressions used by the Prophet to help us understand the text.

Theological ellipses

Besides missing words or expressions there are also theological ellipses. In these cases, instead of a few words that are missing, only a few are provided. These expressions are codes for expanded meaning. In prophecy, one often sees the development of ideas, line upon line, and precept upon precept. We will be particularly interested in these theological ellipses that are loaded with meaning, as they appear throughout the Holy Scriptures, especially as touching the Abrahamic covenant and the ingathering of Israel.

Abrahamic Covenant

The Lord offered Abraham many wonderful blessings. These would include a large posterity as well as an inheritance in the Holy Land. Among the many promises made to Abraham, particularly mark the following: "And I will establish my covenant between me and thee and thy seed after thee in their generations for an everlasting covenant, to be a God unto thee, and to thy seed after thee" (Genesis 17:7, emphasis added).

I am your God, ye are my people

We will be particularly interested in the chapters I have nicknamed Rain in Due Season. Oftentimes, when one verse of these chapters is quoted or alluded to, these stand for all of the blessings and cursing promised therein. And most importantly, they are a reminder of some very special promises associated with the gathering in the latter days. Throughout Isaiah, these blessings and cursing are alluded to.

The Rain in Due Season promises associated with the scattering and gathering of Israel are found in the Pentateuch, in their most extensive detail, in Leviticus 26 and Deuteronomy 4, 28–30, and 32. I urge you to read and re-read these chapters and become intimately acquainted with them: an understanding of these will greatly facilitate an understanding of a large portion of the Holy Scriptures. At the very least, ponder Leviticus 26 and the first six verses of Deuteronomy 30 before continuing.

¹ <https://ia800204.us.archive.org/1/items/cu31924029277047/cu31924029277047.pdf> (Internet Archive free download).

The Lord invites us to keep His commandments—and especially to avoid idolatry and keep the Sabbath. The most serious type of idolatry today is intellectual idolatry. It is a leaning on the philosophies of men rather than on the word of the Lord.

Such idolatry and pride go hand in hand. President Ezra Taft Benson taught: “The proud cannot accept the authority of God giving direction to their lives (see Helaman 12:6). They pit their perceptions of truth against God’s great knowledge, their abilities versus God’s priesthood power, their accomplishments against His mighty works ... The proud wish God would agree with them. They aren’t interested in changing their opinions to agree with God’s.”² In that same memorable talk President Benson quoted present-day revelation as a warning voice: “... beware of pride, lest ye become as the Nephites of old” (D&C 38:39). Some, then, favoring the wisdom and philosophies of man, have set aside godly counsel. Let us ever remember, instead, to “Trust in the LORD with all thine heart; and lean not unto thine own understanding. In all thy ways acknowledge him, and he shall direct thy paths” (Proverbs 3:5–6).

We also live in a day when Sabbath day observance is all but lost among professing Christians. President Russell M. Nelson has encouraged us to remember our covenant to keep the Sabbath day holy, and to make the Sabbath a delight.³ Keeping the Sabbath and avoiding idolatry, as we shall see, are two key topics in Isaiah. But returning to Leviticus ...

The Lord promises, if we heed the invitation to remove ourselves from idolatry and to make the Sabbath a delight: “Then I will give you rain in due season, and the land shall yield her increase, and the trees of the field shall yield their fruit” (Leviticus 26:4, emphasis added). Rain is often associated with blessings in the Holy Scriptures.

In today’s agriculture we often have great reservoirs of water that are accumulated from the winter rains and melted snows in order to water orchards and other agricultural lands during the growing season. In my mother’s farm in San Javier, Chile, we were very blessed to have small water canals to water our vineyards. My uncle, on the other hand, owned property in the nearby town of Villa Alegre, and his watering system was called “regadío a rulo,” or non-irrigated land. The only water that falls in this land is the rain the Lord provides.

During Biblical times, much of Israel’s rain was provided in this way. Depending on the crops, there are specific times when rain is needed. Vineyards and orchards also need rain at specific intervals; grains and annuals need rain to soften the soil for tillage and then at intervals once the plants are growing.

When the Lord says that He would provide rain in due season, then, He is blessing us with rain at the precise moment when the plants have a need for it.

In the ancient agronomical societies, then, rain in due season meant the difference between plentiful crops and famine. Rain and blessings are closely associated with each other.

So it is that the Lord promises: “prove me now herewith, saith the LORD of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it” (Malachi 3:10b).

It requires tremendous faith to plant or grow crops under such a method, especially under Mediterranean climates—such as portions of Chile, California and the Holy Land.

I am always touched by the movie, Windows of Heaven, which depicts a time of severe drought and the revelation received by President Lorenzo Snow. President Snow was promised that if the Saints would pay their tithing, the windows of heaven would open and rain would come down to bless the crops. The early Saints had to trust this prophecy and plant and then wait for the rain. Their faith was amply rewarded with exquisite rain.

Beside the rain given to those involved in agriculture, rain in due season also implies blessings in general. The Lord’s timing in providing these blessings is always perfect. These miracles, of course, are not only material but spiritual. Above all things, rain in due season represents revelation. This is a priceless gift, to have the Lord speak to us through our Prophets, Seers and Revelators and also, for personal matters, through direct personal revelation and divine inspiration.

The Lord promised the children of Jacob rain in due season if she would walk in His paths and turn her heart towards the Holy One of Israel.

“Blessed shalt thou be when thou comest in, and blessed shalt thou be when thou goest out” (Deuteronomy 28:6). The complete list of blessings is extensive and beautiful.

The assurances, in essence, are a review of the promises made to Abraham: “For I will have respect unto you, and make you fruitful, and multiply you, and establish my covenant with you” (Leviticus 26:9).

None of the assertions are more profound and magnificent than the following: “I [the Lord] will walk among you, and will be your God, and ye shall be my people” (Leviticus 26:12b, emphasis added). These words bring tears of joy. Can you sense the greatness of these promises?

These Rain in Due Season verses are pregnant with meaning, and are a theological ellipsis for the Abrahamic Covenant, as we saw in Genesis 17:7: “And ² President Ezra Taft Benson, Beware of Pride, April 1989 General Conference.

³ President Russell M. Nelson, The Sabbath is a Delight, April 2015 General Conference.

I will establish my covenant between me and thee and thy seed after thee in their generations for an everlasting covenant, to be a God unto thee, and to thy seed after thee” (emphasis added).

Disobedience would bring cursings

If the children of Jacob would be disobedient, on the other hand, unspeakable curses would befall her. As you read about these curses carefully, you will see that these are multiplied to bless Israel, and help her return unto the Lord.

In Leviticus 26 the Lord announces a set of blessings, and then tells us that if these are not sufficient to soften our hearts, then “I will punish you seven [שִׁבְעַ] times more for your sins” (Leviticus 26:18b). The next set of consequences is then given and once again the warning of a seven-fold punishment. This happens multiple times throughout this chapter. When we consider that the word seven stands for perfection, then we know that the Lord’s punishment will be perfect, or in other words, just right for our needs. Just right to bless us.

For the purposes of this introduction, we shall focus on two of the cursings. First, “And the LORD shall scatter thee among all people, from the one end of the earth even unto the other; and there thou shalt serve other gods” (Deuteronomy 28:64a, emphasis added).

Second, there would be a cessation of revelation and the heavens would be shut down: “And thy heaven that is over thy head shall be brass” (Deuteronomy 28:23a). Elsewhere we read a similar sentiment: “Behold, the days come, saith the Lord GOD, that I will send a famine in the land, not a famine of bread, nor a thirst for water, but of hearing the words of the LORD” (Amos 8:11).

Drought of rain is a physical manifestation. Drought of revelation is a spiritual one. They both indicate that things are not well between us and the Lord—especially the latter.

After the blessings and the cursing

In his mercy, and foreknowledge, the Lord made provisions for the repentance of the children of Jacob. In one of the most moving verses in Scripture we read: “And it shall come to pass, when all these things are come upon thee, the blessing and the curse, which I have set before thee, and thou shalt call them to mind among all the nations, whither the LORD thy God hath driven thee” (Deuteronomy 30:1), or in other words, when we are brought to a remembrance of these promises after we have been scattered throughout the nations. While we have been scattered by the hand of the nations, we should note that the Lord permitted this scattering.

The Lord is speaking to Israel, regarding what would happen after the great majority of the blessings and cursings would take place: in other words, to the time when the gospel would be restored again upon the earth.

“And shalt return (שָׁבָתָ) unto the LORD thy God, and shalt obey his voice according to all that I command thee this day, thou and thy children, with all thine heart, and with all thy soul” (Deuteronomy 30:2).

At every moment we continually make the decision to שוב (SHUV), that is, to turn or return towards the Lord, or to give Him our back. In the Holy Scriptures, this is the word that is used to invite people to return unto Christ or repent. שוב is a frequently utilized word to speak about repentance as well as apostasy, turning toward the Lord—or away.

Continuing with Deuteronomy 30:2, note that we first come in remembrance of these covenants and then are moved with a great desire to obey and to enter into the waters of baptism to show our determination to obey. Furthermore, we will have a great desire to share these things with others, especially with our families and children. We will prepare our children for baptism at the age of accountability, whenever possible.

“That then the LORD thy God will turn thy captivity, and have compassion upon thee, and will return and gather thee from all the nations, whither the LORD thy God hath scattered thee” (Deuteronomy 30:2). To turn thy captivity means to put an end to it. The captivity here mentioned is not just a physical one, but also a spiritual one. We will leave spiritual Babylon and come unto Zion.

The Lord will be filled with His tender mercies [חֲסִדִּים] and have compassion toward us. It would not matter where we would have been scattered to, the Lord would have compassion upon us: He will find us even when we did not know we wanted to be found.

“If any of thine be driven out unto the outmost parts of heaven, from thence will the LORD thy God gather thee, and from thence will he fetch thee” (Deuteronomy 30:4). None would be forgotten, none would be rejected from coming, and none would be uninvited. No matter where or how far away we would be scattered, it would not be so far that the Lord could not find us—even to the outermost parts of heaven. Either on this side of the veil or the other.

“And the LORD thy God will bring thee into the land which thy fathers possessed, and thou shalt possess it” (Deuteronomy 30:5a). The Lord would bring Judah back to the Holy Land. The other tribes would have their special lands elsewhere. For instance, Joseph would inherit the American Continent, North and South.

Finally, there is an implication of spiritual Zion—regardless of what nation we find ourselves in, we can leave Babylon and become a Zion people.

“And he will do thee good, and multiply thee above thy fathers” (Deuteronomy 30:5b). Those gathered from Israel in the last days will receive blessings even greater than those in former times.

“And the LORD thy God will circumcise thine heart, and the heart of thy seed, to love the LORD thy God with all thine heart, and with all thy soul, that thou mayest live” (Deuteronomy 30:6). Our hearts will be circumcised as a token of this new covenant—that is, our hearts of stone will be replaced with a heart of flesh. “That thou mayest live” is an allusion to receiving exaltation and eternal lives.

A few weeks after my first posting of this chapter, I found a number of allusions to Rain in Due Season in the words of the Savior to His disciples in the American Continent: “And behold, this people will I establish in this land, unto the fulfilling of the covenant which I made with your father Jacob; and it shall be a New Jerusalem. And the powers of heaven shall be in the midst of this people; yea, even I will be in the midst of you” (3 Nephi 20:22, emphasis added, note the land, the Abrahamic covenants as well as the Lord walking in the midst of the Saints). Note that the Book of Mormon was written to come forth in the end of days, to us—the followers of Christ regardless of whether they are direct descendants of the Lamanites or of Judah or of any of the other tribes of Israel.

You are of Israel

Few missionaries—or even members—realize that we are gathering Israel back: literal Israel. That is, the children of Jacob as scattered throughout the world. Most of Israel—except for the tribe of Judah—does not realize her heritage. And even within Judah, there are other tribes mixed in as we shall see, especially that of Benjamin and Levi.

The gospel of Jesus Christ will be accepted first by Ephraim (and Manasseh is implied also) and eventually by all of the other tribes of Israel, and finally, by Judah. The book of Zechariah speaks much about this.

Brigham Young (Journal of Discourses 2:268–269, 8 April 1855) and Joseph Fielding Smith (Doctrines of Salvation 3:246) have made it clear that the majority who accept the Gospel are literal descendants of Israel. Is it not thrilling to know, as we do missionary work, that we are literally gathering Israel back in fulfillment of the promises in Deuteronomy 30:1–6? So also as we do vicarious work for the departed?

President Joseph Fielding Smith taught: “The Lord said he would scatter Israel among the Gentile nations, and by doing so he would bless the Gentile nations with the blood of Abraham. Today we are preaching the gospel in the world and we are gathering out, according to the revelations given to Isaiah, Jeremiah, and other prophets, the scattered sheep of the House of Israel. These scattered sheep are coming forth mixed with Gentile blood from their Gentile forefathers. Under all the circumstances it is very possible that the majority, almost without exception, of those who come into the Church in this dispensation have the blood of two or more of the tribes of Israel as well as the blood of the Gentiles.” (Answers to Gospel Questions, 5 vols., Salt Lake City: Deseret Book Co., 1957–66, 3:63.)

President Joseph Fielding Smith also declared: “The great majority of those who become members of the Church are literal descendants of Abraham through Ephraim, son of Joseph” (Improvement Era, Oct. 1923, p. 1149). While this was especially the case in 1923, the number of converts from other tribes is beginning to grow.

The rare person who is adopted into Israel—and I would not assume adoption unless the patriarchal blessing says so—will be just as much a partaker of the blessings given to Abraham, Isaac and Jacob as those who are direct descendants.

Gentiles, Gentile Nations, Heathen

Words can have multiple meanings. A few have the philosophy that words need to be translated in the same way throughout the Bible. Although this at first sounds quite laudable, the premise is flawed. Words in Hebrew also have multiple acceptations as do words in English, Spanish or any language.

Oftentimes, there are multiple words needed to provide a good translation—this is not an issue limited to biblical translation. Certainly this is the case where words do not have an equivalent in the target language. For instance, the word sobremesa in Spanish has no equivalent in English. It means the time spent sitting at the table and chatting even after people have stopped eating. Even where there are translations for a word, where there are multiple choices, the translator has to truly understand the context.

That is why the approach taken by the Amplified Bible (AMP) makes sense in that multiple acceptations of the original word are often used in the target language. But let us return to our topic.

The Hebrew expression הַגּוֹיִם, HA-Goyim, is variously translated as the heathen, the Gentiles, or the nations. Each of these words—heathen, Gentiles and nations—has a different meaning. The context of the word in Hebrew dictates the best translation into English.

The word heathen is often thought of as a strange, barbarian, uncivilized people or those who do not accept the God of the Bible (see Webster). A Gentile often means someone who is not a Jew, or someone who is a heathen or pagan (Webster). A humorous archaic definition of Gentile—as it is not used in real life among the Latter-day Saints—is “a non-Mormon.”⁴ I will use the term to distinguish those who represent both non-Jewish and non-LDS authors cited in this book.

There is a difference between Gentile and Gentile Nations. The word nation is often elliptical or implied when the word Gentile is used.

We read about the Gentiles taking the Gospel to Israel, but what is really meant is that the Gentile Nations will take the Gospel to Israel. The Prophet Joseph Smith was a pure Ephraimite (Journal of Discourses 2:268–69.), on the one hand, and a Gentile, on the other. Once again, to understand this we must comprehend that the Prophet Joseph Smith was born in a Gentile Nation. But the Prophet was a descendant of Israel through Joseph of Egypt. Or, when something positive is said about the Gentiles, it seems to exclude Judah as a translation. In some instances, I would prefer if it said that these positive things would come upon the nations. It seems to me, at least, that it is more inclusive as the nations includes both Jew and Gentile. Please remember, once again, that it is up to the English translator to decide how to render the word גוֹיִם. This is, for instance, where I appreciate Leiser’s translation. Lest I be misunderstood, there are times when wonderful things are intended for the Gentiles, but more often than not, the Gentile nations are intended. And these are the descendants of Israel from the other tribes who are also scattered throughout the nations—but unless they have joined The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints they know it not.

In the Title Page of the Book of Mormon we read that the Book of Mormon was: “Sealed by the hand of Moroni, and hid up unto the Lord, to come forth in due time by way of the Gentile.” Meaning, by way of the Gentile Nations. Joseph Smith was the one who was to bring forth the Book of Mormon to the world.

The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, after being restored, mostly sent missionaries from the Gentile Nations to the Gentile Nations. But these missionaries would be descendants of Israel who lived among the nations. And who would they go to? To the descendants of Israel among the nations, beginning with the tribe of Ephraim and ending with the tribe of Judah.

The most important point, once again, is that missionaries are going out to the nations of the world to gather Ephraim and his companions first and Judah and his companions next. All of the children of Jacob are to be invited to come unto Christ.

What tribes do the Lamanite nations come from?

According to Elder Erastus Snow, Joseph Smith taught that in the 116 pages of the lost manuscript, that Ishmael was a descendant of Ephraim (JD 23:184). From Alma 10:3 we find that Lehi was a descendant of Manasseh. “And Aminadi was a descendant of Nephi, who was the son of Lehi, who came out of the land of Jerusalem, who was a descendant of Manasseh, who was the son of Joseph who was sold into Egypt by the hands of his brethren” (Alma 10:3).

The American Continent, then, was populated by at least three tribes, Ephraim, Manasseh and Judah. The latter, by way of Mulek, who left Jerusalem eleven years after Lehi had done so, and who formed the community of Zarahemla.

Because the sons of Lehi married the daughters of Ishmael, it follows that the descendants of the Lamanites might receive their blessings through either Ephraim or Manasseh but have both of these bloods running through their veins. The third most common tribe in South America seems to be that of Judah. The tribe of Manasseh seems to predominate in Mexico and the tribe of Ephraim in Chile.

There are at least two sources of Ephraimite blood; that which the Saints receive from (1) the Gentile nations and that which they receive from the (2) Lamanite peoples.

The blood of Ephraim from the Gentile Nations was that which was spread forth after Assyria captured the Lost Tribes. The blood of Ephraim from the Lamanite nations was that which goes back specifically to the descendants of Lehi and Ishmael and their wives—which includes peoples from the American Continent as well as many of the isles of the sea.

In terms of our own patriarchal blessings, as has already mentioned, we most likely have multiple tribes running through our veins. We receive our blessings, however, through the tribe mentioned in our patriarchal blessing.

Israel’s Civil War

For the longest time, the children of Jacob were disobedient to the Lord “for they have turned their back unto me, and not their face” (Jeremiah 2:27b). The Lord even reminds them of the broken Abrahamic covenant: “But this thing commanded I them, saying, Obey my voice, and I will be your God, and ye shall be my people: and walk ye in all the ways that I have commanded you, that it may be well unto you. But they hearkened not, nor inclined their ear, but walked in the counsels and in the imagination of their evil heart, and went backward, and not forward. Since the day that your fathers came forth out of the land of Egypt unto this day I have even sent unto you all my servants the prophets, daily rising up early and sending them: Yet they hearkened not unto me, nor inclined their ear, but hardened their neck: they did worse than their fathers (Jeremiah 7:23–26, emphasis added).

⁴ Merriam-Webster, I. (2003). Merriam-Webster’s collegiate dictionary. (Eleventh ed.). Springfield, MA: Merriam-Webster, Inc.

Likewise, in the Psalms: “Hear, O my people, and I will speak; O Israel, and I will testify against thee: I am God, even thy God” (Psalm 50:7).

At the time of King David’s grandson, that of King Rehoboam, Israel was split in two by a civil war. This sad turn of events was a result of the iniquity that existed from the very top down, from king to dignitary, from the common man to the false prophet. In the words of Isaiah, “Therefore the LORD will cut off from Israel head and tail, branch and rush, in one day. The ancient and honourable, he is the head; and the prophet that teacheth lies, he is the tail” (ISAIAH 9:14-15).

The story of the actual split is fascinating. Jeroboam came to King Rehoboam and demanded better treatment on behalf of the northern ten tribes. Jeroboam said: “Thy father [i.e., King Solomon] made our yoke grievous: now therefore make thou the grievous service of thy father, and his heavy yoke which he put upon us, lighter, and we will serve thee” (1 Kings 12:4).

King Rehoboam acted wisely in asking for three days to think things over and give a proper response. He first sought the advice of the older men. They provided wise counsel: “If thou wilt be a servant unto this people this day, and wilt serve them, and answer them, and speak good words to them, then they will be thy servants for ever” (1 Kings 12:7).

Rehoboam forsook the advice of the older men for those of his younger contemporaries. The latter advised that he speak to the people roughly, saying: “My little finger shall be thicker than my father’s loins. And now whereas my father did lade you with a heavy yoke, I will add to your yoke: my father hath chastised you with whips, but I will chastise you with scorpions” (1 Kings 12:10b–11). Some have suggested that scorpions were whips with sharp flesh-tearing objects embedded in them.

The forceful answer was disastrous: “So when all Israel saw that the king hearkened not unto them, the people answered the king, saying, What portion have we in David? neither have we inheritance in the son of Jesse: to your tents, O Israel: now see to thine own house, David” (1 Kings 12:16a).

Thus, the united nation composed of twelve tribes ceased to be. The ten tribes to the north were now governed by King Jeroboam, and they retained the title of Israel. They were also known by their most prominent tribe, Ephraim, as well as by their capital, Samaria (according to Rabbi Ibn Ezra, another reason for this honor is that Jeroboam, its first king, was an Ephraimite).

Meanwhile, King Rehoboam was able to retain of the remaining two tribes (Judah and Benjamin and part of Levi). They were referred to by the name of Judah, their most preeminent tribe, and sometimes by Jerusalem, their capital. A hatred and jealousy developed between the northern and southern tribes.

In ISAIAH 9:21, we read of the hatred felt by the north for Judah, as well as the internal squabbles between Ephraim and Manasseh. Truly Ephraim hated Manasseh and Manasseh, Ephraim. Both hated Judah and Judah hated them back. The outlook was bleak, to be sure.

Jehovah rejected as King

The downward spiral could be traced to an earlier time. Saul was made king over the twelve tribes during the times of the judges, because the children of Jacob rejected Jehovah as her King in preference for an earthly sovereign. The people wanted to be like all the nations who surrounded them.

Samuel the Prophet felt rejected by the children of Israel in this thing. The Lord permitted the people to have their agency: “And the LORD said unto Samuel, Hearken unto the voice of the people in all that they say unto thee [i.e., give them the king that they think they want]: for they have not rejected thee, but they have rejected me, that I should not reign over them” (1 Samuel 8:7).

Why did Lehi and Ishmael live in Jerusalem?

While both nations did that which was evil in the sight of the Lord, at first the Ephraimites (northern ten tribes) were much more evil than Judah (southern two tribes). Jeroboam, King of Ephraim, built a false altar and ordained a false priesthood (1 Kings 12:26–31).

Both Lehi and Ishmael belonged to the northern tribes of Israel yet they lived along with the tribes of Judah in Jerusalem. As we said, Lehi’s family heritage was of the tribe of Manasseh (Alma 10:3) while Ishmael’s was of the tribe of Ephraim (Joseph Fielding Smith, Answers to Gospel Questions, 1:141).

Why is it that they were living in Jerusalem among Judah and Benjamin?

The most righteous who lived within the territories of Ephraim began to migrate south to Jerusalem, and thus we read: “Out of all the tribes of Israel such as set their hearts to seek the LORD God of Israel came to Jerusalem, to sacrifice unto the LORD God of their fathers” (2 Chronicles 11:16b).

We likewise read: “Nevertheless divers of Asher and Manasseh and of Zebulun humbled themselves, and came to Jerusalem” (2 Chronicles 30:11).

Also, we read: “And in Jerusalem dwelt of the children of Judah, and of the children of Benjamin, and of the children of Ephraim, and Manasseh” (1 Chronicles 9:3).

The Bible, then, gives us a very good reason why Lehi and Ishmael were found in Jerusalem. The exodus of the righteous down to Judah left Ephraim (speaking of the ten tribes) in an even more idolatrous state.

Hosea Principle

Among the prophets sent to warn Ephraim (northern tribes), was Hosea. The Prophet Hosea was asked to call his son לֹא אֲמִי Lo-ammi (לֹא, Lo, not; אֲמִי, am, people, ammi, my people): “Then said God, Call his name Loammi: for ye are not my people, and I will not be your God” (Hosea 1:9).

Mark the words, “for ye are not my people, and I will not be your God.” This theological ellipsis takes us back to Rain in Due Season, and the promise that the Lord would honor our covenant keeping by making us His people and be our God. But now the Lord is telling us that He is withdrawing because the children of Jacob broke the covenant. As much as the original promise makes me full of joy, these words are like a painful sword cutting through me.

There is good news, however, as not all is lost. In the very next paragraph the Lord tells us that in the last days, after the blessings and cursing had taken place (all of this elliptical), the Abrahamic Covenant would once again be instituted:

“Yet the number of the children of Israel shall be as the sand of the sea, which cannot be measured nor numbered; and it shall come to pass, that in the place where it was said unto them, Ye are not my people, there it shall be said unto them, Ye are the sons of the living God” (Hosea 1:10).

I call it the Hosea Principle. Any time that the Lord speaks with strong admonition, it is followed by His tender mercies [רַחֲמֵי].

Christ taught His disciples to follow this very approach, “... showing forth afterwards an increase of love toward him whom thou hast reproved” (D&C 121:43b). The Savior repeatedly gives us the example in the scriptures.

The Lord reprimands: “They were slow to hearken unto the voice of the Lord their God; therefore, the Lord their God is slow to hearken unto their prayers, to answer them in the day of their trouble. In the day of their peace they esteemed lightly my counsel; but, in the day of their trouble, of necessity they feel after me” (D&C 101:7–8). This admonition is followed by a very tender: “Verily I say unto you, notwithstanding their sins, my bowels are filled with compassion towards them. I will not utterly cast them off; and in the day of wrath I will remember mercy” (D&C 101:9).

We might say with Alma, “My soul was filled with joy as exceeding as was my pain!” (Alma 36:20b).

The day would come when once more the Lord would say, “Ye are the sons of the living God.”

Scattering of Israel & Judah: Aholah & Aholibah

Ezekiel speaks of Ephraim and Judah as two wicked sisters, competing to outdo each other. He calls Samaria (capital of Ephraim) Aholah, and Jerusalem (capital of Judah), Aholibah (Ezekiel 23:4 ff.).

Ephraim was now at the verge of being taken captive by Assyria and being scattered all over Europe, Asia and Africa. These individuals would not be returning to the Holy Land but would be scattered all over. They would come to be called the Lost Tribes.

So it is that we read that “In the days of Pekah king of Israel came Tiglathpileser king of Assyria, and took Ijon, and Abelbethmaachah, and Janoah, and Kedesh, and Hazor, and Gilead, and Galilee, all the land of Naphtali, and carried them captive to Assyria (2 Kings 15:29).

Judah’s capture by Babylonia would follow about 120 years later and last for seven decades. Much of Judah would remain in Babylon and yet a remnant would return to the Holy Land. The promised Messiah would be born from within this returning remnant of the tribe of Judah, even Jesus Christ.

Of the Babylonian captivity of Judah we read: “The cities of the south shall be shut up, and none shall open them: Judah shall be carried away captive all of it, it shall be wholly carried away captive” (Jeremiah 13:19).

These scriptures in 2 Kings and Jeremiah are accompanied by many others. These events took place over a number of years.

After Christ’s death, Judah continued to be scattered, yet she was in part able to retain her national identity. Many of Judah—like her sister Ephraim—have lost their identity, however.

From the Book of Mormon, we read that there is a portion of the Lost Tribes who have also kept a record (2 Nephi 29:12–13): one which we will have in due course of time.

Lehi’s family escaped Jerusalem just before Judah was taken captive, and with the help of God, made sea vessels to travel to the American continent.

One way or the other, then, the children of Jacob were scattered to every continent, island of the sea, and corner of the earth. Her blood would be mingled with those of all the people upon the earth.

In Genesis 22:18a Abraham was told: “And in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed.” One of the ways this would take place is that Israel’s blood would run through all the nations.

Early Patriarchal Blessings

The Holy Scriptures contain the patriarchal blessings of Joseph, as well as those of his brothers. We find a very important portion of Joseph's patriarchal blessing in Genesis 49:22–26. Much less often, do we speak of his blessings given by Moses and found in Deuteronomy 33:13–17. I wish to quote the last of these verses: "His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the horns of unicorns: with them he shall push the people together to the ends of the earth: and they are the ten thousands of Ephraim, and they are the thousands of Manasseh" (Deuteronomy 33:17).

These horns were to be used to gather Israel from all the nations of the earth. One Elder who served in Llanquihue, Chile, and with whom I shared these thoughts added, "Yes, one horn represents Ephraim and the other Manasseh."

It would be the thousands of Manasseh and the ten thousands of Ephraim who would begin this great work. Certainly, with time, missionaries from all of the tribes would be united in this effort. And the work of gathering is taking place on both sides of the veil.

Blessings for Ishmael

The Lord, in his great love, will not leave anyone unbled. We are told that Ishmael, Isaac's half-brother, would not be left without a blessing: "And as for Ishmael, I have heard thee: Behold, I have blessed him, and will make him fruitful, and will multiply him exceedingly; twelve princes shall he beget, and I will make him a great nation. But my covenant will I establish with Isaac ..." (Genesis 17:20–21a).

Writing to your posterity

If you were given an opportunity to write a letter to your great, great grandchildren and share your testimony of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ—at a time when they had lost knowledge of Him—would not that be wonderful? And would not that be even more wonderful if your readers would be blessed with the Holy Ghost to know of the truthfulness of your testimony? In essence, this is what the Book of Mormon is to the Lamanite nations. But this book is not just a blessing to those of Lamanite heritage, but to the whole world, to all the nations, to both the Jew and the Gentile nations—for the convincing of all that Jesus is the Christ.

Prophets speak of the gathering

The Jews, as we have said, divide the Holy Scriptures or Tanakh (תנ"ך) into three discrete categories: The Law, the Prophets, and the Writings.

The Prophets, נביאים or NEVI'IM, are full of allusions, especially to the Law or Torah, תורה.

Both the law and the prophets particularly testified of Christ. When the Lord visited the American continent He said: "And this is the law and the prophets, for they truly testified of me" (3 Nephi 15:10b). The Prophetic books are particularly important in this respect:

"Verily I say unto you, yea, and all the prophets from Samuel and those that follow after, as many as have spoken, have testified of me. And behold, ye are the children of the prophets; and ye are of the house of Israel; and ye are of the covenant which the Father made with your fathers, saying unto Abraham: And in thy seed shall all the kindreds of the earth be blessed" (3 Nephi 20:24–25).

"And whosoever will hearken unto my words and repenteth and is baptized, the same shall be saved. Search the prophets, for many there be that testify of these things" (3 Nephi 23:5).

"AND now, behold, I say unto you, that ye ought to search these things. Yea, a commandment I give unto you that ye search these things diligently; for great are the words of Isaiah. For surely he spake as touching all things concerning my people which are of the house of Israel; therefore it must needs be that he must speak also to the Gentiles (3 Nephi 23:1–2, emphasis added).

ISAIAH 18

There are a number of chapters in Isaiah that speak of the Book of Mormon, and we shall see in more detail as we enter our study. One of them is ISAIAH 18:7. We read of ambassadors of truth that have a great work to perform:

"In that time shall the present be brought unto the Lord of hosts." The present that is brought to the Lord are the converts from the twelve tribes of Israel.

"Of a people scattered and peeled, and from a people terrible from their beginning hitherto; a nation meted out and trodden under foot, whose land the rivers have spoiled." These people who have been scattered and peeled, or removed from their land, are the children of Israel.

"To the place of the name of the Lord of hosts, the mount Zion." This place, clearly, is the House of the Lord, even the Temple of our God. Mount Zion stands for the Temple Mount in Jerusalem—and by extension, probably all the temples.

One of the greatest gifts we can give the Lord is to share His word with others and help others come unto Christ. Just as a baptism without confirmation is not complete, missionary work is not completed until the converts partake of the ordinances of salvation in the House of the Lord. Of course, each person has to also endure to the end in righteous living.

A vital part of the gathering of Israel, then, is to help people go to the temple, and as the Prophet Joseph Smith said in our opening quote, to “prepare them for the ordinances and endowments, washings and anointings” (HC 5:422).

Your God, My People

There are multiple references throughout the Holy Scriptures where the Lord reminds His people Israel of the Abrahamic covenant which was reiterated in Rain in Due Season and elsewhere. Here are but a few examples. In each of these cases it can be assumed that the readers of the scriptures were intimately aware of the theological ellipsis involved:

“And I will take you to me for a people, and I will be to you a God: and ye shall know that I am the LORD your God, which bringeth you out from under the burdens of the Egyptians” (Exodus 6:7, emphasis added).

Speaking of a day to come: “But this shall be the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel; After those days, saith the LORD, I will put my law in their inward parts, and write it in their hearts; and will be their God, and they shall be my people” (Jeremiah 31:33, emphasis added).

“That the house of Israel may go no more astray from me, neither be polluted any more with all their transgressions; but that they may be my people, and I may be their God, saith the Lord GOD” (Ezekiel 14:11, emphasis added).

“And ye shall know that I am in the midst of Israel, and that I am the LORD your God, and none else: and my people shall never be ashamed. And it shall come to pass afterward, that I will pour out my spirit upon all flesh; and your sons and your daughters shall prophesy, your old men shall dream dreams, your young men shall see visions” (Joel 2:27–28, emphasis added).

“And I will bring them, and they shall dwell in the midst of Jerusalem: and they shall be my people, and I will be their God, in truth and in righteousness” (Zechariah 8:8, emphasis added).

Allusion is made to other portions of the Rain in Due Season scriptures, also. For instance, in Daniel 9:7–11, we read Daniel’s acknowledgement that the children of Jacob had failed to keep the covenant and had thus suffered the promised consequences or curses:

“O Lord, righteousness belongeth unto thee, but unto us confusion of faces, as at this day; to the men of Judah, and to the inhabitants of Jerusalem, and unto all Israel, that are near, and that are far off, through all the countries whither thou hast driven them, because of their trespass that they have trespassed against thee. O Lord, to us belongeth confusion of face, to our kings, to our princes, and to our fathers, because we have sinned against thee. To the Lord our God belong mercies and forgivenesses, though we have rebelled against him; Neither have we obeyed the voice of the Lord our God, to walk in his laws, which he set before us by his servants the prophets. Yea, all Israel have transgressed thy law, even by departing, that they might not obey thy voice; therefore the curse is poured upon us, and the oath that is written in the law of Moses the servant of God, because we have sinned against him” (Daniel 9:7–11, emphasis added).

Ezekiel 36

I find Ezekiel 36:16 ff. particularly interesting, because it is as if the Lord is reminding the children of Jacob about Rain in Due Season before speaking about the vital role to be played by the Book of Mormon in helping to gather Israel from every corner of the globe: a role which is again spoken off in ISAIAH 66, and elsewhere.

“Moreover the word of the Lord came unto me, saying, Son of man” (Ezekiel 36:16–17a). The Lord shares His titles with His servants. The Savior is the SON OF MAN, for His Father is the MAN OF HOLINESS (Moses 6:57; 7:35). “When the house of Israel dwelt in their own land, they defiled it by their own way and by their doings: their way was before me as the uncleanness of a removed woman” (Ezekiel 36:17b). In other words, the Lord is telling them that they did not keep the covenant.

“Wherefore I poured my fury upon them for the blood that they had shed upon the land, and for their idols wherewith they had polluted it: And I scattered them among the heathen, and they were dispersed through the countries: according to their way and according to their doings I judged them” (Ezekiel 36:18–19). Because of Israel’s apostasy, she was scattered as promised.

“And I will sanctify my great name, which was profaned among the heathen, which ye have profaned in the midst of them; and the heathen shall know that I am the LORD, saith the Lord GOD, when I shall be sanctified in you before their eyes. For I will take you from among the heathen, and gather you out of all countries, and will bring you into your own land” (Ezekiel 36:23–24). The Lord is here speaking of the gathering that would come to pass after the blessings and cursing as mentioned in Deuteronomy 30:1–6, Rain in Due Season.

Numerous spiritual blessings are enumerated next: “Then will I sprinkle clean water upon you, and ye shall be clean [compare to the temple ordinance in Numbers: ‘And thus shalt thou do unto them, to cleanse them: Sprinkle water of purifying upon them’ (Numbers 8:7a)]: from all your filthiness, and from all your idols, will I cleanse you. A new heart also will I give you, and a new spirit will I put within you [possibly an allusion to being confirmed and the reception of the Holy Ghost—GB] : and I will take away the stony heart out of your flesh, and I will give you an heart of flesh. And I will put my spirit within you, and cause you to walk in my statutes, and ye shall keep my judgments, and do them” (Ezekiel 36:25–27).

Among the promised blessings will be a return to the lands consecrated to Israel, including the Holy Land, “And ye shall dwell in the land that I gave to your fathers; and ye shall be my people, and I will be your God” (Ezekiel 36:28, emphasis added).

In the next verses the Lord touches upon other promises made in Rain in Due Season, such as crops instead of famine, the reconstruction of the waste places, etc.

The promised Book of Mormon

We finally come to the glorious punchline. How will Israel be gathered in fulfillment of the many promises made in Rain in Due Season and elsewhere in the Jewish Bible? Let us move on to Ezekiel 37:15, an often quoted scripture which I hope we will better understand.

“The word of the Lord came again unto me, saying, Moreover, thou son of man” (Ezekiel 37:15–16a). Once again, the Lord shares His own title with Ezekiel. “Take thee one stick, and write upon it” (Ezekiel 37:16b). The prophets of God were often asked to act out the prophetic word: for instance, by cooking on cow dung (Ezekiel 4:12, 15); going ‘naked’ or wearing only the undergarments (ISAIAH 20:3); burying a sash or girdle in the river (Jeremiah 13:4) and so on.

Now the Prophet Ezekiel is asked to take a stick, or rather, a piece of wood, and literally write upon it. The word עֵץ translated as stick in our KJV, means tree, or in this context, rather, wood (Gesenius, BDB, HALOT) or tablet {Targum (ט)}.

The LHI Bible (see also 1587 Geneva Bible) translates the word עֵץ as “[a piece of] wood.” In the Targum of Ezekiel the meaning is even clearer, “take one tablet [לִיטָא] and engrave upon it” {Targum Jonathan to the Prophets (ט)}.

It is clear that we have a piece of writing material here, whether wood, metal, or something else. So, “take thee one stick, and write upon it, For Judah, and for the children of Israel his companions” (Ezekiel 37:16b) is to symbolize that most precious book that would come down to us through Judah, the Holy Bible.

Judah, here, stands for the southern kingdom, or the tribes of Judah and Benjamin, called Judah for the prominent role of that tribe. His companions makes it clear that it was not to be for Judah alone, but Judah, Benjamin, and Levi, and eventually, all of Israel.

“Then take another stick [עֵץ, or once again, tablet in the Targum (ט), לִיטָא], and write upon it, For Joseph, the stick of Ephraim and for all the house of Israel his companions” (Ezekiel 37:16c).

Beside the Bible we have another book that would be engraved, one that would proceed from Joseph—or Ephraim. His companions expands the importance of this book beyond the literal tribe of Ephraim to all of the northern tribes of Israel, and eventually, to the two and a half tribes of the south, named after Judah.

This is the second priceless book mentioned, the Book of Mormon. “And join them one to another into one stick; and they shall become one in thine hand” (Ezekiel 37:17). This second book comes with a blessing so powerful, that all who read from its pages—and ask God the Eternal Father in the name of Christ about its truthfulness—will know it is from God.

These two books, the Bible and the Book of Mormon would become as one witness. Yes, these two engraved holy books would also come to be carried together. When I joined The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints in the 1970s people literally carried these books together, in one hand.

The time will come—and is already here—when electronic versions of these books will replace the physical copies. People in future days may not understand this scripture unless they understand the cultural ellipsis, that people in the old days actually carried books in their hands. People who have everything in an electronic or virtual version will need to be told that in the nineteenth and twentieth centuries people carried actual physical copies of these books, the Holy Bible and the Book of Mormon, joined together, in their hands.

When the missionaries introduce the Book of Mormon, they are often asked, “Why do we need another book beside the Bible?” We recognize both the question and the answer here in Ezekiel. “And when the children of thy people shall speak unto thee, saying, Wilt thou not shew us what thou meanest by these?” (Ezekiel 37:18). What they are really asking is, once again, “Two books?” The Lord answers through Ezekiel, “Yes, indeed, two books joined together and supporting of each other: two books that do not contradict each other: two united witnesses.”

Note the expression בְּנֵי עַמֶּךָ, the children of thy people. This is because the Book of Mormon will be taken to the literal children of Israel—both Ephraim and Judah. Can you feel the increasing thrill of the narrative?

The answer comes in a further repetition of what has already been said. “Oh yes, indeed, you heard correctly. There will be two books: one written by Judah; the other by Ephraim!”

“Say unto them, Thus saith the Lord GOD; Behold, I will take the stick of Joseph, which is in the hand of Ephraim, and the tribes of Israel his fellows, and will put them with him, even with the stick of Judah, and make them one stick, and they shall be one in mine hand (יָדִי)” (Ezekiel 37:19). In whose hand shall these two books be? In the hands of the Lord, for He shall use these as instruments for the gathering of His people, as we shall see.

“And the sticks whereon thou writest shall be in thine hand before their eyes” (Ezekiel 37:20). The prophet Ezekiel is commanded to carry these two tablets made out of wood before the people—in representation of these two books that would come forth, the Bible and the Book of Mormon.

The idea is that the people around the Prophet Ezekiel would ask him the meaning of his walking around with two pieces of wood pressed against each other in his hand. The very question, as we saw above, was prophetic of the inquiry in the mouth of those who would listen to the missionaries in the latter days and ask “why do we need two Bibles?”

I have friends and scholars who belong to other churches and they recognize that the Bible can be interpreted in multiple ways. The Prophet Joseph Smith wanted to know which Church was right but concluded that “... the teachers of religion of the different sects understood the same passages of scripture so differently as to destroy all confidence in settling the question by an appeal to the Bible” (JS-History 1:12).

Now we come to the triumphant message, the thrilling message of the Hebrew Bible. Throughout the Holy Scriptures the Lord has promised that He would gather Israel in the latter days. Now the Holy One of Israel is telling us that the gathering will take place through these two books.

These records are the means whereby Israel will be gathered from among all the nations. Both of them are full of wonderful promises to the children of Jacob. The very purpose of the Book of Mormon, as explained by the ancient prophet who inscribed its title page, is for “the convincing of the Jew and Gentile that JESUS is the CHRIST.”

That is also the very message of the Bible even if it has been transmitted to us in an imperfect form. The Prophet Joseph Smith explained, “I believe the Bible as it read when it came from the pen of the original writers. Ignorant translators, careless transcribers, or designing and corrupt priests have committed many errors” (DHC, 6:57).⁵ These two records—or at the mouth of two witnesses—testify of Christ and of His divinity.

The coming forth of the Book of Mormon, intended to work in unison with the Bible, would indicate that the gathering of Israel was about to begin. Elder M. Russell Ballard taught: “I love the Bible, its teachings, its lessons, and its spirit. I love the Old Testament’s compelling, profound stories and its great prophets testifying of the coming of Christ. I love the New Testament’s apostolic travels and miracles and the letters of Paul. Most of all, I love its eyewitness accounts of the words and the example and the Atonement of our Savior Jesus Christ. I love the perspective and peace that come from reading the Bible... Brothers and sisters, I am sure many of you have had the experience of hearing people say that ‘Mormons are not Christians because they have their own Bible, the Book of Mormon.’ To anyone harboring this misconception, we say that we believe in the Lord Jesus Christ as our Savior and the author of our salvation and that we believe, revere, and love the Holy Bible. We do have additional sacred scripture, including the Book of Mormon, but it supports the Bible, never substituting for it. We love the Bible and other scriptures. That may be surprising to some who may not be aware of our belief in the Bible as the revealed word of God. It is one of the pillars of our faith, a powerful witness of the Savior and of Christ’s ongoing influence in the lives of those who worship and follow Him. The more we read and study the Bible and its teachings, the more clearly we see the doctrinal underpinnings of the restored gospel of Jesus Christ... Those who join this Church do not give up their faith in the Bible—they strengthen it. The Book of Mormon does not dilute nor diminish nor de-emphasize the Bible. On the contrary, it expands, extends, and exalts it. The Book of Mormon testifies of the Bible, and both testify of Christ... I bear solemn witness that we are true and full believers in the Lord Jesus Christ and in His revealed word through the Holy Bible. We not only believe the Bible—we strive to follow its precepts and to teach its message. The message of our missionaries is Christ and His gospel and His Atonement, and the scriptures are the text of that message.”⁶

The resurrected Lord spoke to a remnant of Joseph in the American continent: “Ye remember that I spake unto you, and said that when the words of Isaiah should be fulfilled—behold they are written, ye have them before you, therefore search them—And verily, verily, I say unto you, that when they shall be fulfilled then is the fulfilling of the covenant which the Father hath made unto his people, O house of Israel. And then shall the remnants, which shall be scattered abroad upon the face of the earth, be gathered in from the east and from the west, and from the south and from the north; and they shall be brought to the knowledge of the Lord their God, who hath redeemed them” (3 Nephi 20:11–13).

⁵ Robert J. Matthews, “Joseph Smith’s Inspired Translation of the Bible.” December 1972 Ensign.

⁶ Ballard, M. Russell. The Miracle of the Holy Bible. April 2007 General Conference.

Furthermore we read: “And I will remember the covenant which I have made with my people [i.e., all of Israel]; and I have covenanted with them that I would gather them together in mine own due time, that I would give unto them again the land of their fathers for their inheritance, which is the land of Jerusalem [for the tribes of Judah], which is the promised land unto them forever, saith the Father” (3 Nephi 20:29).

Here in Ezekiel, the Holy One of Israel ties the gathering, the Book of Mormon and Holy Bible together. These concepts are joined as closely as Ezekiel was to carry the two pieces of wood in his hand, in representation of these future books.

“And say unto them, Thus saith the Lord GOD; Behold, I will take the children of Israel from among the heathen [הַגִּוִּים], whither they be gone.” As we said earlier, the heathen, הַגִּוִּים can also be translated as the nations [הַגִּוִּים].

The scattering and gathering among the nations is the same as that which is mentioned in Rain in Due Season: “And it shall come to pass, when all these things are come upon thee, the blessing and the curse, which I have set before thee, and thou shalt call them to mind among all the nations [הַגִּוִּים], whither the LORD thy God hath driven thee (Deuteronomy 30:1).

In Rain in Due Season, right after this verse, the Lord speaks of gathering Israel from among the nations, “... then the LORD thy God will turn thy captivity, and have compassion upon thee, and will return and gather thee from all the nations [הַגִּוִּים], whither the LORD thy God hath scattered thee.”

Here, however, the word nations is a translated from a Hebrew synonym, literally, “gather thee from all the peoples [הַעַמִּים].” The Lord is speaking of gathering and fetching Israel back.

“And will gather them on every side, and bring them into their own land” (Ezekiel 37:21b). Such words reaffirm what has already been promised, that the Lord would gather Israel from every quarter of the earth and bring them back to the Promised Land. Judah would be especially brought back to the Holy Land, the land of Israel; Ephraim and Manasseh, the children of Joseph, would be especially brought back to Zion, both North and South America. [The word Zion has numerous meanings, depending on the context, and includes Zion in America as well as Zion in representation of Israel.]

The enmity between the tribes of Israel will cease and shall once again become one nation. “And I will make them one nation in the land upon the mountains of Israel” (Ezekiel 37:22). Instead of being divided, as they were after the civil war,⁷ where Ephraim and Manasseh hated each other, and where both hated Judah and Judah hated them back, there would be great unity between the tribes. Is this not the case in The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints today? There is great love between Ephraim and Manasseh and between these tribes and Judah. Not only is there a great abiding love between all the tribes, but also toward the children of Ishmael and to the whole world.

And Messiah their King

“And one king shall be king to them all” (Ezekiel 37:22b). Israel’s true King had been rejected and Saul had been called to be king. At that time Israel had a human king just like all the surrounding nations. The civil war brought two kingdoms and two kings, the kings of Judah in the south, and the kings of Ephraim in the north.

Christ would now once again be Israel’s King and the King of all the nations. “And they shall be no more two nations, neither shall they be divided into two kingdoms any more at all” (Ezekiel 37:22b).

The next verse speaks of the grace that would be poured upon the children of Jacob, so that they would be able to combat sin and be cleansed and saved through the expiatory sacrifice of the Messiah.

“Neither shall they defile themselves any more with their idols, nor with their detestable things, nor with any of their transgressions: but I will save them out of all their dwellingplaces, wherein they have sinned” (Ezekiel 37:23). Through the cleansing of baptism and the unspeakable gift of the Holy Ghost, the Lord has blessed the children of Israel with much strength. His Grace is sufficient for all those who wish to be His disciples.

Note here a spiritual gathering from the “dwelling places wherein they have sinned.” Not only are the children of Israel gathered from every corner under the heavens, but they are gathered away from idolatry and every manner of sin, invited to leave spiritual Babylon and come to spiritual Zion, regardless of where they live.

And now the words which all who have embraced the Gospel of Jesus Christ have been waiting for, the Holy One of Israel says to all His disciples: “And will cleanse them: so shall they be my people, and I will be their God” (Ezekiel 37:23b, emphasis added, and see also Ezekiel 36:25–27). Note the baptismal cleansing that takes place before the gift of the Holy Ghost is imparted, wherein the Holy Ghost can become our constant companion and we can feel that the Lord is truly our God and we are His people. Is this not at least one way in which the promise is fulfilled wherein the Lord walks among us? We can then be cleansed by the Holy Spirit of Promise as we become partakers of the Abrahamic covenant. Do you hear the invitation, oh Israel?

⁷ I often speak on this subject, and at a fireside yesterday, at the Alerce Ward, Puerto Montt Stake, Sister Marisol Cornejo de San Martín wisely suggested that these mountains themselves also represent the temples of the Lord, where perfect harmony is expected of those who enter therein. 12 June 2017.

This refers to the principal theological ellipsis we have been speaking off throughout this paper. The person who is familiar with the Hebrew Scriptures will immediately make the connection with the Scriptures which speak about the great blessings and cursing that was to come upon the children of Israel as a result of their obedience or disobedience.

“And David my servant shall be king over them; and they all shall have one shepherd: they shall also walk in my judgments, and observe my statutes, and do them” (Ezekiel 37:24). David is here put for one of the many titles of our Lord Jesus Christ.

When we read of this second David, we know at once it refers to no ordinary man, but to the Messiah. In Jeremiah we read, “In those days, and at that time, will I cause the Branch of righteousness to grow up unto David; and he shall execute judgment and righteousness in the land (Jeremiah 33:15, see also 23:5). Furthermore, “But they shall serve the LORD their God, and David their king, whom I will raise up unto them” (Jeremiah 30:9); “And I will set up one shepherd over them, and he shall feed them, even my servant David; he shall feed them, and he shall be their shepherd. And I the LORD will be their God, and my servant David a prince among them; I the LORD have spoken it” (Ezekiel 34:23); “Afterward shall the children of Israel return (שָׁבוּ), and seek the LORD their God, and David their king; and shall fear the LORD and his goodness in the latter days” (Hosea 3:5). This שָׁבוּ is not only a physical one, but a spiritual one in which people return to the Lord.

Why David? King David of old was the first, after Moses and Joshua, to bring the hearts of all the tribes together knit as one. More importantly, of the Davidic line would be born Messiah. Jesus the Christ was often called, “Son of David.” All of these references to a latter-day David who would reign over Israel, then, are allusions to Messiah.

“And they shall dwell in the land that I have given unto Jacob my servant, wherein your fathers have dwelt; and they shall dwell therein, even they, and their children, and their children’s children for ever: and my servant David shall be their prince for ever” (Ezekiel 37:25).

So this wonderful promise is repeated, the children of Israel would be restored to their promised lands and they would have the Holy One of Israel or the Holy Messiah, the very Son of God, to be their Prince and their King.

The land spoken of here is the land of Israel, of course. But the land of Israel shall “be too narrow by reason of the inhabitants” (ISAIAH 49:19b). In addition, the Lord would give to Joseph another choice land, in the “everlasting hills” that would be found “over the wall” or the ocean, even the American continent (see Joseph’s patriarchal blessing, Genesis 49:22–26).

Other prophets also bear witness of the same gathering: “Thus saith the LORD of hosts; Behold, I will save my people from the east country, and from the west country; And I will bring them, and they shall dwell in the midst of Jerusalem: and they shall be my people, and I will be their God, in truth and in righteousness” (Zechariah 8:7–8, emphasis added).

It is the thousands of Manasseh and ten thousands of Ephraim who will have the great blessing and responsibility for beginning the process of gathering the rest of the tribes, including Judah. In ISAIAH 18 and 66 we will read in great detail how missionaries will leave the American continent and help gather Israel and Judah back to the land of Israel and back to the temple: “In that time shall the present be brought unto the LORD of hosts of a people scattered and peeled [i.e., scattered and removed], and from a people terrible from their beginning [i.e., this is what Israel was called by the surrounding nations after its return from Egypt] hitherto; a nation meted out and trodden under foot, whose land the rivers have spoiled [i.e., a reference to armies that invaded Israel, e.g., see ISAIAH 8:7–8], to the place of the name of the LORD of hosts, the mount Zion [i.e., here a reference to the temple and to the land of Israel]” (ISAIAH 18:7).

“Moreover I will make a covenant of peace with them” (Ezekiel 34:23). The word peace (שָׁלוֹם) is an interesting one. Peace, in Hebrew, means much more than the cessation of war. Among its meanings the idea of salvation is included. So it is that through the Holy Ghost we can be filled with calm and peace and joy, but that is not all, we are lead through this covenant to the way of salvation and eternal lives.

“It shall be an everlasting covenant with them: and I will place them, and multiply them” (Ezekiel 37:26b). In the last days the Lord would establish His Church for the last time. It would never fall, as a Church, into apostasy. It would be the last dispensation, or the dispensation of the fullness of times.

“And will set my sanctuary in the midst of them for evermore. My tabernacle also shall be with them” (Ezekiel 37:26b–27a).

The Holy One of Israel would establish the House of the Lord, His temple, among the people so that when this gift of a converted scattered Israel would be gathered, they could enter the House of the Lord to make special covenants there.

“Yea, I will be their God, and they shall be my people” (Ezekiel 37:27b). This is a double blessing, a sure blessing—one that is repeated twice in these verses.

“And the heathen [or the nations] shall know that I the Lord do sanctify Israel, when my sanctuary shall be in the midst of them for evermore [לְעוֹלָם]” (Ezekiel 37:28). Once again, the House of the Lord is mentioned and a promise that the Church would not fall away, ever, לְעוֹלָם.

All of the nations shall know that Israel was not discarded by Her Lord, “And the heathen shall know that I the LORD do sanctify Israel, when my sanctuary shall be in the midst of them for evermore.” So, “In the mouth of two or three witnesses shall every word be established” (2 Corinthians 13:1). The witness of the Book of Mormon loudly proclaims the divinity of the Savior, and help us better understand many of the promises found in the Bible.

Amidst a world who is attacking the divinity of our Lord, I came across this wonderful quote from Assistant Professor of Ancient Scripture, Shon D. Hopkin, of Brigham Young University, “There is no space in the Book of Mormon for any debate over His identity. He is the Son of God; He is the Savior of the world.”⁸

I cherish my testimony of God, the Eternal Father, and His beloved Son, even Jesus Christ, above all things. It is the Book of Mormon that led me to this testimony. With the Psalmist I exclaim: “Praise ye the LORD. O give thanks unto the LORD; for he is good: for his mercy endureth for ever (לְעוֹלָם)” (Psalm 106:1).

I was gathered by the Book of Mormon⁹

I was born in Chile in 1954. My parental grandfather was a Lithuanian Jew and my grandmother a German Jew. My mother’s side of the family is Chilean. I was raised Catholic. When I was about thirteen, our religion teacher at Saint George’s College¹⁰ in Santiago taught us that the Trinity was a mystery; that the Father and the Son and the Holy Spirit were one and three in a way that could not be explained. In fact, she explained that it would be easier to empty the Pacific Ocean with a bucket, into the sand by the beach, than to understand this great mystery.

As I rode the trolley bus on the way home, I was inspired by the Holy Ghost whose words came to me something like this: “It is really a simple thing: the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost are three distinct beings but one in purpose.” While I was still thinking about what all this meant, I saw myself at home, asking my Father for permission to go to the farm in San Javier (then about five hours south of Santiago by train) for the long weekend. While my parents always gave permission, on this occasion my father explained that I could not go and gave several reasons. Then he invited me to ask my mother if I did not like his answer. I turned around to do exactly that, to go and ask my mother, and remembered that she had given me the same answer and invited me to ask my father if I was not satisfied with her response. It was made clear to me, that just as my parents were two distinct individuals yet one in purpose, the Father, Son and Holy Ghost were one in perfect purpose and unity.

I was so excited I could not wait to share my newly gained knowledge with my parents. When I burst with my newly acquired news, my father had been sitting on a rocking chair and had been chatting with my mother while she was in her bed. “If I told you this was the greatest blasphemy against the Catholic Church, would you still say this?” he asked. As much as I looked up to my parents and did not want to offend them I could not deny what I had felt. Later I came to know that I had received a witness from the Holy Ghost. Some of the words that came to me were the same as those expressed by the Prophet Joseph Smith when he said he could not deny that which was of God. So much so, that when years later I read the Joseph Smith account of the first vision, my first reaction was, “He copied me!” No sooner had this thought crossed my mind, I realized that the Prophet had lived over a century before.

In 1970, when I was fifteen, a religion teacher gave us an assignment to write about The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. Our school was being bought by the Mormons and we were moving to another location in Santiago. This American priest told us, “You Chileans think that the only church is the Catholic Church.” Even though I had once accompanied my father to a synagogue in New York, I thought to myself, “Yes, of course.” “Well,” the Priest continued: “I want each of you to write a report on the Mormons.”

I told my father about this report. He said that I was in luck as the LDS Mission Home was only two blocks from our home. But, he warned, “Be careful, they will try and convert you.” The Elder who answered the door was polite, but to my surprise had me wait outside and did not preach the Gospel to me (later, I found out that it was because of my young age and the ⁸ R. Scott Lloyd, “Sperry Symposium speaker: Book of Mormon written ‘to the convincing of Jew and Gentile that Jesus is the Christ.’” Sidney B. Sperry Symposium (24 October 2015). Deseret News, Faith, 12 November 2015.

⁹ See my Mormon.org profile, <http://www.mormon.org/me/G5Y8> and <http://www.mormon.org/spa/me/G5Y8> (English and Spanish, respectively); as well as On Sacred Ground, February 1993 Liahona <https://www.lds.org/liahona/1993/02/on-sacred-ground?lang=eng> and January 1992 Ensign: <https://www.lds.org/ensign/1992/01/mormon-journal/on-sacred-ground?lang=eng>.

¹⁰ I attended this school from first grade in Elementary School to tenth grade in High School, in Santiago.

Church's desire not to split families). The Elder soon returned and gave me some nice magazines with photographs, as well as a book. I cut and pasted the photos and wrote a report. I also opened the book but I found it less interesting as it was mostly print matter with little art or photos.

I finished the report and turned it in. To my surprise the Catholic Priest announced to the whole class—in a bitter voice—that because I had done such a good job on the report that I would get a 7 (perfect score in Chile, where 4 is passing) and the rest of the class would get no more than a 5. When I got back home I discarded the magazines and was about to do the same with the book, but I felt prompted to open it one more time.

At that time the Book of Mormon paperbacks had the Angel Moroni on the cover and the promise from Moroni 10:4–5 inscribed in the first inside page. I read: “And when ye shall receive these things, I would exhort you that ye would ask God, the Eternal Father, in the name of Christ, if these things are not true; and if ye shall ask with a sincere heart, with real intent, having faith in Christ, he will manifest the truth of it unto you, by the power of the Holy Ghost. And by the power of the Holy Ghost ye may know the truth of all things.”

As I read these words I was filled with the Spirit of the Holy Ghost. I instantly knew it was the Holy Ghost that was testifying to me of the truthfulness of the Book of Mormon. The warmest and sweetest feeling overcame me, and enveloped me from the top of my head to the bottom of my feet. Sadly, my reaction was, “But I don't want to be religious.” I really did not comprehend the joy of discipleship. I had a stony heart.

This episode was one of my last memories in Chile before my whole life would be thrown into chaos. Salvador Allende was elected president of Chile and shortly thereafter and my father, as an American born Jew, did not feel we could stay in Chile. Years later I found out that my father's first choice was to go to Portugal but we ended up going to the USA because he could not find a flight to Portugal.

We settled in New Canaan, Connecticut, and after finishing High School I moved to California, to study agriculture. At the University of California, Davis, I met an interesting Latter-day Saint student, Randy Homrig. He gave me another copy of the Book of Mormon which I filed along with my many books. I remember not agreeing with anything Randy had to say—except when he spoke about the Church. Then, the Spirit would bear witness of the truthfulness of my friend's comments.

During the Christmas vacation of my sophomore year (1973-1974) I returned to Connecticut to spend the holidays with my family. I packed my hand baggage with lots of dressage books (one of the equestrian disciplines). Then I added some textbooks in case I would finish the horse books. As I was leaving my dormitory, out of the corner of my eye the Book of Mormon caught my eye as if to say, “Take me!” In my mind I thought, “Fine, if I read my horse books, and my textbooks, I will read the Book of Mormon and added it to my carryon handbag.

Once on the plane I pulled out a book, all excited with the prospect of reading about dressage. But the last would be first (Matthew 20:16). As I contemplated what seemed like a mistake, the Spirit said, “Read me!” After four days I finished the Book of Mormon.

My stony heart of three years earlier was softened in the process and I was filled with indescribable joy and a heart of flesh. At one point I felt the presence of the Savior and I imagined Him with outstretched arms beckoning me to come unto Him. His message was something to the effect that He would show me the truth of all things if I would become His disciple. But He also warned me that it would be better if I had never known Him than to follow for a while and then get bored of the Gospel. At that very moment I made the choice of following Christ. I was so thrilled that I ran into my brother Nicolás' room with the Book of Mormon in my hand, telling him this was a true book. My parents later told me that I scared my brother into being a good Catholic.

I called the Stake missionaries when I got back to California. I received the discussions from Randy Homrig and Phil On: two on Tuesday, two on Wednesday, and two on Friday. When they taught me the LDS view on the Godhead and I immediately consented, they exchanged surprised glances. I asked to be baptized, but was informed that I needed to first meet with the Branch President of the UCD Branch. President Hill asked me what my parents thought about my joining the Church. I told him that they had asked that I talk to a Catholic Priest. President Hill invited me to be obedient to my parent's request.

I made the appointment and the Catholic Priest told me that it was so obvious that I believed that The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints was true, that I was a hypocrite if I did not join the Church.

So, I was baptized and confirmed a member of the Church on 9 March 1974, at the age of 19. My parents returned to Chile soon after. My father went all over Chile saying that the worst thing that could have possibly happened had taken place, that his son had joined the Mormon Church. A year later he told me that he went back and told the same people that this was the best thing that ever happened, so big was the change for good that he saw in me.

My fiancée Linda Marsing and I were married in the Oakland Temple in 1976. And what happened to my school in Santiago, where I had been given the assignment to study about the LDS Church? There, today stands the Santiago, Chile Temple (it was dedicated in 1983 and became the 24th operating temple).

I worked for the University of California for almost 34 years and my specialty was labor productivity and mediation of deep-seated interpersonal conflicts. I developed several models which I felt were inspired by the Lord. As an academic of the University of California and visiting Professor of the Universidad de Chile, I had many opportunities; including travel to speak in all continents save Antarctica. I suppose the penguins did not need any help in either labor productivity or conflict management. Linda and I had the opportunity to spend all three of my career Sabbaticals in Chile. After retiring in 2014, I was able to return back to Chile with Linda.

I have loved each one of my jobs and my life's work. I have been a dressage rider and instructor, an amateur radio operator, and a soccer referee. I have always loved the scriptures, but since about 1996 my love for the scriptures has occupied much of my free time.

It was while reading the Book of Mormon that I was prompted to turn to my Jewish roots and search Isaiah and the Hebrew Bible. I am slowly working on both my Biblical and Modern Hebrew skills. My wife and I love traveling together.

As I write this I can look out the window and see Lake Llanquihue and multiple snow covered volcanoes and a rainbow. I feel as if I live in the Garden of Eden. I can see the hand of the Lord and His tender mercies [חַסְדֵּי] and how they have blessed my life.

The Book of Mormon originally led me to Christ and to The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. No book has had as great an impact for good in my life. Its positive influence has been on-going, most especially since I accepted President Ezra Taft Benson's 1986 challenge to sup daily from its pages.

Today, my most treasured possession is the knowledge that Jesus is the very Messiah that my Jewish ancestors had been waiting for; that Christ has restored His Church once again upon the earth. That it is through Christ that we can return once again to live with our Father in Heaven. As I read the Book of Mormon and see the promises made to my Lamanite ancestors, I am also filled with gratitude untold. I count myself as one who lived "unto the outmost parts of heaven" (Deuteronomy 30:4), when the Lord found me and gathered me. I found Christ while reading the Book of Mormon. God found me when I was not looking.

FIRST POSTED: 5 December 2016

Isaiah 1

The time period when Isaiah prophesied is laid out. The Lord established a covenant relationship with Israel, but Israel has not been dutiful. Disobedience led to disastrous consequences as spelled out in the Mosaic law (see Rain in Due Season scriptures). If it were not for the mercy of the Lord, Israel would have been entirely destroyed. Nevertheless, a remnant was preserved. The sons of Jacob were guilty of making an external show of piety, yet with no substance. Israel is commanded to repent, and invited to return to the covenant relationship with the Lord. Israel could then be purified by the Redeemer who assured her, “Though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be as white as snow; though they be red like crimson, they shall be as wool.” A lamentation is offered on the spiritual decay of Jerusalem and a better day of righteous restoration is seen to come at some future date. While the righteous will be purified, the wicked will be consumed. NOTE: Many commentators feel that ISAIAH 1 is a preface or prologue to the whole vision of Isaiah (e.g., Barnes, Delitzsch) and probably written later much like our D&C 1 which was received later by our prophet Joseph Smith (see Nyman).

v. 1. The timeline is given in which Isaiah prophesied.

1 ¶ THE vision of Isaiah the son of Amoz, which he saw concerning Judah and Jerusalem in the days of Uzziah, Jotham, Ahaz, [and] Hezekiah, kings of Judah.

The vision of Isaiah. While the first chapter of Isaiah is considered the preface for the entire work, some consider the first verse to be the title of this preface. Calvin says: “So far as relates to the present passage, this word [vision] unquestionably denotes the certainty of the doctrine; as if it had been said that there is nothing contained in this book which was not made known to Isaiah by God himself. The derivation of the word, therefore, deserves attention; for we learn by it that the prophets did not speak of their own accord, or draw from their own imaginations, but that they were enlightened by God, who opened their eyes to perceive those things which otherwise they would not of themselves have been able to comprehend.” The word vision חֲזִיוֹן, then, implies a higher testimony of that which the prophet Isaiah saw and heard. The Chronicler uses such a title, “the vision of Isaiah the prophet” to refer to the book of Isaiah (2 Chronicles 32:32b). In the New Testament, the book of Isaiah is referred to as the book, words, prophecy or saying of Esaias. The vision, or what the prophet saw in vision: thus the word seer. In Samuel 9:9 we see this parenthetical explanation: “(Beforetime in Israel, when a man went to enquire of God, thus he spake, Come, and let us go to the seer: for he that is now called a Prophet was beforetime called a Seer.)” Isaiah, then, saw as a prophet and seer to receive divine revelation. The name of the prophet Isaiah¹ in Hebrew (יְשַׁעְיָהוּ²) is יְשַׁעְיָהוּ, or transliterated, it sounds like Yeshayahu. Yahu or Yah stands for Jehovah or Yahweh or Yahve, which would be pointed as יְהוָה (in order to avoid the profane use of the Lord’s name, some believe that the scribes pointed it so it would read as Jehovah rather than Yahweh, יְהוֹה), while Yesha (יֵשָׁע) means, among other significations, salvation and deliverance. This salvation is brought about by the Lord and can be both expiatory and redemptive as well as provide physical safety. In the Septuagint (6) the prophet is also called Esaias. In the Latin Vulgate (7) and its translation to English (Douay), Isaias (Isaias in Spanish). ¶ Son of Amoz, or ben Amotz (בֶּן-אֲמוֹץ). The prophet’s father should not be confused with the Prophet Amos (עָמוֹס). Rabbinic tradition makes Isaiah the nephew of King Amaziah (Seder Mo’ed, Megilah 10b; Seder Nashim, Sotah 10b) and thus a first cousin to Uzziah, giving him an unusual amount of protection for speaking out openly. ¶ Which he saw. The word saw has the same general significance as the word vision, both meaning to see as a prophet, to receive in revelation. ¶ Concerning Judah and Jerusalem. This is a summary statement, noting that the main emphasis of the prophecy would relate to the southern kingdom in the divided monarchy—that is, the tribes of Judah and Benjamin, as well as some of the most pious members Hosea’s name in Hebrew is close to that of Isaiah, and essentially means salvation. Joshua (who lived at the time of Moses) was also at one time called Hosea (or, Oshea) until his name was changed to Joshua, thus adding the name of Jehovah, resulting in: the Lord is our Salvation. The message to Israel and Judah was that salvation could only come as a result of trusting in the Lord.

² יְשַׁעְיָהוּ, we will use this symbol to represent the Masoretic Text of the Biblia Hebraica. Generally, the unpointed versions were more ancient than the יְשַׁעְיָהוּ. This and other ancient version fonts, critical apparatus fonts, as well as Hebrew fonts, are copyrighted by SIL Fonts, for whom we extend a note of gratitude.

¹ The prophet Hosea had jurisdiction mainly over the northern kingdom, or Israel, and greatly overlapped in time with Isaiah.

of the northern tribes who immigrated southward.³ The southern kingdom was known by the name of its stronger tribe and its capital where the Temple was built, that is, Judah (יְהוּדָה), or Yehudah) and Jerusalem (יְרוּשָׁלַיִם or יְרוּשָׁלָם: Yirushalayim). Jerusalem, in Isaiah, takes on a melancholic tone, as she represents the very core of the covenant between the Lord and Israel. The Savior lamented: “Jerusalem, Jerusalem, [thou] that killest the prophets, and stonest them which are sent unto thee, how often would I have gathered thy children together, even as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, and ye would not!” (Matthew 23:37). Jewish tradition suggests that Isaiah was among the martyrs, and that he was cut asunder with a wooden saw by Manasseh, king Hezekiah’s wicked son (not to be confused with Ephraim and Manasseh, sons of Joseph, grandchildren of Jacob). Isaiah was voice for the Lord in prophecies not only about Judah and Jerusalem, but also encompassing the northern ten tribes and the goyim (גוֹיִם), the nations or the Gentiles.⁴ The northern tribes were likewise known by their strongest tribe, Ephraim, but were also called Israel. (In order to avoid confusion, I will avoid using the word Israel to represent only the northern tribes.) The apostasy that took place in Ephraim was extreme, and immediate. As a result, they were the first to be carried off captive by the Assyrians. They soon lost their identity as a people and vanished to the world—but not to God—and thus came to be known as the Lost Tribes or the ten lost tribes of Israel. The apostasy that took place in Judah led to the Babylonian captivity over a century later,⁵ from whence there was a remnant who returned to the Holy Land. Judah’s removal would be longer after the promise had been fulfilled: “The sceptre shall not depart from Judah, nor a lawgiver from between his feet, until Shiloh come; and unto him shall the gathering of the people be” (Genesis 49:13). The original split between the ten tribes and the two tribes took place after the death of King Solomon. ¶ In the days of Uzziah, Jotham, Ahaz, Hezekiah, kings of Judah. Isaiah served under all these kings of Judah.

vv. 2–9. Despite the Lord’s care, the children of Israel have apostatized. As a result Israel has been punished and would have been exterminated save for the desire of the Lord to preserve a remnant.

³ Among the people who the Lord brought to the American continent with Lehi, where included those of the tribes of Ephraim and Manasseh, not from those taken captive to the north, but from families who dwelt in Jerusalem.

⁴ These two definitions, of course, are not synonymous. They give the English translation a different meaning depending on which is used.

⁵ Both the Assyrian and the Babylonian captivities seem to have taken place in multiple waves. Some have suggested that 120 years passed after the Assyrian captivity and before the Babylonian. Others suggest about 135 years as the median time between both captivities. You may wish to consult a biblical timeline of events.

2 ¶ Hear, O heavens, and give ear, O earth: for the LORD hath spoken, I have nourished and brought up children, and they have rebelled against me.

Hear, O heavens, and give ear, O earth. The heavens and the earth are here called as witnesses (cf. Deuteronomy 32:1 and D&C 76:1). Commentators often suggest that sometimes the writings of the prophets—such as Isaiah and Hosea—can best be understood when viewed in the context of a court or associated legal proceeding, where the Lord brings an accusation or controversy against His covenant people. But this is done in tenderness, and one can feel the Lord’s great love for His people Israel. It is always a tender call to return (שׁוּב) to God. This is an all-encompassing call to hearken, to pay attention. All are invited and none excluded. In D&C 1, also known as the preface to the Doctrine and Covenants, we have: “Hearken, O ye people of my church, saith the voice of him who dwells on high; and whose eyes are upon all men . . . For verily the voice of the Lord is unto all men, and there is none to escape; and there is no eye that shall not see, neither ear that shall not hear, neither heart that shall not be penetrated” (D&C 1:1a,2). ¶ For the LORD hath spoken. The LORD, that is, our Savior Jesus the Christ. In the Hebrew Holy Scriptures, it is written either as unpointed, that is, without the Masoretic (מ) points, יְהוָה, or pointed to facilitate the reading, יְהוֹהִי. It is composed of four Hebrew letters, YHVH, or JHVH, and thus called the Tetragrammaton. The points provide the vowels and facilitate the reading of the text. The Masoretes added these reading helps hundreds of years after the Holy Scriptures were given to us. יְהוָה is a sacred name: to the Jews, too sacred to pronounce. Instead, when reading the Hebrew text, they substitute the word Adonai (LORD). The Hebrew text (מ), when translated into English in the King James Version⁶ (KJV) is transmitted as follows: (1) lord (all in lower case, represents the word adonai אֲדֹנָי or adon אֲדֹנִי, or any other lord); (2) Lord (the first letter is capitalized when the word Adonai is used in Hebrew, but it refers to the Lord); and finally, (3) LORD (the word is in all capitals, when the Hebrew was Jehovah, יְהוָה). There is no distinction between lower case and capitalized words in Hebrew, however. The word

⁶ KJV is sometimes called the Authorized Version (AV).

Jehovah⁷ יהוה appears in the KJV only four times; two of these in Isaiah. The American Standard Version (ASV) of 1901, on the other hand, renders the word יהוה, as Jehovah, every time we have the word LORD in the KJV. So also in the Spanish LDS Reina Valera 2009, and most of the Spanish translations of the Bible, where the transliteration of יהוה is used throughout—Jehová. As latter-day saints we use Jehovah in hymns of praise and certainly modern day revelation includes that holy name. ¶ The word spoken, נִדְבַר, in this context, is a powerful, penetrating, piercing, and commanding call to hearken. Isaiah acts as voice, but it is the Lord himself who is making the invitation. The word of the Lord has an eternal nature to it, so time and space seem to be lost. Oh, what a privilege it is to listen to the words of the Lord, whether through Scripture, through the prophets, or through the Spirit of the Holy Ghost. “And whatsoever they shall speak when moved upon by the Holy Ghost shall be scripture, shall be the will of the Lord, shall be the mind of the Lord, shall be the word of the Lord, shall be the voice of the Lord, and the power of God unto salvation” (D&C 68:4). ¶ I have nourished and brought up children. There are no quotation marks used in the Hebrew or in the KJV, but if there were, opening quotations would begin here (e.g., see the ERV, HCSB,⁸ NASB and some others). The Lord has lovingly and carefully tended and taken care of the children of Jacob. We are at once reminded of the allegory of Zenos in the Book of Jacob. “For behold, thus saith the Lord, I will liken thee, O house of Israel, like unto a tame olive-tree, which a man took and nourished in his vineyard ...” (Jacob 5:3a) Delitzsch’s translation, “I have brought up children and raised them high, and they have fallen away from me,” (emphasis added) brings out the poetical contrast between raising or lifting, and falling. The falling is related to the apostasy, that is, the falling away. The lifting means that the Lord did not just raise Israel, but by choosing her, He exalted her and set her apart to become a peculiar people. This meaning is certainly allowed by the Hebrew roots נָדַל and רָם (i.e., to nourish, to bring up). רָם־מָתִי also means to exalt (see note on ISAIAH 25:1). ¶ And they have rebelled against me. Despite all the love and care, they have fallen away. The olive tree vineyard “grew, and waxed old, and began to decay” (Jacob 5:3b). When the Lord refers to his children, He is speaking of the covenant relationship established with Israel.⁹ In this way, Yahweh is both the Father (of those who enter into the covenant) and the Son of Elohim.¹⁰

3 The ox knoweth his owner, and the ass his master's crib: [but] Israel doth not know, my people doth not consider.

The ox knoweth his owner, and the ass his master's crib. The ox (a castrated bull) and the ass are two domesticated farm animals well known by the Israelites and used even today in third world countries for agricultural work. The ox is a powerful but very slow animal. While sometimes bulls and cows are used instead of oxen, the ox is the most common. While the Hebrew word used here for ox (שׁוֹר) could also mean a bull, a cow, or a calf, most translate it as ox. The ass has a reputation for being stubborn. Many translations use donkey while others stick to ass, and both are the same animal (equus asinus). It seems that female asses were especially valued as a riding animal (see HBD). The Hebrew Scriptures (זוֹר) use חֲמֹר, utilized for a male ass. This type was probably of a reddish color (see HBD “Chamor” under ass). The ass could be used for a beast of burden, including pulling farm implements such as the plow, or for riding. They are particularly sure footed and ideal for mountainous and difficult terrain. ¶ Master's crib. The feed troughs where animals are fed. These beasts of burden, then, recognized the hand that fed them. While it is proverbial to speak of the ass

⁷ וַיֹּאמֶר אֱלֹהִים אֶל־מֹשֶׁה אֲנִי אֲנִי אֲנִי. And God said unto Moses, I AM THAT I AM (Exodus 3:14). “The name Jehovah יהוה ... received a special meaning by being connected with the Hebrew verb ‘to be.’  Jehovah (יְהוָה) is a conflate form with the consonants of one word and the vowels of another.  The contracted forms in which the name appears suggest that the original form of the word was Yahweh or Yahve (a Greek transliteration is Ἰαβέ).  In Exodus 3:10 ff., when Moses demurred to go to Egypt, God assured him saying, כִּי־אֲנִי עִמָּךְ ‘I will be with thee.’ When he asked how he would name the God of their fathers to the people, he was told אֲנִי אֲנִי אֲנִי אֲנִי. Again he was bidden say, אֲנִי אֲנִי hath sent me unto you; and finally ‘יהוה’ Yahweh, the God of your fathers, has sent me unto you.’ From all this it seems evident that in the view of the writer אֲנִי and יְהוָה are the same: That God is אֲנִי, ‘I will be,’ when speaking of Himself, and יְהוָה, ‘he will be,’ when spoken of by others. What He will be is left unexpressed—He will be with them, helper, strengthener, deliverer” (DOTB 2:199). It has been suggested that the Targum (ܬܪܓܡ) reads, I AM HE WHO IS AND WHO WILL BE with all its beautiful Messianic implications. See The Aramaic and Palestinian Targum by Zen Garcia, as well as Nägelsbach, Gill and Peshitta (ܣ). The latter focuses on the: I SHALL BE.
⁸ HCSB has, “Listen, heavens, and pay attention, earth, for the LORD has spoken: ‘I have raised children and brought them up ...’”

⁹ Adam fell but not without of a hope of being made alive in Christ. Israel fell and was scattered, but not without a hope of a gathering. In the process of this scattering, Israel was mixed with the nations of the world and in the latter-day would play a key role in helping to gather the Lord's elect from the nations of the world.
¹⁰ Mosiah 15:1–7.

as an animal of low intelligence, the Lord points out that yet these animals show more intellect than man. ¶ *but*¹¹ Israel doth not know, my people doth not consider. In contrast to the beasts of burden, Israel did not recognize where her blessings sprang from and thus offended God: “And in nothing doth man offend God, or against none is his wrath kindled, save those who confess not his hand in all things, and obey not his commandments” (D&C 59:21). Robert Millet makes some insightful comments about the word know, יָדַע. He mentions that this is the same word that is used for a man knowing his wife (e.g., see Genesis 4:17, see Gesenius, euphemism for sexual intercourse). Millet suggests that we must go beyond a mere “cognitive understanding” of the Lord, but to truly know Him through a deep spiritual understanding or “personal righteousness.”¹² עַמִּי, or my people, is a frequent and tender call used by the Lord in the prophets to refer to his covenant relationship with Israel. “And I will give them an heart to know me, that I am the LORD: and they shall be my people, and I will be their God: for they shall return unto me with their whole heart” (Jeremiah 24:7, emphasis added, see Rain in Due Season).

4 Ah sinful nation, a people laden[✓] with iniquity, a seed of evildoers, children that are corrupters: they have forsaken the LORD, they have provoked the Holy One of Israel unto anger, they are gone away backward. ✓ ✓

✓ of heaviness ✓ ✓ alienated, or separated

[Note: ✓ denotes a marginal || reading, margin ||, or gloss. In the KJV the double vertical lines are often used for this purpose, which we will utilize in the text rather than in the verse. This is the first such marginal || note that appears in the Book of Isaiah. Such is an interpretive comment on the scriptures placed there by the translators (in our case, the KJV, although from time to time I will mention marginal readings from other versions). The purpose was to render a possible alternative translation from difficult Hebrew passages. There are two types of marginal || expressions. I.

¹¹ The word but is not in the Hebrew text. Lowth points out that the LXX, Syriac, Vulgate and some other versions actually used the word but, as in (but Israel) יִשְׂרָאֵל. This is also supported by 4QIsa¹, yet but is absent from 1QIsa^a (Q). We use the Dead Sea Scrolls Bible (Q) translation for the readings, unless otherwise noted. Figures of Speech in the Bible, shows how these words that are missing can often strengthen the text.

¹² Millet, Robert. Insight into Isaiah (Episode 102). BYU Broadcasting. Draper, Richard; Ludlow, Victor; Millet, Robert; Madsen, Ann. 2008.

HEBREW. The first type is what the literal Hebrew meant. For instance, in ISAIAH 41:28, the KJV reads “... could answer[✓] a word.” The margin || indicates that the literal Hebrew for answer in this passage was return, “...could return a word.” In English people normally return favors. II. OR. The second type of expression is an alternative meaning. Some words were difficult for the translators to interpret, and they had to base themselves on context as well as inspiration (and I do believe the translators of the KJV were inspired men who loved the Lord).¹³ The translators of the AV have, for instance, preserved some key Messianic scriptures that more modern versions have eliminated (e.g., Zechariah 13:6). ISAIAH 1:27 is an example of an interesting marginal || reading in the KJV: “...and her converts[✓] with righteousness.” The margin || substitutes her converts with they that return of her (וְשׁוֹבֵיֶיהָ). As we have said, the words related to “turn” (שׁוּב) such as turn, return, turn back, are Hebrew expressions that are often associated with (1) conversion or repentance on the one hand, and (2) apostasy on the other—depending on which direction a person is turning toward. So, the reader can picture a return to a geographic location (יְרוּשָׁלַיִם, Zion) or bring a person into Zion spiritually. In this case it most probably means both things. Furthermore, the expression “those that return of her” has yet another signification—that of a small remnant of Israel that will be preserved and return. These marginal || notes can add much richness to the text. Some marginal || readings greatly improve the translation, others are neutral, and yet others simply add to the difficulty, confuse matters, or give an outright incorrect translation. While our present LDS KJV footnotes do not include all of these, the former LDS Missionary Edition with Ready References, contained them.¹⁴ The marginal || note mark appeared on the left hand side of the text, but I have moved them to the right hand side. For the most part this was an easy task, but in some instances it took some interpretation, thus increasing the chances of error on my part. Another disadvantage of this change is that in a few cases the full impact of the marginal || reading is weakened. For instance, in ISAIAH 38:3 we read “And Hezekiah wept sore.” The footnote mark was on the left of the word sore, making it clear that the literal translation, when the margin || HEB. with great weeping

¹³ While there are faults in the KJV translation, there is no doubt in my mind that it remains as the best translation of the Bible in English, based on the Hebrew text. When I look for a second opinion, I seldom find one version that always gives me the best translation. Instead, I find a number of different translations which take turn giving me what I was looking for.

¹⁴ If you are interested in the marginal || readings, you may also wish to consult the 1900 Cambridge Edition of the King James Version.

would be substituted, would render, “And Hezekiah wept with great weeping.” ¶ Ah sinful nation, a people laden with iniquity. The nation spoken of here is Israel [see ISAIAH 1:3] in its completeness (Israel doth not know), that is, all of the sons of Jacob. The Hebrew word GOY (גוי) is utilized for nation, and here refers to Israel. In its plural form, as we mentioned earlier, we have GOYIM (גוים), or nations, which often refers to the gentile nations, and is translated as either Gentiles, nations or heathen in the KJV. Israel, then, is labeled as a sinful nation, laden or burdened with iniquity. And that is what sin is, a burden, a weight. Sin removes joy or enduring happiness. When burdened with sin we do not see the beauty all around but are choked with heaviness. Sin can remove our agency (the Brethren often use the expression moral agency). Our choices are limited by sin, and while we are free to choose, there is a consequence associated with that choice. ¶ A seed of evildoers, children that are corrupters. The nation of Israel had not taught her children to remember the covenants made with the Lord. It is hard enough for children to do well when parents are a good example. It is much more difficult—but certainly not impossible—when they do not. The Lord tells us that the sin will be upon the heads of the parents when children are not taught properly. What are the children to be taught? “To understand the doctrine of repentance, faith in Christ the Son of the living God, and of baptism and the gift of the Holy Ghost by the laying on of the hands ... And they shall also teach their children to pray, and to walk uprightly before the Lord” (D&C 68:25, 28) and to shun contention (3 Nephi 11:29–30). Furthermore, parents are to teach their children who is the source of the expiatory sacrifice: “And we talk of Christ, we rejoice in Christ, we preach of Christ, we prophesy of Christ, and we write according to our prophecies, that our children may know to what source they may look for a remission of their sins” (2 Nephi 25:26). ¶ They have forsaken the LORD. Man has had, since the beginning, to choose to either forsake his sins or to forsake the Lord. Moroni spoke to the people and exhorted them not to forsake the Lord, but rather, to be more committed towards their faith: “And it came to pass when Moroni had proclaimed these words, behold, the people came running together with their armor girded about their loins, rending their garments in token, or as a covenant, that they would not forsake the Lord their God; or, in other words, if they should transgress the commandments of God, or fall into transgression, and be ashamed to take upon them the name of Christ, the Lord should rend them even as they had rent their garments” (Alma 46:21). Israel had also been under a covenant relationship with the Lord, and they had forsaken Him. ¶ They have provoked the Holy One of Israel unto anger. Wicked behavior has consequences, and one of them is to drive the Holy Ghost away. ¶ The Holy One of Israel, אֱת־קְדוֹשׁ יִשְׂרָאֵל. This is one of the most lovely and poetic names given to our Lord, declaring Him to be Holy, and the only true and living God of Israel. This loving expression is used by Isaiah frequently. ¶ They are gone away backward. This is an expression to mean they have become apostate. To go away backward gives the impression of a person or a people who have allowed their base passions to dictate behavior. Of a person who has turned his back on the Lord. In Jeremiah we find, “...for they have turned their back unto me, and not their face: but in the time of their trouble they will say, Arise, and save us” (Jeremiah 2:27b); “But this thing commanded I them, saying, Obey my voice, and I will be your God, and ye shall be my people: and walk ye in all the ways that I have commanded you, that it may be well unto you. But they hearkened not, nor inclined their ear, but walked in the counsels and in the imagination of their evil heart, and went backward, and not forward. Since the day that your fathers came forth out of the land of Egypt unto this day I have even sent unto you all my servants the prophets, daily rising up early and sending them: Yet they hearkened not unto me, nor inclined their ear, but hardened their neck: they did worse than their fathers” (Jeremiah 7:23–26). ¶ UNITY OF ISAIAH. As we discussed in the introduction, there has been a great movement among Bible scholars and others to discredit the Bible. The same words found in D&C 89 can aptly be applied here: “In consequence of evils and designs which do and will exist in the hearts of conspiring men in the last days.” One effort after another has been put forth to plant the seeds of doubt in terms of the divinity and resurrection of the Lord, the inspiration of the Bible, the gifts of prophecy and many other sacred truths. All of this in an effort to put stumbling blocks in the way of truth and salvation. If it were not for the restoration of the Gospel in these, the latter days, and the bringing forth of that book of books, The Book of Mormon: Another Testament of Jesus Christ, many would have lost their resolve. The Book of Mormon, along with the Doctrine and Covenants, Pearl of Great Price, and teachings of the Brethren in General Conference, are clearly the greatest defenders of the divinity of Christ, and of the truthfulness of the Bible. There are not a people among the earth today who have a greater belief in the Bible than the Latter-day Saints.¹⁵

¹⁵ As way of example, one of the most beautiful Messianic scriptures is: “And one shall say unto him, What are these wounds in thine hands? Then he shall answer, Those with which I was wounded in the house of my friends.” (Zechariah 13:6). The KJV has indeed retained the inspired translation from the 1568 Bishop’s Bible: “And if it be saide vnto him, How came these woundes then in thyne handes? He shal aunswere: Thus was I wounded in the house of myne owne friendes” and the 1599 Geneva Bible: “And one shall say vnto him, What are these woundes in thine hands? Then he shall answer, Thus ¶ Besides the wresting of individual verses there is a different type of effort, on a grander scale, to weaken the scriptures. In essence, it is to claim that many of the books of Scripture were written by multiple authors, or much later than their purported date. Among the most notorious of these claims is the notion that Isaiah only wrote up to chapter 40, and that the remaining chapters were written by a deutero-Isaiah and even a third author. These scholars try to outdo each other, and have even gotten to the level of removing a substantial number of chapters and verses from the authorship of Isaiah, even within the first forty chapters. Gladly, there have been many who have ably defended the integrity of the book, both Jew and Gentile. A Jewish scholar, for whom I have developed a great love and respect, is Rachel Margalioth. In her book, The Indivisible Isaiah: Evidence for the Single Authorship of the Prophetic Book,¹⁶ she goes on to explain a number of turn of phrases that are used in Isaiah, both the first 40 chapters, as well as the last twenty-six. One particular section of her book is called Thesis and Antithesis. In it she goes on to show that the same words that are used to rebuke Israel are often used by the same prophetic author to console her. So, here Margalioth has: “Thesis and antithesis. [In Midrash Exodus Rabbah 15:29 we read,] ‘The mouth that said, Ah SINFUL NATION (ISAIAH 1:4), is the mouth that said: Open ye the gates, that the RIGHTEOUS NATION ... may enter in (ISAIAH 26:2). The mouth that said: A PEOPLE LADEN WITH INIQUITY (ISAIAH 1:4), is the mouth that said: THY PEOPLE ALSO SHALL BE ALL RIGHTEOUS (ISAIAH 60:21). The mouth that said: CHILDREN THAT DEAL CORRUPTLY (ISAIAH was I wounded in the house of my friends.” This and other verses have been wholly corrupted in the latter days. For instance, instead of thine hands we may read, ‘back’ (RSV, AAT, JPS Tanakh), ‘chest’ (HCSB), ‘body’ (NIV), “between the hands,” “between the shoulders,” or “between your arms” (RV 1885, HNV, World English Bible). And instead of ‘friends’ we may even read ‘lovers’ (AAT), or “harlot’s house” (Moffatt) such as to yield an increasingly corrupt text that reads something like: “What are these sores on your chest? Those received at my lover’s home.” In Hebrew, the word בֵּין (BEYIN) most frequently does mean between. So that in Hebrew, one may refer to the nose as that which is between the eyes, and so on. However, even Gesenius, the great Jewish Hebraist, admits that בֵּין has other meanings, including intra, within, as in Job 24:11, Proverbs 26:13 and yes, Zechariah 13:6! Gesenius also uses the word amongst, such that, הַרְחֵבֵם בֵּין הָרְחֹבוֹת means “within the streets,” or rather “in the streets” (Hebrew and Chaldean Lexicon, 1870, p. 114). So, returning to our verse in Zechariah 13:6, we translate בֵּין יְדֵי as “in your hands.” Gladly, we do not have only the KJV tradition that preserved the correct translation, but also modern revelation. These are the words that the Prophet Joseph Smith received in a revelation 7 March 1831, “Then shall they know that I am the Lord; for I will say unto them: These wounds are the wounds with which I was wounded in the house of my friends. I am he who was lifted up. I am Jesus that was crucified. I am the Son of God” (D&C 45:52).

¹⁶ I strongly encourage the reader to consult this wonderful book.

1:4), is the mouth that said: AND ALL THY CHILDREN SHALL BE TAUGHT OF THE LORD (ISAIAH 54:13). The mouth that said: A SEED OF EVIL-DOERS (ISAIAH 1:4), is the mouth that said: AND THEIR SEED SHALL BE KNOWN AMONG THE NATIONS (ISAIAH 61:9). The mouth that said: YEA, WHEN YE MAKE MANY PRAYERS, I WILL NOT HEAR (ISAIAH 1:15), is the mouth that said: And it shall come to pass that, BEFORE THEY CALL, I WILL ANSWER (ISAIAH 65:24). The mouth that said: Your NEW MOONS and your appointed seasons My soul hateth (ISAIAH 1:4), is the mouth that said: And it shall come to pass, that from one NEW MOON¹⁷ to another (ISAIAH 66:23).’ In this midrashic statement the sages point to Isaiah’s custom of prophesying solace in the same words and expressions he employs in his rebukes. This method of turning phrases of rebuke and evil portent into blessing and consolation is common ... to all the prophets. In the case of every prophet we find prophecies of consolation expressed in the same vocabulary he employs for evil, and which is peculiar only to him.” What Margalioth has done, then, is to find such examples to share with us from throughout Isaiah. Beside their importance in pointing to the unity of Isaiah, there is yet another key principle that can be underscored here. And it is this, that the Lord loves Israel. If this is not understood—which is the case by so many of the commentators who seem to have a deep hatred towards the Jews—then we do not see that the future for Israel shall be glorious indeed. In the end of days, or in the latter days, Israel will once again be favored by the Lord. It is not possible to understand Isaiah without grasping this essential point. This turning of rebuke to consolation, or the Hosea Principle (see my introductory chapter, GREAT ARE THE WORDS OF ISAIAH). For instance, in In ISAIAH 54:7 we read, “For a small moment have I forsaken thee; but with great mercies will I gather thee.”

5 Why should ye be stricken any more? ye will revolt more and more[✓]: the whole head is sick, and the whole heart faint.

✓ increase revolt

Israel has been injured spiritually. ¶ Why should ye be stricken any more? Are not the punishments suffered sufficient? It suggests to the children of Israel a remembrance of the consequences set out in the Law for doing evil (Rain in Due Season). The allusion to Deuteronomy 28:35, where rebellious Israel has been stricken from the sole of her foot to the top of her head is clear: “The LORD shall smite thee in the knees, and in the legs, with a sore botch that cannot be healed, from the sole of thy foot unto the top of thy head.” The Douay, leaning on the Vulgate (V), reads, “For what shall I strike you any more ...?” meaning “Where [or, on what part] can I strike you that I have not already done so?” This also reminds us of Pharaoh, who although afflicted by one disaster after another, only after the Lord took his firstborn son did he permit the children of Israel to leave—and even then he had second thoughts that caused him to follow after them and ended in his own death. ¶ Ye will revolt more and more. Same signification as above, how far will Israel go before repudiating sin and turning around? ¶ The whole head is sick, and the whole heart faint. We receive impressions of the Spirit through our heart (general impressions) and through our mind (more specific instructions) so if our head and our heart are faint and sick, then this is a sure sign of apostasy. In Hebrew, the heart or לֵב is considered the “the seat of the senses, affections, and emotions ... [and is also] the seat of will and purpose” (Gesenius).

¹⁷ “And it shall come to pass, that from one new moon to another, and from one sabbath to another, shall all flesh come to worship before me, saith the LORD” (Isaiah 66:23)

6 From the sole of the foot even unto the head [there is] no soundness in it; [but] wounds, and bruises, and putrifying sores: they have not been closed, neither bound up, neither mollified with ointment. ✓

✓ or, oil

Israel’s apostasy is compared to an injured body. The injuries are extensive. The children of Jacob have suffered every type of spiritual disease. “The LORD shall smite thee in the knees, and in the legs, with a sore botch that cannot be healed, from the sole of thy foot unto the top of thy head” (Deuteronomy 28:35, Rain in Due Season). ¶ From the sole of the foot even unto the head. This expression can be used both for feelings of conviction (e.g., when I first opened the Book of Mormon, and read the promise found in Moroni, as it was used in that paperback copy, I was filled with the Holy Ghost throughout my body) or in this case, of wickedness. ¶ There is no soundness in it. Soundness means health or lack of disease. ¶ But wounds, and bruises, and putrifying sores. Not only is there disease, but it is composed of the most serious injury. Elder Dale G. Renlund quoted this verse in Isaiah and said: “God uses disease as a metaphor for sin throughout the scriptures ... the Good Shepherd, Jesus Christ views disease in His sheep as a condition that needs treatment, care, and compassion. This shepherd, our Good Shepherd, finds joy in seeing His diseased sheep progress toward healing.”¹⁸ ¶ They have not been closed, neither bound up, neither mollified with ointment. Lowth has, “The art of medicine in the East consists chiefly in external applications. ... So the good Samaritan poured oil and wine on the wounds of the distressed Jew: wine, cleansing and somewhat astringent, proper for a fresh wound; oil, mollifying and healing (see Luke 10:34).” These wounds that Israel has received had not begun to close or heal, nor had they been cleaned and treated with any curing ointment, nor had they been bound up or taped to keep further infection out, and thus promote healing.

¹⁸ Elder Dale G. Renlund, Our Good Shepherd, April 2017 General Conference.

7 Your country [is] desolate, your cities [are] burned with fire: your land, strangers devour it in your presence, and [it is] desolate, as overthrown ✓ by strangers.

✓ the overthrow of

After a brief summary of spiritual disease, and a comparison of how that disease compares to a body, now we hear how Israel would suffer the temporal ailments taught in the Law of Moses (Rain in Due Season) for disobedience. Isaiah sees future events as if they had already taken place, through the Prophetic Perfect. Scriptures often have multiple applications. This is one reason why Nephi taught us to liken all scriptures unto us. We know that Oliver Cowdery likened this verse to the Lost Tribes, that is, to the northern kingdom, but this does not mean that they did not apply every whit as much to Judah. All of Israel, indeed, would suffer the consequences for disobedience: Ephraim first and Judah second. Regarding Ephraim, we have this from Oliver Cowdery: “Isaiah who was on the earth at the time the ten tribes of Israel were led away captive from the land of Canaan, was shown, not only their calamity and affliction, but the time when they were to be delivered.”¹⁹ Ephraim, indeed, would be carried captive by Assyria, around ¹⁹ In an open letter to W. W. Phelps, published in the Messenger and Advocate, Oliver Cowdery recounted some of what the angel Moroni had shown Joseph Smith the night that he appeared by Joseph Smith’s bedside, as well as in their meetings by the place where the Book of Mormon was deposited. Oliver wrote, “And it will come to pass, that though the house of Israel has forsaken the Lord... and been cast out before the face of the world, they will know the voice of the Shepherd when he calls upon them this time; for soon his day of power comes, and in it his people will be willing to hearken to his counsel; and even now are they already beginning to be stirred up in their hearts to search for these things, and are daily reading the ancient prophets, and are marking the times, and seasons of their fulfillment. Thus God is preparing the way for their return” (p. 111). Cowdery, Oliver, et al., eds. Messenger and Advocate: The Latter Day Saints’ Messenger and Advocate. Kirtland, Ohio: Letter to W. W. Phelps from Oliver Cowdery. February 1835 and continued April 1835. Electronic text prepared by the Department of Church History and Doctrine, Brigham Young University, 1991, see pp. 78–80, 108–112.

721 BC.²⁰ While a small remnant would make it back to Samaria and intermingle with other peoples, the rest would be lost to the world but not to God. The second group to be carried away captive was Judah, and while some of Judah was absorbed into the Babylonian people, a remnant was permitted to return and build the Temple in Jerusalem. ¶ Your country [is] desolate. The warnings in Rain in Due Season include: “The land also shall be left of them, and shall enjoy her sabbaths, while she lieth desolate without them: and they shall accept of the punishment of their iniquity: because, even because they despised my judgments, and because their soul abhorred my statutes” (Leviticus 26:43); “... and your high ways shall be desolate” (Leviticus 26:22); “...and your land shall be desolate, and your cities waste” (Leviticus 26:33); and, “And ye shall be left few in number, whereas ye were as the stars of heaven for multitude; because thou wouldest not obey the voice of the LORD thy God” (Deuteronomy 28:62). And all of this did happen as Ephraim first, and Judah next, were carried away captive: “For he rent Israel (i.e., tore, removed the northern kingdom) from the house of David (i.e., leaving Judah, or the southern kingdom); and they made Jeroboam the son of Nebat king: and Jeroboam drave Israel from following the LORD, and made them sin a great sin. For the children of Israel walked in all the sins of Jeroboam which he did; they departed not from them; Until the LORD removed Israel [Ephraim, or Lost Tribes] out of his sight, as he had said by all his servants the prophets. So was Israel carried away out of their own land to Assyria unto this day” (2 Kings 17:21–23). There were many Kings of Israel after Jeroboam, but this scripture summarizes the whole of the history of the northern kingdom in those three verses, from the time of Solomon’s death to the time they were carried away captive by Assyria. We can also read about Judah’s removal by Babylon: “And he carried away all Jerusalem, and all the princes, and all the mighty men of valour, even ten thousand captives, and all the craftsmen and smiths: none remained, save the poorest sort of the people of the land” (2 Kings 24:14). The people of Judah were carried away in several successive waves and the land was left all but completely destitute. ¶ Your cities are burned with fire. We have a historical account of the burning of Jerusalem, related to her conquest: “And in the fifth month, on the seventh day of the month, which is the nineteenth year of king Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon, came Nebuzaradan, captain of the guard, a servant of the king of Babylon, unto Jerusalem: And he burnt the house of the LORD, and the king’s house, and all the houses of Jerusalem, and every great man’s house burnt he with fire” (2 Kings 25:8–9). ¶ Your land, strangers devour it in your presence, and it is desolate, as overthrown by strangers. (“Before your eyes strangers devour your land” —REB) And from Rain in Due Season: “I will even appoint over you terror, consumption, and the burning ague, that shall consume the eyes, and cause sorrow of heart: and ye shall sow your seed in vain, for your enemies shall eat it” (Leviticus 26:16). This then, would mean that while the children of Jacob would plant, others would harvest and consume it.

8 And the daughter of Zion is left as a cottage in a vineyard, as a lodge in a garden of cucumbers, as a besieged city.

And the daughter of Zion, בִּתְּצִיּוֹן. This expression is meant to signify Jerusalem. Over time the word ‘Zion’ has come to mean a number of things. Zion was the name given to a fortified hill between the valleys of Kedron and Tyropoeon, even before Jerusalem was conquered by David. This fortification later took on the name of the “city of David” (HBD). For Latter-day Saints, Zion also has several additional meanings, to include (1) all of the American continent, (2) anywhere where the “pure in heart” dwell, and (3) Jackson County in Missouri: “And it shall be called the New Jerusalem, a land of peace, a city of refuge, a place of safety for the Saints of the Most High God; And the glory of the Lord shall be there, and the terror of the Lord shall also be there, insomuch that the wicked will not come unto it, and shall be called Zion” (D&C 45:66–67). In this verse, Zion, especially with the expression daughter of Zion, refers to Jerusalem. ¶ Is left as a cottage in a vineyard, as a lodge in a garden of cucumbers. The idea is that of a very small dwelling, often temporary,²¹ not much bigger than the space that would be taken up by a single bed and providing a little protection against the inclemency of the elements. The purpose of these dwellings was to house a watchman that would make sure human thieves (Barnes) or animals (Lowth) would not come in and steal before the harvest. In contrast to the sea of vegetation around them, these dwellings would account for an insignificant amount of land. So would it be with Jerusalem, the rest of Judah would have been lost to the enemy and it alone would remain, with a solitude that would stand out. And like a desolated cottage is abandoned and allowed to decay, or is removed after its usefulness is over, Barnes (cf. Lowth) suggests that Jerusalem would be likewise destroyed. ¶ As a besieged city. Jerusalem would be left as a besieged city. A siege can be of short or long duration, and consists of eliminating, to the greatest extent possible, all sources of water and food so those inside will be weakened to the point that they will either surrender or will not be able to put up much resistance under attack. For now Jerusalem would be allowed to stand yet the time would come when she would also be destroyed.

²⁰ One last time, any dates given are approximate as there are several date timelines that have been suggested and I do not intend to choose one over another.

²¹ “He buildeth his house as a moth, and as a booth that the keeper maketh” (Job 27:18).

9 Except the LORD of hosts had left unto us a very small remnant, we should have been as Sodom, [and] we should have been like unto Gomorrah.

Except the LORD of hosts. Hosts means armies. When associated with the title Lord of Hosts, as it is here, it means the armies of heaven. The word hosts in Hebrew is צְבָאוֹת (whose transliteration is tzebaoth, or *sabaath*²²). The same Hebrew pronunciation is retained in the Greek (σαβαωθ), both in the LXX (6) as well as in the New Testament (e.g., Romans 9:29). Only because of the Lord's tender mercies and loving kindness, then, the punishment was not total and absolute. ¶ Had left unto us a very small remnant. When speaking about a remnant a similarity can be drawn between the children of Israel as a whole, and the descendants of Joseph in particular, whose coat was torn into many pieces by his brothers (Alma 46:23). We read that "Jacob, before his death, for behold, he saw that a part of the remnant of the coat of Joseph was preserved and had not decayed. And he said—Even as this remnant of garment of my son hath been preserved, so shall a remnant of the seed of my son be preserved by the hand of God, and be taken unto himself, while the remainder of the seed of Joseph shall perish, even as the remnant of his garment" (Alma 40:24b). We know that a remnant of Joseph was preserved through the peoples who inhabited the American continent, as well as other peoples whom the Lord has kept, which are part of the Lost Tribes. The preservation of Judah would take a different form. In Judah's patriarchal blessing we read that a ruler would be given to the children of Judah until the Savior would come: "The sceptre shall not depart from Judah, nor a lawgiver from between his feet, until Shiloh come; and unto him shall the gathering of the people be" (Genesis 49:10). The word Shiloh or tranquil (Strong) may be short for Asher-lo, that means "whose right it is" (LDS Footnote, Genesis 10c). Another possible signification for Shiloh is "his descendant" (DOTW) meaning, the Messiah. "... the Messiah who is called Shilo ..." (Genesis 50:24 JST). It is important to note that the sceptre or right to rule was indeed miraculously kept within the descendants of Judah, and more specifically, of King David. Even after the time of Christ, the people of Judah have been permitted to retain their national identity. While in Judah the power stayed within the Davidic line, in Ephraim it changed from one ruler to another in a continual saga of one coup d'état after another. ¶ Sodom ... Gomorrah. The destruction of these two wicked cities was total and absolute: "Then the Lord rained upon Sodom and upon Gomorrah brimstone and fire from the Lord out of heaven; And he overthrew those cities, and all the plain, and all the inhabitants of the cities, and that which grew upon the ground" (Genesis 19:24–25). In Rain in Due Season we read that strangers would come upon the land and find it so devastated that it would give them cause to wonder, for they would find "the whole of the land thereof is brimstone, and salt, and burning, that it is not sown, nor beareth, nor any grass groweth therein, like the overthrow of Sodom, and Gomorrah ..." (Deuteronomy 29:23, also see vv. 22–29).

vv. 10–15. The Lord once again asks to be heard, this time of both the rulers and of the people. All the offerings and sacrifices, equivalent to the partaking of the sacrament, have been offered unworthily and so are sources of condemnation to those who have brought them forth: "... all that be clean shall eat thereof. But the soul that eateth of the flesh of the sacrifice of peace offerings, which pertain unto the Lord, even that soul shall be cut off from his people" (Leviticus 7:19b–20).

10 ¶ Hear the word of the LORD, ye rulers of Sodom; give ear unto the law of our God, ye people of Gomorrah.

Hear the word of the LORD, שְׁמַעוּ דְּבַר יְהוָה. A call to pay attention and hearken (cp. v. 2) to the word (דְּבַר, also see ISAIAH 40:8 notes). The Lord is about to correct Israel. God wishes to do the same for us, if we will let Him point out where we need to improve. "And if men come unto me I will show unto them their weakness" (Ether 12:27a, see also vv. 26 ff.). ¶ Ye rulers of Sodom. Rulers probably referred to both secular leaders and priesthood leadership that had gone astray. "There could have been no more severe or cutting reproof ..." (Barnes) than to speak to Israel's leadership in this way. Isaiah did not seem to be much concerned about censorship. ¶ Give ear unto the law of our God. ¶ This was a reminder to study Scripture, instruction or doctrine (Gesenius), literally the Torah of ²² The Doctrine and Covenants uses at times Hosts (e.g., "... written in the book of the law of God, saith the Lord of Hosts ...," D&C 85:5, and at times Sabaath (e.g., "... the alms of your prayers have come up into the ears of the Lord of Sabaath ...," D&C 88:2). Not to be confused with Sabbath.

our God, תִּנְתְּנוּ אֱלֹהֵינוּ, or Law, and to do as commanded. In its more general sense, it includes all of Scripture. ¶ Ye people of Gomorrah. The words people and Gomorrah begin with the same sounds, עַם עֲמֹרָה, giving them additional strength. It was not only the leadership, but also the people who needed to listen and repent. The wickedness of Sodom and Gomorrah was well known: “But the men of Sodom were wicked and sinners before the Lord exceedingly” (Genesis 13:13).

11 To what purpose [is] the multitude of your sacrifices unto me? saith the LORD: I am full of the burnt offerings of rams, and the fat of fed beasts; and I delight not in the blood of bullocks, or of lambs, or of he goats. ✓

✓ great he-goats

To what purpose. There was an important reason for the sacrifices under the Law of Moses, just as there is in the partaking of the sacrament today. It was to remember the Lord and His redeeming sacrifice. But when these things become a thoughtless ritual then they are worthless. And when partaken unworthily, they become a condemnation unto the partaker: “For whoso eateth and drinketh my flesh and blood unworthily eateth and drinketh damnation to his soul” (3 Nephi 18:29a) and furthermore “The sacrifice of the wicked is an abomination to the Lord” (Proverbs 15:8a) and more especially so when “he bringeth it with a wicked mind” (Proverbs 21:27b). Also see 1 Corinthians 11:27–30). ¶ is the multitude of your sacrifices unto me? The false outer expression of piety (in terms of many sacrifices or long prayers) does not make up for a lack of inner conviction. ¶ Saith the LORD: אָמַר יְהוָה). This is a reminder that Isaiah was speaking the word of the Lord. What a privilege, indeed, is to be able to speak on behalf of the Lord as moved by the Holy Ghost, under Priesthood authority, through the principle of Divine Investiture (see ISAIAH 52:7). ¶ I am full of the burnt offerings of rams, and the fat of fed beasts. Full, שָׂבַעְתִּי, in the Hebrew, often means satisfied. But it can also mean to overeat to the point of nausea, as in the Spanish word hostigado, related to the overeating of a particular food until a person does not ever want to see it, smell it, or eat it again. This is what happened to the children of Israel as they murmured in the wilderness, “And say thou unto the people, Sanctify yourselves against tomorrow, and ye shall eat flesh: for ye have wept in the ears of the LORD, saying, Who shall give us flesh to eat? for it was well with us in Egypt: therefore the LORD will give you flesh, and ye shall eat. Ye shall not eat one day, nor two days, nor five days, neither ten days, nor twenty days; But even a whole month, until it come out at your nostrils, and it be loathsome unto you: because that ye have despised the LORD which is among you, and have wept before him, saying, Why came we forth out of Egypt?” (Numbers 11:18–20). Lowth reminds us that fat and blood were not to be consumed by men, but rather, offered to God in sacrifice (Leviticus 3:17; 4:7–8, 16–19 ff.). “The fat and the blood are particularly mentioned, because these were in all sacrifices set apart to God. The fat was always burnt upon the altar; and the blood was partly sprinkled, differently on different occasions, and partly poured out at the bottom of the altar” (Lowth). ¶ I delight not in the blood of bullocks, or of lambs, or of he goats. The main idea is that man should provide a sacrifice based on obedience, one that will be acceptable to the Lord: “Hath the Lord as great delight in burnt offerings and sacrifices, as in obeying the voice of the Lord? Behold, to obey is better than sacrifice, and to hearken than the fat of rams” (1 Samuel 15:22b). See also Amos 5:21–24,²³ for a parallel passage, in which the Lord refuses the burnt offerings and the melody of viols and instead requires: “But let thy judgment (מִשְׁפָּט, i.e., righteousness) run down as waters, and righteousness as a mighty stream” (v. 24).

12 When ye come to appear ✓ before me, who hath required this at your hand, to tread my courts?

✓ be seen

Appear before me ... tread my courts. To come before the Lord, in the context of this verse, “tread my courts,” is a reference to the temple. LITV has, “When you come to see My face....” Leeser has: “When ye come to appear in my presence.” The Law of Moses had strict rules in terms of worthiness, or cleanliness, to enter the temple, as does the Lord, today. Delitzsch has: “This [verse] is a standing expression for the appearance of all male Israelites in the temple at three high festivals, as prescribed by the law, and then for visits to the temple generally.” Matthew Henry observes that such visits to “his courts he calls treading them, or trampling upon them.” Certainly, the image of animals being herded through the sacred edifice comes to mind. Skinner has:

²³ “I hate, I despise your feast days, and I will not smell in your solemn assemblies. Though ye offer me burnt offerings and your meat offerings, I will not accept them: neither will I regard the peace offerings of your fat beasts. Take thou away from me the noise of thy songs; for I will not hear the melody of thy viols. But let judgment run down as waters, and righteousness as a mighty stream” (Amos 5:21–24).

“to appear before me] RV margin || (following one Hebrew MS) suggests to see my face, which is grammatically easier. It is thought that here and elsewhere the traditional text has substituted the passive for the active so as to avoid the appearance of anthropomorphism.” ¶ Barnes has: “To tread my courts] The courts of the temple were the different areas or open spaces which surrounded it. None entered the temple itself but the priests. The people worshipped God in the courts assigned them around the temple. In one of those courts was the altar of burnt-offerings; and the sacrifices were all made there. To tread his courts was an expression therefore, equivalent to, to worship. To tread the courts of the Lord here, has the idea of profanation. Who has required you to tread those courts with this hollow, heartless service?” Or, in a state of impurity.

13 Bring no more vain oblations; incense is an abomination unto me; the new moons and sabbaths, the calling of assemblies, I cannot away with; [it is] iniquity, ✓ even the solemn meeting.

✓ or, grief

Bring no more vain oblations. The Lord does not desire any more offerings born out of emptiness and meaningless externalities. This is because, once again, the offerings brought to the Lord are in remembrance of the expiatory and sacred offering of the Son of God: “Wherefore, redemption cometh in and through the Holy Messiah; for he is full of grace and truth. Behold he offereth himself a sacrifice for sin, to answer the ends of the law, unto all those who have a broken heart and a contrite spirit; and unto none else can the ends of the law be answered” (2 Nephi 2:6–7). When our offerings to the Lord are born of anything less than a broken heart and contrite spirit, they become vain oblations, an abomination and iniquity. Next, several ceremonies are listed, all of which had become meaningless because of the way they were offered.

¶ Incense is an abomination unto me. At the time of the Tabernacle in the wilderness the Lord instructed for an altar of incense to be put before the veil that was by the ark of the testimony, “And thou shalt make an altar to burn incense upon” (Exodus 30:1, 6). Incense is representative of prayer, “Let my prayer be set forth before thee as incense” (Psalm 141:2a). ¶ The new moons. The Jewish calendar functions from one month to the next measured in “lunarities” or “moons.” Because lunar months do not fit exactly into a solar year, complete extra months are added to the calendar in a systematic way. The word חֹדֶשׁ for “new moon” or “month” is derived from a Hebrew word pointed חֹדֶשׁ and that means “to make new, to renew, restore” (AHCL). This was an appointed sacred day, whose first mention is found in Numbers 10:10b “in the beginnings of your months,” (sometimes translated as “new-moon” feasts, e.g., NAB, NJB, Tanakh). The sacred day began when the “thin crescent of the new moon was first visible at sunset” (TWOT). The exact beginning of each new month was important in terms of other sacred days, also. Special watchers would be stationed in the hills surrounding Jerusalem and they would start fires on the top of these watch posts to indicate that the new moon had been spotted. Israel’s foes would start fires at the wrong times to cause confusion (LDS Bible Dictionary). The new-moon feast seems to have been treated as a Sabbath (cp. Amos 8:5a “When will the new moon be gone, that we may sell corn²⁴?”) and would be a celebration marking the beginning of each month. A large number of offerings were required (Numbers 28:11–15). ¶ And Sabbath (שַׁבָּת). When Sabbath appears together with “new moon” it is probably speaking of the weekly Sabbath rather than the 7th year Sabbath (Delitzsch). It is not the observance of the Sabbath day that the Lord abhorred, but its empty observance, devoid of true religious sentiment (see ISAIAH 58). ¶ The calling of assemblies. In Numbers 10:2, 10, we find that Moses was commanded by the Lord to have two trumpets—or תְּצַנֵּרָה—of silver made for the purpose of calling various assemblies while in the wilderness. The house of Israel was to assemble themselves at the door of the tabernacle of the congregation when these trumpets were played unless they were played as an alarm (see Numbers 10:1–10). ¶ Even the solemn meeting. Probably equivalent to solemn assemblies, the last or concluding day of assemblage (e.g., the eight day in Numbers 29:35 ff.). These solemn assemblies were especially sacred days (Barnes). The special sacredness of these meetings also characterizes today’s solemn assemblies in the restored Church. In the Doctrine and Covenants we see that solemn assemblies are mentioned in connection with study, learning, and consecration as received in the temples of our Lord (D&C 88:117 ff.; 95; 109; 124:39) wherein the Saints can be endowed with power and learning from on high (it seems that the Lord is telling us that we can receive knowledge directly through the exercise of faith unto revelation, as well as through the study of the best books ... teaching one another). Those occasions when we sustain a new prophet, seer and revelator in the Church at general conference, are also called solemn assemblies. In the Encyclopedia of Mormonism we find that temple dedications as solemn assemblies, as are some very special meetings where counsel is received from the Brethren, either at the temple or sometimes in other edifices such as stake buildings. Generally, these are for special instruction to priesthood holders, and sometimes the Sacrament is passed in such solemn assemblies.²⁵

²⁴ Not maize, but rather grains such as wheat, oats, etc. In the AV the word corn means grain. This is something that I learned from Rabbi Shaye J.D. Cohen. For instance, to note two examples, where in Wycliffe the term wheat is used in Genesis 27:28 and 27:32, in the KJV we have the word corn, instead. Geneva also uses wheat. The AV followed after the Bishops’ Bible in using the word corn instead of wheat. Most Bibles today use the word wheat or grain (e.g., ABP {LXX (Θ)}, AMP, ASV, BBE, CEV, ESV, GNB, GW, HCSB, ISV, JUB, LEB, LITV, MKJV, NASB, as well as most Spanish editions).

14 Your new moons and your appointed feasts my soul hateth: they are a trouble unto me; I am weary to bear [them].

Your new moons and your appointed feasts. The Lord is rejecting all of the appointed feasts or religious celebrations, each of which was designed to remember Him (new moons, see ISAIAH 1:13). ¶ My soul hateth: they are a trouble unto me; I am weary to bear [them]. These are strong words to indicate the displeasure of the Lord at these purposeless assemblies and hollow sacrifices. The Lord and Savior would literally bear or carry that awful burden of our sins, in His eternal expiatory sacrifice, during His mortal ministry.

15 And when ye spread forth your hands, I will hide mine eyes from you: yea, when ye make many prayers, I will not hear: your hands are full of blood. ✓ ✓

✓ multiply prayer

✓ ✓ bloods

And when ye spread forth your hands. Different peoples show reverence in prayer by folding their arms, by bringing hands together either clasped or not, and some by spreading forth their hands. From my own youth, I remember an older lady spreading her arms out away from her body, in prayer, in front of a Catholic chapel in Villa Alegre, Chile. This caused me quite an impression as I had never seen this custom before. In the New Testament the Savior spoke against those who prayed to be noticed of others, “for they love to pray standing in the synagogues and in the corners of the streets, that they may be seen of men” (Matthew 6:5b), “and for a pretence make long prayer” (Matthew 23:14b). In Solomon’s dedicatory prayer, this spreading forth of the arms was done in righteousness: “And Solomon stood before the altar of the LORD in the presence of all the congregation of Israel, and spread forth his hands toward heaven” (1 Kings 8:22). ¶ I will hide mine eyes from you: These sacred words have much to say about prayer, and our personal preparation that is required. Scripture teaches us the extreme opposites of how our prayers may be received. At the one extreme, God hides His eyes and will not hear our prayers, as in this verse. Other examples include: “And the word of the LORD came unto Zechariah, saying, Thus speaketh the LORD of hosts, saying, Execute true judgment, and shew mercy and compassions every man to his brother: And oppress not the widow, nor the fatherless, the stranger, nor the poor; and let none of you imagine evil against his brother in your heart. But they refused to hearken, and pulled away the shoulder, and stopped their ears, that they should not hear. Yea, they made their hearts as an adamant stone, lest they should hear the law, and the words which the LORD of hosts hath sent in his spirit by the former prophets: therefore came a great wrath from the LORD of hosts. Therefore it is come to pass, that as he cried, and they would not hear; so they cried, and I would not hear, saith the LORD of hosts: But I scattered them with a whirlwind among all the nations whom they knew not. Thus the land was desolate after them, that no man passed through nor returned: for they laid the pleasant land desolate” (Zechariah 7:9–14, emphasis added); and “They are turned back to the iniquities of their forefathers, which refused to hear my words; and they went after other gods to serve them: the house of Israel and the house of Judah have broken my covenant which I made with their fathers. Therefore thus saith the LORD, Behold, I will bring evil upon them, which they shall not be able to escape; and though they shall cry unto me, I will not hearken unto them. Then shall the cities of Judah and inhabitants of Jerusalem go, and cry unto the gods unto whom they offer incense: but they shall not save them at all in the time of their trouble. For according to the number of thy cities were thy gods, O Judah; and according to the number of the streets of Jerusalem have ye set up altars to that shameful thing, even altars to burn incense unto Baal. Therefore pray not thou for this people, neither lift up a cry or prayer for them: for I will not hear them in the time that they cry unto me for their trouble” (Jeremiah 11:10–14, emphasis added). Also, “They were slow to hearken unto the voice of the Lord their God; therefore, the Lord their God is slow to hearken unto their prayers, to answer them in the day of their trouble. In the day of their peace they esteemed lightly my counsel; but, in the day of their trouble, of necessity they feel after me” (D&C 101:7–8, emphasis added). In yet another example of the Hosea Principle this Scripture continues: “Verily I say unto you, notwithstanding their sins, my bowels are filled with compassion towards them. I will not utterly cast them off; and in the day of wrath I will remember mercy” (D&C 101:9). At the other extreme we have such scriptures as Psalm 138:3, ISAIAH 58:8–9a, 1 John 5:14–15, and ISAIAH 65:24. As we shall see, the Lord will not only hear our prayers but answer these even before they are uttered. ¶ Yea, when ye make many prayers, I will not hear. We are to avoid repetitive prayers. In fact, the Lord gives us the key whereby our prayers may be heard: “I love them that love me; and those that seek me early shall find me” (Proverbs 8:17). To love the Lord is to keep his statutes. To seek Him early is to turn to the Lord not only in the day of our trouble, but also in the day of our peace.²⁶

²⁵ Encyclopeida of Mormonism, Vol. 3, Solemn Assemblies, Richard E. Turley, Jr.

²⁶ So, how do we pray? There is a promise in the Book of Mormon that has become my pattern to prayer: “Behold, I would exhort you that when ye shall read these things, if it be wisdom in God that ye should read them, that ye would remember how merciful the Lord hath been unto the children of men, from the creation of Adam even down until the time that ye shall receive these things, and ponder it in your hearts. And when ye shall receive these things, I would exhort you that ye would ask God, the Eternal Father, in the name of Christ, if these things are not true; and if ye shall ask with a sincere heart, with real intent, having faith in Christ, he will manifest the truth of it unto you, by the power of the Holy Ghost. And by the power of the Holy Ghost ye may know the truth of all things” (Moroni 10:3–5). As I write these words, I am only a few years away from my 40th anniversary of my baptism and confirmation. If I am honest, I must admit that it was not easy to truly understand how to pray: and do so in such a way that we can know our prayers have been heard. Even though I am still learning how to pray, I would like to share a few things I have discovered about prayer. To me, prayer is the essence of religion. It is a communion between God and man. Scripture study and prayer are my stay and my staff (ISAIAH 3:1). When we pray, we address God the Eternal Father, and we do so in the name of His beloved Son, even Jesus Christ. In the olden days, people who traveled to faraway lands would do so with a letter of introduction. Such a letter would open many doors. By coming in the name of Christ, we can dare approach the Father in prayer. It was Christ Himself who repeatedly taught us to address the Father in Jesus’ name: “Verily, verily, I say unto you, Whatsoever ye shall ask the Father in my name, he will give it you” (John 16:23b). We pray while we walk, while we talk, while we study, and not just when we can take the time to kneel down. If we are able to kneel there is something very special about doing so. We add our testimony that indeed the time will come when “Every knee shall bow, and every tongue confess that Jesus is the Christ.” I like to think that the particular answer to my prayer is less important, when it is a petition, than knowing that the prayer was heard by our Father. It helps to first meditate upon some of the things that I am grateful for. Then I can kneel down and address the Father, tell Him of those things I am grateful for, speak of my love for Him, and ask one simple question. “Father, hast thou heard my prayer?” I can then ‘listen’ for the reassurance of the Spirit that indeed my prayer has been heard of the Father. For me, this is normally a feeling of comfort or warmth. I can now thank the Father for having heard me, and do so in the sacred name of Jesus Christ. We now know what an affirmative answer feels like. We can now take a ‘spiritual photograph’ of what we are feeling. So we have a pattern: we ponder in a spirit of gratitude, we thank the Father, we ask Him a question, and we feel of His loving comfort through the Spirit. Through this pattern we have a key to ask other questions. “Is the Book of Mormon the book mentioned by Ezekiel 37:15–28 that, together with the Bible, would help bring the remnant of Israel and all peoples unto Christ?” “Am I making the right choice in dating such a person?” “Is this a good field for me to study at the university?” “Should I begin to look for a different job?” An affirmative answer to these questions will be much like the comforting one we received when we asked if God had heard our prayer. A negative answer to our inquiry is not a spirit of fear—such a spirit comes from Satan—but rather silence, or a stupor of thought (D&C 9:9). We now have a key to asking questions regarding matters that are important in our lives. One day I realized that this is precisely the pattern of prayer taught to us in Moroni 10:3–5. “Behold, I would exhort you that when ye shall read these things, if it be wisdom in God that ye should read them, that ye would remember how merciful the Lord hath been unto the children of men, from the creation of Adam even down until the time that ye shall receive these things, and ponder it in your hearts” (Moroni 10:3). Here we are exhorted to be filled with a spirit of gratitude for what God has done for us. To ponder His tender mercies from the creation of Adam until now brings to mind one of my favorite scenes of all time, when the Savior walked along two of His disciples on the way to Emmaus and expounded the scriptures to them: “And beginning at Moses and all the prophets, he expounded unto them in all the scriptures the things concerning himself” (Luke 24:27). What a better way to be filled with gratitude than to immerse ourselves in the Scriptures. “And when ye shall receive these things, I would exhort you that ye would ask God, the Eternal Father, in the name of Christ, if these things are not true; and if ye shall ask with a sincere heart, with real intent, having faith in Christ, he will manifest the truth of it unto you, by the power of the Holy Ghost” (Moroni 10:4). We have already spoken about the importance of addressing the Father in the name of Christ. Moroni 10:4 also calls for faith in Christ and confidence that we will receive an answer. So it is that we read in James: “If any of you lack wisdom, let him ask of God, that giveth to all men liberally, and upbraideth not; and it shall be given him. But let him ask in faith, nothing wavering. For he that wavereth is like a wave of the sea driven with the wind and tossed” (James 1:5–6). Let us not be afraid to ask. We have been commanded of the Savior to pray always (Luke 21:36b). Our attitude in prayer needs to be submissive to the will of the Father. If we really do not want to know the will of the Father, we will probably not receive an answer. If we want to tell the Father what we want done, rather than ask that His will be carried out, we will probably not receive an answer, either. To ask with a sincere heart, with real intent, means that we will act upon the answer. God does not want us to be like the people of Judah who approached Jeremiah the Prophet to inquire of the Lord for them. The people seemed, on the surface, committed to do as commanded: “Then they said to Jeremiah, The LORD be a true and faithful witness between us, if we do not even according to all things for the which the LORD thy God shall send thee to us. Whether it be good, or whether it be evil, we will obey the voice of the LORD our God, to whom we send thee; that it may be well with us, when we obey the voice of the LORD our God” (Jeremiah 42:5–6). The Prophet Jeremiah did inquire of the Lord on their behalf, but the answer enraged the people so much that they reviled the Prophet and accused him of speaking falsely (Jeremiah 43:2). “And by the power of the Holy Ghost ye may know the truth of all things” (Moroni 10:5). Through this simple pattern of prayer to the Father in the name of Christ, then, we may receive reassurance from the Spirit about proceeding through life’s most difficult mazes. God loves us so much, that He is concerned over those things we are concerned about and says, “Fear thou not; for I am with thee: be not dismayed; for I am thy God: I will strengthen thee; yea, I will help thee; yea, I will uphold thee with the right hand of my righteousness” (ISAIAH 41:10). So, let us pray in confidence, full of assurance that God will hear our prayers. While some promises that God makes to us may take some time before they are realized, they will come to pass. (Based on my blog, Moroni 10:3-5: A Perfect Pattern of Prayer, 27 June 2010).

¶ Your hands are full of blood. The verse began with the words, “when ye spread forth your hands” and now ends again with the word hands. For the hands that have been spread out to pray in hypocrisy now attempt to hide their bloody and murderous deeds: “Jerusalem, Jerusalem, [thou] that killest the prophets, and stonest them which are sent unto thee ...” (Matthew 23:37). Also see ISAIAH 66:3.

vv. 16–20. These verses call Israel to repentance. Through the expiatory sacrifice of Jesus Christ we can be made clean. As in Rain in Due Season, the choice is placed clearly before us between joy and life everlasting on the one hand, and the negative consequence of disobedience on the other. Clear guidance is given as to what constitutes godliness is given in these verses.

16 ¶ Wash you, make you clean; put away the evil of your doings from before mine eyes; cease to do evil;

Wash you, make you clean; The scriptures are replete with references to ceremonial washings, including baptism for the remission of sins, as well as ordinances performed in the Temple, “how shall your washings be acceptable unto me, except ye perform them in a house which you have built to my name?” (e.g., D&C 124:37). But this washing and cleansing is not external only, but a reflection of faith and repentance. Delitzsch suggests that “wash you” has reference to the major act of repentance when turning to God, while “make you clean” to the daily repentance of someone who has already turned his life to God. Certainly this fits in well with the concept of baptism for the remission of sins. ¶ President Joseph Fielding Smith taught that: “There are some references in the Old Testament (Psalm 51:2, 7; ISAIAH 1:16; 48:1) to washings, which could well mean baptisms . . . The Book of Mormon make the fact very clear that baptism was practiced among the Jews, and in the writings of Moses which have been restored, we learn that baptism was taught to Adam, and he was commanded to teach it to his children.”²⁷ One such example includes: “Hearken and hear this, O house of Jacob, who are called by the name of Israel, and are come forth out of the waters of baptism . . .” (1 Nephi 20:1a, cf. ISAIAH 48:1). ¶ Put away the evil of your doings from before mine eyes; cease to do evil. President Ezra T. Benson explained that true repentance is more than mere confession. “It is a deep, burning, and heartfelt sorrow for sin that will drive us to our knees in humility and tears—a deep, heartfelt sorrow for sin that produces a reformation of life.”²⁸ We must have an overwhelming desire to cease to do evil before the Lord, and not only that, but to desire to do good. Two of Satan’s greatest lies are that (1) we can just repent later, when it is more convenient, and (2) that we have gone beyond the point where there can be hope for us. Fear of man and lack of confidence in God can keep us from repenting. Repentance is a principle of joy. The moment we recognize our sins and commit ourselves to a course correction, confessing our sins and seeking to make restitution and reaching out to others when appropriate, we can then be in the path of eternal joy. When repentance is sincere we then become “cleansed by the blood of the Lamb” (Mormon 9:6, also see vv. 4–5).

17 Learn to do well; seek judgment, relieve the oppressed, judge the fatherless, plead for the widow.

✓ or, righten

Learn to do well. It is not sufficient to cease to do evil, but it is also needful to learn to do well. To learn implies an effort that takes time. This is not a facile change, but a lifelong effort that requires taking one step at a time. It entails walking in the light, and abandoning darkness. It necessitates not only study of the Word, but practice of it. ¶ Seek judgment, relieve the oppressed, judge the fatherless, plead for the widow. The Lord, through Isaiah, lists four important things that need to be added to the command to do good: (1) seek judgment (i.e., justice, righteousness). To seek means to actively go after something, in this case justice or righteousness. To always have an eye out for right to triumph over evil, good over bad; (2) Relieve the oppressed (deliver him that is suffering wrong, LXX (6); do good to the oppressed, Syriac —S²⁹). Succor those who have fallen under misfortune. What sort of succoring are we to do? “For I was an hungred, and ye gave me meat; I was thirsty, and ye gave me drink: I was a stranger, and ye took me in: Naked, and ye clothed me: I was sick, and ye visited me: I was in prison, and ye came unto me” (Matthew 25:35–36); (3) judge the fatherless (hear the orphan’s plea, NAB). Make sure to work towards helping God’s children who have no one to worry about them. (4) Plead for the widow (obtain justice for the widow, LXX). A woman who no longer has the protection of her husband, and this would include not only the widow, but the single or divorced mother, is as we have said, someone who is susceptible to being taken advantage, ignored, or being discounted. Man ought to honor woman and womanhood. “But whoso shall offend one of these little ones . . . it were better for him that a millstone were hanged about his neck, and [that] he were drowned in the depth of the sea” (Matthew 18:6). While this scripture has reference to little ones as those who have humbled themselves as a child to accept the Lord, application to the treatment of defenseless and oppressed, whether they be women, children, or foreigners (or *stranger*³⁰), fits in well. When we make baptismal covenants we agree “to be called his [Christ’s] people, and are willing to bear one another’s burdens, that they may be light; Yea, and are willing to mourn with those that mourn; yea, and comfort those that stand in need of comfort, and to stand as witnesses of God at all times and in all things, and in all places” (Mosiah 18:8b–9a).

²⁷ Smith, Joseph Fielding. Answers to Gospel Questions. Salt Lake City: Deseret Book. 1957. Volume I, p. 51.

²⁸ Benson, Ezra Taft. The Teachings of Ezra Taft Benson. Salt Lake City, Utah: Bookcraft, 1988, pp.74–75.

²⁹ For the Syriac, we use George M. Lamsa, Holy Bible from Ancient Eastern Manuscripts: Containing the Old and New Testaments Translated from the Peshitta, The Authorized Bible of the Church of the East, A.J. Holman Company: Philadelphia, 1957; and the Biblia Peshitta and Español: Traducción de los Antiguos Escritos en Arameo, Holman Bible Publishers, 2006.

18 Come now, and let us reason together, saith the LORD: though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be as white as snow; though they be red like crimson, they shall be as wool.

Israel’s past, no matter how evil, would at the end not stand in the way of the Holy One of Israel coming to make Israel holy. Such a magnificent work has already begun to take place with the restoration of the Gospel. Elder Orson Pratt said, “In the 21st chapter of Luke, our Savior, in speaking of the evils that should befall the Jewish nation, says, ‘And they (the Jews) shall fall by the edge of the sword, and shall be led away captive into all nations; and Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles, until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled.’ This has been fulfilled literally upon the Jewish nation, and they have been scattered, according to this prediction, among all nations. Many of them were destroyed by the edge of the sword. Jerusalem was taken some seventy years after the birth of Christ, and has been in possession of the Gentiles from that day to this [26 March 1876].³¹ Jesus told them that such should be the fact, that Jerusalem should be in the possession of the Gentiles, and should be trodden down by them until a certain period—until their times should be fulfilled. The great object of the angel in restoring the Gospel was, in the first place, to fulfill the times of the Gentiles. Inquires one— ‘What do you mean by that?’ I mean that God will send this Gospel, restored by an angel, to every nations, kindred, people, and tongue in the Gentile world [i.e., Gentile nations—GB] before he will permit his servants to go to the scattered remnants of Israel [perhaps he meant Judah—GB]; and they will labor with, preach to and declare the work of God to the Gentile nations, and seek to bring them to a knowledge of the ancient Gospel, and to organize a Church among them, so far as they will hearken to and receive their testimony. Then, when the Gentile nations shall reject this Gospel and count themselves unworthy of eternal life, as the Jews did before them, the Lord will say— ‘It is enough, come away from them, my servants, I will give you a new commission, you shall go to the scattered remnants of the house of Israel. I will gather them in from the four quarters of the earth, and bring them again into their own lands.’³² Each one of us needs to accept the personal invitation to come unto Christ and be cleansed by the atoning blood of the Lamb of God. ¶ Come now, and let us reason together. These are certainly powerful words. In the profound context of Scripture, this is a pleading and loving invitation from the Lord to the children of Jacob: repent and be cleansed. This is a standing invitation to each one of us: “Him hath God exalted with his right hand to be a Prince and a Saviour, for to give repentance to Israel, and forgiveness of sins” (Acts 5:31). ¶ Though your sins be as scarlet... כְּשָׁנִים / though they be red like crimson... יְאֲדִימוּ כְּתוֹלַעַ. The Talmud tradition (Seder Mo’ed, Yoma 67a) explains what would happen on Yom Kippur, or the Day of Atonement: “Originally they used to tie the thread of crimson wool to the entrance of the Ulam within, and as soon as the he-goat reached the wilderness, it turned white. Then they knew that the commandment concerning it had been fulfilled, as it is said: If your sins be as scarlet, they shall be as white wool” (Talmud, Soncino). Scarlet and crimson tend to stain. The allusion is even stronger if, as several commentators suggest, scarlet refers to a dyed garment, not just one that is soiled. This is supported by the Targum (ת),³³ “Though your sins be stained as with dye

³² Pratt, Elder Orson. Journal of Discourses, 26 March 1876. Delivered in the Fifteenth Ward Meeting-house, Salt Lake City, Sunday Afternoon. (Reported by David W. Evans.) Restoration of the Gospel Probable and Scriptural—Sent First To The Gentiles, Then To Israel—This is a Gathering Dispensation or The Fullness of Times—Destiny of all Nations, see especially pp. 176–178.

³³ Unless otherwise specified, the Targum (ת) translation I am providing is the 1871 version by C. W. H. Pauli, The Chaldee Paraphrase on the Prophet Isaiah. J. F. Stenning’s ת translation is often the same but at times has a different rendering worth pointing out. More recently, The Isaiah Targum by Bruce Chilton, in the Aramaic Bible series, has been published. Beside these three ת translations, I have available to me the ת texts in Aramaic (including some important variants), published by J. F. Stenning, The Targum of Isaiah; The Bible in Aramaic (with superlinear punctuation) published by Alexander Sperber (of more particular interest to us, Volume III, The Latter Prophets According to Targum Jonathan); part of which is also included in the electronic version of the Jewish Literary Aramaic version of the Prophets Comprehensive Aramaic Lexicon Project (CAL) published by Logos Software. CAL includes an Aramaic Lexicon. An extensive ת lexicon is also written by Marcus Jastrow, ספר מילים, Dictionary of the Targumim, Talmud Babli, Yerushalmi and Midrashic Literature. The Targum Jonathan is credited to Jonathan Ben Uziel, a student of Hillel.

³⁰ “Thou shalt neither vex a stranger, nor oppress him: for ye were strangers in the land of Egypt” (Exodus 22:21).

³¹ This glorious prophecy has been fulfilled and the קְדִישָׁת יִשְׂרָאֵל or State of Israel has now again become a nation, since 29 November 1947.

&c.” Such a color of scarlet שָׁנִי, explains Lowth, means “twice dipped, or double-dyed; from שָׁנָה, iterare, to double, or to do a thing twice.” Although we may wash them, often these spots will not come out. Not unlike grass stains, except even more difficult to remove. The call to repentance extends to all. The Lord is inviting us all to turn unto Him, for are we not all beggars before Christ? “For all have sinned, and come short of the glory of God” (Romans 3:23), even in the areas we may consider our greatest strengths.³⁴ From

³⁴ The Prophet Joseph Smith taught “That the nearer man approaches perfection, the clearer are his views, and the greater his enjoyments, till he has overcome the evils of his life and lost every desire for sin; and like the ancients, arrives at that point of faith where he is wrapped in the power and glory of his Maker, and is caught up to dwell with Him” (History of the Church 2:8). Elder Neal A. Maxwell taught: “When people are described as ‘having lost their desire for sin,’ it is they, and they only, who deliberately decided to lose those wrong desires by being willing to ‘give away all [their] sins’ in order to know God (Alma 22:18)” (According to the Desire of [Our] Hearts, October 1996 General Conference). The whole of Alma 41 is an exquisite scripture giving us hope that if our desires are right that we are at least part way there: “And it is requisite with the justice of God that men should be judged according to their works; and if their works were good in this life, and the desires of their hearts were good, that they should also, at the last day, be restored unto that which is good” (Alma 41:3). Elder Maxwell also said: “Righteous desires need to be relentless, therefore, because, said President Brigham Young, ‘the men and women, who desire to obtain seats in the celestial kingdom, will find that they must battle every day’” (in Journal of Discourses, 11:14). Therefore, true Christian soldiers are more than weekend warriors... “Do you,” President Young asked, “think that people will obey the truth because it is true, unless they love it? No, they will not” (in Journal of Discourses, 7:55). Thus knowing gospel truths and doctrines is profoundly important, but we must also come to love them. When we love them, they will move us and help our desires and outward works to become more holy... Fortunately for us, our loving Lord will work with us, “even if [we] can [do] no more than desire to believe,” providing we will “let this desire work in [us]” (Alma 32:27). Therefore, declared President Joseph F. Smith, “the education then of our desires is one of far-reaching importance to our happiness in life” (Gospel Doctrine, 5th ed. [1939], 297). Such education can lead to sanctification until, said President Brigham Young, “holy desires produce corresponding outward works” (in Journal of Discourses, 6:170). Only by educating and training our desires can they become our allies instead of our enemies! Some of our present desires, therefore, need to be diminished and then finally dissolved. For instance, the biblical counsel “let not thine heart envy sinners” is directed squarely at those with a sad unsettlement of soul (Proverbs 23:17). Once again, we must be honest with ourselves about the consequences of our desires, which follow as the night, the day” (According to the Desire of [Our] Hearts, October 1996 General Conference). Elder Bruce R. McConkie gave some suggestions on how we can center our minds on wholesome desires: “To enable us to keep our minds centered on righteousness, we should consciously elect to ponder the truths of salvation in our hearts. Brother Packer yesterday pleaded with eloquence that we sing the songs of Zion in order to center our thoughts on wholesome things. I would like to add that we can also—after we have had the opening song [and may I add prayer that we may follow the injunction to “pray always, lest ye be tempted by the devil, and ye be led away captive by him” (3 Nephi 18:15b)—GB]—call on ourselves to preach a sermon. I have preached many sermons walking along congested city streets, or tramping desert trails, or in lonely places, thus centering my mind on the Lord’s affairs and the things of righteousness; and I might say they have been better sermons than I have ever preached to congregations. If we are going to work out our salvation, we must rejoice in the Lord. We must ponder his truths in our hearts. We must rivet our attention and interests upon him and his goodness to us. We must forsake the world and use all our strength, energies and abilities in furthering his work. I think the Lord’s people should rejoice in him and shout praises to his holy name. Cries of hosannah should ascend from our lips continually” (“Think on These Things,” Ensign (CR), January 1974, p.45). With the Psalmist I pray: “Create in me a clean heart, O God” (Psalms 51:10a) that I might “[lose] every desire for sin” (History of the Church 2:8). And then—through the grace of God and the merits of Christ, after we have put forth our best efforts—we can rejoice in the words of the Prophet Moroni: “And awake, and arise from the dust [away from our spiritual bondage] ... and put on thy beautiful garments... Yea, come unto Christ, and be perfected in him, and deny yourselves of all ungodliness; and if ye shall deny yourselves of all ungodliness, and love God with all your might, mind and strength, then is his grace sufficient for you, that by his grace ye may be perfect in Christ; and if by the grace of God ye are perfect in Christ, ye can in nowise deny the power of God. And again, if ye by the grace of God are perfect in Christ, and deny not his power, then are ye sanctified in Christ by the grace of God, through the shedding of the blood of Christ, which is in the covenant of the Father unto the remission of your sins, that ye become holy, without spot” (Moroni 10:31-33). We often hear people explain that they do not quite understand the atonement of Jesus Christ in all of its grandeur. And perhaps the most difficult part of all is to understand the supernal gift of grace that springs forth out of the atonement and how it all works out in the eternal scheme of things. Certainly, I do not claim to understand. “... for we know that it is by grace that we are saved, after all we can do” (2 Nephi 25:23). What does this scripture mean? The scriptures teach us that true repentance means forsaking of our sins (Mosiah 4:10; Alma 39:9; Ether 11:1; D&C 93:48) and of course, the well known scripture: “By this ye may know if a man repenteth of his sins—behold, he will confess them and forsake them” (D&C 58:43). Although the Savior has already suffered for all our sins, if we do not repent we will have to suffer also: “Therefore I command you to repent—repent, lest I smite you by the rod of my mouth, and by my wrath, and by my anger, and your sufferings be sore—how sore you know not, how exquisite you know not, yea, how hard to bear you know not. For behold, I, God, have suffered these things for all, that they might not suffer if they would repent; But if they would not repent they must suffer even as I; Which suffering caused myself, even God, the greatest of all, to tremble because of pain, and to bleed at every pore, and to suffer both body and spirit—and would that I might not drink the bitter cup, and shrink—Nevertheless, glory be to the Father, and I partook and finished my preparations unto the children of men. Wherefore, I command you again to repent, lest I humble you with my almighty power; and that you confess your sins, lest you suffer these punishments of which I have spoken, of which in the smallest, yea, even in the least degree you have tasted at the time I withdrew my Spirit” (D&C 19:15–20). At best, I can say I am in the long process of forsaking, but have not forsaken. Sometime around 1990–1991, I was feeling very depressed and despondent because of all of my weaknesses. One day I was reading a newspaper report about someone who had been dishonest. “At least,” I thought to myself, “this is one good quality I have, I am honest.” After having these thoughts I had an open vision in which I saw the many times in my life when I had been dishonest—from both before and after my baptism. One of these scenes particularly stands out in my mind. I was a young lad and was near the door of our large home in Santiago. A poor old woman asked to see my mother. My mother is a very generous person and always gave to the poor—although a few times complained about this duty. I thought I would be doing my mother a favor so she would not have to be bothered by the poor old beggar and explained that my mother was not home. The woman’s words still ring in my ears, “¡mentiroso! (liar!).” I could see this and many other distinct scenes pass by me. It was by no means a short list of scenes. For years I did not understand the purpose of what I had seen. Now I know that God was trying to teach me something about grace. Even in those areas where I thought I may have been “doing well” I would need the grace offered to us through Christ’s atonement. Note that the Spirit only showed me the one area I felt I had done well. I shudder to think what the rest of the movie of my life would have looked like. A little more than ten years later I experienced a related revelation of a completely different nature, one that I also did not understand for years. After my second Sabbatical leave in Chile was coming to a close (2002), the Spirit of God manifested to me that my sins had been forgiven. What should have been a moment of great joy was not, because I did not understand the meaning of what was being said to me. I had gone out with the missionaries once a week during my Sabbatical and through God’s grace the Spirit of God was manifesting to me that the Lord had accepted my offering. But all I could think about was the uselessness of it all. I knew my imperfection. Instead, I should have dropped to my knees in thankfulness. The Lord was saying, in effect, yes, I know your weaknesses, but I also can see the desire of your heart and your effort. I can now see the Lord saying: “And if men come unto me I will show unto them their weakness. I give unto men weakness that they may be humble; and my grace is sufficient for all men that humble themselves before me; for if they humble themselves before me, and have faith in me, then will I make weak things become strong unto them” (Ether 12:27). We also have: “Nevertheless, the Lord God sheweth us our weakness that we may know that it is by his grace, and his great condescensions unto the children of men, that we have power to do these things” (Jacob 4:7). So perhaps we can speak of a repentant attitude along with repentance. We may also well speak of the fruits of repentance, such as joy and peace and the constant companionship of the Holy Ghost. These also are part of the gift of grace. If we have a great desire to study the word, share the gospel with others, do temple work for our deceased ancestors, improve, do good, choose the right, serve in our callings and answer affirmatively the question that Alma poses: “And now behold, I say unto you, my brethren, if ye have experienced a change of heart, and if ye have felt to sing the song of redeeming love, I would ask, can ye feel so now?” (Alma 5:26, also see Alma 5:27–31a), perhaps these are indicators that the grace of God is working within us now despite our imperfections. We have no reason to believe that the grace required for exaltation is something different than the grace we receive in this mortal existence to help us here and now in our efforts to become men and women of God. (From my blog, Until we have lost every desire for sin, 25 March 2013 and Grace—a gift born of the atonement, 21 April 2015). Finally, I find these words from the Prophet Joseph Smith of great comfort to me: “When you climb up a ladder, you must begin at the bottom, and ascend step by step, until you arrive at the top; and so it is with the principles of the Gospel—you must begin with the first, and go on until you learn all the principles of exaltation. But it will be a great while after you have passed through the veil before you will have learned them. It is not all to be comprehended in this world; it will be a great work to learn our salvation and exaltation even beyond the grave.” (Also see notes on grace on ISAIAH 33:6.)

Alma we read this summons: “Behold, he sendeth an invitation unto all men, for the arms of mercy are extended towards them, and he saith: Repent, and I will receive you” (Alma 5:33). ¶ They shall be as white as snow / they shall be as wool. I picture the day, when we die, when we will have to see the movie of our life. We will be before Christ, and the stain of our sins will become evident. At that awful moment of despair, when we think all is lost, if we have given ourselves to the Lord in this life and have endured to the end in faithfulness, I picture that the Holy One of Israel will come forth, and plead our cause before the Father.

“Father, behold the sufferings and death of him who did no sin, in whom thou wast well pleased; behold the blood of thy Son which was shed, the blood of him whom thou gavest that thyself might be glorified: Wherefore, Father, spare my brethren [and I believe that at that time He will call us by name] that believe on my name, that they may come unto me and have everlasting life” (D&C 45:4–5). The atoning sacrifice of Jesus Christ is one that is presented in types and shadows throughout Scripture.

19 If ye be willing and obedient, ye shall eat the good of the land:

If ye be willing and obedient. Once we become aware of our own nothingness—and this understanding of our nothingness is a gift of God that we can seek earnestly if we have any doubts—then we are in a position to put our faith and confidence in the only person who can save, even Christ Jesus. Nephi taught us that for this purpose we need to believe and be reconciled in Christ, “for we know that it is by grace that we are saved, after all we can do” (2 Nephi 25:23b). James seemed to know that many would be confused about the importance of obedience in the last days—not just a statement of belief: “Even so faith, if it hath not works, is dead, being alone. Yea, a man may say, Thou hast faith, and I have works: shew me thy faith without thy works, and I will shew thee my faith by my works. Thou believest that there is one God; thou doest well: the devils also believe, and tremble” (James 2:17–19). A clear understanding is required of us of how both grace and obedience are needed: “This grace is an enabling power that allows men and women to lay hold on eternal life and exaltation after they have expended their own best efforts” (see grace, LDS Bible Dictionary). The Brethren teach that it is not a balance of all the good and evil in our lives that is most important, but rather, the type of person we have become. ¶ Ye shall eat the good of the land. This immediately draws our minds to Rain in Due Season. “To eat of the good of the land” stands for much more than having food. The promised blessings include a bounty of food, peace in the land, and the making of a fruitful nation. But none of the blessings are as beautiful as the Lord’s promise to establish His covenant with Israel, and then to walk with us (see Leviticus 26:12, Rain in Due Season; and notes on ISAIAH 2:3). These same principles apply just as much today as they did in former times: “Behold, the Lord requireth the heart and a willing mind; and the willing and obedient shall eat the good of the land of Zion in these last days. And the rebellious shall be cut off out of the land of Zion, and shall be sent away, and shall not inherit the land” (D&C 64:34–35).

20 But if ye refuse and rebel, ye shall be devoured with the sword: for the mouth of the LORD hath spoken [it].

But if ye refuse and rebel. We have the moral agency wherein we can refuse and rebel but then the corresponding consequences will follow. Delitzsch wrote, “Obeying and rebelling are both of them consequences of an act of will.” And so it is that we are free to choose our path, but in so doing we are also choosing our destiny. “Sow to yourselves in righteousness, reap in mercy” (Hosea 10:12a) or “They that plow iniquity, and sow wickedness, reap the same” (Job 4:8) and finally, “Be not deceived; God is not mocked: for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap” (Galatians 6:7). But it is not sufficient to sow good for a time, but rather, we must endure to the end: “And let us not be weary in well doing: for in due season we shall reap, if we faint not” (Galatians 6:9). ¶ Ye shall be devoured with the sword. The Targum (Ⲯ) renders it, “... ye shall be slain with the sword of the enemy,” Once again, a single one of the curses in Rain in Due Season (Leviticus 26:25) is chosen to represent all the others. Every invitation to repent, then, is an invitation to partake of the joy and happiness of the Gospel. “Now, repentance could not come unto men except there were a punishment, which also was eternal as the life of the soul should be, affixed opposite to the plan of happiness, which was as eternal also as the life of the soul” (Alma 42:16).

vv. 21–31. Through Isaiah, the Lord expresses that Israel has failed him and will need to be chastened, but that a day of restoration would come in that the righteous would be redeemed and the transgressors destroyed. Israel shall be ashamed of her former idol worship. All of the wicked would be burned together.

21 ¶ How is the faithful city become an harlot! it was full of judgment; righteousness lodged in it; but now murderers.

How is the faithful city become an harlot! This is a reference to Jerusalem, who had sold herself to strange men or nations and refused her true Husband, who was willing and mighty to save. ¶ It was full of judgment; righteousness lodged in it. A lament, for Jerusalem had been the home of justice and righteousness at one time. ¶ But now murderers. In contrast, now the wicked, even the murderer, was the new occupant.

22 Thy silver is become dross, thy wine mixed with water:

This verse continues to contrast Jerusalem to her better days. ¶ Thy silver is become dross. Silver needs special care to remain lustrous and beautiful. Else it loses its shine. Not only had it lost its shine, but was full of dross or impurities. So it was that Jerusalem had not only lost her previous splendor, but had also become now full of impurities with the worship of false gods. ¶ Thy wine mixed with water. The purity of the wine had been corrupted by being diluted.³⁵ So the power of Jerusalem to influence the lives of men and women for good had been diluted. Jerusalem had been set up to be a light on a hill, and the salt of the earth, that is, to be an example to the rest of the world. Now each person who takes upon him or herself the name of the Lord is to also become an example. “Ye are the salt of the earth: but if the salt have lost his savour, wherewith shall it be salted? it is thenceforth good for nothing, but to be cast out, and to be trodden under foot of men. Ye are the light of the world. A city that is set on an hill cannot be hid . . . Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father who is in heaven” (Matthew 5:13–14, 16).

23 Thy princes [are] rebellious, and companions of thieves: every one loveth gifts, and followeth after rewards: they judge not the fatherless, neither doth the cause of the widow come unto them.

³⁵ The strength of wine is directly proportional to the sugar content (also known as degrees Brix) of the grape juice before it is fermented. One commentator suggested that wine was sometimes watered down and sold in this cheapened and diluted state. This accusation is leveled even today, as seen by several editorials in Grape Grower magazine (February 2000, pp. 30–31). One person suggested that a particular watered down flavored wine (where other blended juices are included in the process) should not be allowed to be sold as wine, but instead be labeled: “Water, fruit juice &” A contrary opinion is given by Lowth: “It is remarkable, that whereas the Greeks and Latins by mixed wine always understood wine diluted and lowered with water, the Hebrew on the contrary generally mean by it wine made stronger and more inebriating, by the addition of higher and more powerful ingredients; such as honey, spices, defrutum, (or wine inspissated by boiling it down to two-thirds, or on-half of the quantity), myrrh, mandragora, opiates, and other strong drugs. Such were the exhilarating, or rather stupifying, ingredients Such was the ‘spiced wine and the juice of pomegranates,’ mentioned Canticles 8:2. ... Thus the drunkard is properly described (Proverbs 23:30), as one ‘that seeketh mixt wine;’ and is mighty to mingle strong drink’ (ISAIAH 5:22). And hence the Psalmist took that highly poetical and sublime image of the cup of God’s wrath, called by Isaiah (51:17) ‘the cup of trembling.’” Either way, the fine wine had been corrupted by either being made into strong or diluted drink.

Thy princes [are] rebellious, and companions of thieves. Noblesse oblige, is French for nobility obligates. Those in power—either economic, intellectual or of any other type—are morally obligated to share with the less fortunate. Jerusalem’s princes, far from imparting with the needy, where stealing from them. ¶ Every one loveth gifts, and followeth after rewards. Those who should have done their jobs out of a sense of obligation or love, require bribes instead. There are societies that run on bribes, where individuals pay bribes for almost everything, such as buying tickets to travel by train or to escape legal requirements. One way in which the decay of a society is manifested is through the bribes that are required of its citizens. ¶ They judge not the fatherless, neither doth the cause of the widow come unto them. This is in direct contrast to ISAIAH 1:17. The concerns of the downtrodden, the orphans, widows and foreigners who cannot pay are neglected.

24 Therefore saith the Lord, the LORD of hosts, the mighty One of Israel, Ah, I will ease me of mine adversaries, and avenge me of mine enemies:

The mighty One of Israel אֱלֹהֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל. Same idea as Holy One of Israel (ISAIAH 1:4). ¶ Ah, I will ease me of mine adversaries, and avenge me of mine enemies. The Lord will eliminate and avenge himself of His enemies. That is, those who having a special responsibility for watching over the Lord’s little flock have instead turned wolves. “Beware of false prophets, which come to you in sheep’s clothing, but inwardly they are ravening wolves” (Matthew 7:15). “Woe to her that is filthy and polluted, to the oppressing city! She obeyed not the voice; she received not correction; she trusted not in the Lord; she drew not near to her God. Her princes within her are roaring lions; her judges are evening wolves; they gnaw not the bones till the morrow. Her prophets are light and treacherous persons: her priests have polluted the sanctuary, they have done violence to the law” (Zephaniah 3:1–4).

25 And I will turn my hand upon thee, and purely purge away thy dross, and take away all thy tin:

✓ according to pureness

And I will turn my hand upon thee. The Hebrew שׁוּב frequently means “turn” or “return,” but in this context, means to do again or repeat. It implies a continual castigation until Israel repents, as in Rain in Due Season. “And if ye will not be reformed by me by these things, but will walk contrary unto me; Then will I also walk contrary unto you, and will punish you yet seven times for your sins” (Leviticus 26:23–24, emphasis added). This idea is underscored throughout Leviticus 26. ¶ And purely purge away thy dross, and take away all thy tin. Another definition for dross, beside impurities, is the scum or slag that forms around metal that is melted. Several translations render the passage much like this version: “And will smelt away your dross as with lye, And will remove all your alloy” (NAS). The words lye and purity have the same meaning in Hebrew (HBD). The general idea is that the impurities will be removed or purged as with a very strong alkaline solution or cleanser (also, see notes on ISAIAH 6:9). The Talmud tradition (Seder Mo’ed, Shabbath 139a) has: “And the Holy One, blessed be He, will not cause His Divine presence to rest upon Israel until the wicked judges and officers cease out of Israel, for it is said, And I will turn my hand upon thee, and thoroughly purge away thy dross, and will take away all thy tin. And I will restore thy judges as at the first, and thy counsellors as at the beginning, etc.” (Talmud, Soncino).

26 And I will restore thy judges as at the first, and thy counsellors as at the beginning: afterward thou shalt be called, The city of righteousness, the faithful city.

And I will restore thy judges as at the first. The Lord set up judges over Israel, “Judges and officers shalt thou make thee in all thy gates, which the Lord thy God giveth thee, throughout thy tribes” (Deuteronomy 16:18a). The Lord established then how judges were to conduct themselves: “and they shall judge the people with just judgment. Thou shalt not wrest judgment; thou shalt not respect persons, neither take a gift: for a gift doth blind the eyes of the wise, and pervert the words of the righteous. That which is altogether just shalt thou follow, that thou mayest live, and inherit the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee” (Deuteronomy 16:18b–20). But the people wanted to be like the rest of the world. And so it is they approached the aging prophet Samuel with these words: “Now make us a king to judge us like all the nations” (1 Samuel 8:5). The scriptures teach us that Samuel was displeased by such a request, and prayed to the Lord as to what course to take. “And the Lord said unto Samuel, Harken unto the voice of the people in all that they say unto thee: for they have not rejected thee, but they have rejected me, that I should not reign over them” (Samuel 8:7). The restoration of the judges as at the first also alludes to the restoration of the Gospel of Jesus Christ, with its ecclesiastical order, with bishops set up as judges in Israel. Regarding the office of bishop, the Lord has said, “And whoso standeth in this mission is appointed to be a judge in Israel, like as it was in ancient days” (D&C 58:17a). And the Lord gives His judges further counsel: “To judge his people by the testimony of the just, and by the assistance of his counselors, according to the laws of the kingdom which are given by the prophets of God. For verily I say unto you, my law shall be kept on this land. Let no man think he is ruler; but let God rule him that judgeth” (D&C 58:18–20a). Besides these judges, the Lord has set up others, including Prophets, Seers and Revelators, and the Twelve, to be judges over Israel, and over the world. ¶ And thy counsellors as at the beginning: The Hebrew root of the word counsel includes the definition “to decree” (AHCL). The greatest of all the judges and counselors (ISAIAH 9:6) is the Lawgiver Himself, the Messiah. In the Millennium the Lord will be among the people as He was in the beginning, when Adam and Eve were in the garden. Messiah is also given the title of the second David. “But they shall serve the LORD their God, and David their king, whom I will raise up unto them” (Jeremiah 30:9). Hosea is quite explicit, showing that the second David would come on the scene in the latter-days. “For the children of Israel shall abide many days without a king, and without a prince, and without a sacrifice, and without an image, and without an ephod, and without teraphim: Afterward shall the children of Israel return, and seek the LORD their God, and David their king; and shall fear the LORD and his goodness in the latter days” (Hosea 3:4–5). ¶ Afterward thou shalt be called, The city of righteousness, the faithful city. The day will come when two great cities will be honored. Jerusalem of old, as well as the new Jerusalem. “...for out of Zion shall go forth the law, and the word of the LORD from Jerusalem” (ISAIAH 2:3, see also, Micah 4:2). In the Book of Revelation we learn more about this holy city, the new Jerusalem, which shall descend from heaven to become part of the Celestial world. There will be no need for either a temple nor for light in the new Jerusalem: “And I saw no temple therein: for the Lord God Almighty and the Lamb are the temple of it. And the city had no need of the sun, neither of the moon, to shine in it: for the glory of God did lighten it, and the Lamb is the light thereof” (Revelation 21:22–23). In an address delivered to the High Council in Kirtland, the Prophet Joseph Smith made use of verse 26, His judges as at the first and when the city of righteousness shall be built in terms of the great and glorious day of restoration of Israel. In this same address Brother Joseph weaved together the magnificent words of former-day prophets, including Jeremiah, in referring to the last days, “when it shall no longer be said, the Lord lives that brought up the children of Israel out of the land of Egypt, but the Lord lives that brought up the children of Israel from the land of the north, and for all the lands whither He has driven them” (STPJS, pp. 110–111, see also notes on ISAIAH 1:5).

27 Zion shall be redeemed with judgment, and her converts[✓] with righteousness.

✓ or, they that return of her

Zion shall be redeemed with judgment. The Lord had expected righteous judgment, or justice, to be used in defending the widow, the orphan and the foreigner. The object of such judgment was to protect and show mercy. Since the Lord will be the Redeemer, Zion’s redemption will be carried out with such everlasting mercy. “And the nations of the earth shall honor her and shall say: Surely Zion is the city of our God, and surely Zion cannot fall, neither be moved out of her place, for God is there, and the hand of the Lord is there; And he hath sworn by the power of his might to be her salvation and her high tower. Therefore, verily thus saith the Lord, let Zion rejoice, for this is Zion—THE PURE IN HEART; therefore, let Zion rejoice, while all the wicked shall mourn” (D&C 97:19–21). The redemption of Zion will take place as will the redemption of individuals through the atoning sacrifice of our Lord and Savior. ¶ And her converts (see margin ||, and they who return to her, יְשׁוּבִיהָ) with righteousness. There are two competing Hebrew roots that would affect the meaning of this expression. One is שָׁבָה (root related to captivity, see AHCL, TWOT, LXX (Ⓢ), Syriac (Ⓢ)), and YLT has, “Zion in judgment is redeemed, And her captivity in righteousness.” Most translators including the KJV choose, instead, the root שׁוּב. Many translate as converts, or repentant ones. As we have already stated, שׁוּב can mean to turn or return to walk in Christ. This verse is an allusion to the latter-days. Those who come unto Christ today do so by leaving mystical Babylon behind, and entering Zion. Happily, both roots seem to add meaning to the sentence, as either the captives being redeemed, or those who have returned unto Christ being redeemed—who also are captives of mystical Babylon. The invitation is unto all: “Will ye not return unto me, and repent of your sins, and be converted, that I may heal you?” (3 Nephi 9:13b). We have said much about the threats and curses found in Rain in Due Season. Great promises of redemption are also found therein (Deuteronomy 30:1–10).

28 And the destruction[✓] of the transgressors and of the sinners [shall be] together, and they that forsake the LORD shall be consumed.

✓ breaking

And the destruction of the transgressors and of the sinners [shall be] together. Nations and individuals who do not turn to Christ with full purpose of heart will be counted as transgressors and sinners. “For behold, and lo, vengeance cometh speedily upon the ungodly as the whirlwind; and who shall escape it?” (D&C 97:22). ¶ And they that forsake the LORD shall be consumed. Those who forsake the Lord are those who place their trust and fear in man rather than God. All that are not sufficiently humble will not be able to stand when the Lord comes again. “For, behold, the day cometh, that shall burn as an oven; and all the proud, yea, and all that do wickedly, shall be stubble: and the day that cometh shall burn them up, saith the Lord of hosts, that it shall leave them neither root or branch. But unto you that fear my name shall the Sun of righteousness arise with healing in his wings” (Malachi 4:1–2a).

29 For they shall be ashamed of the oaks which ye have desired, and ye shall be confounded for the gardens that ye have chosen.

The LXX (6) reads, “For they shall be ashamed of their idols, which they delighted in, and they are made ashamed of the gardens which they coveted.” The Hebrew word גִּדְיָן, in Holy Writ, has a number of meanings, including the prophetic pronouncement that something will indeed or surely come to pass. It is often translated as for in the KJV. This verse has reference to the sensuous and idolatrous practices (see Hosea) that Israel had allowed to enter into her life, usually practiced around such shady trees³⁶ and ‘gardens.’ Lowth explains: “Sacred groves were a very ancient and favourite appendage of idolatry. They were furnished with the temple of the god to whom they were dedicated; with altars, images, and everything necessary for performing the various rites of worship offered there; and were the scenes of many impure ceremonies, and of much abominable superstition.” Most idolatry today takes place as a form of intellectual idolatry or the love of the philosophies of men over the Word of God.

30 For ye shall be as an oak whose leaf fadeth, and as a garden that hath no water.

For ye shall be as an oak whose leaf fadeth. Those who prefer idolatry will be left without strength, as a tree whose leaves wilt. There also seems to be a specific allusion to the tree that had been looked at as a symbol of strength and procreation, but now would be found wilted and faint.³⁷ ¶ And as a garden that hath no water. The term gardens included not only what today we consider ornamentals, but vineyards, orchards or other man-cultivated vegetation. A garden without water is scorched by the sun, and left worthless. This, in contrast to those who are planted by the living waters and place their trust in God: “Blessed is the man that trusteth in the LORD, and whose hope the LORD is. For he shall be as a tree planted by the waters, and that spreadeth out her roots by the river, and shall not see when heat cometh, but her leaf shall be green; and shall not be careful in the year of drought, neither shall cease from yielding fruit” (Jeremiah 17:8). Margalioth also considers the thesis and antithesis of this verse, in contrast to “And the LORD shall guide thee continually, and satisfy thy soul in drought, and make fat thy bones: and thou shalt be like a watered garden, and like a spring of water, whose waters fail not” (ISAIAH 58:11) and “For as the earth bringeth forth her bud, and as the garden causeth the things that are sown in it to spring forth; so the Lord GOD will cause righteousness and praise to spring forth before all the nations” (ISAIAH 61:11).

31 And the strong shall be as tow, and the maker of it as a spark, and they shall both burn together, and none shall quench [them].

And the strong shall be as tow. Tow is a very flammable broken fiber, usually made out of flax, jute, or hemp and that can be used for spinning much like lamb’s wool is used for that same purpose (see Webster, HBD). The strong, or as stated in Malachi 4, the proud, will be like stubble, tow, or flammable material. ¶ And the maker of it as a spark. A number of translations prefer to render closer to the LXX (6) and the Syriac (5), “and their works” rather than maker. It is in consequence of people’s evil works, then, that condemnation comes: the spark that starts the stubble burning. ¶ And they shall both burn together, and none shall quench [them]. The works of evil as well as the makers of it will be burned together. This will be especially so at the second coming of our Lord.

FIRST POSTED: 12 March 2000

³⁶ These trees were associated with idolatry.

³⁷ In ISAIAH 40:6–8, this idea of a leaf that fadeth is expanded upon. In ISAIAH 40:28–31 we note the source of true strength.

It is believed by most commentators that Isaiah Chapters 2 through 4 form a united section.

Isaiah 2

The chapter opens with a glorious vision upon the latter days and the millennium, revolving around the time when the Messiah will come again upon the earth, when the mountain of the Lord's mountain will stand as an ensign for all the world to see and flock to, and when metal used for arms of war will be melted down to be used as implements of husbandry. The Lord teaches Israel not to put her faith in the arm of flesh or in false idols that cannot save. The pride of man will be shown to be of no strength. All who have looked to others rather than to the Lord for succor shall be humbled. Man will seek to hide from God by going to the rocks of the hills and mountains, but to no advantage. Man cannot hide from his own iniquity or from God.

COLOR CODE: Both the Book of Mormon and the Prophet Joseph Smith's Inspired Version (JST)—also known as the “New Translation” of the Bible¹—provide important corrections to the text of Isaiah as we find it in our King James Version. Some of these changes are vital while others are inconsequential. Beginning with ISAIAH 2 we face this issue. ISAIAH 1 is not included in the Book of Mormon, nor are there JST changes for ISAIAH 1. Nephi explained that some “... of the most plain and precious parts of the gospel of the Lamb ... have been kept back by that abominable church” (1 Nephi 13:34b). It is clear that for the Old Testament most of these changes made by designing and wicked priests took place anciently, before the time of the Dead Sea Scrolls (Q). These precious parts have been restored by the Book of Mormon and by the JST. The next question, of course, is how much were the scriptures changed even before they formed part of the Brass Plates in the Book of Mormon? John Tvedtnes has thought along the same lines: “In my longer study of the ‘Isaiah Variants in the Book of Mormon,’ I note that there are times when some of the ancient versions disagree with both MT/KJV² and Book of Mormon and that this is to be expected. We shall not always find support for the Book of Mormon, nor shall we always find support for KJV, in ancient texts, because variants existed already in very early times. Because of this, the brass plates of Laban, though closer in time to the original, need not always represent Isaiah’s original intent.”³ Finally, these same points about early textual changes to all presently known Hebrew texts (including M and Q) are brilliantly made by the preeminent Jewish scholar, Emanuel Tov.⁴ For the most part the Book of Mormon and JST coincide. BLUE will be used to indicate additional words or punctuation included in the Book of Mormon, and VIOLET in the JST. If both the Book of Mormon and JST make the same additions, then TEAL is used. When there are extra words in the KJV that were removed by either the Book of Mormon or JST, they will be placed in brackets { } or < > with a ~~strikethrough~~ mark to correspond to the Book of Mormon or JST respectively. Where both the Book of Mormon and JST are the same, no brackets are used outside the strikethrough. If the strikethrough is within [], that is for the elliptical words supplied by the KJV translators (which we present in italics in the commentary portion of this book), it means that the KJV supplied word has not been retained. If word in [] has a color and no strikethrough, it indicates that the word was used in the Book of Mormon, JST, or both, <https://www.lds.org/ensign/1972/12/joseph-smiths-inspired-translation-of-the-bible?lang=eng> (also see his book, A Plainer Translation: Joseph Smith’s Translation of the Bible, a History and Commentary. Provo, Utah: Brigham Young University Press, 1975.

¹ See Robert J. Matthews article on the topic, “Joseph Smith’s Inspired Translation of the Bible,”

² MT here, stands for Hebrew Masoretic Text (M) or pointed Hebrew Text.

³ Tvedtnes, John A. in Peterson, Daniel C., ed. FARMS Review of Books, Provo, Utah: Foundation, Vol. 6, Number 2, p. 244. The interesting paper “Isaiah Variants in the Book of Mormon” by Tvedtnes is found in Nyman, Monte S., and Charles D. Tate, Jr., eds. Isaiah and the Prophets: Inspired Voices from the Old Testament. Religious Studies Center Monograph Series, Volume 10. Provo, UT: Religious Studies Center, Brigham Young University, 1984.

⁴ Tov, Emanuel. Textual Criticism of the Hebrew Bible (2nd Edition), Augsburg Fortress Press, Minneapolis, MN, 2001. Textual criticism (sometimes known as lower criticism) attempts to point out possible changes and corruptions in our extant versions of the Scriptures. Both mistakes in copying, as well as intentional changes to the text—are included. Textual criticism should not be confused with higher criticism. The latter intends to destroy the integrity of the Scriptures and our confidence and faith in God. Higher critics expressly state that man cannot receive revelation from God. An increasing number of Bible versions today are produced by higher critics and deny the divinity of the Jesus Christ.

depending on the same color scheme. For ease in reading, deleted or changed punctuation found in the KJV will not be pointed out unless the meaning is changed. Likewise, sometimes the punctuation in the Book of Mormon and JST differ, but such differences will not be underscored, especially when the JST restores punctuation back to what the KJV had (e.g., ISAIAH 3:11, 14). Finally, where there are differences between the Book of Mormon and the JST that are not easily indicated with the system noted, additional changes will be pointed out by asterisks. If the JST restores a change away from the Book of Mormon toward the KJV, then the KJV is retained with a note. KJV spelling is kept throughout. While Brother Joseph was able to make many monumental changes through the JST, the JST does not purport to have the final changes to the scriptures. The Prophet did not have time to spend countless hours on this project, but rather, spent much of his life being persecuted, serving others, being falsely imprisoned, and ultimately, paid the price of a martyr. While one may wonder what additional inspired insights the Prophet Joseph could have left for us if his life would not have been so cruelly cut short, nevertheless, what he has left us is a treasure, a pearl of great price.⁵

⁵ Many LDS believe that the Lord permitted the prophet Joseph to use his Bible as a basis for many of the Biblical verses in the Book of Mormon. This approach is not unusual for translators, who make it a point to leave a previous translation intact, except for the needed changes. Numerous such examples abound, of which I will only mention four. 1) George M. Lamsa's Peshitta Syriac Version of the Bible (1957) uses the KJV almost predominantly, except for the changes in the Eastern text. 2) The Dead Sea Scrolls Bible (DSSB, 1999) team included a member who helped produce the New Revised Standard Version (NRSV), so it is not a surprise that the NRSV has such a strong influence on this Dead Sea Scroll version. 3) The 1955 Jewish Publication Society (JPS) of America version of the Holy Scriptures, is based strongly on the KJV. In many early translations (including the KJV), in fact, it was the objective of the translating committee not to make changes to the former version, unless the changes were absolutely essential. 4) Robert Lowth, an eminent Isaiah scholar said this about his own translation: "I have ventured to call this a New Translation, though much of our vulgar translation is retained in it. As the style of that translation is not only excellent in itself, but has taken possession of our ear, and of our taste, to have endeavoured to vary from it with no other design than that of giving something new instead of it, would have been to disgust the reader, and to represent the sense of the Prophet in a more unfavorable manner; besides that it is impossible for a verbal translator to follow an approved verbal translation which has gone before him, without frequently treading in the very footsteps of it." With this background, let us return to the question of the use of the Bible by Joseph Smith. The Lord made it clear that translation took effort. Oliver Cowdery had hoped to help Brother Joseph with the translation, but was not diligent in the effort so the Lord took away his permission to do so, "Behold, you have not understood; you have supposed that I would give it unto you, when you took no thought save it was to ask me" (D&C 9:7). The Prophet Joseph Smith translated the whole of the Book of Mormon at a phenomenal speed. When the Lord had Joseph Smith correct the Bible, this was not all completed with a single pass through. In fact, the work was not completed when the Prophet Joseph Smith was martyred. In October 1903, H. Chamberlain, a non-member, wrote President Joseph F. Smith. He wanted to know why the language in the Book of Mormon was identical to the KJV, when scriptures were quoted. "I find that Christ in quoting to the people on this side of the water, the third and fourth chapters of Malachi, quotes, according to the Book of Mormon, in the identical text of King James' version, not missing a word. I find that in many instances, in his talks with the people, and to his disciples here, he used the identical language of the King James' version, not even omitting the words supplied by the translators. [Chamberlain means the words in italics in the KJV, or supplied ellipses]. Now, I know that no two parties will take the same manuscript and make translations of a matter contained therein, and the language of the two translators be alike; indeed, the language employed by the two parties will widely differ. These translations are from different manuscripts, and from different languages, and still it appears in the Book of Mormon as King James' translation. I can conceive of no other way in which such a coincidence could have occurred, within the range of human experience, except where one writing is copied from another, and then it takes the utmost care to get them exactly alike, word for word, and letter for letter as this is. The foundation of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints rests, it seems to me, on the honesty and authenticity of the Book of Mormon, and if that is not just what it claims to be, and was not obtained just as Joseph claims it to be given to him, then you are the same as other churches, a mixture of truth and error—still practicing more truth than they, but without authority. Now, what I want to know is, how do you as a Church account for these things appearing in the Book of Mormon in the identical language of King James' version, when we know his version is faulty, and the same translators could not have made it twice alike themselves? Did Joseph copy it from the Bible, or did the Lord adopt the identical language in revealing to Joseph?" President Joseph F. Smith asked Elder B. H. Roberts to answer this query. I quote here only a very brief portion from Elder Robert's interesting response, of November 1903: "It should be understood also, in this connection, that while Joseph Smith obtained the facts and ideas from the Nephite characters through the inspiration of God, he was left to express those facts and ideas, in the main, in such language as he could command; and when he found that parts of the Nephite record closely paralleled passages in the Bible, and being conscious that the language of our English Bible was superior to his own, he adopted it, except for those differences indicated in the Nephite original which here and there make the Book of Mormon version of passages superior in sense and clearness. Of course, I recognize the fact that this is but a conjecture; but I believe it to be a reasonable one; and indeed the only one which satisfactorily disposes of the difficulty you point out." Elder B. H. Roberts goes on to quote numerous examples of how the Book of Mormon preserved a better and clearer translation than the KJV. Also of interest, from the same source, is B. H. Robert's explanation as to the Malachi prophecies in the Book of Mormon: "The prophecy of Malachi (chapter 3 and 4) quoted in the Book of the Mormon was supplied by the Savior, and the Nephites engraved portions of these scriptures in their records, and this both in the Hebrew, and what the Nephites called the reformed Egyptian" (p. 176). I fancy to all this, however, another inquiry will rise in your mind, and that is: Since Joseph Smith translated the Book of Mormon by means of the Urim and Thummim, why is it that he did not give throughout a translation direct from the Nephite plates, instead of following our English Bible, since translation by means of the Urim and Thummim must have been so simple and so easy? It is at this particular point where, in my opinion, a very great mistake is made, both by our own people, and our friends in the world. That is, translation by the Urim and Thummim is not so simple and easy a thing as it might at first glance appear. Many have supposed that the Prophet Joseph had merely to look in the Urim and Thummim, and there see, without any thought or effort on his part, both the Nephite characters and the translation in English. In other words, the instrument did everything and the Prophet nothing, except merely to look in the Urim and Thummim as one might look into a mirror, and then give out what he saw there. Such a view of the work of translation by Urim and Thummim I believe to be

vv. 1–5. The magnificent visions of a latter-day are seen by Isaiah. A day when the mountain of the Lord’s house, that is the Holy Temple, will be established in the top of the mountains; a day of restoration, where people will be called to the restored Church from every corner of the globe; even a millennial day, where swords will be beaten into plowshares and are no longer needed. Next, comes the glorious invitation to Israel to come and walk in the light of the Lord. These five verses also appear in a very closely related fashion in Micah 4:1–5. Since the words of scripture are inspired of the Lord, it is not unusual for those who speak as moved upon by the Holy Ghost to quote the words of Scripture. Either both Micah and Isaiah were quoting from an earlier prophet, from each other, or were independently inspired with these words directly from the Lord. The Prophet Joseph Smith’s own writings are full of either direct or indirect quotes, allusions and paraphrases of scripture. So much so that a newer edition of the well-known work Teachings of the Prophet Joseph Smith (TPJS) has now been re-issued under the title of Scriptural Teachings of the Prophet Joseph Smith (STPJS). This latter edition is the same as the former, except that it contains footnotes indicating the source of the hundreds and hundreds of scriptures used by Brother Joseph. When a prophets use the writings of others, it was not with the intent of making them appear as their own, but rather, with the assumption that all who would read them would know their origins. And not only would know their origin, but their context and historical background. This is once again, a reason why the learning of the Jews is so necessary to understand the Book of Isaiah. The first four verses in ISAIAH 2 were among the scriptures that Angel Moroni quoted to Joseph Smith according to the Oliver Cowdery narrative (see note to ISAIAH 1:7).

altogether incorrect. I think it caused the Prophet the exercise of all his intellectual and spiritual forces to obtain the translation; that it was an exhausting work, which taxed even his great powers to their uttermost limit; and hence, when he could ease himself of those labors by adopting a reasonably good translation already existing, I think he was justified in doing so ... I trust that the suggestions here offered, as an explanation of the difficulty you present, will have the effect of removing it out of your way; but whether they will be altogether satisfactory or not, this I would suggest to you: consider more especially the positive testimony that exists for the truth of the Book of Mormon, particularly following the injunction of Moroni, in chapter ten, verses four and five of this book, wherein he makes the promise that those who will ask God the Eternal Father for a testimony of the truth of the Nephite record, shall receive such a testimony by the power of the Holy Ghost; ‘and by the power of the Holy Ghost,’ as Moroni teaches us, ‘we may know the truth of all things’” (184–185). (Biblical and Modern Evidences of the Book of Mormon: Bible Quotations in the Book of Mormon, by B. H. Roberts, pp. 173–189.)

1 ¶ THE word that Isaiah, the son of Amoz, saw concerning Judah and Jerusalem:

The emphasis of this introduction is on the word רָאָה. saw, for seer, and on Judah, or the southern kingdom, with Jerusalem as its center.

2 And it shall come to pass in the last days, [that] when the mountain of the LORD’s house shall be established in the top of the mountains, and shall be exalted above the hills, and all nations shall flow unto it;

✓ or, prepared

And it shall come to pass. Latter-day Saints will notice the similarity of the expression to the frequently used and it came to pass in the Book of Mormon. Because the Hebrew Scriptures are almost void of punctuation, the word “and” is used frequently. The Hebrew character that represents the word “and” is called vav, or waw, and is expressed as the letter ו. When the ו is coupled with the word יהי, that is, to be or to become, then it is read as either and it came to pass or and it shall come to pass.⁶ Such use of the conjunction or introductory particle is so frequent that some versions have tended to drop it, while others such as the KJV and the ASV have been more true to the original (TWOT). This dropping of the “and” as well as the “and it came to pass” seems to have been a general phenomenon of translators today, who have moved away from a more literal translation. For example, in ISAIAH 2:3, The and in “And many people ...” is dropped by the HNV, WEB, NIV, NRSV, NAB, and NJB, to name a few. In ISAIAH 1:31, the and in “and the strong ...” is dropped by the HCSB, HNV, NASB, WEB, NIV, NRSV, NAB, NJB, NRSV and even in the Tanakh Jewish translation. ¶ In the last days. This usage is similar to the frequently used eschatological expression, in that day (see ISAIAH 2:11, 17, 20). Both speak of a future time when prophecy will be fulfilled. The Jewish exegete Kimhi said, “Wherever the latter times are mentioned in Scripture, the days of the Messiah are always meant” (Lowth). ¶ When the mountain of the LORD’s house shall be established in the top of the mountains. The “mountain of the Lord’s house” is THE HOUSE OF THE LORD, the Holy Temple. In the last days, says Isaiah, the Temple would be established or built in the top of the mountains. The tops of the mountains have been used for such purposes since time immemorial. Moses talked to the Lord on the top of Mount Sinai before the Tabernacle, which functioned as the Temple in the wilderness, was built. Likewise, the Mount of Transfiguration (Matthew 17:1–9; Mark 9:2–9) operated as a Temple. There Peter, James, and John received specific priesthood keys, very much like what took place 3 April 1836, in the Kirtland Temple (see D&C 110 and Transfiguration, Mount of, in LDS Bible Dictionary). There, they probably were also endowed with power from on high (see Luke 24:49; D&C 38:32; 124:39). Another place to which people gather from around the world has been the Tabernacle and the Conference Centers from which General Conference is transmitted. ¶ And shall be exalted above the hills. Many of these temples are, like the Salt Lake City Temple, literally built in the tops of the mountains, and are exalted above the hills, such as the Oakland Temple, which is frequently used as a navigational light by those in the sea and air, the Santiago, Chile Temple, and the Anchorage, Alaska Temple, to name a few. The eyes of the world are upon these edifices. And of course, how about Jerusalem itself, where one of the great latter-day temples will be built? So also the temple to be built in Jackson County. ¶ In response to Joseph Smith's question "When will Zion be built up in her glory, and where will thy Temple stand, unto which all nations shall come in the last days?" (D&C 57 section heading) the Lord responded: "And thus saith the Lord your God, if you will receive wisdom here is wisdom. Behold, the place which is now called Independence is the center place; and a spot for the temple is lying westward, upon a lot which is not far from the courthouse" (D&C 57:3). But where are the hills and the mountains wherein such a temple will be built? What could be said of the Jerusalem, can also be said of the Temple in Jackson County, as if the Lord so desires it, all these things can be done. Delitzsch suggests: "The prophet here predicted that the mountain which bore the temple of Jehovah, and therefore was already in dignity the most exalted of all mountains, would one day tower in actual height above all the high places of the earth. The basaltic mountains of Bashan, which rose up in bold peaks and columns, might now look down with scorn and contempt upon the small limestone hill which Jehovah had chosen (Psalm 68:16–17)⁷; but this was an incongruity which the last times would remove, by making the outward correspond to the inward, the appearance to the reality and the intrinsic worth." Furthermore, the Lord would transfer the holiness of

⁶ In ISAIAH 2:2, וַיְהִי.

Sinai to Zion. Delitzsch has: "What had been commenced at Sinai for Israel, would be completed at Zion for all the world." Interestingly, Delitzsch suggests that one way that Zion might be built higher in a more literal way, is when the New Jerusalem is set upon it. As LDS, of course, we believe that the New Jerusalem will be in Jackson County. ¶ President Snow taught: "The city of Zion will be built in Jackson County. The site for the city of Zion was pointed out by the Prophet Joseph Smith as Jackson County, Missouri, and there some of our people settled in 1831, but were subsequently driven from their homes. This event, while it delayed the building of the city, did not change the place of its location. The Latter-day Saints fully expect to return to Jackson County and 'build up Zion.' Their exodus to the Rocky Mountains and their sojourn in the stakes of Zion, as the places are called which they now inhabit, they regard as preparatory to that return, and as events that had to be in order to fulfill scripture, notably these words of Isaiah: 'O Zion, that bringest good tidings, get thee up into the high mountain' [ISAIAH 40:9]. 'And it shall come to pass in the last days, that the mountain of the Lord's house shall be established in the top of the mountains, and shall be exalted above the hills; and all nations shall flow unto it' [ISAIAH 2:2]."⁸ And what of the temple in Jerusalem in Judea? "Yea, let the cry go forth among all people: Awake and arise and go forth to meet the Bridegroom; behold and lo, the Bridegroom cometh; go ye out to meet him. Prepare yourselves for the great day of the Lord. Watch, therefore, for ye know neither the day nor the hour. Let them, therefore, who are among the Gentiles flee unto Zion. And let them who be of Judah flee unto Jerusalem, unto the mountains of the Lord's house" (D&C 133:10–13). ¶ And all nations shall flow unto it. Several commentators have mentioned how Isaiah's image using the word flow implies a large number of people in a continual stream (e.g. Barnes, Matthew Henry). Isaiah uses this theme in several places, such as: "For thus saith the LORD, Behold, I will extend peace to her like a river, and the glory of the Gentiles like a flowing stream ..." (ISAIAH 66:12a). President Hinckley had these interesting comments to make regarding this verse in Isaiah: "I believe that prophecy applies to the historic and wonderful Salt Lake Temple. But I believe also that it is related to this [speaking of the new Conference Center] magnificent hall. For it is from this pulpit that the law of God shall go forth, together with the word and testimony of the Lord."⁹ Similar comments have been pronounced of the old

⁷ "Why leap ye, ye high hills? [this] is the hill [which] God desireth to dwell in; yea, the Lord will dwell [in it] for ever. The chariots of God [are] twenty thousand, [even] thousands of angels: the Lord is among them, [as in] Sinai, in the holy [place]" (Psalms 68:16–17).

⁸ Snow, President Lorenzo. The Teachings of Lorenzo Snow. Edited by Clyde J. Williams. Salt Lake City, Utah: Bookcraft, (2 January 1902, MS, 64:2), 1984, pp. 182–183.

⁹ Hinckley, Gordon B. "This Great Millennial Year," Sunday Morning 170th Annual General Conference.

Tabernacle in Temple Square. Those who have long layovers at the Salt Lake City Airport have the opportunity to get on a van for a trip into town to tour the visitor's center and Temple Square. All temples throughout the world attract the gaze of the people who pass them. Before temples are dedicated, they afford a special opportunity for nonmembers to visit and feel the overabundance of the Spirit. Even where there is no temple nearby, our spiritual gazes are upon the temple where sacred vicarious ordinances are carried out on behalf of our ancestors.

3 And many people shall go and say, Come ye, and let us go up to the mountain of the LORD, to the house of the God of Jacob; and he will teach us of his ways, and we will walk in his paths; for out of Zion shall go forth the law, and the word of the LORD from Jerusalem.

And many people shall go and say, Come ye, and let us go up to the mountain of the LORD. This verse, as so many in Isaiah, is pure poetry. This is an invitation: to all who are not members, to partake of the waters of baptism; to all who have already entered the waters of baptism, to further prepare to receive sacred ordinances; and for those who have partaken of the ordinances, to remain worthy and serve our kindred dead by performing the necessary ordinances on their behalf. Avraham Gileadi explains the context of the words go up: “The verb ‘go up’ or ‘ascend’ in this verse (Heb. יָעֲלֶה) is a pilgrimage motif and key word. Two or three times a year, in the seasons of religious festivals, the ancient Israelites ‘went up’ or ‘ascended’ to Jerusalem from throughout the land of Israel to make a pilgrimage to the temple of the Lord (see Psalm 122:1–4; cf. Zechariah 14:16–18). This pilgrimage was traditionally made in remembrance of the exodus out of Egypt under Moses, the period of wandering in the wilderness, and the return to the land of the fathers under Joshua. Later, it became a prophetic type of the latter-day return of Israel from throughout the earth (cf. Jeremiah 31:6), and Isaiah uses the imagery of a pilgrimage to Zion in this very context in 30:29; 35:8–10; and 51:10, 11. By means of the key verb ‘go up’ or ‘ascend’ in ISAIAH 2:3, he thus again identifies the idea of Israel's return with the scene of the nations going to Zion depicted in this verse, and the return itself with a latter-day setting.”¹⁰ ¶ To the house of the God of

Jacob. Like Holy one of Israel (see ISAIAH 1:4), this is a loving title given to our Savior. The God of Jacob brings to our mind a loving, personal God. Those who have had the privilege of being born in this day when the fullness of the Gospel has been restored upon the earth will be especially sensitive to the call of the Good Shepherd, to come and partake of the wedding feast, and most specially, to come unto Christ and unto His temple. ¶ And he will teach us of his ways, and we will walk in his paths. When we accept the invitation to partake of baptism, and then receive the Holy Ghost through the ordinance of confirmation, then we can be taught from on high. So literally, He will teach us of his ways. This is no matter of speech, no vain promise; we can indeed receive a flow of revelation, comfort, peace, and knowledge. Without a doubt, this invitation to follow the Savior's example, and to walk in His paths, is among the most striking and lovely scriptures to be found anywhere. In the most beautiful and poetic verse in Leviticus 26, the Lord would bless an obedient Israel with His presence: “And I will walk among you, and will be your God, and ye shall be my people” (Leviticus 26:12, Rain in Due Season). This can be our joy, this is what we have to look forward to if we are obedient. ¶ For out of Zion shall go forth the law, and the word of the LORD from Jerusalem. Elder Brigham H. Roberts, in a General Conference address, asked: “Why the law from Zion? Why the word of the Lord from Jerusalem?”¹¹ In this magnificent address to the Saints, Elder Roberts goes on to explain that out of Zion (the American continent) there would grow a system of government, where individual freedoms would predominate, and which would be based on the voice of the people, such that it would be a land of liberty.¹² Elder Roberts then goes on to explain his views about the beautiful role that Jerusalem would play in the last days. He suggests that out of Jerusalem the revelation of the Lord would proceed. In doing so, he repeatedly warns Latter-day Saints against narrow or ethnocentric views that might minimize the importance of Jerusalem. “When we take into account the greatness of our own dispensation of the Gospel, I think sometimes we overlook the grandeur and the greatness of the ‘Dispensation of the Meridian of Times.’ It must always be remembered that the great Atonement, the central fact of the Gospel, was wrought out at Jerusalem; that there the sacrifice was made; that there the Son of God

¹⁰ Gileadi, Avraham, “Isaiah: Four Latter-day Keys to an Ancient Book,” in Nyman, Monte S., and Charles D. Tate, Jr., eds. Isaiah and the Prophets: Inspired Voices from the Old Testament. Religious Studies Center Monograph Series, Volume 10. Provo, UT: Religious Studies Center, Brigham Young University, 1984, p. 133.

¹¹ Roberts, Brigham H., April 1908 General Conference Report, pp. 107–110.

¹² President Harold B. Lee was another individual who frequently pointed out the relationship between this prophetic scripture, and the important role that would be played by the Constitutional form of government found in the USA. See, for instance, The Teachings of Harold B. Lee, compiled by Clyde J. Williams, p. 364.

took upon Him our sins; there our transgressions were laid upon Him, and by His stripes we are healed.  Jerusalem must forever be a holy shrine, a place to which the eyes of all nations will turn for light and inspiration; what more natural, then, than that it should become a holy city, the capital of the eastern world, if you will, the holy sanctuary whence shall issue the word of the Lord in future even more abundantly than in the past.”

4 And he shall judge among the nations, and shall rebuke many people: and they shall beat their swords into plow-shares, and their spears into pruning-hooks — nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more.

✓ or, scythes

And he shall judge among the nations. In ISAIAH 1:26 we discussed the role that latter-day judges would play in the re-established Church, in the day that the Lord would restore thy judges as at the first. Here we are told that the millennial day will come when the Holy One of Israel will own His people again and personally reign upon the earth as the Judge of Israel. Sooner or later, of course, we will all be judged by the Keeper of the Gate who “employeth no servant there; and there is none other way save it be by the gate; for he cannot be deceived, for the Lord God is his name” (2 Nephi 9:41b). ¶ And shall rebuke many people. The Lord invites us all to repent while it is yet time, “As many as I love, I rebuke and chasten: be zealous therefore, and repent” (Revelation 3:19). Alma the High Priest taught, “And now I say unto, all you that are desirous to follow the voice of the good shepherd, come ye out from the wicked, and be ye separate, and touch not their unclean things; and behold, their names shall be blotted out, that the names of the wicked shall not be numbered among the names of the righteous, that the word of God may be fulfilled, which saith: The names of the wicked shall not be mingled with the names of my people; For the names of the righteous shall be written in the book of life, and unto them will I grant an inheritance at my right hand” (Alma 5:57–58a). The Lord rebukes us because He loves us. ¶ And they shall beat their swords into plow-shares, and their spears into pruning-hooks. Of those who have lived upon the earth, only the just will be brought forth in the morning of the first resurrection and permitted to abide the millennial day when there shall be no war and Christ will reign personally. There will be no need of swords, whose metal will be put to better use, such as for agrarian implements. ¶ Nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more. Isaiah will have much more to say about the joyful and peaceful felicity that will exist during the millennial reign. Much of the joy we feel in this lifetime is the joy given to us by the Holy Ghost, so that we are able to feel at peace even in the midst of growing trouble around us. Those who desire this peace need not wait until the millennium to experience it, but can feel it now by walking in the light of the Lord. The extent of the millennial joy, however, will be widespread, as the waters that cover the oceans.

5 O house of Jacob, come ye, and let us walk in the light of the LORD; yea, come, for ye have all gone astray, every one to his wicked ways.

O house of Jacob, come ye, and let us walk in the light of the LORD. Once again, that beautiful invitation to walk in the light of the Lord and thus keep His commandments: “And now, Israel, what doth the LORD thy God require of thee, but to fear the LORD thy God, to walk in all his ways, and to love him, and to serve the LORD thy God with all thy heart and with all thy soul” (Deuteronomy 10:12). Those who love the Lord will desire to so walk, “for the ways of the LORD are right, and the just shall walk in them” (Hosea 14:9b). “And when Abram was ninety years old and nine, the LORD appeared to Abram, and said unto him, I am the Almighty God; walk before me, and be thou perfect” (Genesis 17:1). The Lord will prove each one of us in this life. Formerly, He put Israel to the test, too, “...that I may prove them, whether they will walk in my law, or no” (Exodus 16:14b). I love the way that is phrased, whether they will walk in my law, or no. As discussed in ISAIAH 2:3, this reminds us of the glorious promise in Rain in Due Season: “And I will walk among you, and will be your God, and ye shall be my people” (Leviticus 26:12). If we keep the commandments, then, and walk in His light, we shall have the Spirit of the Holy Ghost, or the Comforter, to illuminate our way. The Lord even promised the Second Comforter to those who truly humbled themselves, His own companionship. As in ISAIAH 2:3 there is the “let us,” or the idea that we do not do this alone, but invite all who will listen to come along. ¶ Yea, come, for ye have all gone astray, every one to his wicked ways. This is, once again, an invitation to turn, שׁוּב, and make whatever course corrections are needed, and follow the Savior. Nephi taught that if we are not brought into the light, it is because we ask not: “Wherefore, now after I have spoken these words, if ye cannot understand them it will be because ye ask not, neither do ye knock; wherefore, ye are not brought into the light, but must perish in the dark” (2 Nephi 32:4). Jacob, the brother of Nephi, exhorted: “O then, my beloved brethren, come unto the Lord, the Holy One” (2 Nephi 9:41a). When the invitation is accepted, and we enter in the way and continue it, we can be guided by the Spirit in all things and thus walk with the Lord: “For behold, again I say unto you that if ye will enter in by the way, and receive the Holy Ghost, it will show unto you all things what ye should do” (2 Nephi 32:5).

vv. 6–9. The people have abandoned the Lord, as they have turned to admire the customs of other nations, and have sought after diviners rather than the Lord, and have permitted their children to be intermarried with those outside the covenant. Their trust has been on the work of their own hands, even their worldly treasures and mighty armies. Israel has stooped down to idol worship.

6 ¶ Therefore, O Lord, thou hast forsaken thy people, the house of Jacob, because they be replenished from[✓] the east, and [are] hearken unto soothsayers like the Philistines, and they please[✓] themselves in the children of strangers.

- ✓ or, more than
- ✓ or, abound with

Therefore, O Lord, thou hast forsaken thy people, the house of Jacob. Isaiah, who is permitted to see into the future, can see that the Lord would permit the children of Jacob, both Ephraim and Judah, to be carried away captive by Assyria and Babylonia, respectively. ¶ Because they be replenished from the east. The LDS footnotes suggest that the people are filled with the beliefs of aliens. Instead of being a light on a hill for all to see, they “mingled among the heathen, and learned their works” (Psalm 106:35, also see vv. 34, 36 ff.). Several Bible versions interpret this verse similarly: “filled with customs from the east” (ASV); “filled with influences from the east” (NAS); “full [of practices] from the East” (Tanakh). The LXX (6) translates these words as “their land is filled as at the beginning,” suggesting as the Psalm, that the influence of the settlers had been overcome by the influence of the original Canaanite inhabitants of these lands, people who had done that which was wicked in the eyes of the Lord. The Syriac (S) and Douay (Latin Vulgate (V)) translation into English) agree with the general approach of the LXX (6), “because they are self-satisfied as in the olden days,” and “because they are filled as in times past.” Some translations introduce the idea that they are filled with diviners, fortunetellers or superstitions (NRSV, NAB, NIV). The difficulty in this passage is that the Hebrew מִן־הָמָזְרָח can mean “on the east” or “of old, formerly” (AHCL). Either way, then, what seems to be certain, is that whatever they are filled with is not from God. ¶ And hearken unto soothsayers like the Philistines. Instead of turning to the Lord, Israel was quick to turn to soothsayers and diviners or others who would prophecy of future events. In an earlier time, Saul had been the example of such desire to lean on the arm of flesh rather than the might of God (see my notes on Saul’s fall in ISAIAH 26). ¶ And they please themselves in the children of strangers. This section has been interpreted as having business dealings with other nations, “strike bargains” (NAS). Some versions are less clear as to whether they clasp hands in business or in marriage: “strike hands with the children of foreigners” (ASV), and “clasp hands” (NRSV, NIV). The LXX (6) and Syriac (S) suggest that marriage was involved, “and many strange children were born to them,” and “they have reared many alien children.” Of all the commandments given to Israel, one of the most compelling was to marry in the covenant. The Lord had specifically asked Israel not to allow herself to be influenced by the ways of the surrounding nations, and the previous inhabitants of Canaan: “And ye shall not walk in the manners of the nation, which I cast out before you: for they committed all these things, and therefore I abhorred them” (Leviticus 20:23). Israel, then, had not passed the test of walking in His statutes, and so the price would have to be paid: The Lord had warned and forewarned, “And it shall be, if thou do at all forget the LORD thy God, and walk after other gods, and serve them, and worship them, I testify against you this day that ye shall surely perish” (Deuteronomy 18:19).

7 Their land also is full of silver and gold, neither is there any end of their treasures; their land is also full of horses, neither is there any end of their chariots:

In the Mosaic Law, the Lord warned Israel and commanded her not to multiply either horses nor silver and gold: “But he¹³ shall not multiply horses to himself ... Neither shall he multiply wives to himself, that his heart turn not away: neither shall he greatly multiply to himself silver and gold” (Deuteronomy 17:16a, 17). The Lord wanted Israel to put her trust in Him. Men often prefer to put their trust in themselves, or in their neighbor. The Lord says, prove me now herewith (Malachi 3:10). But the man answers, “I cannot come to Church with you, for it is Sunday when I make more money than the rest of the week!” Their land also is full of silver and gold, neither is there any end of their treasures. Israel was filled with riches. One could say that she had a strong economy. Riches can be the result of prosperity and blessings from God—but how often is God acknowledged by individuals and by nations? Riches can also come from the exploitation of the poor, the overtaxing of the people, or burdens placed on other nations. ¶ Their land is also full of horses, neither is there any end of their chariots. Besides economic strength, dominant nations can be filled with military might. In the scriptures, horses and chariots are often used to represent military strength. The Lord makes it clear that when He is on our side, we need not fear the strength of our enemies: “But I will have mercy upon the house of Judah, and will save them by the Lord their God, and will not save them by bow, nor by sword, nor by battle, by horses, nor by horsemen” (Hosea 1:7); “When thou goest out to battle against thine enemies, and seest horses, and chariots, and a people more than thou, be not afraid of them” (Deuteronomy 20:1). One of the great messages we receive through Isaiah, then, is that we need to place our trust in God, even—or shall we say, especially—when the matter at hand seems impossible, and “Fear not: for they that be with us are more than they that be with them” (2 Kings 6:16b).

¹³ That is, the king that the Lord would set over Israel.

8 Their land ~~also~~ is also full of idols; they worship the work of their own hands, that which their own fingers have made:

Their land is also full of idols. אֱלִילִים is generally used for idols. The singular of אֱלִילִים is אֱלִיל, meaning worthless (HAL, BDB). Cheyne suggests that אֱלִיל is a contraction אֵל (no) and אֵיל (strong, noble) and that the word idols may well be translated no-gods or nonentities. Not only has Israel leaned upon the arm of flesh, but has turned to no-god. Is it not interesting that the very men who refuse to follow the Lord are often moved by superstition? Or by intellectual idolatry? ¶ They worship the work of their own hands, that which their own fingers have made. One of the recurring messages of Isaiah is the absurdity of worshipping manmade idols (e.g., ISAIAH 44:15–17). As we apply issues of idolatry to ourselves, we must avoid the philosophies of men and intellectual idolatry (ISAIAH 55:8–9).

9 And the mean man boweth not down, and the great man humbleth himself not: therefore forgive them not.

And the mean man boweth not down, and the great man humbleth himself not. Without the Book of Mormon and

JST corrections and restitution of both of the dropped “not,” this verse would seem to continue to have reference to idol worship. Instead, this is a summary statement of the preceding verses, in which man refused to humble himself before the Lord. Man was willing to bow down to the influences of foreign nations, soothsayers, the power of economic and military strength, as well as to idols. To all of these things would man bow down to, but yet would not humble himself before God. The English word mean in “mean man,” (or in the 1611 KJV, “meane man”) as used in the language of the day, signified someone of low, common, or insignificant stature or importance. Gesenius makes a distinction between the two Hebrew words, one often used for a common man, adam, אָדָם, in contrast to a more noble one, ish, אִישׁ. In ISAIAH 5:15, we see that both of these men would be humbled: “And the mean man shall be brought down, and the mighty man shall be humbled.” ¶ Therefore forgive them not. Rabbi J.H. Hertz coincides well with the LDS perspective on sin: “This fundamental thought, viz. that God rewards the righteous and punishes the wicked, is an essential doctrine of Judaism as of every higher religion. They may differ as to the nature and form of Divine retribution, but the belief that right is rewarded and wrong punished is part of an ethical faith, a belief vindicated and confirmed by the experience of humanity.”¹⁴

vv. 10–22. Man’s sins will not go unpunished, even if he seeks to hide from the lord in the furthestmost caves and mountains. Instead, man will be humbled and the Lord will be exalted. The Glory of the Lord will be too much for people to look upon, when he comes to judge the nations of the earth. All nations, peoples, and individuals will humble themselves before the Lord. Idolatry will finally be recognized as useless.

10 ¶ O ye wicked ones, enter into the rock, and hide thee* in the dust, for the fear of the LORD and {~~for~~} the glory of his majesty shall smite thee.

* JST, hide ye

 JST, and his majesty (“the glory of” deleted)

O ye wicked ones, enter into the rock, and hide thee in the dust. The wicked will seek protection and a hiding place from the wrath of God in rocks, holes in the earth, and caves. When the Israelites were afraid of the Philistines, they likewise tried to hide where they could:

¹⁴ Commentary from Pentateuch & Haftarahs (ed. Dr. J.H. Hertz) on Rain in Due Season chapters. 2nd edition, 1978, p. 542.

“When the men of Israel saw that they were in a strait, (for the people were distressed,) then the people did hide themselves in caves, and in thickets, and in rocks, and in high places, and in pits” (1 Samuel 13:6). Such hiding will be as useless and ineffective as Adam and Eve’s attempts “to hide themselves from the presence of the Lord God amongst the trees of the garden” when they feared His wrath (Moses 4:14b). Certainly, hiding from God is senseless, for “Can any hide himself in secret places that I shall not see him? saith the Lord” (Jeremiah 23:24a). ¶ For the fear of the LORD and the glory of his majesty shall smite thee. When the Lord appears, His glory and majesty will have so much force that man will not be able to stand in the presence of the Lord, unless he is quickened. For instance, at the time of Solomon, when the Ark of the Covenant was placed in the Holy of Holies within the temple, we read that “the priests could not stand to minister because of the cloud: for the glory of the Lord had filled the house of the Lord” (1 Kings 8:11).

11 And it shall come to pass that the lofty looks of man shall be humbled, and the haughtiness of men* shall be bowed down, and the LORD alone shall be exalted in that day.

* JST, man

And it shall come to pass that the lofty looks of man shall be humbled. Man can show his pride in the way he looks at others, as well as in how he wishes to be looked at or considered. ¶ And the haughtiness of men shall be bowed down. Until I heard President Benson’s talk, Beware of Pride,¹⁵ I had never supposed that pride was such a rampant sin, even in my own life. I had thought to myself, “What do I care about homes and cars, about lands and jewels and clothing?” My father and mother were to me a righteous example of persons who were not ostentatious despite their own wealth. But I was well acquainted with both the rich and those who wanted to appear that way. Their way of walking and holding themselves up, the affectation of their voices, and the extravagance in outer show. To me they appeared shallow, full of pretense; distinction of classes the reality of the day as I grew up. In contrast, among the rich Latter-day Saints, this affectation does not seem to exist. Instead, they are often willing to give generously and only ask that no one know of their gift. These people are willing to “treat themselves as a real person” to borrow the expression I once heard from a farm worker. I am sure there are such good people in all religions, but I am only speaking from experience. But, returning to the issue of pride. I never supposed that I was a prideful man until I heard President Benson, and my eyes were opened. I have had such a high need for achievement in such things as dressage (youth to middle age), my work in labor management at the University of California, and even in the study and understanding of the scriptures. More and more I have come to understand, however, that where we excel it is a gift from God, and that a more sure way of succeeding is to have the Spirit of the Lord upon us, consecrating all of our doings to the Lord. And then giving thanks to the Lord, for our success. The moment we feel it was us who achieved a goal—rather than the Lord helping us reach our potentials—then we are in the deepest of errors. There is nothing wrong, then, with a desire to improve and to excel, as long as we are not competitive. The Prophet Obadiah spoke about pride: “The pride of thine heart hath deceived thee, thou that dwellest in the clefts of the rock, whose habitation is high; that saith in his heart, Who shall bring me down to the ground? Though thou exalt thyself as the eagle, and though thou set thy nest among the stars, thence will I bring thee down, saith the Lord” (Obadiah 1:3–4). What is to be done, then? While I have been working at this, I cannot yet say that I have been stripped of pride. I know I will have achieved such a goal when I can be just as excited about someone else’s success in a field I deeply care about, as I would about my own accomplishment, which talent is a gift of God. But the task before us is clear, either we humble ourselves or the Lord will have to humble us: “And whosoever shall exalt himself shall be abased; and he that shall humble himself shall be exalted” (Matthew 23:12). ¶ And the LORD alone shall be exalted in that day. It is so very comforting to know that the day will come when the only power will be that of the Lord, that the cruelty of man and the fiery dart of the adversary will be subjugated.

12 For the day of the LORD of Hosts [shall be] soon cometh upon all nations; yea, upon every [one that is]; yea, upon the proud and lofty, and upon every [one that is] who is lifted up, and he shall be brought low.

For the day of the LORD of Hosts soon cometh upon all nations. We are fast approaching the fulfillment of eschatological prophecies. The following was revealed to the Prophet Joseph Smith: “Behold, verily I say unto you, the angels are crying unto the Lord day and night, who are ready and waiting to be sent forth to reap down the fields” (D&C 86:5). In other words, reap down Idumea or the world. This section of the Doctrine and ¹⁵ Benson, Ezra Taft. Beware of Pride. April 1989 General Conference, Saturday morning session.

Covenants was given 6 December 1832. President Wilford Woodruff taught: "... When I have the vision of the night opened continually before my eyes, and can see the mighty judgments that are about to be poured out upon this world ... God has held the angels of destruction for many years, lest they should reap down the wheat with the tares. But I want to tell you now, that those angels have left the portals of heaven, and they stand over this people and this nation now, and are hovering over the earth waiting to pour out the judgments. And from this very day they shall be poured out. Calamities and troubles are increasing in the earth, and there is a meaning to these things. Remember this, and reflect upon these matters. If you do your duty, and I do my duty, we'll have protection, and shall pass through the afflictions in peace and in safety."¹⁶ ¹⁷ ¹⁸ There are many other revelations which have likewise been fulfilled or soon will be. But what a grand day it will be when the Lord will come again and all flesh shall see it together (ISAIAH 40:5b): "Prepare ye the way of the Lord, and make his paths straight, for the hour of his coming is nigh" (D&C 133:17b). ¶ Yea, upon every one. There are at least two ways to look at the second coming. One of them is the second coming itself. Another one, which should be just as sobering, is that for every one of us, we shall die soon (and in a manner of speaking thus be brought to the second coming). Man never knows when he will meet death and eternal accountability. In our youth time often seems to stand still, but as we mature time seems to move forth with haste and sometimes an almost dizzying speed. "And now, as I said to you before, as ye have had so many witnesses, therefore, I beseech of you that ye do not procrastinate the day of your repentance until the end; for after this day of life, which is given us to prepare for eternity, behold, if we do not improve our time while in this life, then cometh the night of darkness wherein there can be no labor performed" (Alma 34:33, also see 34 ff.). This warning and call for repentance is unto all, and none are exempted. For those who do not watch for the signs of the times that day will catch them by surprise: "For yourselves know perfectly that the day of the Lord so cometh as a thief in the night. For when they shall say, Peace and safety; then sudden distraction cometh upon them ..." (1 Thessalonians 5:2–3a). Borrowing an expression from the same Pauline text and placing it in a different context, I like to think that although no one will know the day or the hour, those who watch will be as a woman with child when travail falls upon her. The moment and day are still a surprise, but the general season for the birth is known. Paul invites believers to be prepared, "But ye, brethren, are not in darkness, that that day should overtake you as a thief. ... Therefore let us not sleep, as do others; but let us watch and be sober" (1 Thessalonians 5:4, 6). ¶ Yea, upon the proud and lofty. Knowledge and wealth are two common sources of pride: "O the wise, and the learned, and the rich, that are puffed up in the pride of their hearts" (2 Nephi 14:15a). ¶ And upon every one who is lifted up, and he shall be brought low. Continuing with the theme in ISAIAH 2:11, it is good to remember the source of our blessings, lest it be that "Then thine heart be lifted up, and thou forget the Lord thy God" (Deuteronomy 8:14a).

13 Yea, and the day of the Lord shall come upon all the cedars of Lebanon, [that] for they [are] high and lifted up; and upon all the oaks of Bashan;

Yea, and the day of the Lord. That is, the day of judgment that will come upon all men. ¶ Shall come upon all the cedars of Lebanon. The Targum (Ⲯ) has "and upon all the kings of the nations, the strong and the mighty." There are a number of expression to indicate those who are mighty in power or influence, one of them being the cedars of Lebanon (Cedrus Libani Conifera, see Barnes and Holman), a magnificent and commanding tall tree (also see notes on ISAIAH 10:34). It seems people have been calling each other names from time immemorial. One such case that particularly stands out is the conflict between Amaziah ben Joash, king of Judah and Jehoash ben Jehoahaz ben Jehu, king of Israel (see 2 Kings 14). Amaziah, king of Judah has been successful in a war against the Edomites (v. 7). Gaining much confidence in himself, he proceeded to send a message to Jehoash, king of Israel, in the colorful language of the time, "Come, let us look one another in the face," that is, let us measure how our strengths stand against each other in battle (v. 8). In response, Jehoash tells him to be content with his achievements, and not to push his luck through pride. It is at this point that Jehoash calls himself a cedar of Lebanon, and the king of Judah a thistle of Lebanon: "And Jehoash the king of Israel sent to Amaziah king of Judah, saying, The thistle that was in Lebanon sent to the cedar that was in Lebanon, saying, ... Thou hast indeed smitten Edom, and thine heart hath lifted thee up: glory of this, and tarry at home: for why shouldest thou meddle to thy hurt, that thou shouldest fall, even thou, and Judah with thee? But Amaziah would not hear. Therefore Jehoash king of Israel went up; and he and Amaziah king of Judah looked one another in the face at Beth-shemesh ... And Judah was put to the worse before Israel; and they fled every man to their tents” (2 Kings 14:9–12). Beside the idea of the men who have exalted themselves as the cedars of Lebanon, the multiple applications and fulfillment of scripture often have a quite literal application upon nature. Delitzsch wrote: “What the prophet foretold began to be fulfilled even in the Assyrian wars. The cedar woods of Lebanon were unsparingly destroyed; the heights and valleys of the land were trodden down and laid waste; and, in the period of the great empires which commenced with Tiglath-pileser, the Holy Land was reduced to a shadow of its former promised beauty.” The elements of nature, of course, are never lifted up against the Lord, but are always ready to sing praises to Him: “Mountains, and all hills; fruitful trees, and all cedars ... Let them praise the name of the LORD: for his name alone is excellent; his glory is above the earth and heaven” (Psalm 148:9, 13). Speaking of the writing style of the Hebrews, Lowth explained: “These verses afford us a striking example of that peculiar way of writing which makes a principal characteristic of the parabolical or poetical style of the Hebrews, and in which their prophets deal so largely; namely, their manner of exhibiting things divine, spiritual, moral, and political, by a set of images taken from things natural, artificial, religious, historical; in the way of metaphor or allegory.  Thus you will find, in many other places beside this before us, that cedars of Libanus and oaks of Basan are used, in the way of metaphor and allegory, for kings, princes, potentates, of the highest rank.” ¶ For they are high and lifted up. Just like Amaziah king of Judah was lifted up in pride and was subsequently brought down, so will any who put their trust in any other than the Holy One of Israel. ¶ And upon all the oaks of Bashan. The oak was another mighty tree. Bashan is believed to have been a fertile area northeast of the Sea of Chinnereth (called the Sea of Galilee at the time of Christ) known for its agriculture and oak trees (LEB, Holman).

¹⁶ The Latter-Day Saints' Millennial Star, 8 April 1894, Volume 58.

¹⁷ Smith, Joseph Fielding. Church History and Modern Revelation. Salt Lake City, Utah: The Council of The Twelve Apostles of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, 1946, p. 119.

¹⁸ Doctrine and Covenants and Church History Seminary Student Study Guide, D&C 86. See Susa Young Gates, "The Temple Workers' Excursion," The Young Woman's Journal, August 1894, 512–13).

14 And upon all the high mountains, and upon all the hills, and upon all the nations which [that are] lifted up, and upon every people;*

* Note: Paragraph division as Book of Mormon, rather than JST. In JST, “And upon every people” is part of the next paragraph.

And upon all the high mountains, and upon all the hills. Both hills and mountains represent refuge on the one hand, and stand as symbols of importance and status on the other. ¶ And upon all the nations which are lifted up, and upon every people. Complete nations and peoples will be affected and accountable, as none who are lifted up in pride shall escape.

15 And upon every high tower, and upon every fenced wall;*

* Note: Paragraph division as Book of Mormon, rather than JST. In JST, “And upon every people” is first line of this paragraph.

And upon every high tower. Towers were constructed both for fortification, and to increase the distance that could be seen from afar. They stood for a symbol of strength. The Lord had set Jerusalem to be such a strength and example, “I have set thee for a tower and a fortress among my people” (Jeremiah 6:27a). ¶ And upon every fenced wall. Or, fortified wall around a fenced city. It can also be a symbol of strength and power: “The rich man’s wealth is his strong city, and as an high wall in his own conceit” (Proverbs 18:11).

16 And upon all the ships of the sea, and upon all the ships of Tarshish, and upon all pleasant pictures.✓

✓ pictures of desire

Sydney B. Sperry observed, “...the Book of Mormon has a reading of remarkable interest. It prefixes a phrase of eight words not found in the Hebrew or King James Versions. ...the ancient Septuagint (Greek) version concurs with the added phrase in the Book of Mormon.... The Book of Mormon suggests that the original text of this verse contained three phrases, all of which commenced with the same opening words, ‘and upon all.’ By a common accident, the original Hebrew¹⁹ (and hence the King James) text lost the first phrase, which was, however, preserved by the Septuagint. The latter lost the second phrase, and seems to have corrupted the third phrase. The Book of Mormon preserved all three phrases.”²⁰ ¶ And upon all the ships of the sea, and upon all the ships of Tarshish. Ships can constitute two sources of power, military might as well as trading power. Many have considered Tarshish in relation to Spain, but other possibilities are also offered: “Most likely of Tartessus at the southern tip of Spain but possibly of Tarsus in Cilisia. ... ‘ships of Tarshish’ may designate sea going vessels like those of Tarshish or else ships bearing metal cargo like those of Tarshish” (HBD). ¶ And upon all pleasant pictures.

¹⁹ Rather than original, Sperry meant the MT as well as the other Hebrew texts that we have today, none of which are the original signatures.

²⁰ Sperry, Sydney B. Book of Mormon Compendium. Salt Lake City, Utah: Bookcraft, 1968.

Many translators believe the Hebrew translated as “pictures” means sea crafts of some type (e.g., Tanakh, NRSV, REB, NAB, NAS), but not all. The NJB translates this as “and for everything held precious,” as does the English translation of the Vulgate (V), “and upon all that is fair to behold” (Douay), as likewise Delitzsch, who feels like Jerome, that the more literal works of curiosity means “and upon everything beautiful to look at,” such as works of art. The Targum (T) renders it “And upon all that dwell in beautiful palaces.”

17 And the loftiness of man shall be bowed down, and the haughtiness of men shall be made low; and the LORD alone shall be exalted in that day.

And the loftiness of man shall be bowed down. Man can make the choice of humbling himself, or of being humbled. ¶ And the haughtiness of men shall be made low. To be haughty means to be exceedingly arrogant or proud. Men are quick to give themselves too much credit. ¶ And the LORD alone shall be exalted in that day. Sooner or later, however, “every knee shall bow, and every tongue shall swear” that Jesus is the Christ (ISAIAH 45:23b). I suspect this will take place in the midst of great joy and gratitude.

18 And the idols he shall utterly[✓] abolish.

✓ or, shall utterly pass away

Many suppose that idolatry and idols are a thing of the past. While at the time of Isaiah one of the major manifestations of idolatry was bowing down to dumb idols who could not utter a word, idol worship is much more than adoration of a dead piece of wood or metal: “They seek not the Lord to establish his righteousness, but every man walketh in his own way, and after the image of his own god, whose image is in the likeness of the world, and whose substance is that of an idol, which waxeth old and shall perish in Babylon, even Babylon the great, which shall fall” (D&C 1:16).

19 And they shall go into the holes of the rocks, and into the caves of the earth,[✓] for the fear of the LORD shall come upon them, and for the glory of his majesty shall smite them, when he ariseth to shake terribly the earth.

✓ or, dust

And they shall go into the holes of the rocks, and into the caves of the earth. This thought builds on that of ISAIAH 2:10. The land of Israel was full of caves in the rocks, such as where the Dead Sea Scrolls (Q) were found. Yet man cannot hide from the judgment that will come. Not in rocks, not in caves, not in bomb shelters, not in man-made forts and buildings. While at first men shall try the futility of hiding in the rocks, after realizing the inefficacy of such, will wish to be buried by those same rocks: “And the kings of the earth, and the great men, and the rich men, and the chief captains, and the mighty men, and every bondman, and every free man, hid themselves in the dens and in the rocks of the mountains; And said to the mountains and rocks, Fall on us, and hide us from the face of him that sitteth on the throne, and from the wrath of the Lamb” (Revelations 6:15–16). The only true refuge will be the Rock of Our Salvation. ¶ For the fear of the LORD shall come upon them. Evil men often look in terror at the prospect of death, when they know that they will face God, “... with that awful fear of death which fills the breasts of all the wicked” (Mormon 6:7b). ¶ And the glory of his majesty shall smite them. Two things come to mind here. First, the literal “brightness of His glory” (Targum, T), a brightness that is blinding and that shames the brightness of the sun. Second, such powerful, pure righteousness of the Lord, that man would tremble with fear on account of his iniquities unless he was purified in preparation to meet the Lamb (see ISAIAH 6). ¶ When he ariseth to shake terribly the earth. The focus of these words is upon the latter days, including the times preparatory for the Lord’s second coming, when He shall shake terribly the earth. The message of repentance is to go out to all the world in preparation for His second advent, “For verily the voice of the Lord is unto all men, and there is none to escape; and there is not eye that shall not see, neither ear that shall not hear, neither heart that shall not be penetrated” (D&C 1:2). The hearts of those who do not heed this message of love, and prepare to meet the Lamb, will fail. “And in that day shall be heard of wars and rumors of wars, and the whole earth shall be in commotion, and men’s hearts shall fail them, and they shall say that Christ delayeth his coming until the end of the earth.”²¹ And the love of men shall wax cold, and iniquity shall abound” (D&C 45:26–27). And important final note here, is that it is man’s own guilt which shall condemn him: “For our words will condemn us, yea, all our works will condemn us; we shall not be found spotless; and our thoughts will also condemn us; and in this awful state we shall not dare to look up to our God: and we would fain be glad if we could command the rocks and the mountains to fall upon us to hide us from his presence” (Alma 12:14). Alma the younger spoke of the torment

²¹ Also see ISAIAH 66:5.

he faced before he repented, as he was racked with eternal torment at the very thought of having to face God: “Oh, thought I, that I could be banished and become extinct both soul and body, that I might not be brought to stand in the presence of my God, to be judged of my deeds” (Alma 36:15).

20 In that day a man shall cast his idols of silver, [✓] and his idols of gold, which ~~they~~ he hath made ~~[each one]~~ for himself [✓] to worship, to the moles and to the bats;

- ✓ the idols of his silver
- ✓ or, for him

In that day a man shall cast his idols of silver, and his idols of gold, which he hath made for himself to worship. Man will realize the worthlessness of his man-made treasures. ¶ To the moles and to the bats. One possibility is that so worthless will be gold and silver, that man will use them as pest control, to drive away moles and bats from the caves and thus leave them open for human habitation. Joseph Fielding Smith offered this suggestion: “We are all familiar with ISAIAH chapter two, at least the first five verses. . . . We have frequently quoted these verses, but we have failed to study the verses which follow, and they all have to do with our present day. One significant thing in it is that the Lord says we would throw our idols of gold and silver which men worship in these days, to the moles and the bats, and we have nearly done this, have we not? You do not have much gold and did not the Government take it and bury it? This is close to giving it to bats and moles.”²² Lowth similarly wrote, “They shall carry their idols with them into the dark caverns, old ruins, or desolate places, to which they shall flee for refuge; and so shall give them up and relinquish them to the filthy animals that frequent such places, and have taken possession of them as their proper habitation.” In the context of the next verse, man will leave behind his “treasures” in an effort to escape and seek hiding.

21 To go into the clefts of the rocks, and into the tops of the ragged rocks, for the fear of the LORD shall come upon them, and ~~for the glory of his majesty of his glory~~^{*} shall smite them, when he ariseth to shake terribly the earth.

^{*}Note: majesty of the Lord (JTNT)

This verse, like poetry, comes back to the recurring theme introduced in ISAIAH 2:10 and 19: men will look for refuge in the rocks, but to no avail. Through repetition the unity of the thought is kept together.

22 Cease ye from man, whose breath [is] in his nostrils; for wherein is he to be accounted of?

Cease ye from man, whose breath is in his nostrils. It is not unusual in the prophets to find alternate thoughts between lamentation and a desire for the justice of the Lord to come upon those who have done wickedly. In response to the Lord’s, “Surely, I come quickly,” as with the author of the Book of Revelations, Isaiah seems to be saying, “Amen. Even so, come, Lord Jesus” (Revelations 22:20b). ¶ For wherein is he to be accounted of? With King David, we could ask the Lord in gratitude, “What is man, that thou art mindful of him? and the son of man, that thou visitest him?” (Psalm 8:4).

FIRST POSTED: 13 May 2000

²² Smith, Joseph Fielding. The Signs of the Times. “Restoration of Israel and Judah.” Salt Lake City, Utah: Deseret News Press, 1952. Talk delivered October 28, 1942, Barratt Hall, p. 57.

Isaiah 3

Israel would be blessed if she did that which was right, and cursed if she did that which was evil in the sight of God. Now the Lord would take away her support, both in terms of food, rulers or any sort of strength—as well as her spiritual succor. When a person has the Spirit of the Lord, this is visible in that individual's countenance. While the wicked will not go without punishment, it shall be well with the righteous. The Lord will stand to plead the cause of the righteous. Women, like men, have been guilty of pride, and will suffer shame.

vv. 1–8. Isaiah speaks explicitly as to what was going to take place if Judah did not repent of her ways. Many of these prophecies have multiple fulfillments. One such former time fulfillment took place long after Isaiah's time, during the reign of Jehoiakim, king of Judah. The Lord would not punish directly, but would do so by the hand of the enemies of Israel. "And the LORD sent against him [Jehoiakim] bands of the Chaldees, and bands of the Syrians, and bands of the Moabites, and bands of the children of Ammon, and sent them against Judah to destroy it, according to the word of the LORD, which he spake by his servants the prophets" (2 Kings 24:2). 2 Kings 24–25 shows the fulfillment of these verses from Isaiah, below, as well as of the prophets from the beginning. In ISAIAH 3:1, we are told that Jerusalem would suffer great hunger: "At that time the servants of Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon came up against Jerusalem, and the city was besieged" (2 Kings 24:10). Next, in ISAIAH 3:2–3, we find that Jerusalem's mighty would be removed: "And Jehoiakim the king of Judah went out to the king of Babylon, he, and his mother, and his servants, and his princes, and his officers: and the king of Babylon took him in the eighth year of his reign. And he carried away all Jerusalem, and all the princes, and all the mighty men of valour, even ten thousand captives, and all the craftsmen and smiths: none remained, save the poorest sort of the people of the land" (2 Kings 24:12, 14). Among those who were not carried away captive, Zedekiah was established king of Judah by the king of Babylon. Zedekiah rebelled against Babylon, but not out of zeal for the Lord. The people were once again exposed to the horrors of an extended siege that brought Jerusalem to the ground. "And it came to pass in the ninth year of his reign ... that Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon came, he, and all his host, against Jerusalem, and pitched against it; and they built forts against it round about. And the city was besieged unto the eleventh year of king Zedekiah. And on the ninth day of the fourth month the famine prevailed in the city, and there was no bread for the people of the land" (2 Kings 25:1–3). Zedekiah tried to escape but was soon found, his children were put to death before his eyes, and then Zedekiah's eyes were removed before he was carried captive to Babylon. The House of the Lord, Solomon's Temple, was burnt to the ground. What the inhabitants of Jerusalem thought could never happen took place. As spoiled children who had been repeatedly warned and entreated to no avail are shocked and surprised when the punishment comes, so it was with Jerusalem. Gedaliah was made ruler over the small remnant that remained in the land. He would be murdered and anarchy would prevail. At the time of the Second Temple, Jerusalem would once again fall after the death of Christ, this time by Roman forces, around 70 AD. In the last days, Babylon—or the world—will entice men away from their true Stay and Staff, and those who answer to her seductive beckoning will be surprised to find out the eternal nature of the law of the harvest. Our only hope is to continually drink at the hands of the Savior, lest we be seduced also.

1 ¶ For, behold, the Lord, the LORD of hosts, doth take away from Jerusalem, and from Judah, the stay and the staff, the whole ~~stay~~ staff of bread, and the whole stay of water—

For, behold, the Lord, the LORD of hosts, doth take away from Jerusalem, and from Judah. The more literal translation of the Hebrew (אֲנִי) would be "For behold, Adonai Yahweh of Tzeva'oth" that is, "For behold, the Lord Jehovah of Hosts." The Lord, He who rules the armies of heaven has decreed what would befall upon Jerusalem and Judah. ¶ The stay and the staff, the whole staff of bread, and the whole stay of water. Or rather: "...stay [מִשְׁעָן] and staff [מִשְׁעָנָה], the whole staff or bread, and the whole stay of water." It is interesting to note here, that the Targum (ܬܪܓܡ) agrees with the Prophet Joseph Smith, in keeping the parallelism between stay and staff. In Hebrew these words are the masculine and feminine versions of מִשְׁעָן based on the root (שָׁעַן) that means to lean on for support. The Aramaic expression is "...stay (ܡܫܥܢܐ) and support (ܡܫܥܢܐ), the whole stay of food and the whole support of drink.”¹ The Aramaic roots for these words are סמך and סעד respectively, and mean to either give or obtain support, help, strength, and so on. Spurrell's Old Testament English translation (which is supposed to follow Boothroyd²) corresponds exactly with that of the Book of Mormon: “... [Every] stay and support: The entire staff of bread, And the entire stay of water.” I say supposed, because the Kennicott-Boothroyd manuscript I have does not include the suggested variants and matches the Masoretic Text (מס):

כי הנה האדון יהיה צבאות
מסיר מירושלם ומיהודה
משען ומשענה
כל משען לחם
וכל משען מים :

I am certainly anxious to find the authority Spurrell used for following the Targum (Ⲯ) and Book of Mormon. The Spanish RVA 1960 (but not other editions) also coincides more with the Book of Mormon and JST, than with the KJV: “... quita de Jerusalén y de Judá al sustentador y al fuerte, todo sustento de pan y todo socorro de agua” (doth take away from Jerusalem and from Judah, the sustainer and the strong, the whole support of bread, and the whole succor of water). ¶ Such drought and famine would be in an excruciatingly literal form, whose horrors are beyond description; as would it be a spiritual drought and famine, whose devastating effects are even more painful. The Lord would take away Jerusalem’s support in terms of food and shelter, military defense, and every semblance of dignity. Oh, how different this would be, than what was promised were Israel to keep the Law, and lean on her true stay and staff, even the Lord: “And ye shall serve the LORD your God, and he shall bless thy bread, and thy water; and I will take sickness away from the midst of thee” (Exodus 23:25). The extent of the physical hunger would lead men to revolting practices. Israel was warned in Rain in Due Season: “And when I have broken the staff of your bread, ten women shall bake your bread in one oven, and they shall deliver you your bread again by weight: and ye shall eat, and not be satisfied. And if ye will not for all this hearken unto me, but walk contrary unto me; Then I will walk contrary unto you also in fury; and I, even I, will chastise you seven times for your sins. And ye shall eat the flesh of your sons, and the flesh of your daughters shall ye eat” (Leviticus 26:26–29). Such would be the desperate hunger. “And thou shalt eat the fruit of thine own body, the flesh of thy sons and of thy daughters, which the LORD thy God hath given thee, in the siege, and in the straitness, wherewith thine enemies shall distress thee: So that the man that is tender among you, and very delicate, his eye shall be evil toward his brother, and toward the wife of his bosom, and toward the remnant of his children which he shall leave: So that he will not give to any of them of the flesh of his children whom he shall eat: because he hath nothing left him in the siege, and in the straitness, wherewith thine enemies shall distress thee in all thy gates. The tender and delicate woman among you, which would not adventure to set the sole of her foot upon the ground for delicateness and tenderness, her eye shall be evil toward the husband of her bosom, and toward her son, and toward her daughter, And toward her young one that cometh out from between her feet, and toward her children which she shall bear: for she shall eat them for want of all things secretly in the siege and straitness, wherewith thine enemy shall distress thee in thy gates” (Deuteronomy 28:53–57). The following is but one example of the fulfillment of the Rain in Due Season prophecies regarding famine: “And it came to pass after this, that Benhadad king of Syria gathered all his host, and went up, and besieged Samaria. And there was a great famine in Samaria: and, behold, they besieged it, until an ass’s head was sold for fourscore [pieces] of silver, and the fourth part of a cab of dove’s dung for five pieces of silver. And as the king of Israel was passing by upon the wall, there cried a woman unto him, saying, Help, my lord, O king. And he said, If the LORD do not help thee, whence shall I help thee? out of the barnfloor, or out of the winepress? And the king said unto her, What aileth thee? And she answered, This woman said unto me, Give thy son, that we may eat him to day, and we will eat my son tomorrow. So we boiled my son, and did eat him: and I said unto her on the next day, Give thy son, that we may eat him: and she hath hid her son. And it came to pass, when the king heard the words of the woman, that he rent his clothes; and he passed by upon the wall, and the people looked, and, behold, he had sackcloth within upon his flesh” (2 Kings 6:24–30).³ ¶ But this is not all, worse than physical support, the Lord would remove Himself from being Israel's spiritual sustenance. In the following verses one can sense the utter agony of being left alone, of having the Spirit depart: "Behold, the days come, saith the Lord GOD, that I will send a famine in the land, not a famine of bread, nor a thirst for water, but of hearing the words of the LORD: And they shall wander from sea to sea, and from the north even to the east, they shall run to and fro to seek the word of the LORD, and shall not find it" (Amos 8:11–12). I have felt the awful pain of the Lord's withdrawal of His spirit.⁴ ¶ Jerusalem and Judah would be left without the protecting arm of the Lord. One of the great messages of the Old Testament is that man should not lean on his own strength, nor the strength of kings, rulers, military or on the strength of Egypt (the nation of Egypt used as a representative or type of man-made strength—so also Assyria and Babylon). Instead, Judah would be made to acknowledge her true strength, Jehovah. ¶ During the time period when I was working on this passage of ISAIAH, I was meditating one morning while I was showering, on how much I loved prayer and the scriptures. "How could I begin to explain how important these things are in my life?" I asked myself. Then the sweet thought of the Spirit came to my mind, "They are your stay and your staff." A few days later I ⁴ In the 1980s, during one of my trips to Chile (during the time I worked for the University of California) I had a very touching and frightening spiritual experience. Even though I had received a confirmation of the truthfulness of the Book of Mormon earlier in my life, I was under the impression that perhaps I ought to ask again for a spiritual confirmation when finishing the book. In humility I asked for further confirmation beyond that which I had already received. I had had the companionship of the Spirit of the Holy Ghost for years at that point. When one is warm for a long time, one can forget what cold feels like. As I finished my prayer I felt the Spirit withdraw and I was left in the cold. The Spirit left me as quick as the flow of water from a hose is stopped when a faucet is quickly turned off. All I was left with was an intellectual testimony. I remembered knowing about the truthfulness of the gospel but no longer had that warmth in my bosom. Fear and despair came over me, but I did not say a word to anyone about it. The Spirit withdrew from me for 3 days and I almost died from spiritual emptiness. I came to understand that it was not required of me to ask again for a spiritual confirmation of the Book of Mormon. That I already had a perfect witness of the truthfulness of the Book of Mormon. After three days I pleaded with my Father in Heaven for a restoration of the Spirit. The Spirit entered back as warm rushing waters that filled me with warmth. I will not forget this painful experience. The Savior suffered for us indescribable pain: "Which suffering caused myself, even God, the greatest of all, to tremble because of pain, and to bleed at every pore, and to suffer both body and spirit" (D&C 19:18 (16–19) calls us to repentance with these words (v. 20, emphasis added): "Wherefore, I command you again to repent, lest I humble you with my almighty power; and that you confess your sins, lest you suffer these punishments of which I have spoken, of which in the smallest, yea, even in the least degree you have tasted at the time I withdrew my Spirit." I solemnly testify that the Holy Ghost may be manifested to us in great power to know that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God who redeemed us if we will repent; that the Book of Mormon is true; and that we have a living prophet today. (Adapted from my journal, At the time I withdrew my spirit (D&C 19:20).

¹ Stenning, The Targum of Isaiah. Interestingly, some of the Targum manuscripts do not show this difference, and thus the translations based on these texts are here similar to the Authorized Version. The main Aramaic text (not the critical apparatus) reproduced by Stenning (although I am unable to reproduce the superlinear points), has: “סמך וסעד כל סמך ימך לכל סעד משה”.

² Boothroyd, Benjamin. Biblia Hebraica, or, the Hebrew scriptures of the Old Testament : without points, after the text of Kennicott, with the chief various readings, selected from his collation of Hebrew mss., from that of De Rossi, and from the ancient versions: accompanied with English notes, critical, philological, and explanatory. There may be other Kennicott manuscripts that may include the Targum and Book of Mormon variation.

³ No less horrible was the famine experienced at the time when Jerusalem was besieged by the Romans. See, for instance, the account found in Josephus, Wars of the Jews, Book VI, Chapter 3:4).

read this from Lightfoot in Geike, "The idea of eating, as a metaphor for receiving spiritual benefit, was familiar to Christ's hearers, and was as readily understood as our expressions of 'devouring a book,' or 'drinking in' instruction. In ISAIAH 3:1, the words 'the whole stay of bread,' were explained by the Rabbis as referring to their own teaching (Chagiga), and they laid it down as a rule, that wherever, in Ecclesiastes, allusion was made to food or drink, it meant study of the law, and the practice of good works (Midrash, Kohleth). It was a saying among them — 'In the time of the Messiah the Israelites will be fed by Him' (Sanhedrim). Nothing was more common in the schools and synagogues than the phrases of eating and drinking, in a metaphorical sense. 'Messiah is not likely to come to Israel,' said Hillel, 'for they have already eaten Him' — that is, greedily, received His words (Horae Hebraicae et Talmudicae) — 'in the days of Hezekiah.' A current conventionalism in the synagogues was that the just would 'eat the Shechinah.'⁵ It was peculiar to the Jews to be taught in such metaphorical language. Their Rabbis never spoke in plain words, and it is expressly said that Jesus submitted to the popular taste, for 'without a parable spake he not unto them' (Mark 4:34).⁶ We also have examples of prophets being asked to eat the scriptures in a literal way: "And he said unto me, Son of man, cause thy belly to eat, and fill thy bowels with this roll that I give thee. Then did I eat it; and it was in my mouth as honey for sweetness" (Ezekiel 3:3); and "And I went unto the angel, and said unto him, Give me the little book. And he said unto me, Take it, and eat it up; and it shall make thy belly bitter, but it shall be in thy mouth sweet as honey. And I took the little book out of the angel's hand, and ate it up; and it was in my mouth sweet as honey: and as soon as I had eaten it, my belly was bitter" (Revelation 10:9–10). ¶ Of course, my true Stay and Staff is God the Eternal Father, His Son Jesus Christ, and the Holy Spirit.

2 The mighty man, and the man of war, the judge, and the prophet, and the prudent, and the ancient;

When used to describe man, these terms touch on his pride. "Thus saith the LORD, Let not the wise man glory in his wisdom, neither let the mighty man glory in his might, let not the rich man glory in his riches" (Jeremiah 9:23). And then these beautiful words of counsel are added in the next verse: "But let him that glorieth glory in this, that he understandeth and knoweth me, that I am the LORD which exercise lovingkindness, judgment, and righteousness, in the earth: for in these things I delight, saith the LORD” (Jeremiah 9:24). ¶ The mighty man. The man who is strong, by virtue of wealth, intellect, valor, physical strength, power, or any other admired trait. ¶ And the man of war. A military man, or man of physical prowess. ¶ The judge, and the prophet. Those who judge and guide the people in their temporal or spiritual affairs. The allusion is to the false prophet. ¶ And the prudent. Barnes, following Vitranga, suggests that the prudent referred to a false prophet to whom people went for advice, and that the word eventually took on the meaning of a wise person. The word is based on the Hebrew חָכָם, and refers to the wicked profession of witchcraft, often translated as diviner, soothsayer or augur. As we liken the scriptures to ourselves, we may add those who promote the philosophies of men. ¶ And the ancient. Those who have lived long and especially in the eastern cultures are looked up to for their wisdom. But none of these were delighting in Scripture.

⁵ Transliteration of the non-Biblical Hebrew word שְׂכִינָה, from the root שָׁכַן meaning, "to dwell" or "reside", and often used for the Divine Presence of the Lord (ISBE, Holman, Jastrow).

⁶ Geike, Cunningham. Life and Words of Christ. Revised Edition, Volume II, 1896, p. 184.

3 The captain of fifty, and the honourable[✓] man, and the counsellor, and the cunning artificer, and the eloquent orator.^{✓✓}

- ✓ a man eminent in countenance
- ✓ ✓ or, skilful of speech

The captain of fifty. Perhaps the most famous captains of fifty in the scriptures are the three who were sent by Ahaziah, king of Samaria, to capture Elijah. Elijah called upon them from heaven to consume the first two captains along with their fifty soldiers. While the first captain of fifty was probably overconfident, the last humbled himself, and entreated Elijah to follow him back to the king’s presence (2 Kings 1:1–16). A captain of fifty is a man accustomed to give orders and to be obeyed.⁷ ¶ And the honourable man. An honorable man would be any man of importance. Literally in Hebrew, וְנִשְׁוֹא פָּנָיו, “and the exalted of face” (LITV), and “elevated countenance” (Barnes). ¶ And the counsellor, and the cunning artificer, and the eloquent orator. In the scriptures, counselors⁸ often take on a very high role, often as secretaries of state. ¶ Artificer is a craftsman. A cunning artificer, then, is a skilled craftsman, such as a master in working metal: “... an instructor of every artificer in brass and iron” (Genesis 4:22b). An orator is a public speaker, and eloquent means, a person who speaks with power, in a convincing manner. The Hebrew word חֹזֵק means charmer, enchanter or magician. Barnes points out that this same word was used in ISAIAH 3:20 to represent an amulet. “It is applied to the charm of the serpent—the secret breathing or gentle noise by which the charm is supposed to be effected.” Kay, referring to the great orator, says: “Probably, the man who abused the power which his oratory gave him over men; and who, instead of instructing them, led them about at will, as if they were fascinated.” CES educators are often warned about being lifted up in pride based on skillful teaching ability. A person who is blessed with a strong and powerful testimony of Christ, and the ability to speak well, needs to be ever vigilant to build to the Lord and not unto himself. One of the Brethren warned that those in Church leadership, likewise, should never put themselves between the members and God. Each individual has the opportunity and obligation to go directly to the well of living water through prayer. Any time persons who have been given a gift forget the purpose of that gift, it could be said “Woe unto them that are wise in their own eyes, and prudent in their own sight!” (ISAIAH 5:21). It could then be said that such a person has crossed the line from a powerful testifier of Christ to a charmer and enchanter. When such a thing happens, the Spirit is grieved. Lowth points out that these verses (ISAIAH 3:2–3) would be fulfilled at the time King Nebuchadnezzar of Babylon took captive the mighty and strong of Judah, as recorded in 2 Kings 24:14.

⁷ Much like the centurion, then, who pleaded with Jesus to heal his servant, and that only a word from the Savior was necessary, rather than His presence. The centurion sent a message to Jesus rather than coming in person: “Wherefore neither thought I myself worthy to come unto thee: but say in a word, and my servant shall be healed. For I also am a man set under authority, having under me soldiers, and I say unto one, Go, and he goeth; and to another, Come, and he cometh; and to my servant, Do this, and he doeth it” (Luke 7:7–8).

⁸ One of the most interesting cases in Scripture regarding counselors was that of Hushai and Ahithophel as they counseled Absalom. The latter had usurped power from his father, David. King David asked his counselor, Hushai, to pretend to have changed his allegiance to Absalom. This stratagem saved David from almost certain death. Absalom’s own counselor, Ahithophel, gave David’s son very astute advice regarding the steps they ought to follow to capture King David. But at the end Absalom listened to Hushai, instead. “And Absalom and all the men of Israel said, The counsel of Hushai the Archite is better than the counsel of Ahithophel. For the LORD had appointed to defeat the good counsel of Ahithophel, to the intent that the LORD might bring evil upon Absalom” (2 Samuel 17:14). Ahithophel lost face and we read: “And when Ahithophel saw that his counsel was not followed, he saddled his ass, and arose, and gat him home to his house, to his city, and put his household in order, and hanged himself, and died, and was buried in the sepulchre of his father” (2 Samuel 17:23).

4 And I will give children unto them [to be] their princes, and babes shall rule over them.

Children would be left holding the monarchy in Judah. Kings, instead of being blessed with a long life, would be cut off leaving their children, even babes, as the next king. In some instances in the Bible, we hear the date when a person began to reign, but sometimes these dates involved co-regency with their father. Nevertheless, there were plenty of instances when a child came to the throne alone, after the death of the monarch. In Ecclesiastes we read, “Woe to thee, O land, when thy king is a child ...” (Ecclesiastes 10:16). The Hebrew for babes, תַּעֲלִילִים, has several meanings, including capricious, wanton (i.e., unrestrained), and childish.

5 And the people shall be oppressed, every one by another, and every one by his neighbour: the child shall behave himself proudly against the ancient, and the base against the honourable.

And the people shall be oppressed. What does oppression mean? The exploitation and taking advantage of another person. This includes the person who takes advantage of farm workers or the poor, to steal from them or to pay them a pittance. “Thou shalt not oppress an hired servant that is poor and needy, whether he be of thy brethren, or of thy strangers that are in thy land within thy gates” (Deuteronomy 24:14). My parents were always concerned for the poor and taught this to me. As a young man, at our farm in Chile, one of the farm workers told me that he appreciated the respect that I showed the workers, and that I had not demanded their daughters, to take them to myself. The implication was that there were men of power who would set their eyes upon the virgin daughters of the workers, to do with them as they wished, and then discard them after satiating their carnal desire. I do not want to give the idea that this practice was the norm among farm owners, but it must have happened, as it did among those who in the history of the world owned slaves. The people in Judah, even her poor, then, would suffer oppression. This oppression would not only come from foreign invaders, or from the mighty within the land, but from within. ¶ Every one by another, and every one by his neighbor. Such a state of oppression would be so terrible, that hardly anyone would escape. ¶ The child shall behave himself proudly against the ancient. Among many cultures, especially those that value community over individualism, there is much respect shown to the elderly. Man was commanded: “Honour thy father and thy mother: that thy days may be long upon the land which the LORD thy God giveth thee” (Exodus 20:12) and “Thou shalt rise up before the hoary head,⁹ and honour the face of the old man, and fear thy God: I am the LORD” (Leviticus 19:32). ¶ How about Abraham, who rebelled against his own father? I have heard it said, that the best way to honor your parents, is to honor the Lord. The Savior said, “He that loveth father or mother more than me is not worthy of me: and he that loveth son or daughter more than me is not worthy of me” (Matthew 10:37). ¶ And the base against the honorable. Barnes says: “All the forms of respect in life would be broken up; all the proper rules of deference between man and man would be violated. Neither dignity, age, nor honor would be respected.” It is not uncommon for people to use foul and degrading language without regard for who is present. This is one of many examples of this lack of respect.

6 When a man shall take hold of his brother of the house of his father, and [saying], shall say: Thou hast clothing, be thou our ruler, and [let] not this ruin [be] come under thy hand—

When a man shall take hold of his brother of the house of his father... be thou our ruler. Lowth suggests that perhaps the brother would have some primogeniture over the family in order to become its ruler (רֹאשׁ) or head (רֹאשׁ): “The case seems to require, that the man should apply to a person of some sort of rank and eminence; one that was the head of his father’s house” Ludlow suggests that this might be particularly true in those cases where the father had died and perhaps the oldest refused the responsibility of leadership. Henry has, “Whereas, commonly, men are not willing that their equals should be their superiors,” here they entreat a brother to do just that. ¶ Take hold. In terms of taking hold, Lowth translates, “Take by the garment,” and explains, “That is, shall entreat him in an humble and supplicating manner” as in Zechariah 8:23, “Thus saith the LORD of hosts; In those days it shall come to pass, that ten men shall take hold out of all languages of the nations, even shall take hold of the skirt of him that is a Jew, saying, We will go with you: for we have heard that God is with you.” ¶ And shall say: Thou hast clothing, be thou our ruler. The clothing, שְׂמֹלֶה, referred to here is a large outer mantle, sometimes used as a bed covering (BDB, Gesenius, AHCL, Holladay, TDOT). Perhaps it was very much like a Chilean manta, except a manta is often made out of sheep wool and is a heavy warm covering, which is worn like a poncho, with a slit through the center, and which also can play the role of a blanket for sleeping. Commentators debate as to whether this mantle was intended to be a sign of wealth, or rather, quite the opposite. Besides a garment or robe, in Modern Hebrew שְׂמֻלָּה is used for a dress.

⁹ Gray or white haired.

¶ And let not this ruin come under thy hand. This statement seems to indicate that by taking leadership in this harsh and extreme environment, the brother may be able to help the family save face and honor—and avert the impending ruin. Wade suggests: “The man importuned to assume authority and put an end to anarchy is one who in the collapse of the social order has retained some portion of his patrimony.” Except for localized situations, the world has not yet seen such a total collapse at this date. Gladly, the Lord has promised regarding that period of turmoil: “And except those days should be shortened, there should none of their flesh be saved; but for the elect’s sake, according to the covenant, those days shall be shortened” (Joseph Smith—Matthew 1:20).

7 In that day shall he swear, [✓] saying: I will not be an healer; [✓] for in my house there [is] neither bread nor clothing: make me not a ruler of the people.

- ✓ lift up the hand
- ✓ ✓ binder up

Despite the desperate pleadings that he take on the leadership of the larger family circle, the man so approached utterly refuses, on the ground that he did not have enough to even feed or clothe his immediate family. ¶ יֵשָׁא בַיּוֹם הַהוּא לְאֹמֶר In that day shall he swear, saying. The expression בַּיּוֹם “in that day” has reference to future events. The Hebrew text (א) has the words יֵשָׁא lift up, and the margin || provides the ellipsis, lift up the hand. SOT follows the margin ||, “Then he shall raise his hand in that day &c.” Darby likewise renders it: “He will lift up his hand in that day, saying.” ¶ Matthew Henry explains: “He shall swear (shall lift up the hand, the ancient ceremony used in taking an oath).” A couple of examples of oath taking include: “put not thine hand with the wicked to be an unrighteous witness” (Exodus 23:1b), “And Abram said to the king of Sodom, I have lift up mine hand unto the LORD, the most high God, the possessor of heaven and earth” (Exodus 14:22). To swear means to utter an oath. In ancient days an oath was of such great power, that a man would not think of breaking it. Such was the case, for instance, between Nephi and Zoram, Laban’s servant. “And it came to pass that I spake with him,”

Nephi explained, “that if he would hearken unto my words, as the Lord liveth, and as I live, even so that if he would hearken unto our words, we would spare his life. And I spake unto him, even with an oath, that he need not fear; that he should be a free man like unto us if he would go down in the wilderness with us” (1 Nephi 4:31–32, emphasis added). Zoram, as a result, believed he would indeed be safe. “And it came to pass that when Zoram had made an oath unto us, our fears did cease concerning him” (1 Nephi 4:37). Zoram had multiple occasions to escape, but did not, because of this oath. ¶ Some people have the habit of accompanying their statements with the emphasis of a swearing—often false swearing or an expletive. This is especially true when a person is moved by fear, as the context of this verse makes clear. Such false swearing was quite common in ancient times, and also in the present day. Certainly it was very prevalent among the youth of Chile when I grew up (I can still hear the echoes, jte lo juro! or I swear it!). Probably the more resolute the swearing, the likelier that what was being said was false. Jeremiah asked, “Will ye steal, murder, and commit adultery, and swear falsely, and burn incense unto Baal, and walk after other gods whom ye know not” (Jeremiah 7:9). Perhaps this is one of the reasons why the Savior taught: “Again, ye have heard that it hath been said by them of old time, Thou shalt not forswear thyself, but shalt perform unto the Lord thine oaths: But I say unto you, Swear not at all; neither by heaven; for it is God’s throne: Nor by the earth; for it is his footstool: neither by Jerusalem; for it is the city of the great King. Neither shalt thou swear by thy head, because thou canst not make one hair white or black. But let your communication be, Yea, yea; Nay, nay: for whatsoever is more than these cometh of evil” (Matthew 5:3–37). ¶ I will not be a healer. In contrast to such refusal to serve, the Savior offered Himself to be our healer. “And the Lord said: Whom shall I send? And one answered like unto the Son of Man: Here am I, send me” (Abraham 3:27). See notes on ISAIAH 6:8. ¶ For in my house there is neither bread nor clothing. Make me not a ruler of the people. Such a brother being asked to be a leader explained that he could not solve the family’s problems, for he was not any better off, in terms of food and raiment, than those who wished him to take charge. The rich in the East were expected to have food and raiment to give as gifts to their guests. Lowth explains: “This explains the meaning of the excuse made by him that is desired to undertake the government: he alleges, that he has not wherewithal to support the dignity of the station, by such acts of liberality and hospitality as the law of custom required of persons of superior rank.”

8 For Jerusalem is ruined, and Judah is fallen, because their tongues and their doings ~~are~~ have been against the LORD, to provoke the eyes of his glory.

For Jerusalem is ruined, and Judah is fallen. Jerusalem, as the capital of Judah would be destroyed. At that time when this prophesy was uttered, such a comment seemed like pure blasphemy. The people of Jerusalem believed that the Lord would protect Jerusalem and her Temple, and that she would never fall. People today would just as likely ridicule Elder Wilford Woodruff's prophecy—which was endorsed by President Brigham Young—that in a future day people would look back and say: "New York was destroyed by an earthquake ... Boston was swept into the sea ... [and] Albany was destroyed by fire" (in Lundwall, Temples of the Most High, pp. 97–98).¹⁰ ¶ Because their tongues and their doings have been against the LORD. It was because the people of Judah and Jerusalem had set their words and their deeds against the Lord that punishment would befall them. They had forgotten the advice of the Psalmist, "Keep thy tongue from evil, and thy lips from speaking guile. Depart from evil, and do good; seek peace, and pursue it." (Psalms 34:13–14). ¶ To provoke the eyes¹¹ of his glory. The Lord sees all, and nothing is kept from Him. The eyes of His glory have been provoked by man's wicked behavior.

vv. 9–15. Men's countenances stand as a witness that they have lost the spirit and have given themselves to doing evil. The consequences of such behaviors will follow. Those who rule over the people will lead them astray. They have been the first to abuse the poor. Nevertheless, it shall be well to the righteous, and the Lord will stand up to plead the cause of the upright.

9 ¶ The shew of their countenance doth witness against them; and they doth declare their sin to be even as Sodom, and they cannot hide [it] ñet. Woe unto their souls! for they have rewarded evil unto themselves.

¹⁰ Section 84: The Oath and Covenant of the Priesthood. Doctrine and Covenants Student Manual, (2002), 180–185.

¹¹ A great number of commentators have attempted to explain away that the Lord could have eyes, a physical trait, to go along with their beliefs regarding God's incorporeality. Delitzsch, for instance, goes on to say that the Hebrew does not support such a vague notion of the eyes being just an abstract quality, and goes on to compare it with the statement, "the arm of glory." After having so argued, however, Delitzsch rejects the anthropomorphism by stating that it is man who is limited to thinking of God in such anthropomorphic terms. See ISAIAH 6:1.

The shew of their countenance doth witness against them. Some people seem to glow with the light of Christ that is within them. At the May 2000, Stockton, California, regional priesthood leadership conference President Faust spoke about the Jerusalem Center and about the agreement not to proselyte in Israel. Someone commented, something to the effect that they believed the Church would keep its word on this matter, "But what will you do about the light in the eyes of your young people!"¹² President David O. McKay said: "Every person radiates what he or she really is ... it is what we are and what we radiate that affects the people around us."¹³ President McKay spoke often of this subject: "If we think noble thoughts, if we encourage and cherish noble aspirations, there will be that radiation when we meet people, especially when we associate with them. Every man, every person radiates what he or she is. Every person is a recipient of radiation. The Savior was conscious of this fact. Whenever he came into the presence of an individual, he sensed that radiation. ... Christ was ever conscious of the radiation from the individual, and, to a degree, so are you, and so am I. It is what we are and what we radiate that affects the people around us."¹⁴ Elder Bruce R. McConkie, speaking along the same lines explained: "In a real though figurative sense, the book of life is the record of the acts of men as such record is written in their own bodies. It is the record engraven on the very bones, sinews, and flesh of the mortal body. That is, every thought, word and deed has an effect on the human body; all these leave their marks, marks which can be read by Him who is Eternal as easily as the words in a book can be read. By obedience to telestial law men obtain telestial bodies; terrestrial law leads to terrestrial bodies; and conformity to celestial law—because this law includes the sanctifying power of the Holy Ghost—results in the creation of a body which is clean, pure, and spotless, a celestial body. When the book of life is opened in the day of judgment, men's bodies will show what law they have lived. The Great Judge will then read the record of the book of their lives; the account of their obedience or disobedience will be written in their bodies. Literally, it is the record kept in heaven of the names and righteous deeds of the faithful.”¹⁵ Alma asked people to consider their level of conversion: “Have ye received his image in your countenances?” (Alma 5:14b) ¶ In this Isaianic verse we are not speaking about the countenance of righteousness, but that of sin. “Two weeks ago our stake president attended a training session with President Packer,” explains President Reed Hopper, a friend who shared some pertinent thoughts on this topic. “President Packer said he could tell more about the saints by looking at faces during a meeting than by all the reports he could ever read. By way of example he mentioned he was visiting a stake once when he noticed a man enter the chapel. President Packer said he asked the stake president if he knew the man. The stake president said he didn’t but President Packer suggested he get to know this man because he could tell from his countenance there was ‘something wrong.’ President Packer was informed by the stake president sometime later that he learned the man was involved in serious transgression.” My friend Reed Hopper also shared some experiences he has had. “When I served as bishop, I could often see a darkness around the faces of those who were drifting in the Church or who were having deep spiritual problems. But, on the positive side of this principle, my daughter (Anna Hopper) said she spoke with a silver smith on her mission who told her that he could always tell when the silver he worked with was refined because he could see his image in it. The purer the silver, the clearer the image. This is how the Lord knows when we have been purified; when he sees his image in our countenances.”¹⁶ ¶ And doth declare their sin to be even as Sodom. “... the men of Sodom were wicked and sinners before the LORD exceedingly” (Genesis 13:3), whose “sin is very grievous” (Genesis 18:20b). Elder Neal A. Maxwell wrote: “In the societies of Sodom and Gomorrah there was rampant sexual immorality; there was also inordinate pride, idleness, and a neglect of the poor and the needy (Ezekiel 16:48–50).”¹⁷ A haughty attitude towards God (who had given strict counsel on the need to care for the poor) led to the neglect of the poor and needy.”¹⁸ President Harold B. Lee taught: “I want to warn this great body of priesthood against that great sin of Sodom and Gomorrah ... I speak of the sin of adultery, which, as you know, was the name used by the Master as He referred to unlicensed sexual sins of fornication as well as adultery; and besides this, the equally grievous sin of homosexuality, which seems to be gaining momentum with social acceptance in the Babylon of the world, of which Church members must not be a part.”¹⁹ President Hopper also noted: “Comparing wicked Jerusalem to wicked Sodom is a helpful metaphor because it reinforces the message that sin is to have an ‘unnatural affection’ for the things of the world as opposed to the things of God ... the ultimate point is that the sins of Jerusalem are as pervasive as Sodom and therefore Jerusalem, like Sodom, would reap destruction. When grievous sin becomes socially acceptable, even institutional, there is no escaping the Judgment of God.”²⁰ This same sort of thing took place in Book of Mormon times: “But behold, this people had rejected every word of God, and they were ripe in iniquity; and the fulness of the wrath of God was upon them” (1 Nephi 17:35, also see ISAIAH 6:12–13, in terms of consequences to be suffered by Israel). ¶ And they cannot hide it. As mentioned, our countenances show who we are, and we cannot hide it. Some decide to openly flaunt their defiance towards God. ¶ Woe unto their souls! for they have rewarded evil unto themselves. In Galatians 6:8 we read the law of the harvest: “For he that soweth to his flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption; but he that soweth to the Spirit shall of the Spirit reap life everlasting.”

¹² Also see, "The Light in Their Eyes," President James E. Faust, Second Counselor in the First Presidency, October 2005 General Conference.

¹³ David O. McKay, Man May Know for Himself, p. 108, in OT Student Manual, p. 140.

¹⁴ President David O. McKay, General Conference Reports, 1 April 1969.

10 Say ye unto the righteous, that [it shall be] is well [with him] them; for they shall eat the fruit of their doings.

Say unto the righteous. Any righteousness comes through the Branch of Righteousness (Jeremiah 33:15), even the Holy One of Israel, “If ye know that he is righteous, ye know that every one that doeth righteousness is born of him” (1 John 2:29). ¶ That it is well with them. Anyone who has tasted of the fruit of the tree of life and who has been filled with exceedingly great joy, understands that the blessings to be tasted by the righteous person who endures to the end, will be exceedingly desirable. “The hope of the righteous shall be gladness: but the expectation of the wicked shall perish. The righteous shall never be removed: but the wicked shall not inhabit the earth.” (Proverbs 10:28, 30). Furthermore, “Then they that feared the LORD spake often one to another: and the LORD hearkened, and heard it, and a book of remembrance was written ¹⁵ Mormon Doctrine, p. 97.

¹⁶ President Reed Hopper was serving as a counselor in the Davis, California Stake at the time of this personal communication, which took place in November 2000. After I joined the Church Brother Hopper was a pillar for me and I will always be indebted to him.

¹⁷ “As I live, saith the Lord GOD, Sodom thy sister hath not done, she nor her daughters, as thou hast done, thou and thy daughters. Behold, this was the iniquity of thy sister Sodom, pride, fulness of bread, and abundance of idleness was in her and in her daughters, neither did she strengthen the hand of the poor and needy. And they were haughty, and committed abomination before me: therefore I took them away as I saw good” (Ezekiel 16:48–50).

¹⁸ Sermons Not Spoken, p. 37, in Maxwell, Cory H., ed. The Neal A. Maxwell Quote Book. Salt Lake City, Utah: Bookcraft, 1997.

¹⁹ Lee, Harold B. The Teachings of Harold B. Lee. Edited by Clyde J. Williams. Salt Lake City, Utah: Bookcraft, 1996, p. 233.

²⁰ Reed Hopper, personal communication, November 2000.

before him for them that feared the LORD, and that thought upon his name. And they shall be mine, saith the LORD of hosts, in that day when I make up my jewels; and I will spare them, as a man spareth his own son that serveth him. Then shall ye return, and discern between the righteous and the wicked, between him that serveth God and him that serveth him not" (Malachi 3:16–18). ¶ For they shall eat the fruit of their doings. Once again, an allusion to the law of the harvest. "He that is unjust, let him be unjust still: and he which is filthy, let him be filthy still: and he that is righteous, let him be righteous still: and he that is holy, let him be holy still" (Revelations 22:11, also see Alma 41). Nevertheless, at that day none will be able to be made clean on his or her own merits, but only through Christ Jesus. "Now this I say, brethren, that flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God; neither doth corruption inherit incorruption. Behold, I shew you a mystery; We shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed, In a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump: for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed. For this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality. So when this corruptible shall have put on incorruption, and this mortal shall have put on immortality, then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, Death is swallowed up in victory. O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory?" (1 Corinthians 15:50–55).

11 Woe unto the wicked! ~~[it shall be]~~ ~~ill~~ ~~[with him]~~ for they shall perish; for the reward of his ~~their~~ hands shall be given [✓] ~~him~~ upon them.

✓ done to

Woe unto the wicked! for they shall perish. At the second coming the wicked shall melt as fat or wax melts before a consuming fire: "But the wicked shall perish, and the enemies of the LORD shall be as the fat of lambs: they shall consume; into smoke shall they consume away" (Psalms 37:20), and "... as wax melteth before the fire, so let the wicked perish at the presence of God" (Psalms 68:2b). ¶ For the reward of their hands shall be upon them. This is similar to "Behold, it is written before me: I will not keep silence, but will recompense, even recompense into their bosom" (ISAIAH 65:6, see comments there, also). This is parallel to that of the law of the harvest in ISAIAH 3:10, "for they shall eat the fruit of their doings." Moses said, "For I know that after my death ye will utterly corrupt yourselves, and turn aside from the way which I have commanded you; and evil will befall you in the latter days; because ye will do evil in the sight of the LORD, to provoke him to anger through the work of your hands" (Deuteronomy 31:29).

12 And ~~[as for]~~ my people, children ~~[are]~~ their oppressors, and women rule over them. O my people, they ~~which~~ ~~who~~ lead [✓] thee cause ~~[thee]~~ to err and destroy [✓] the way of thy paths.

✓ or, call thee blessed

✓ ✓ swallow up

And as for my people, children are their oppressors.

Part of the poetic form includes emphasis by repetition. As mentioned in verse 4, children would reign over Judah. A great number of commentators feel that the youth spoken about in this verse may also deal with a childish personality, besides that of young age. President Hopper opines, "The term 'children' seems to me to be a metaphor for the weak of this world. It shows the utter abasement of Israel that they would be conquered and enslaved (that is oppressed) by such. To be ruled by women suggests to my mind that Israel would become subject to those who have no right of authority over the Lord's people. Because they have broken the Lord's covenants, the Lord will say amen to Israel's priesthood and set others as rulers over the people. 'Women,' or those without divine investiture, will rule because the men of God have abdicated their role, much like the brother in ISAIAH 3:7 who refuses to lead because he has no bread or clothes to satisfy his office as head of his clan. Taken as a whole, the verse seems to paint a picture of a world turned upside down. Israel would be dominated by the weak rather than the strong; Israel would be ruled by usurpers rather than those appointed of God; and, Israel's leaders would take the people down forbidden paths rather than guide them in the way of the Lord."²¹ ¶ And women rule over them. Some exegetes (e.g., Cheyne, Barnes) suggest that Judah's rulers would be powerless or effeminate in their leadership. An example of a wicked woman ruling over Judah was that of Athaliah, who was a follower of Baal. Perhaps, Isaiah was speaking of the family unit, parallel with ISAIAH 3:6. In this case, women rule over them because men will no longer be the head of households by either death (vv. 24–25, 27) or the disintegration of the family. Certainly we are living at a time when there are a unprecedented number of women who are single heads of the home. We know that children are most blessed when they live in a home with the benefit of both a loving father and mother. Alternative translations of this passage retain the word women in both the Syriac (S) "The princes shall pluck my people out, and women shall rule over them” and Vulgate (V). “populum meum exactores sui spoliaverunt et mulieres dominatae...” (or, its English translation, as found in the Douay, “As for my people, their oppressors have stripped them, and women have ruled over them.”). The LXX (6) and the Targum (T) have the word usurer (or extortioner, creditor) for the word woman.²² “O my people, your exactors strip you, and extortioners rule over you” (6); and “As for my people, their oppressors plunder them, as those who glean the vineyard; and as usurers they rule over them” (T). Such a translation might represent an allusion to the foreign rule that would soon be established. Usurers or money lenders, as well as tax collectors or publicans as they were often called in the New Testament, were not looked upon kindly by the general population. To have these rule over the people would be considered a great punishment. Nothing said here should give the impression that women are less capable than men. The Brethren have counseled local leaders to give great weight, and seek out, the opinions of women in Church counsels.²³ ¶ O my people. As we saw in ISAIAH 1:3, עַמִּי, or my people, is a frequent and tender call or lamentation used by the Lord in the prophets to refer to his covenant relationship with Israel as well as a reminder of the Abrahamic covenant we discussed in Rain in Due Season. ¶ They who lead thee cause thee to err and destroy the way of thy paths. When a path is destroyed, then people do not know the way anymore, and can more easily be deceived. The Lord lamented as he could see the people walking down the wrong path, as in the vision seen by Lehi and Nephi. What was worse, those who should have known better were their leaders in doing that which was wrong in the sight of God. One of the themes of the Old Testament is to show the importance of following the living prophets who will tell us what we need to know rather than what we want to hear. The LXX (6) translates this portion of the verse as “O my people, they that pronounce you blessed lead you astray, and pervert the path of your feet.” The KJV margin ¶ agrees with the 6, and renders the passage, “O my people, they which call thee blessed” (emphasis added). In other words, the false prophets spoke well about those who hired them. A notable example is that of Ahab, King of Israel, who asked for the support of Jehoshaphat, King of Judah, in order to go out to battle against Syria. All the false prophets spoke in Ahab’s favor, and provided false blessings upon his head. Jehoshaphat asked if Ahab had inquired of the Lord. Ahab answered, “There is yet one man, Micaiah the son of Imlah, by whom we may enquire of the LORD: but I hate him; for he doth not prophesy good concerning me, but evil” (1 Kings 22:6). Ahab ended up consulting Micaiah, but did not heed his counsel, to the cost of his own life (1 Kings 22:1–40).

²¹ Reed Hopper, personal communication, November 2000.

²² Stenning, on page xvii, provides a table contrasting some words presupposed by the Targum (T) in contrast to the Masoretic text (M). This table shows some differences in consonants between M and T, so it is presupposed that the present T reading הַבָּאֵהָ was based on נִשְׂאִים or נִשְׂאִים (and creditors—based on נִשְׂךָ to lend with usury, Gesenius, DBD, HAL, Jastrow) differently pointed than the מַלְאִים, נִשְׂאִים (and women).

²³ See for instance, Elder M. Russell Ballard, Counseling with our Councils: Learning to Minister Together in the Church and in the Family. Deseret Book, 1997.

13 The LORD standeth up to plead, and standeth to judge the people.

The LORD standeth up to plead. We have been transported to a court room. There is a great flow of power in this verse, as we picture our Savior who has been sitting, now walking up to the bar. What will the Lord plead? Is the Savior ready to accuse or to defend? Numerous modern translations tend to the former interpretation, and read closely to the NJB, “Yahweh has risen to accuse, is standing to pass judgment on the people.” Others tend closer to the KJV: “Yahweh has taken his station to plead” (EB), and “The Lord stands up to plead a cause, He rises to champion peoples” (Tanakh). Leeser renders it: “The Lord is stepped forth to plead, and standeth up to judge the people.” The Master prayed on behalf of His disciples: “Father, behold the sufferings and death of him who did no sin, in whom thou wast well pleased; behold the blood of thy Son which was shed, the blood of him whom thou gavest that thyself might be glorified: Wherefore, Father, spare my brethren that believe on my name, that they may come unto me and have everlasting life” (D&C 45:4–5). Also see notes on ISAIAH 1:18. ¶ And standeth to judge the people. In the LXX (6), his people. “But now the Lord will stand up for judgment, and will enter into judgment with his people.” The Keeper of the Gate, our Savior, will be our judge. See notes on ISAIAH 2:4. In the Psalms we hear, “O let the nations be glad and sing for joy: for thou shalt judge the people righteously, and govern the nations upon earth. Selah”²⁴ (Psalms 67:4). In Alma we read: “And it is requisite with the justice of God that men should be judged according to their works; and if their works were good in this life, and the desires of their hearts were good, that they should also, at the last day, be restored unto that which is good. And if their works are evil they shall be restored unto them for evil” (Alma 41:3–4a).

²⁴ Selah or סֶלָה, used frequently in the Psalms, may be a musical direction, perhaps calling for a pause or the raising of the voice. (AHCL)

14 The LORD will enter into judgment with the ancients of his people, and the princes thereof; for ye have eaten[✓] up the vineyard; and the spoil of the poor [is] in your houses.

✓ or, burnt

The LORD will enter into judgment with the ancients of his people, and the princes thereof. The Syriac (S), Targum (T) and LXX (G) use elders for ancients. In the early history of Israel, elders were the rulers and spiritual leaders of their clans and tribes (Holman). After Yahweh appeared to Moses, he was commanded to go to the elders and share these things with them, “Go, and gather the elders of Israel together, and say unto them, The LORD God of your fathers, the God of Abraham, of Isaac, and of Jacob, appeared unto me, saying, ...” (Exodus 3:16). The Lord will make accountable both the spiritual teachers (Ezekiel 34) as well as the political rulers. ¶ For ye have eaten up the vineyard. Delitzsch suggests that the vineyard is a representation of the people (see also ISAIAH 5:1 ff.). Rabbi Ibn Ezra thinks it an allusion to Israel or the people of the Lord. Ibn Ezra also suggests we look at Exodus 22:5, where we see the consequences required for destroying another man’s vineyard through neglect (in this case, having animals graze in the vineyard): “If a man shall cause a field or vineyard to be eaten, and shall put in his beast, and shall feed in another man’s field; of the best of his own field, and of the best of his own vineyard, shall he make restitution.” These words are of special interest when we consider the Targum (T) and LXX (G), both of which still have the Lord speaking. The G has “my vineyard” (ἀμπελῶνά μου). Instead of a vineyard, the T²⁵ has: “You have robbed my people (emphasis added, מִבְּנֵי).” Gill suggests that His people and his vineyard are synonymous. The LXX (G) and Syriac (S) imply a burning the vineyard, instead of the “eaten up” of the KJV, or devoured or ravaged often used in other translations of the Masoretic text (M). In the Law, the Lord made it perfectly clear that part of the crop should be left in the field un-harvested for the poor to eat: “And thou shalt not glean thy vineyard, neither shalt thou gather every grape of thy vineyard; thou shalt leave them for the poor and stranger: I am the LORD your God” (Leviticus 19:10). This commandment was repeated with no less strength in Deuteronomy: “When thou gatherest the grapes of thy vineyard, thou shalt not glean it afterward: it shall be for the stranger, for the fatherless, and for the widow” (Deuteronomy 24:21). This verse seems to say that the greed of the grape growers was such that they had left nothing behind for the poor, the stranger, the widow or the fatherless to eat. ¶ And the spoil of the poor is in your houses. Hardly a greater accusatory evidence can be found against a thief, than to find those things that have been stolen in his home. Such was the accusation against the well-off; the spoil of the poor was to be found in their homes. Yet another way to look at this clause is that it is upon the sweat and exploitation of the poor that many of the rich have constructed their beautiful mansions and vineyards.

²⁵ Here, T, Chilton translation. Also see CAL, Gill and Stenning.

15 What mean ye? ~~[that]~~ Ye beat my people to pieces, and grind the faces of the poor², saith the Lord GOD of hosts.

What mean ye? Perhaps, “What do you think you are doing?” Tanakh translates as “How dare you” ¶ Ye beat my people to pieces. Several translations (NRSV, REB, NAB, NJB, Tanakh, EB, Green) use “crush.” The word crush also reminds us of the grape harvest. ¶ And grind the faces of the poor, saith the Lord GOD of hosts. To grind the faces of the poor, or exploiting them through oppressive work. The Syriac (S) and LXX (G) use to “shame the face(s) of the poor.” This implies depriving the poor of dignity and respect. The face is where many of our emotions of joy, satisfaction, affection, embarrassment, shame, and so on are manifested. The word face can be used in psychological terms related to saving and giving face. We engage in saving face activities when we act in such a way that we promote a positive self-image of ourselves to others, particularly after we have done something that may make us look foolish in the sight of others. People are often careful to protect their guests from embarrassment.²⁶ In societies where there are very pronounced class differences, there are often servants and others whose faces are trampled on continually, as if they had no feelings whatsoever. In a study of farm worker feelings (1999) I found that workers highly valued being treated with dignity and respect by their supervisors and farm employers.²⁷ ¶ President Harold B. Lee taught that the purpose of the Church welfare system is to “lift [the poor] to a point of independence,” lest the Church be accused in the welfare program of “grinding down the faces of the poor.”²⁸ I suspect that President Lee was concerned that the welfare system help the poor retain a sense of dignity and independence. Regarding the expression, grinding the faces (פָּיַף) of the poor, Barnes has, “This is an expression also denoting great oppression. It is taken from the act of grinding a substance on a stone until it is worn away and nothing is left. So, by their cruel exactions, by their injustice to the poor, they exhausted their little property until nothing was left. The word faces here is synonymous with persons—or with the poor themselves.”

²⁶ Billikopf, Gregorio, Party-Directed Mediation: Facilitating Dialogue Between Individuals, University of California, 3rd Edition, 2014.

²⁷ Billikopf, Gregorio, Agricultural Labor Management: Cultivating Personnel Productivity, University of California, 3rd Edition, 2014.

²⁸ Lee, Harold B. The Teachings of Harold B. Lee. Edited by Clyde J. Williams. Salt Lake City, Utah: Bookcraft, 1996. p. 315.

vv. 16–27. The pride of the women shall be turned to shame, as they also are guilty.

16 ¶ Moreover the LORD saith, Because the daughters of Zion are haughty, and walk with stretched-forth necks and wanton eyes, [✓]walking and mincing [✓] [as] they go, and making a tinkling with their feet—

- ✓ deceiving with their eyes
- ✓ ✓ tripping nicely

Moreover the LORD saith, Because the daughters of Zion are haughty. Daughter of Zion is another name for Jerusalem. ISAIAH begins speaking about the female inhabitants of Zion, yet in ISAIAH 3:26, the allusion to Jerusalem is evident. Haughty is another word for puffed up, conceited, vain, arrogant, lifted up in pride. The women of Zion, who ought to have been a model of piety and modesty, have given themselves to the things of the world. Many commentaries speak about what these attires may have consisted off, but much of it is conjecture. Even without understanding the exact nature of the items, the general idea is all too clear. ¶ And walk with stretched-forth necks and wanton eyes. These first two items refer to body language. Pride or haughtiness is most often shown by the way the head is held high through the unnatural extension of the neck, as well as by an affectation of the eyes as a result of such high head carriage. Such a look gives others the non-validating message, “You do not exist.” ¶ Walking and mincing as they go. Webster defines mincing as “affectedly dainty or delicate.” Perhaps a seductive sort of walk is intended. A number of commentators have suggested that the steps are short because there is a chain connecting both legs, and thus the length of the stride is so limited mechanically. ¶ And making a tinkling with their feet. Perhaps an ankle bracelet with little bells or pieces of metal that make sounds as the women walk. The Targum (ⲧ) translates this last thought quite differently, “with their hair rolled up, and with their feet they excite lust.” The LXX (Ⲭ) talks about them “drawing their garments in trains, and at the same time sporting with their feet.” Perhaps it speaks of wearing their clothing shorter so their legs were exposed to view and provoking desire. The Syriac (Ⲥ) offers, “Making a tinkling with their feet, and thus provoking the Lord.” Delitzsch explains that Moslem women in modern times also used such fashions as the “coquettish tinklings, although they are forbidden by the Koran.”

17 Therefore the Lord will smite with a scab the crown of the head of the daughters of Zion, and the LORD will discover [✓] their secret parts.

- ✓ make naked

Therefore the Lord will smite with a scab the crown of the head of the daughters of Zion. If the punishment was directly related to the previous verse, which may or not be the case, then the Targum’s (ⲧ) reference to how the women wore their hair may be in line. A woman’s hair is something of beauty, certainly, and the Lord would strike at the very center of such beauty. One translator suggests that the scab is formed as a result of leprosy, “Therefore will my Lord smite with leprosy the crown of hair of the daughters of Zion” (EB). Others suggest that these women will be afflicted with baldness: “the Lord will smite with baldness the women of Zion” (REB), “the Lord will give Zion’s daughters scabby heads, Yahweh will lay their foreheads bare” (NJB). ¶ And the LORD will discover their secret parts. Some versions continue with the previous theme, about exposing their baldness (e.g., NAS, NJB, NAB, REB, Douay). The EB talks about exposing the shame of the daughters of Zion. The NRSV is close to the KJV, “and the Lord will lay bare their secret parts.” The SOT, “And Jehovah will expose her destitute of raiment.” In Hosea we read: “Lest I strip her naked, and set her as in the day that she was born ...” (Hosea 2:3a). Lowth explains: “It was the barbarous custom of the conquerors of those time to strip their captives naked, and to make them travel in that condition, exposed to the inclemency of the weather; and, the worst of all, to the intolerable heat of the sun. But this to the women was the height of cruelty and indignity; and especially to such as these here described, who had indulged themselves in all manner of delicacies of living, and all the superfluities of ornamental dress; and even whose faces had hardly ever been exposed to the sight of man. This is always mentioned as the hardest part of lot of captives. Nahum, denouncing the fate of Nineveh, paints it in very strong colours.²⁹” So, these women who were puffed up in pride would be brought down to shame. The world's view is well represented by two rules given as guides to employment arbitrators: (1) on the one hand the employer has a right to set dress standards that will "keep employees from being distracted by outlandish and overly revealing attire," but, on the other hand; (2) such standards "must be reasonably attuned to contemporary mores and attitudes toward dress and grooming. As styles change, the standard may have to change."³⁰ Parents can do much to teach their children the Lord's way, and expect appropriate dress from them despite changing mores. An excellent guide is the pamphlet, For the Strength of Youth.

²⁹ “Behold, I am against thee, saith the LORD of hosts; and I will discover thy skirts upon thy face, and I will shew the nations thy

18 In that day the Lord will take away the bravery of [their] tinkling ornaments, [about their feet], and [their] cauls, ✓ and [their] round tires like the moon;

✓ or, net-works

In that day the Lord will take away. In a day that will come, in the future, the Lord will remove ... ¶ The bravery. The bravery spoken here is not that of courage, but rather, of fine clothing or showy display (Webster). The word is sometimes translated into English as finery, beauty, brilliancy and glory. In a sense, the word bravery, as we know it today, is correct, in that it also means bold or shameless. ¶ Of their tinkling ornaments, and cauls, and round tires like the moon. See notes under vv. 19–23, below.

18b ... and [their] cauls, and [their] round tires like the moon;
19 The chains ✓ and the bracelets, and the mufflers; ✓

✓ or, sweet balls

✓ ✓ or, spangled ornaments

20 The bonnets, and the ornaments of the legs, and the headbands, and the tablets, ✓ and the ear-rings;

✓ houses of the soul

21 The rings, and nose jewels;
22 The changeable suits of apparel, and the mantles, and the wimples, and the crisping-pins;

nakedness, and the kingdoms thy shame. And I will cast abominable filth upon thee, and make thee vile, and will set thee as a gazingstock" (Nahum 3:5–6).

³⁰ Grievance Guide (10th Edition), BNA Editorial Staff, The Bureau of National Affairs, Inc., Washington D.C., p. 71. These suggestions can be found in earlier editions of this manual.

23 The glasses, and the fine linen, and the hoods, and the vails.

The Tanakh includes a footnote of interest: "Many of the articles named in vv. 18–24 cannot be identified with certainty." Nevertheless, just to give an idea of how they are translated, I will include the ASV translation as well as the LXX (5): "18b ...and the cauls, and the crescents; 19 the pendants, and the bracelets, and the mufflers; 20 the headtires, and the ankle chains, and the sashes, and the perfume-boxes, and the amulets; 21 the rings, and the nose-jewels; 22 the festival robes, and the mantles, and the shawls, and the satchels; 23 the hand-mirrors, and the fine linen, and the turbans, and the veils" (ASV). "18b ... the curls and the fringes, and the crescents, 19 and the chains, and the ornaments of their faces, 20 and the array of glorious ornaments, and the armlets, and the bracelets, and the wreathed work, and the finger-rings, and the ornaments for the right hand, 21 and the ear-rings, and the garments with scarlet borders, and the garments with purple grounds, and the shawls to be worn in the house, and the Spartan transparent dresses, and those made of fine linen, and the purple ones, and the scarlet ones, and the fine linen interwoven with gold and purple, and the light coverings for couches" (after v. 21, text does not mark paragraphs 22 and 23, LXX, 5). It is interesting to see how fashions go in and out. While in the 1990s one could see women beginning to wear nose rings, Rawlinson explains: "Actual nose rings are not represented in any of the ancient remains; and the use of them seems to be confined to very barbarous communities. Probably the 'nose jewels' here mentioned were ornaments depending from the forehead and touching the upper part of the nose." Lowth says, "But it appears from many passages of Holy Scripture, that the phrase is to be literally and properly understood of nose-jewels, rings set with jewels hanging from the nostrils, as ear-rings from the ears, by holes bored to receive them. ... This fashion, however strange it may appear to us, was formerly, and is still, common in many parts of the East, among women of all ranks." He refers us to Ezekiel and Proverbs: "I decked thee also with ornaments, and I put bracelets upon thy hands, and a chain on thy neck. And I put a jewel on thy forehead, and earrings in thine ears, and a beautiful crown upon thine head" (Ezekiel 16:11–12); "As a jewel of gold in a swine's snout, so is a fair woman which is without discretion" (Proverbs 11:22). Such ornaments were almost unheard of in the Western world at the time many of these commentaries were written, but they are quite common today. ¶ Two extremes in dress weary the Lord: the dress that calls attention to riches and power, and the dress that belittles the person wearing it. The Lord has reiterated today the need for simplicity in dress: “And again, thou shalt not be proud in thy heart; let all thy garments be plain, and their beauty be the beauty of the work of thine own hands” (D&C 42:40). In terms of the daughters of Zion, it is pleasing to the Lord when women do not forget their femininity as well as their modesty. So we read: “In like manner also, that women adorn themselves in modest apparel, with shamefacedness and sobriety; not with broided hair, or gold, or pearls, or costly array; But (which becometh women professing godliness) with good works” (1 Timothy 2:9–10). President James E. Faust and Elder Richard G. Scott have, in General Conference, addressed femininity’s enduring importance. Men and women have distinct divine roles given to them. “The woman shall not wear that which pertaineth unto a man, neither shall a man put on a woman’s garment: for all that do so are abomination unto the LORD thy God” (Deuteronomy 22:5).³¹

24 And it shall come to pass, ~~that~~ instead of sweet smell there shall be stink; and instead of a girdle, a rent; and instead of well-set hair, baldness; and instead of a stomacher, a girding of sackcloth; ~~and~~ burning instead of beauty.

³¹ The responsibility for proper attire and appearance are not only those given to women. Men must dress appropriately, and wear a white shirt and a tie, especially when attending Church or involved in priesthood ordinances. As a new member of the Church, in the mid-1970s, in one of my first General Conferences I watched, I saw all these General Authorities, all dressed with a white shirt and a tie and clean shaven, and all Caucasian, and for a brief moment I had some negative feelings. When the first of these Brethren opened his mouth to speak, I was overcome by the Spirit, “these are Prophets, Seers and Revelators, these are the servants of the Lord.” Now I wear a white shirt and tie to church and when I go home teaching. I would not consider the possibility of not doing so. I love the Brethren, I want to emulate them. When I wear a white shirt and tie, and a clean shaved face, to me it means that I sustain the Brethren. As a representative of the Savior, holding the Priesthood, I feel that I should so dress when I go out of my home to go home teaching, to go and give a blessing, or to extend a calling. Now a few words about nationality, ethnicity, and the like. Leaving my own beloved Chile was very traumatic to me, a decision forced on me by my earthly father as he had to make difficult choices on what he thought best for his family. I used to always wear a Chilean flag pin on my jacket lapel when I went to Church. About 15 years after I was baptized, however, I increasingly felt this was not pleasing to the Lord, and I stopped wearing my pin. I realize that now I am a Christian first, a follower of the Savior above all. I love the scripture, “Now therefore ye are no more strangers and foreigners, but fellowcitizens with the saints, and of the household of God” (Ephesians 2:19). I love my beautiful country as much as ever, I give thanks that I was permitted to be born in Chile, yet feel that there is simplicity and equality in being dressed in the plain Sunday dress, whose focal point is that white shirt. It is an honor for me to be a member of the Lord’s Church and to be called a brother. It is as if I am willing to say Amen in response to the question: “Art thou a brother or brethren? I salute you in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ, in token or remembrance of the everlasting covenant, in which covenant I receive you to fellowship, in a determination that is fixed, immovable, and unchangeable, to be your friend and brother through the grace of God in the bonds of love, to walk in all the commandments of God blameless, in thanksgiving, forever and ever. Amen” (D&C 88:133, also see v. 135).

And it shall come to pass, instead of sweet smell there shall be stink. Perfume is often part of what people wear to be attractive. Instead of smelling well, however, there will be a reeking stench. Such can come from extreme poverty or disease. Another source of bad smell is that of a decomposing body. In the scriptures there is frequent mention of the type of putrid odors that will accompany the many dead in battles. For instance, “Their slain also shall be cast out, and their stink shall come up out of their carcases, and the mountains shall be melted with their blood” (ISAIAH 34:3). ¶ And instead of a girdle, a rent. This verse is frequently translated where girdles or sashes on the one hand are replaced by a rope on the other. The תַּגְּזֵרֶהָ as worn by women was not an undergarment, as the word “girdle” connotes in modern usage, but a valuable ornamented belt or sash like the Japanese obi.³² The word here used for rent (נִקְצָה) in the KJV, means rather a rope or even something to tie prisoners or slaves. At the very least we have abject poverty, where women are using a rope to hold up their skirts. Continuing with the worst case scenario, where there is not death, there will be captivity, slavery, and the other horrors of war. The Targum (ܬ) has “in the place where they were binding the girdles, shall be marks of smiting,” with an allusion to slavery and captivity. The Syriac (ܫ) has, “And instead of an ornamental girdle, a worker’s apron.” SOT translates as “the captive’s rope.” ¶ And instead of well-set hair, baldness. The NJB translates as: “Instead of hair elaborately dressed, a shaven scalp.” The Syriac (ܫ) translates as “instead of curled hair, baldness.” One of the indignities suffered by slaves, especially so for women, was shaving their scalps. Baldness can also be a side-effect of disease, such as radiation treatment for cancer patients, or those exposed to nuclear radiation. ¶ And instead of a stomacher, a girding of sackcloth. A stomacher (פְּתִילִל) is a fancy evening gown or other expensive clothing of its type, while a sackcloth (שֹׂק) is the material used in mourning, made from rough materials. The word in English and many other languages is pronounced the same as the Hebrew, namely, sack. ¶ Burning instead of beauty. Here בִּי in Hebrew stands for burning, or rather, branding (not to be confused the word for, or because we have seen before, the branding בִּי is a shortened version and comes from the root כָּרַח which stands for burnt or scorched).³³ Once again, we have the idea of slavery. An alternative translation—for manuscripts following the Dead Sea Scrolls (Q) text rather than the Masoretic text (M)—is that of shame: “Instead of beauty, shame” (DSSB, Q). Certainly, the idea of being branded as livestock would bring shame. ¶ Margalioth considers the thesis and antithesis of this verse, using the words instead of / and instead of, תַּחַת / תַּחַת, “And it shall come to pass, that INSTEAD OF sweet smell there shall be stink; AND INSTEAD OF a girdle a rent; AND INSTEAD OF well set hair baldness; AND INSTEAD OF a stomacher a girding of sackcloth; and burning INSTEAD OF beauty,” and contrasts them to those in the second half of Isaiah. Whereas here in ISAIAH 3 the comparison was of something good turned into bad; the same words are inverted so that good would be transformed into something even better. While the KJV uses, “and for” whereas the Hebrew text (M) is exactly that of ISAIAH 3:24, תַּחַת, so substituting and instead of in place of and for we then have: “For brass I will bring gold, AND INSTEAD OF iron I will bring silver, AND INSTEAD OF wood brass, AND INSTEAD OF stones iron: I will also make thy officers peace, and thine exactors righteousness” (ISAIAH 60:17). Furthermore, Margalioth points us to two other like verses (the JKV has for in place of תַּחַת) so we make the same substitution as before: “To appoint unto them that mourn in Zion, to give unto them beauty INSTEAD OF ashes, the oil of joy INSTEAD OF mourning, the garment of praise INSTEAD OF the spirit of heaviness; that they might be called trees of righteousness, the planting of the LORD, that he might be glorified” (ISAIAH 61:3); and “INSTEAD OF the thorn shall come up the fir tree, AND INSTEAD OF the brier shall come up the myrtle tree: and it shall be to the LORD for a name, for an everlasting sign that shall not be cut off” (ISAIAH 55:13).

³² Harris, R. L., Harris, R. L., Archer, G. L., & Waltke, B. K. (1999, c1980). Theological Wordbook of the Old Testament (electronic ed.) (263). Chicago: Moody Press.

25 Thy men shall fall by the sword and thy mighty[✓] in the war.

✓ might

Thy men shall fall by the sword. While women’s beauty will now be gone as they are put to shame, men shall not go without feeling the consequences of such horrible times. It is perhaps the stink of these men who fall by the sword that is noted in ISAIAH 3:24. Alternate translations include, “And thy most beautiful son whom thou lovest shall fall by the sword” (LXX, G), “Thy beautiful men shall be killed by the sword” (Targum, T) and “Your mighty men shall fall by the sword”

(Syriac, S). ¶ And thy mighty in the war. The mighty are often thought of as invincible, even immortal. Yet, “Even the youths shall faint and be weary, and the young men shall utterly fall” (ISAIAH 40:30).

26 And her gates shall lament and mourn; and she ~~{being}~~ shall be desolate,[✓] and shall sit upon the ground.

✓ cleansed, or emptied

We noted that Daughter of Zion was another name for Jerusalem. Here, the allusion is to Jerusalem herself, along with all her inhabitants. ¶ And her gates shall lament and mourn. The gates of Jerusalem are meant. Jeremiah lamented: “Judah mourneth, and the gates thereof languish; they are black unto the ground; and the cry of Jerusalem is gone up” (Jeremiah 14:2) and “Her gates are sunk into the ground; he hath destroyed and broken her bars: her king and her princes are among the Gentiles: the law is no more; her prophets also find no vision from the LORD” (Lamentations 2:9); “The ways of Zion do mourn, because none come to the solemn feasts: all her gates are desolate: her priests sigh, her virgins are afflicted, and she is in bitterness” (Lamentations 1:4); and “The kings of the earth, and all the inhabitants of the world, would not have believed that the adversary and the enemy should have entered into the gates of Jerusalem” (Lamentations 4:12). In Nahum we have, “Behold, thy people in the midst of thee are women: the gates of thy land shall be set wide open unto thine enemies: the fire shall devour thy bars” (Nahum 3:13). These seem to speak of a time where all of Jerusalem, including her gates, will have been burnt and all left in complete desolation. The gates of the city were an important meeting place where the people could bring their challenges and controversies to be heard of judges, as well as wise and prudent men: “Judges and officers shalt thou make thee in all thy gates, which the LORD thy God giveth thee, throughout thy tribes: and they shall judge the people with just judgment” (Deuteronomy 16:18); and “Her husband is known in the gates, when he sitteth among the elders of the land” (Proverbs 31:23). The gates were also a place where people gave thanks for the mercies of the Lord, “They that are delivered from the noise of archers in the places of drawing water, there shall they rehearse the righteous acts of the LORD, even the righteous acts toward the inhabitants of his villages in Israel: then shall the people of the LORD go down to the gates” (Judges 5:11); and “That I may shew forth all thy praise in the gates of the daughter of Zion: I will rejoice in thy salvation” (Psalms 9:14). Now, instead of judgment and gratitude, there would be mourning, burning and desolation. ¶ And she shall be desolate, and shall sit upon the ground. The Prophet Jeremiah makes the connection between the city itself and her inhabitants: “The elders of the daughter of Zion sit upon the ground, and keep silence: they have cast up dust upon their heads; they have girded themselves with sackcloth: the virgins of Jerusalem hang down their heads to the ground” (Lamentations 2:10). The Psalmist expressed it so: “By the rivers of Babylon, there we sat down, yea, we wept, when we remembered Zion” (Psalms 137:1). Babylon would, in a future day, suffer the same consequences that would be inflicted upon Jerusalem: “Come down, and sit in the dust, O virgin daughter of Babylon, sit on the ground: there is no throne, O daughter of the Chaldeans: for thou shalt no more be called tender and delicate” (ISAIAH 47:1). Like Babylon, Israel had exalted herself, and would be brought down. While Babylon’s punishment would be forever, a remnant of Israel would be kept and brought forth. There is a curious Roman coin with a diagram of a Jewish woman sitting on the ground, mourning, and the word Judea. While this coin represents a later captivity, the custom of the Jews of mourning by sitting on the ground is preserved.³⁴ 27 {KJV: ISAIAH 4:1}³⁵ ¶ AND in that day, seven women shall take hold of one man, saying: We will eat our own bread, and wear our own apparel; only let us[✓] be called by thy name, to take away^{✓✓} our reproach.

³³ AHCL, also see Gesenius.

✓ thy name be called upon us

✓ ✓ or, take thou away

* KJV: This verse is first in ISAIAH 4, JST and Masoretic text (𐤀𐤍) considers it as part of Ch. 3.

AND in that day, seven women shall take hold of one man, saying. So few men would be left upon the land, as a result of having fallen in war (Isaiah 3:24–25), that for each man there would be seven women. Rabbi Ibn Ezra puts seven (שִׁבְעָה) to mean “many,” and explains that “this will happen in consequence of the death of the male persons in battle.” The death in battle of Israelite men in former days was extensive. “For Pekah the son of Remaliah slew in Judah an hundred and twenty thousand in one day, which were all valiant men; because they had forsaken the LORD God of their fathers” (2 Chronicles 28:6). Jeremiah would say, “Their widows are increased to me above the sand of the seas” (Jeremiah 15:8a). The Psalmist wrote that despite the blessings received from the hand of the Lord, “Yet they tempted and provoked the most high God, and kept not his testimonies: But turned back, and dealt unfaithfully like their fathers: they were turned aside like a deceitful bow. For they provoked him to anger with their high places, and moved him to jealousy with their graven images” (Psalms 78:56–58). As a result, the Lord “...delivered his strength into captivity, and his glory into the enemy’s hand. He gave his people over also unto the sword; and was wroth with his inheritance. The fire consumed their young men; and their maidens were not given to marriage” (Psalms 78:61–63). Besides the horror of warfare, the disintegration of the family is likely to also play a role in such modern day scenes as depicted here. ¶ We will eat our own bread, and wear our own apparel. These women would offer to cook and provide for themselves in every way, contrary to the proper order of the Lord (Exodus 21:10) just so they could have children. ¶ Only let us be called by thy name, to take away our reproach. LDS understand that when the Lord told Adam, “In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread” (Genesis 3:19a), that the principle of work would be one that was a blessing to man. Likewise, while women would bear children in sorrow,³⁶ that is, through suffering and pain, that children would nevertheless be a blessing to women. For women everywhere it has often been considered a disgrace or a reproach not to bear children. Many of the verses in Isaiah are those of contrast. Delitzsch points out that women of society are often pursued by a number of suitors, yet the tables would change so multiple women would be content to share one man. Rawlinson further suggests, “Among the Jews childlessness was a special reproach, because it took away all possibility of the woman being in the line of the Messiah’s descent” (Rawlinson).

FIRST POSTED: 11 July 2000

³⁴ Snowden, James Ross, Coins of the Bible, Presbyterian Board of Publication, 1864, pp. 43 ff.

³⁵ Agreeing with the JST, Lowth says, “The division of the chapters has interrupted the Prophet’s discourse, and broken it off almost in the midst of the sentence.”

³⁶ “I will greatly multiply thy sorrow and thy conception; in sorrow thou shalt bring forth children” (Genesis 3:16b).

Isaiah 4

A glorious vision opens this chapter, beginning with verse ISAIAH 4:2, showing forth the Branch, or our Savior and the focus of our joy and our confidence. In Isaiah we often meet an expression of Messiah spoken by the Lord, such as in ISAIAH 4:2, The Branch of the LORD. It should be known that the Lord Jehovah spoke, through the principle of Divine Investiture, the words of the Father. The time would come when only an esteemed remnant would be left. This remnant will have been washed clean. Upon the holy temples would be manifested the ancient tokens of the presence of God: “And the LORD went before them by day in a pillar of a cloud, to lead them the way; and by night in a pillar of fire, to give them light; to go by day and night” (Exodus 13:21).

1 ¶ AND in that day, seven women shall take hold of one man, saying: We will eat our own bread, and wear our own apparel; only let us be called by thy name, to take away our reproach.*

* JST: This verse is last verse in ISAIAH 3, see exegesis there.

Verse one is actually the last verse in ISAIAH 3, where we see the results of the scenes of horror found there. ISAIAH 4, in contrast, begins with a message of beauty, hope and glory.

2 ¶ In that day shall the branch of the LORD be beautiful and glorious; ✓ and* the fruit of the earth [shall be] excellent and comely for to them that are escaped of Israel. ✓

✓ beauty and glory

✓ ✓ the escaping of Israel

* JST & KJV include “and,” while Book of Mormon deletes.

¶ In that day shall the branch of the LORD be beautiful and glorious. Some translations capitalize¹ the word branch (בִּנְיָן). For instance, “In that day the Branch of the Lord will be beautiful and glorious” (NAS, see also NIV, EB, SOT, YLT) giving this passage a Messianic tone. The Targum (ܬܪܓܡ) has: “At that time shall the Messiah of the Lord be for joy and for glory.” So, how can it be the Branch of the LORD, since the Branch represents Messiah, and so does the Lord? In ISAIAH 53:6b, we read similarly, “and the LORD hath laid on him the iniquity of us all.” The principle of Divine Investiture is at play, wherein the Savior speaks on behalf of the Father. It is the Branch or Messiah that is being spoken of here. The contribution of the Targum (ܬܪܓܡ) is extremely significant, and shows that anciently the Jews believed in Messiah. The Jewish commentator Kimhi likewise translates as “The Messiah, the Son of David” (Kimhi, in Clarke). Today, while some Jews hold strong to their faith in Messiah, others have diluted their hope into a Messianic Age. The Book of Mormon shows a like occurrence; where before the coming of Christ many were not able to continue steadfast in their belief in Christ. In Jeremiah the figure is also contained of Messiah as the Branch: “Behold, the days come, saith the LORD, that I will raise unto David a righteous Branch, and a King shall reign and prosper, and shall execute judgment and justice in the earth. In his days Judah shall be saved, and Israel shall dwell safely: and this is his name whereby he shall be called, THE LORD OUR RIGHTEOUSNESS. Therefore, behold, the days come, saith the LORD, that they shall no more say, The LORD liveth, which brought up the children of Israel out of the land of Egypt; But, The LORD liveth, which brought up and which led the seed of the house of Israel out of the north country, and from all countries whither I had driven them; and they shall dwell in their own land” (Jeremiah 23:5–8; see also 33:15). Likewise, we find “I will bring forth my servant the BRANCH. ... In that day, saith the LORD of hosts, shall ye call every man his neighbour under the vine and under the fig tree” (Zechariah 3:8b, 10; see also 6:12.). Other translations for ISAIAH 4:2 include, “In that day shall the glory of the Lord shine forth” (Syriac, ܣܝܪܝܐ) and “And in that day God shall shine gloriously in counsel on the earth” (LXX, ܠܟܟ). ¶ Then, will the Branch be beautiful and glorious. For the Branch to be beautiful and glorious, it means that the people will acknowledge the Lord as their Savior. So perhaps, one could say that the Branch will be beautiful and glorious in the eyes of Israel. Not that the beauty of the Branch had changed, rather, that the eyes of the people would be opened to see that beauty. ¶ And the fruit of the earth shall be excellent and comely. Some translators continue with the Messianic message, by capitalizing Fruit: “And the Fruit of the Land splendid and majestic” (EB), “Even the most excellent and beautiful Fruit of the earth” (SOT). Lowth says: “The Branch is an appropriated title of the Messiah; and the fruit of the land means the great Person to spring from the house of Judah, and is only a parallel expression signifying the same; or perhaps the blessings consequent upon the redemption procured by him.” If we render the KJV with the modified capitalization, “And the Fruit of the earth shall be excellent and comely,” the result is striking. In a Messianic allusion we read about the Christ, “he hath no form nor comeliness; and when we shall see him, [there is] no beauty that we should desire him” (ISAIAH 53:2b). So once again, we can infer that while the Savior had no beauty or comeliness to those who were in spiritual darkness, those who love the Lord will exclaim, “How beautiful upon the mountains are the feet of him that bringeth good tidings, that publisheth peace; that bringeth good tidings of good, that publisheth salvation; that saith unto Zion, Thy God reigneth!” (ISAIAH 52:7). And from the Book of Mormon, “And behold, I say unto you, this is not all. For O how beautiful upon the mountains are the feet of him that bringeth good tidings, that is the founder of peace, yea, even the Lord, who has redeemed his people; yea, him who has granted salvation unto his people; For were it not for the redemption which he hath made for his people, which was prepared from the foundation of the world, I say unto you, were it not for this, all mankind must have perished” (Mosiah 15:18–19). Certainly my soul delighteth in the scriptures. ¶ Many scriptures have multiple fulfillments and so we can also read, from Rain in Due Season: “Then I will give you rain in due season, and the land shall yield her increase, and the trees of the field shall yield their fruit” (Leviticus 26:4). So the fruit of the land would be excellent and plentiful. “And I will rebuke the devourer for your sakes, and he shall not destroy the fruits of your ground; neither shall your vine cast her fruit before the time in the field, saith the LORD of hosts. And all nations shall call you blessed: for ye shall be a delightful land, saith the LORD of hosts” (Malachi 3:11–12). Finally, in the Targum (Ⲯ)² we read, “and they that keep the law for majesty and for praise.” This speaks of the beauty to come upon the people who keep the commandments. ¶ To them that are escaped of Israel. This clause is a reference to the remnant of Jacob. Out of this remnant we have not only the Lamanites—who are descendants of Israel mostly through the tribe of Joseph and in the latter days would join The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints—but other remnants of Israel found throughout the world, such as those of the tribe of Judah and Benjamin, as well as of the Lost Tribes. Slowly, descendants from all of the tribes are entering into the waters of baptism.

¹ Recall that in Hebrew there is no distinction between capital and lower case letters. They are all the same in this respect.

² Stenning.

And the day will come when a great number of the Lost Tribes will come into the Church and Ephraim will have the privilege of baptizing them (see D&C 133:26 ff.). At that day of rejoicing, it will be clear to Judah that they are not the only ones of Israel who are left upon the earth. The rejoicing of Joseph of Egypt when he saw his brothers, and all twelve were re-united, is a type and a shadow of future happy days alluded to in the following scriptures: “Then shalt thou say in thine heart, Who hath begotten me these, seeing I have lost my children, and am desolate, a captive, and removing to and fro? and who hath brought up these? Behold, I was left alone; these, where had they been?” (ISAIAH 49:21). The same thought is contained in: “Sing, O barren, thou that didst not bear; break forth into singing, and cry aloud, thou that didst not travail with child: for more are the children of the desolate than the children of the married wife, saith the LORD” (ISAIAH 54:1).

3 And it shall come to pass, they ~~that he~~ that is are left in Zion, and he ~~that~~ remaineth* in Jerusalem, shall be called holy, even every one that is written among the living[✓] in Jerusalem--

✓ or, to life

* Book of Mormon: remain

And it shall come to pass, they that are left in Zion, and he that remaineth in Jerusalem. In speaking of a yet future remnant, perhaps those who are left when Jerusalem is being attacked from every side, in the end of days, when many will have already been destroyed and all are about to perish were it not for the Son of Man: “Behold, the day of the LORD cometh, and thy spoil shall be divided in the midst of thee. For I will gather all nations against Jerusalem to battle; and the city shall be taken, and the houses rifled, and the women ravished; and half of the city shall go forth into captivity, and the residue of the people shall not be cut off from the city. Then shall the LORD go forth, and fight against those nations, as when he fought in the day of battle. And his feet shall stand in that day upon the mount of Olives, which is before Jerusalem on the east, and the mount of Olives shall cleave in the midst thereof toward the east and toward the west, and there shall be a very great valley; and half of the mountain shall remove toward the north, and half of it toward the south. And ye shall flee to the valley of the mountains; for the valley of the mountains shall reach unto Azal: yea, ye shall flee, like as ye fled from before the earthquake in the days of Uzziah king of Judah: and the LORD my God shall come, and all the saints with thee” (Zechariah 14:1–5). Those of Judah will recognize their redeemer at that time: “And one shall say unto him,

What are these wounds in thine hands? Then he shall answer, Those with which I was wounded in the house of my friends ... And it shall come to pass, that in all the land, saith the LORD, two parts therein shall be cut off and die; but the third shall be left therein” (Zechariah 13:6, 8). A second fulfillment refers to the New Jerusalem and Zion in the American continent, as they are becoming purified to receive the City of Enoch. Regarding this second signification, it is already beginning to be fulfilled with the gathering of children of Jacob into The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. ¶ Shall be called holy. At that time, those who are left, will turn to the Lord and be called holy, קְדוֹשׁ. It is Christ who shares His holiness with His disciples. ¶ Even every one that is written among the living in Jerusalem. The words everyone that is written also seem to point to those spoken of in the Book of Revelation, who are written in Book of Life. “He that overcometh, the same shall be clothed in white raiment; and I will not blot out his name out of the book of life, but I will confess his name before my Father, and before his angels” (Revelation 3:5). Ibn Ezra feels that the words “that is written” refer to the certainty of their being fulfilled.³ At the time that Christ visited the ancient inhabitants of the Americas, after His resurrection, the Book of Mormon paints a similar scene, where the most righteous survived the cataclysmic events.

4 When the Lord shall have washed away the filth of the daughters of Zion, and shall have purged the blood of Jerusalem from the midst thereof by the spirit of judgment, and by the spirit of burning.

When the Lord shall have washed away the filth of the daughters of Zion. In speaking of pride we read: “There is a generation that are pure in their own eyes, and yet is not washed from their filthiness. There is a generation, O how lofty are their eyes! and their eyelids are lifted up” (Proverbs 30:12–13). And what is the filthiness spoken of here? Pride and neglect of the poor: “There is a generation, whose teeth are as swords, and their jaw teeth as knives, to devour the poor from off the earth, and the needy from among men” (Proverbs 30:14). In term of what constitutes the filth of sin, we read, “And finally, I cannot tell you all the things whereby ye may commit sin; for there are divers ways and means, even so many that I cannot number them” (Mosiah 4:29).

³ Friedländer, M. The Commentary of Ibn Ezra on Isaiah: Edited from MMS. And translated, with notes, introduction, and indexes. Volume I. Translation of the commentary, Philipp Feldheim, Inc. The House of the Jewish Book: New York, also published in London and Jerusalem. 1983, p. 25, Note 3.

Man, of himself, cannot remove the least of his sins and iniquities. “For though thou wash thee with nitre,⁴ and take thee much soap, yet thine iniquity is marked before me, saith the Lord GOD” (Jeremiah 2:22). The Savior admonished: “And no unclean thing can enter into his kingdom; therefore nothing entereth into his rest save it be those who have washed their garments in my blood, because of their faith, and the repentance of all their sins, and their faithfulness unto the end. Now this is the commandment: Repent, all ye ends of the earth, and come unto me and be baptized in my name, that ye may be sanctified by the reception of the Holy Ghost, that ye may stand spotless before me at the last day” (3 Nephi 27:19–20). It is through the Atonement of Jesus Christ, then, that the filth of our sins can be washed away, as we repent, are baptized in His name, and are purified by the influence of the Holy Ghost throughout the remainder of our days. The Lord is the fountain of living waters (Jeremiah 17:13). ¶ And shall have purged the blood of Jerusalem from the midst thereof. The cleansing action continues: “And I will bring the third part through the fire, and will refine them as silver is refined, and will try them as gold is tried: they shall call on my name, and I will hear them: I will say, It is my people: and they shall say, The LORD is my God” (Zechariah 13:9, emphasis added). ¶ By the spirit of judgment, and by the spirit of burning. How shall people be purified and their sins purged? Here is a scripture that indicates what would happen in the latter-days. “But who may abide the day of his coming? and who shall stand when he appeareth? for he is like a refiner's fire, and like fullers' soap: And he shall sit as a refiner and purifier of silver: and he shall purify the sons of Levi, and purge them as gold and silver, that they may offer unto the LORD an offering in righteousness. Then shall the offering of Judah and Jerusalem be pleasant unto the LORD, as in the days of old, and as in former years” (Malachi 3:2–4). The question is also asked, “Who among us shall dwell with the devouring fire? who among us shall dwell with everlasting burnings?” (ISAIAH 33:14b). The fire will either consume or purify us, depending on whether we have chosen or rejected the plan of happiness (Alma 42:16).

5 And the LORD will create upon every dwelling-place of mount Zion, and upon her assemblies, a cloud and smoke by day, and the shining of a flaming fire by night; for upon[✓] all the glory of Zion [shall be] a defence.^{✓✓}

⁴ Regarding the Hebrew word for “niter,” pronounced neter in Hebrew, נִתֵּר, it corresponds to a heavy cleansing agent, sometimes translated as lye or as potash. The ASV translates it as: “For though thou wash thee with lye, and take thee much soap, yet thine iniquity is marked before me, saith the Lord Jehovah.”

- ✓ or, above
- ✓ ✓ covering

ISAIAH 4:5–6 was among the scriptures that Angel Moroni quoted to Joseph Smith according to the Oliver Cowdery narrative (see note to ISAIAH 1:7). These verses speak, at least in part, to the building of Holy Temples throughout the world, for a place of refuge and for a covering from both physical and spiritual storm and rain. Elder Orson Pratt felt these verses referred to the Tabernacle that would serve for protection from the elements. He went on to add that in a future date: “The time is to come when God will meet with all the congregation of his Saints, and to show his approval, and that he does love them, he will work a miracle by covering them in the cloud of his glory. [In the time of Moses] the Lord intended his people to be covered with the cloud continually, and he intended to reveal himself unto them, and to show forth his glory more fully amongst them; but they sinned so much in his sight that he declared— ‘My presence shall not go up with this people, lest I should break forth upon them in my fury and consume them in a moment.’ [Yet] Moses was permitted to enter the tabernacle, and to behold the glory of God, and it is said that he talked with the Lord face to face—a blessing which God did intend to bestow upon all Israel had they kept his law and had not hardened their hearts against him. But in the latter days there will be a people so pure in Mount Zion, with a house established upon the tops of the mountains, that God will manifest himself, not only in their Temple and upon all their assemblies, with a visible cloud during the day, but when the night shall come, if they shall be assembled for worship, God will meet with them by his pillar of fire; and when they retire to their habitations, behold each habitation will be lighted up by the glory of God,—a pillar of flaming fire by night. Did you ever hear of any city that was thus favored and blessed since the day that Isaiah delivered this prophecy? No, it is a latter-day work, one that God must consummate in the latter times when he begins to reveal himself, and show forth his power among the nations.”⁵ ¶ And the LORD will create upon every dwelling-place of mount Zion, and upon her assemblies, a cloud and smoke by day, and the shining of a flaming fire by night. The word dwelling-place is מִבְּנוֹי or habitation. It is often used for the dwelling place of God (Gesenius). This word “occurs seventeen times, all but one (Psalms 104:5) referring to God’s dwelling place, either in heaven or the temple” (TWOT). In the D&C we find that the cloud is the glory of the Lord. “Yea, the word of the Lord concerning his church, established in the last days for the restoration of his people, as he has spoken by the mouth of his prophets, and for the gathering of his saints to stand upon Mount Zion, which shall be the city of New Jerusalem. Which city shall be built, beginning at the temple lot, which is appointed by the finger of the Lord, in the western boundaries of the State of Missouri, and dedicated by the hand of Joseph Smith, Jun., and others with whom the Lord was well pleased. Verily this is the word of the Lord, that the city New Jerusalem shall be built by the gathering of the saints, beginning at this place, even the place of the temple, which temple shall be reared in this generation. For verily this generation shall not all pass away until an house shall be built unto the Lord, and a cloud shall rest upon it, which cloud shall be even the glory of the Lord, which shall fill the house” (D&C 84:2–5). Certainly, the time will come, when in the millennium the glory of the Lord will also be manifest in a more widespread fashion: “For the Lord shall be in their midst, and his glory shall be upon them, and he will be their king and their lawgiver” (D&C 45:59). ISAIAH 4:5 obtains much of its strength from an allusion to former times, during the exodus from Egypt, when the presence of the Lord was made manifest as he accepted the people of Israel. “And the LORD went before them by day in a pillar of a cloud, to lead them the way; and by night in a pillar of fire, to give them light; to go by day and night: He took not away the pillar of the cloud by day, nor the pillar of fire by night, from before the people” (Exodus 13:21–22); and “And they will tell it to the inhabitants of this land: for they have heard that thou LORD art among this people, that thou LORD art seen face to face, and that thy cloud standeth over them, and that thou goest before them, by day time in a pillar of a cloud, and in a pillar of fire by night” (Numbers 14:14). The clouds were also to be a protection from the elements and from danger. “He spread a cloud for a covering; and fire to give light in the night” (Psalms 105:39). In Exodus, the cloud was given for a defense against the Egyptians as the Israelites waited to begin their crossing of the Red Sea (Exodus 14:19–20). Regarding the time when Solomon completed the Lord’s Temple, we read: “And it came to pass, when the priests were come out of the holy place, that the cloud filled the house of the LORD, So that the priests could not stand to minister because of the cloud: for the glory of the LORD had filled the house of the LORD” (1 Kings 8:10–11). In Kirtland, in the dedicatory prayer, the Prophet Joseph prayed, “Let the gift of tongues be poured out upon thy people, even cloven tongues as of fire, and the interpretation thereof. And let thy house be filled, as with a rushing mighty wind, with thy glory. Put upon thy servants the testimony of the covenant, that when they go out and proclaim thy word they may seal up the law, and prepare the hearts of thy saints for all those judgments thou art about to send, in thy wrath, upon the inhabitants of the earth, because of their transgressions, that thy people may not faint in the day of trouble” (D&C 109:36b–38). Numerous witnesses spoke of this glorious event. Delitzsch suggests that such a cloud as spoken of here in Isaiah, is a “smoke-cloud, not a watery cloud, like those which ordinarily cover the sky; and by night in a fiery splendour, not merely a lingering fiery splendour like that of the evening sky, but, as the words clearly indicate, a flaming brightness (לְהִכָּהֵב), and therefore real and living fire ... above all, the cloud and fire were intended as signs of the nearness of God, and His satisfaction. ... [Now, the extent would be such that] the whole mountain [Mount Zion] would thus become a Holy of holies” (Delitzsch, emphasis added). A number of commentators seem confused by the plurality of the expression, every dwelling place. As LDS we understand that temples will dot the land, especially in the American continent. ¶ For upon all the glory of Zion shall be a defence. While in earlier times those in Israel and Judah built fortified walls and cities for a defense, now it would be the Lord who would be the defense of the children of Jacob. “Yea, the Almighty shall be thy defence” (Job 22:25a). We do not have to wait for a millennial day for the Lord to come to our defense. Each of us can surely sing with the Psalmist: “But I will sing of thy power; yea, I will sing aloud of thy mercy in the morning: for thou hast been my defence and refuge in the day of my trouble. Unto thee, O my strength, will I sing: for God is my defence, and the God of my mercy” (Psalms 59:16–17).

⁵ Journal of Discourses. Orson Pratt, June 15, 1873, See also ISAIAH 60.

6 And there shall be a tabernacle for a shadow in the daytime from the heat, and for a place of refuge, and for* a covert from storm and from rain.

* JST & KJV include “for,” while Book of Mormon deletes.

And there shall be a tabernacle for a shadow in the daytime from the heat. “The heat in those regions was very intense, particularly in the vast plains of sand ... While traversing the burning sands of a desert, exposed to the rays of a tropical sun, nothing could be more grateful than the cool shadow of a rock” (Barnes). Lowth further explains, “In countries subject to violent tempests, as well as to intolerable heat, a portable tent is a necessary part of a traveler’s baggage, for defence and shelter.” Shadow gives protection from the heat and rays of the sun, “He spread a cloud for a covering” (Psalms 105:39a). But the protection goes much further than that of the scorching sun, or blinding sandstorm, it is a protection against both men and evil: “... hide me under the shadow of thy wings” (Psalms 17:8b) and

“...in the shadow of his hand hath he hid me” (ISAIAH 49:2b). Furthermore, of all places of protection and refuge, there are none like the Temple, formerly the tabernacle. “When ye therefore shall see the abomination of desolation, spoken of by Daniel the prophet, stand in the holy place” (Matthew 24:15). ¶ And for a place of refuge. Regarding a place of refuge, the Prophet Joseph wrote that “The time is soon coming, when no man will have any peace but in Zion and her stakes.” The Prophet explained that the great calamities that have been predicted are at the doors, and that we need to look to the Presidency of the Church in order to be safe. For, “the devil will use his greatest efforts to trap the Saints.”⁶ The Lord will be merciful and protective of those who lean upon Him. “For thou hast been a strength to the poor, a strength to the needy in his distress, a refuge from the storm, a shadow from the heat, when the blast of the terrible ones is as a storm against the wall” (ISAIAH 25:4). ¶ And for a covert from storm and from rain. Storms represent adversity, either physical or spiritual. It is our beloved Savior who can calm the storms of nature, persecution, and adversity: “And he arose, and rebuked the wind, and said unto the sea, Peace, be still. And the wind ceased, and there was a great calm” (Mark 4:39, see also Psalms 107:23–31). So what can we do now, to partake of that protection and be filled with the Spirit of the Holy Ghost? “Put on the whole armour of God, that ye may be able to stand against the wiles of the devil. For we wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places. Wherefore take unto you the whole armour of God, that ye may be able to withstand in the evil day, and having done all, to stand. Stand therefore, having your loins girt about with truth, and having on the breastplate of righteousness; And your feet shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace; Above all, taking the shield of faith, wherewith ye shall be able to quench all the fiery darts of the wicked. And take the helmet of salvation, and the sword of the Spirit, which is the word of God: Praying always with all prayer and supplication in the Spirit, and watching thereunto with all perseverance and supplication for all saints” (Ephesians 6:11–18). And with the Psalmist we can rejoice in the Lord, “I will abide in thy tabernacle for ever: I will trust in the covert of thy wings. Selah” (Psalms 16:1). We also read in ISAIAH 32:1–2, regarding King Messiah, who Himself “... shall be as an hiding place from the wind, and a covert from the tempest; as rivers of water in a dry place, as the shadow of a great rock in weary land.”)

11 September 2000

⁶ Smith, Joseph Jr. History of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. 3:391.

Isaiah 5

ISAIAH 5 is divided into three distinct sections: (1) the allegory of the vineyard of “my beloved”; (2) a series of six “woes” directed to disobedient Israel, along with corresponding punishments; and (3) the establishment of a latter-day Ensign to which Israel will heed.

v. 1–7. The allegory of the vineyard is given as a warning that the Lord will follow up with the consequences outlined for disobedience as shown in Rain in Due Season. A choice vineyard was planted with great care and love, and yet it yielded worthless fruit. We are again transported to a court of law and judgment.

1 ¶ NOW AND then will I sing to my well-beloved a song of my beloved, touching his vineyard. My well-beloved hath a vineyard in a very fruitful hill. ✓

✓ the horn of the son of oil

AND then will I sing to my well-beloved a song of my beloved. The expression “my beloved” appears 24 times in the Song of Solomon, here in ISAIAH 5:1, and in Jeremiah 11:15. In our own Doctrine and Covenants, we also have an expression from the Song of Solomon: “clear as the moon, and fair as the sun, and terrible as an army with banners” (D&C 5:11b, see also 109:73).¹ Who is “my well-beloved” here in ISAIAH 5? He is the same as in “And lo a voice from heaven, saying, This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased” (Matthew 3:17; and also see the allegory in Luke 20:9–16). It is Jesus the Christ. ¶ What does the expression “will I sing to my well-beloved a song of my beloved” mean? The song appears to be sung by both the Father and the Son. The Father introduces the Son in verses 1–2. Then, in verses 3–6 it is the Great Jehovah or “my beloved” who speaks. Jesus speaks on behalf of both the Father and of Himself through the principle of Divine Investiture. Variations of this principle are accepted by other fellow Christians of other faiths: “The fact that the prophet speaks as if he were the beloved himself, shows at once who the beloved must be. The beloved of the prophet and the lover of the prophet ... were Jehovah, with whom he was so united by a unio mystica exalted above all earthly love, that, like the angel of Jehovah in the early histories, he would speak as if he were Jehovah Himself” (Delitzsch). ¶ Touching his vineyard. What is represented by the vineyard? The answer is given below, in ISAIAH 5:7, “For the vineyard of the LORD of hosts is the house of Israel.” ¶ My well-beloved hath a vineyard in a very fruitful hill. The well-beloved has a vineyard (the house of Israel), and has planted them in a very fruitful hill. A hill can have the advantage of good drainage and protection from the wind. The Lord of the vineyard certainly has more than one choice land. While this verse seems to apply specially and principally to the land of Israel, and this seems to be the meaning of the fruitful hill spoken about here, much of what is said also applies to the inhabitants of the ancient American continent and any people who have been entrusted with the good things of the Lord, but who have failed to lean upon the Lord. A wonderful allegory is that of Zenos, the tame and wild olive vineyard. When one understands Zenos’ allegory, one is better prepared to understand this allegory or parable of the vineyard. Regarding the marginal ¶ note, “the horn of the son of oil,” Rabbi David Kimhi has this to say, “He calls the land of Israel a horn, because it is higher than all lands; as the horn is higher than the whole body; and the son of oil,² because it is said to be a land flowing with milk and honey” (Kimhi, in Lowth). The word horn, in older English, means the peak or summit of a hill. The whole idea, then, is that the Lord had placed Israel in a land flowing with milk and honey and fertility, the very best that was available.

2 And he fenced ✓ it, and gathered out the stones thereof, and planted it with the choicest vine, and built a tower in the midst of it, and also made ✓ ✓ a wine-press therein; and he looked that it should bring forth grapes, and it brought forth wild grapes.

✓ or, made a wall about ✓ ✓ or, hewed

¹ In the Song of Solomon, the expression is “fair as the moon, clear as the sun, and terrible as an army with banners” (Song of Solomon 6:7b, also see 6:4. The Prophet Joseph Smith did not question the authenticity of the Song of Solomon, but rather, its inspiration.

² בן־שמן

And he fenced it. From a viticulture perspective, there are a couple of important reasons to fence a vineyard. Vineyards are fenced to keep animals and people out. Horses that have grown in areas where vineyards abound, for instance, often learn to eat the grape leaves, and love eating the grapes, too. There may well be an allusion to the wall surrounding the Temple Mount in Jerusalem. Cheyne suggests we study Ezra 9:9 ff. Certainly it fits well with this passage, “For we were bondmen; yet our God hath not forsaken us in our bondage, but hath extended mercy unto us in the sight of the kings of Persia, to give us a reviving, to set up the house of our God, and to repair the desolations thereof, and to give us a wall in Judah and in Jerusalem” (Ezra 9:9, emphasis added).” From a spiritual sense, what could the fence be? Certainly, something given for a protection. One of the first things that come to mind is the Law; the scriptures and commandments given to Israel to help her from being contaminated by the idolatrous beliefs of nearby nations. Today we have the scriptures as well as living prophets to be our fence, to keep the world out. We must live worthy of the constant companionship of the Holy Ghost. ¶ And gathered out the stones thereof. One of the first jobs in preparing agricultural land is to remove the stones so the land can be plowed, and the plants have earth around them. Earth not only holds essential plant nutrients, but also holds water. Stones, obviously do not hold water, and release nutrients at an insignificant rate. The stones probably signify the surrounding nations and their idol worship (Deuteronomy 7:1–3). As Israel came into her fertile land, these other nations were to be utterly removed. The Lord feared the negative influence these nations would have upon Israel: “For they will turn away thy son from following me, that they may serve other gods: so will the anger of the LORD be kindled against you, and destroy thee suddenly. But thus shall ye deal with them; ye shall destroy their altars, and break down their images, and cut down their groves, and burn their graven images with fire. For thou art an holy people unto the LORD thy God: the LORD thy God hath chosen thee to be a special people unto himself, above all people that are upon the face of the earth” (Deuteronomy 7:4–6). Unfortunately, Israel did not hearken at that time and as a result would be removed from her land of promise for a season. ¶ And planted it with the choicest vine. Having the right genetic plant material makes all the difference in the world. Vineyards are not planted from seed, but rather, from vine cuttings, in order to produce genetically consistent excellent crops. So who was the choicest vine? In ISAIAH 5:7 we have the answer: “the men of Judah [are] his pleasant plant.” The expression, choicest vine, corresponds to the Hebrew שֹׂרֵק, or sorek.³ Delitzsch has “Sorek [being] the finest kind of eastern vine, bearing small grapes of a bluish-red, with pips hardly perceptible to the tongue. The name is derived from its colour (compare the Arabic zerka, red wine).” Robert Lowth points us to the writings of Moses, particularly to the Patriarchal Blessings given by Jacob to his sons. There we find the feminine form of the word, שֹׂרֶקֶת, translated the same way, choicest vine. The blessing to Judah reads in part: “Binding his foal unto the vine, and his ass's colt unto the choice vine; he washed his garments in wine, and his clothes in the blood of grapes” (Genesis 49:11). Lowth, leaning on a number of former commentators, suggests that Sorek represents a region, much as we would consider the Napa Valley in California today, for its excellent vineyards and wines. Furthermore, “By naming particularly the vine of Sorek, and the vine belonging to Judah, the prophecy [i.e., the Patriarchal Blessing] intimates the very part of the country which was to fall to the lot of that tribe.” Lowth cites an instance of a vine that was so large that a man could hardly put his arms around the trunk, and thus one could tie an ass's colt to it. It is certainly true that vines can grow to very large proportions. I saw one such vine at the University of California, Davis, when I was a viticulture student there. Over the years the vine had been carefully trained and pruned so it covered a very large area. Lowth's insight leads us quickly into further parallels. Several translations use the word vesture (RV, ESV, JPS), cloak (Geneva), or robes (HCSB, HNV, WEB, NAS) for clothes (סוּת) in Genesis 49:11. So we then immediately think of: “Wherefore art thou red in thine apparel, and thy garments like him that treadeth in the winefat? I have trodden the winepress alone; and of the people there was none with me: for I will tread them in mine anger, and trample them in my fury; and their blood shall be sprinkled upon my garments, and I will stain all my raiment.” (ISAIAH 63:3); and “And he was clothed with a vesture dipped in blood: and his name is called The Word of God ... and he treadeth the winepress of the fierceness and wrath of Almighty God” (Revelation 19:13, 15b). Judah's blessing in Genesis is preceded by: “The sceptre shall not depart from Judah, nor a lawgiver from between his feet, until Shiloh come; and unto him shall the gathering of the ³ “Sorek was a valley lying between Ascalon and Gaza, and running far up eastward in the tribe of Judah. Both Ascalon and Gaza were anciently famous for wine ... And it seems, that the upper part of the valley of Sorek, and that of Eshcol, where the spies gathered the single cluster of grapes which they were obliged to bear between two upon a staff, being both near to Hebron, were in the same neighbourhood; and that all this part of the country abounded with rich vineyards (cp. Numbers 13:22–23; Judges 16:3–4). P. Nau supposes Eshcol and Sorek to be only different names for the same valley.” (Lowth).

people be” (Genesis 49:10). We can see, then, all of the symbolism of the atoning sacrifice of our Savior. No wonder, one translator has gone even further in her beautiful symbolic rendering: “Binding his Sapling unto the vine; And the Son of His Strength to the choice vine. He shall cleanse His garments in wine. And His vesture in the blood of grapes” (SOT). The Scriptures point to the Savior’s atoning sacrifice. ¶ The Talmud tradition (Seder Mo’ed, Sukkah 49a) is also symbolic of the Savior’s great love for His people: “‘And planted it with the choicest vine’, refers to the Temple; ‘and built a tower in the midst of it’, refers to the altar; ‘and also hewed out a vat therein’, refers to the Pits” (Talmud, Soncino). ¶ And built a tower in the midst of it. The most frequent use of towers in the days of the Old Testament were for a defense or inspection against those who would enter unlawfully. In this context, what is the tower? It seems to be the Temple built in Jerusalem. (Also, see notes on ISAIAH 5:6.) The Targum (Ⓢ) more explicitly combines the Temple symbolism and the atonement: “I sanctified them, and I made them glorious, I propped them up as a precious vine; and I built my sanctuary in the midst of them; and I gave also mine altar to make an atonement for their sins; and I thought that they should do good works before me, but they did evil works.” ¶ And also made a wine-press therein. There are diverse types of winepresses. At my mother’s farm trucks loaded with grapes would come into the winepress areas where farm workers would throw the grapes into a cement press. The grapes were brushed into a spot where a small motor was used to crush them and extract the juice. (In former times, men would stomp on the grapes to separate the juice from the residues, orujo in Spanish.) In our farm the juice would be pumped into a very large concrete container. In order to slow down the fermentation process, the juice would continually pass through tubes under water that would help cool it, and prevent an overly quick fermentation that would be out of control. Or, in other words, prevent the wine from turning into vinegar. Interestingly, Lowth translates this portion of the verse as “And he hewed out also a lake therein” (emphasis added) and comments: “In very hot countries it was perhaps necessary, or at least very convenient, to have the lake underground, or in a cave hewed out of the side of the rock, for coolness; that the heat might not cause too great a fermentation, and sour the must.” This translation is also supported by Spurrell: “And He also hewed out a lake therein” (SOT). After fermentation, once again returning to my mother’s vineyard, the juice would be then pumped into either closed concrete or wooden containers. ¶ In former times wine was stored in bottles, or more correctly, animal skins that could expand as the fermentation process was completed. The Savior explained, “Neither do men put new wine⁴ into old wine-skins: else the skins burst, and the wine is spilled, and the skins perish: but they put new wine into fresh wine-skins, and both are preserved.” (ASV, Matthew 9:17, also see Mark 2:22 and Luke 5:37–38). In other words, new wine, or wine that had not completed its fermentation process, needed to be put in animal skins that could stretch with the production of added fermentation gases. Else the animal skins would rupture; and the wine lost. This new wine, then, had already gone through part of the fermentation process (wherein the sugars are changed into alcohol). It was called new wine because the fermentation process was not yet completed. The Savior’s teaching about the new ⁴ Some believe that Christ did not drink wine, but grape juice, as he drank new wine. Yet, if new wine was not alcoholic, then why do we read: “Others mocking said, These men are full of new wine” (Acts 2:13). When the Holy Ghost fell abundantly upon the Saints, onlookers thought that the Saints were drunk. Furthermore, we read, “For John the Baptist came neither eating bread nor drinking wine; and ye say, He hath a devil. The Son of man is come eating and drinking; and ye say, Behold a gluttonous man, and a winebibber, a friend of publicans and sinners!” (Luke 7:33–34). How could the Lord be called a winebibber for drinking grape juice? In present time, the Lord for a time allowed the use of wine in Sacramental services, and that was not grape juice, either. After the restoration of the Gospel, the Prophet Joseph Smith was warned against purchasing wine from the enemies of the Church, who could poison it, and wrote in the History of the Church: “Early in the month of August Newel Knight and his wife paid us a visit at my place in harmony, Pennsylvania; and as neither his wife nor mine had been as yet confirmed, it was proposed that we should confirm them, and partake together of the Sacrament, before he and his wife should leave us. In order to prepare for this I set out to procure some wine for the occasion, but had gone only a short distance when I was met by a heavenly messenger, and received the following revelation ... ‘Listen to the voice of Jesus Christ, your Lord, your God, and your Redeemer, whose word is quick and powerful. For, behold, I say unto you, that it mattereth not what ye shall eat or what ye shall drink when ye partake of the sacrament, if it so be that ye do it with an eye single to my glory—remembering unto the Father my body which was laid down for you, and my blood which was shed for the remission of your sins. Wherefore, a commandment I give unto you, that you shall not purchase wine neither strong drink of your enemies; Wherefore, you shall partake of none except it is made new among you; yea, in this my Father’s kingdom which shall be built up on the earth (D&C 27:1–4).’” We also know of the great damage—both in terms of health as well as violations to the law of chastity—associated with drinking. Our Savior commanded: “Behold, verily, thus saith the Lord unto you: In consequence of evils and designs which do and will exist in the hearts of conspiring men in the last days, I have warned you, and forewarn you, by giving unto you this word of wisdom by revelation—That inasmuch as any man drinketh wine or strong drink among you, behold it is not good, neither meet in the sight of your Father, only in assembling yourselves together to offer up your sacraments before him” (D&C 89:4–5). Today, in the Church, we do not use wine for the Sacrament, either. Those who keep this and other commandments will receive blessings untold both in this life and in the next. “And all saints who remember to keep and do these sayings, walking in obedience to the commandments, shall receive health in their navel and marrow for their bones; And shall find wisdom and great treasures of knowledge, even hidden treasures; And shall run and not be weary, and shall walk and not faint. And I, the Lord, give unto them a promise, that the destroying angel shall pass by them, as the children of Israel, and not slay them. Amen” (D&C 89:18–21).

wine may well be applied to the restoration of the Gospel. The Lord chose a pure young man, a clean vessel, a new bottle, even Joseph Smith, to be the prophet of the restoration. Brother Joseph would have to expand to his very limits to come to understand and partake of the doctrinal new wine of the Gospel of Jesus Christ. The Prophet Joseph Smith had not been contaminated with the doctrines of the sectarian world. ¶ My friend, and recent convert, Humberto Vallejos Prado, tells me that in the olden times the fermentation process took longer as it was not aided by supplemental yeast. The fermentation took place with the naturally present yeast in the grapes.⁵ Brother Vallejos explains that anciently, without all of the instruments available today, it was also a challenge to determine when the fermentation process was complete. Humberto suggests that it is likely that at the time of the Savior a partially fermented sweet wine (once again, where only parts of the sugars had been converted into alcohol and the remainder continued as sugars) was utilized. As a result, the alcohol levels in new wine would have been much lower and less inebriating.⁶ ¶ The expression יֵבֶה means a vine press or container where the juice was accumulated. These reservoirs may have been constructed by digging into the earth or hewing them out of a rock (Gesenius, HAL, BDB). The wine press is a type and shadow of the atonement (although there are also allusions to Judgment Day). “I have trodden the winepress alone; and of the people there was none with me: for I will tread them in mine anger, and trample them in my fury; and their blood shall be sprinkled upon my garments, and I will stain all my raiment” (ISAIAH 63:3). ¶ And he looked that it should bring forth grapes. After all these extensive preparations, the Lord of the vineyard could expect that the vineyard would bring forth grapes, or good works. ¶ And it brought forth wild grapes. Instead of bringing forth sweet wonderful grapes, the grapes were spoiled. The Hebrew word translated as wild grapes is בִּאֲשִׁים, from the root בָּאֵשׁ, representing something with a foul smell (Gesenius), most likely putrid: perhaps botrytis bunch rot. Green supports the possibility of rotten grapes in his more literal interlinear text (but not in the side text). At the right time of the year, a rain might cause botrytis or other diseases to bring massive rot to the grapes in a whole vineyard. A grape that is not ripened is next in likelihood. These would indeed be small bitter or sour grapes. Finally, and least likely in a vineyard, there exists the possibility of the rootstock putting forth shoots⁷ and producing wild grapes. There are additional possibilities mentioned by some exegetes, such as the presence of noxious or poisonous weeds taking over the vineyard.⁸ The LXX (6) has, “Whereas I expected it to bring forth grapes, but it has brought forth thorns.” Returning to Isaiah, the בִּאֲשִׁים or “spoiled grapes” seem to represent evil works. “And it shall come to pass, that instead of sweet smell there shall be stink” (ISAIAH 3:24a). Kay offers the following thought: “Israel, the ‘seed of Abraham, the friend of God’ (41:8), was a Vine of a noble stock, whose wine was to

⁷ The grapes that produce wine are mostly vitis vinifera, although there are other varieties that are sometimes used. Some varieties of “wild grapes” are often used today as rootstock to combat against root borne diseases, to which the scions (the top graft that produces the good grapes) would be susceptible if planted directly in the soil. With a few notable exceptions (such as Chile), most all countries in the world today require a rootstock to combat Phylloxera and other soil borne diseases. This was not always so, of course, before plant materials from one continent infested that of another. If vines are poorly tended, the graft might not work well and the rootstock might overpower the scion, thus producing wild grapes. In the winter of 1999-2000 we had a hard freeze in Modesto. The next winter, one of my daughters noticed that two huge lemons were growing in what had been an otherwise productive lemon tree. Each of these enormous lemons was almost the size of a person’s head. A colleague at the University of California quickly sized up the situation: “It is a ponderosa lemon,” he explained. A shoot from the rootstock had taken off. This branch had thorns and these two tremendous lemons. The lemons were mostly show. If one cuts through the middle he will find mostly rind, with a tiny little lemon inside. All show; no virtue. Exalted and boastful pride with nothing to show for it. By the time I removed the offending ponderosa limb, it had taken over a third of the tree, sapping much of the tree’s strength.

⁸ Lowth, for instance, explains that “בִּאֲשִׁים, not merely useless unprofitable grapes, such as wild grapes; but grapes offensive to the smell, noxious, poisonous. By the force of the intent of the allegory, to good grapes ought to be opposed fruit of a dangerous and pernicious quality.” Then he goes on to suggest another type of vine (נֶפֶל) rather than the grape vine (נֶפֶל דִּינִי) may be involved. Lowth quoted the story in 2 Kings 4:39-41, about Elisha and the poisoned pottage. Lowth quotes Fredric Hasselquist’s book of travels (Voyages and Travels in the Levant, 1766, p. 289) “I am inclined to believe that the Prophet here (ISAIAH 5:2, 4.) means the hoary night shade, solarium incanum : because it is common in Egypt, Palestine, and the East ; and the Arabian name agrees well with it. The Arabs call it aneb el dib, i. e. wolf-grapes. The Prophet could not have found a plant more opposite to the vine than this; for it grows much in the vineyards, and is very pernicious to them; wherefore they root it out: it likewise resembles a vine by its shrubby stalk.” Lowth also quotes Deuteronomy 32:32-33: “For their vine is of the vine of Sodom, and of the fields of Gomorrah: their grapes are grapes of gall, their clusters are bitter: Their wine is the poison of dragons, and the cruel venom of asps.”

⁵ By the way, this is why the Nazarites were not permitted to eat grapes or raisins as some might have fermented. See Numbers 6:1-4.

⁶ Interview with Brother Humberto Vallejos P. on 27 May 2017, two days before his 78th birthday. Brother Humberto was baptized in February of 2014. Although he kept a Book of Mormon I had given him years earlier, I chuckle as my friend tells me that it was the Sister Missionaries who helped his conversion and I had nothing to do with it! He worked for our family vineyard, Barros Negros, for 39 years. Humberto was the agricultural technician and wine maker. As a pre-teenager, Humberto witnessed the making of artisanal wines that were produced the old fashioned way by his relatives, without added yeast, and crushed manually and then stored in barrels. The grapes were transported by oxen-pulled carts to the winepress. The leftover orujo (skins, seeds, and other residues) was given to the swine, who would get thoroughly drunk with it.

‘gladden God and men’ (Judges 9:13). It was planted amidst rich privileges, temporal and spiritual;—in a land that flowed with milk and honey and had the sanctifying presence of the Holy One with it. If the Vine had produced its fruit, it would have been a ‘blessing to all nations;’ making the ‘righteousness’ of faithful Abraham (Genesis 15:6) to overflow the earth. But Israel in the first cycle of its history—like the Nazarite⁹ Samson in the valley of Sorek—was seduced by the world; and became ‘a mockery’ to its neighbours” (Kay).

3 And now, O inhabitants of Jerusalem, and men of Judah, judge, I pray you, betwixt me and my vineyard.

And now, O inhabitants of Jerusalem, and men of Judah. This is a frequent prophetic device. The Lord is taking the role of a prosecutor in a court of law.¹⁰ One cannot fail but sense the tenderness of the Lord, despite His disappointment. ¶ Judge, I pray you, betwixt me and my vineyard. The Lord here, as well as during His earthly ministry, used parables and illustrations to help hearers understand the justice of His perspective.¹¹

⁹ Nazarite, in the KJV. נָזִיר, one consecrated to the Lord, and as such would keep a strict law of conduct, including not partaking of alcohol, as we mentioned in a footnote above.

¹⁰ Two examples from Hosea are: “Hear the word of the LORD, ye children of Israel: for the LORD hath a controversy with the inhabitants of the land, because there is no truth, nor mercy, nor knowledge of God in the land” (Hosea 4:1) and “O Ephraim, what shall I do unto thee? O Judah, what shall I do unto thee? for your goodness is as a morning cloud, and as the early dew it goeth away” (Hosea 6:4).

¹¹ In the case of David and Bathsheba, the Lord used a similar approach. “And the LORD sent Nathan unto David. And he came unto him, and said unto him, There were two men in one city; the one rich, and the other poor. The rich man had exceeding many flocks and herds: But the poor man had nothing, save one little ewe lamb, which he had bought and nourished up: and it grew up together with him, and with his children; it did eat of his own meat, and drank of his own cup, and lay in his bosom, and was unto him as a daughter. And there came a traveller unto the rich man, and he spared to take of his own flock and of his own herd, to dress for the wayfaring man that was come unto him; but took the poor man’s lamb, and dressed it for the man that was come to him. And David’s anger was greatly kindled against the man; and he said to Nathan, As the LORD liveth, the man that hath done this thing shall surely die: And he shall restore the lamb fourfold, because he did this thing, and because he had no pity. And Nathan said to David, Thou art the man. Thus saith the LORD God of Israel, I anointed thee king over Israel, and I delivered thee out of the hand of Saul; And I gave thee thy master’s house, and thy master’s wives into thy bosom, and gave thee the house of Israel and of Judah; and if that had been too little, I would moreover have given unto thee such and such things. Wherefore hast thou despised the commandment of the LORD, to do evil in his sight? thou hast killed Uriah the Hittite with the sword, and hast taken his wife to be thy wife, and hast slain him with the sword of the children of Ammon. Now therefore the sword shall never depart from thine house; because thou hast despised me, and hast taken the wife of Uriah the Hittite to Recalling the parable spoken regarding the Son who was killed by those husbandmen to whom the vineyard had been entrusted, here we see the question and answer approach: “When the lord therefore of the vineyard cometh, what will he do unto those husbandmen? They say unto him, He will miserably destroy those wicked men, and will let out his vineyard unto other husbandmen, which shall render him the fruits in their seasons. Jesus saith unto them, Did ye never read in the scriptures, The stone which the builders rejected, the same is become the head of the corner: this is the Lord’s doing, and it is marvellous in our eyes? Therefore say I unto you, The kingdom of God shall be taken from you, and given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof” (Matthew 21:40–43).

4 What could have been done more to my vineyard, that I have not done in it? wherefore, when I looked that it should bring forth grapes, it brought it forth wild grapes?

What could have been done more to my vineyard, that I have not done in it? What more could He have done as King and loving Lord, for the people to have repaid Him thus. ¶ Wherefore, when I looked that it should bring forth grapes, it brought forth wild grapes. One can read the melancholic disappointment. The Lord’s expectations were for good fruit, but instead found wickedness. See also the allegory of Zenos in Jacob 5.

5 And now go to; I will tell you what I will do to my vineyard—I will take away the hedge thereof, and it shall be eaten up; [and] I will break down the wall thereof, and it shall be trodden down;

✓ for a treading

And now go to; I will tell you what I will do to my vineyard. The Lord is telling Judah and Jerusalem, as he did to King David, “Thou art the man,” and now would dictate the punishment that would follow. ¶ I will take away the hedge thereof, and it shall be eaten up; and I will break down the wall thereof, and it shall be trodden down. The hedge, wall, or fence would be removed, allowing men and beasts who would devour it into the vineyard. Animals, such as horses, will not only eat the grapes, but the leaves, also. The Lord would now permit be thy wife. Thus saith the LORD, Behold, I will raise up evil against thee out of thine own house, and I will take thy wives before thine eyes, and give them unto thy neighbour, and he shall lie with thy wives in the sight of this sun. For thou didst it secretly: but I will do this thing before all Israel, and before the sun” (2 Samuel 12:1–12).

Assyria, Babylon, and other nations to trample the children of Jacob. In Rain in Due Season we read: “And if ye shall despise my statutes, or if your soul abhor my judgments, so that ye will not do all my commandments, but that ye break my covenant: ... then I will scatter you among the heathen, and will draw out a sword after you: ...” (Leviticus 26:15, 33a). Micah also spoke of the utter destruction that Jerusalem would face: “Therefore shall Zion for your sake be plowed as a field, and Jerusalem shall become heaps, and the mountain of the house as the high places of the forest” (Micah 3:12, cf. Jeremiah 26:18). “For your sake” can be taken with at least two meanings: because of your fault, and for your benefit. Sometimes when we face difficult predicaments in life it is hard to see the benefit, yet except for sin, all things can work for our good. So would it be with the dispersion of Israel. The great sorrows would in the latter-days become multiplied joys. A good parent often hurts more than the child he punishes, but must follow through with the reprimand. Without the reproof, the child does not know his limits. Israel would now be scattered to every nation and corner of the globe, and fulfill a key role in the sharing of blessings with the whole world. Until the Lord would say enough, “For a small moment have I forsaken thee; but with great mercies will I gather thee” (ISAIAH 54:7).

6 And I will lay it waste: it shall not be pruned, nor digged; but there shall come up briers and thorns; I will also command the clouds that they rain no rain upon it.

And I will lay it waste: Once again, here is a series of direct allusions to the promises and curses in Rain in Due Season: “... and your land shall be desolate, and your cities waste” (Leviticus 26:33). Assyria, Babylon, Rome and other nations would all have a role in laying cities waste in Israel. In the latter days, the nations of the world will turn against Israel. ¶ It shall not be pruned, nor digged. When a vine is not pruned, it produces lots of leaves but little fruit. Digging, or plowing, plays an important role in reducing earth compaction, increasing root aeration, and controlling and reducing weeds and noxious plants. From a spiritual perspective, pruning and digging may be equivalent to the teaching of the word of God among the people. Such spiritual manifestations and prophetic voices would be in times silenced, because of disobedience. “Behold, the days come, saith the Lord GOD, that I will send a famine in the land, not a famine of bread, nor a thirst for water, but of hearing the words of the LORD: And they shall wander from sea to sea, and from the north even to the east, they shall run to and fro to seek the word of the LORD, and shall not find it” (Amos 8:11–12). Similarly, the Spirit of the Holy Ghost is offended and departs, as does the Spirit of Christ, through disobedience. ¶ But there shall come up briers and thorns. Briers and thorns come up when the earth is not plowed. Like the wild or putrid grapes, these may also represent evil works all around. ¶ I will also command the clouds that they rain no rain upon it. In Rain in Due Season the Lord promised those who kept His word, that they would have “rain in due season” (Leviticus 26:4b), but to those who turned away from Him, “I will make your heaven as iron” (Leviticus 26:19b). When the Lord makes the heavens as iron, He often is speaking just as much about the closing of the heavens for spiritual manifestations as that of physical precipitation and other types of blessings. This is, in essence, what happened to King Saul because of his disobedience: “And when Saul enquired of the LORD, the LORD answered him not, neither by dreams, nor by Urim, nor by prophets” (1 Samuel 28:6, see more in ISAIAH 26 notes). Perhaps the Holy Temple stands in a unique way, above all others, to show that communications between the heavens and the earth are open. In Solomon’s dedicatory prayer he was alluding at least in part to Rain in Due Season, when he prayed to the Lord and asked that He would forgive Israel if she turned away from doing that which was right: “When the heaven is shut up, and there is no rain, because they have sinned against thee; yet if they pray toward this place, and confess thy name, and turn from their sin, when thou dost afflict them; Then hear thou from heaven, and forgive the sin of thy servants, and of thy people Israel, when thou hast taught them the good way, wherein they should walk; and send rain upon thy land, which thou hast given unto thy people for an inheritance” (2 Chronicles 6:26–27). In terms of both the scattering and subsequent gathering of Israel, the dedicatory prayer includes the following: “If they return (שׁוּבוּ) to thee with all their heart and with all their soul in the land of their captivity, whither they have carried them captives, and pray toward their land, which thou gavest unto their fathers, and toward the city which thou hast chosen, and toward the house which I have built for thy name: Then hear thou from the heavens, even from thy dwelling place, their prayer and their supplications, and maintain their cause, and forgive thy people which have sinned against thee” (2 Chronicles 6:38–39). That the Lord heard the prayer was clearly manifested: “Now when Solomon had made an end of praying, the fire came down from heaven, and consumed the burnt offering and the sacrifices; and the glory of the LORD filled the house. And the priests could not enter into the house of the LORD, because the glory of the LORD had filled the LORD’s house” (2 Chronicles 7:1–2). Furthermore, note what the Lord spoke to Solomon regarding this beautiful and inspired prayer: “And the LORD appeared to Solomon by night, and said unto him,

I have heard thy prayer, and have chosen this place to myself for an house of sacrifice. If I shut up heaven that there be no rain, or if I command the locusts to devour the land, or if I send pestilence among my people; If my people, which are called by my name, shall humble themselves, and pray, and seek my face, and turn (וְשָׁבוּ) from their wicked ways; then will I hear from heaven, and will forgive their sin, and will heal their land” (2 Chronicles 7:12–14). Note how the Lord loads with meaning the words, “... for an house of sacrifice.” By these words, the Lord not only was speaking of Solomon’s Temple, but of the House of Israel, who would be a house of sacrifice unto the Lord. First and foremost that House of Sacrifice would be the Lord Himself, who would give His life for us; and secondly, there is a reference to the suffering that the Jews and all of the house of Israel would be subjected to as part of the dispersion. What a glorious promise! In ISAIAH 5:2 we spoke of the tower as being a spiritual representation of the Holy Temple. It would make sense, then, that when revelations and Priesthood authority cease to be found upon the earth, that the Temple would also cease to be. The Targum (ܬ) has: “And now, now I will tell you what I will do to my people; I will cause my *Shekinah*¹² (שְׁכִינָה) to remove from them, and they shall be for a spoil; I will break down the house of their sanctuary, and they shall be for a treading down. I will make them abandoned ones; they shall not be visited, neither shall they be supported; and they shall be cast out and forsaken. I will command the prophets that they do not prophesy to them prophecy” (ܬ ISAIAH 5:5–6). Let us consider, for a moment, the word rendered as Shekinah (שְׁכִינָה), in the Targum (ܬ). Shekinah means royal residence, royalty, and most especially, Divine Presence (DOT). In the DOT we find a reference to Exodus 25:8, 22. “And let them make me a sanctuary; that I may dwell (וְשָׁכַנְתִּי) among them” (Exodus 25:8). The root of the word is שָׁכַן, to abide or dwelt,¹³ related also to habitation of God, the temple, the sacred tabernacle of the Israelites (AHCL). TWOT has, “The verb שָׁכַן is used 129 times in the OT ... God is the designated subject of the verb 43 times. He may dwell on Mount Zion (Psalms 74:2). He dwells among his people (Exodus 25:8). He will dwell in Jerusalem (Zechariah 8:3).”

¹² So why is the word Shekinah substituted for dwelt? The following from J. F. Stenning, in the introduction to the Targum of Isaiah explains: “Since the main object of the Targumist was to render the Hebrew original intelligible to the ordinary people it is not surprising to find that its chief characteristic is the use of paraphrase. This is especially noticeable in the case of the Prophets, where a strictly literal translation would often have failed to convey the meaning of the Hebrew. But the desire to give an intelligible reproduction of the Hebrew text was not the only motive which prompted the translator: he was also concerned to avoid any rendering which seemed to conflict with later religious ideas. The most striking illustration of this motive is afforded by the treatment of those passages which relate to the Divine Being. From the standpoint of later Jewish theology the primitive representations of God in the Old Testament, and especially the anthropomorphic figures applied to Him ...” (Targum, p. xii). Sometimes great measures were taken to make changes, and it is surprising how well the scriptures have survived to our day, all things considered. “There were certain limits beyond which the translator could not venture without incurring the rebuke of the learned, but it does not appear that any definite rules were laid down for his guidance. The nearest approach to a general principle is the dictum ascribed to Jehuda ben Ilai (2nd century A.D., “Tos. Meg. end; Meg. 74d; Ber. 9c, is the Targum introductory footnote to this passage): ‘He who translates a verse quite literally is a liar, while he who adds anything thereto is a blasphemer.’ Thus Exodus 24:10 ‘and they saw the God of Israel’ must not be rendered literally since no man can be said to have seen God: on the other hand, to insert the word ‘angel’ (מַלְאָכָא) would be blasphemous, since an angel would be substituted for God. The correct rendering is ‘and they saw the glory (קִרְאָ) of the God of Israel’” (ܬ, p. ix). As LDS we believe that indeed God has a body, and that the scriptures did not need correcting in this respect. “The Father has a body of flesh and bones as tangible as man’s; the Son also; but the Holy Ghost has not a body of flesh and bones, but is a personage of Spirit. Were it not so, the Holy Ghost could not dwell in us” (D&C 130:22).

7 For the vineyard of the LORD of hosts [is] the house of Israel, and the men of Judah his pleasant plant; ~ and he looked for judgment, but and behold, oppression ~; for righteousness, but behold, a cry.
✓ plant of his pleasures ✓ ✓ a scab

For the vineyard of the LORD of hosts is the house of Israel. Now, the Lord explains the meaning of the parable. The vineyard represents the children of Jacob, or the house of Israel. The beloved, as we said, is the Great Jehovah, even Christ Jesus. ¶ And the men of Judah his pleasant plant. Each of the vines represent the men of Judah. Much of this parable applies to the whole house of Israel, however, with the men of Judah being a representative. ¶ And he looked for judgment, and behold, oppression; for righteousness, but behold, a cry. (See notes on ISAIAH 1:17.) A number of translations capture the mood of this verse: “He expected fair judgment, but found injustice, uprightness, but found cries of distress” (NJB); “And he waited For equity but lo! murderous iniquity, For the rule of right but lo! the cry of the wronged” (EB); and “Thus He looked for justice, but behold, bloodshed; For righteousness, but behold, a cry of distress” (NAS). The Tanakh and EB note the rhyme, paronomasia, or word play in the two set of Hebrew words, those corresponding to the words judgment (מִשְׁפָּט) / oppression (מִשְׁפָּח) as well as to righteousness (צְדָקָה) / cry (צִיָּקָה).

¹³ A related word, מִשְׁכָּן, refers to the Tabernacle. (TWOT).

vv. 8–25. Here we have six woes against Israel based on sins she committed. These sins are the “wild grapes” mentioned in ISAIAH 5:2. Such wrongdoing included avarice, drunkenness, preference for sin over God, calling evil good and good evil, dishonesty and pride.

8 ¶ Woe unto them that join house to house, [that] lay field to field,* till [there] can [be] no place, that they~ may be placed alone in the midst of the earth!

✓ ye

* JST & KJV include “[that] lay field to field,” while Book of Mormon deletes.

Woe unto them that join house to house, that lay field to field, till there can be no place. A number of commentators have suggested that this verse speaks of those seek to greatly increase the size of their properties. The Targum (ⲧ), Syriac (Ⲫ) and LXX (Ⲭ) support that notion: “Woe unto them that join house to house, [that] attach the field [obtained] by oppression to their fields ...” (ⲧ¹⁴); “Woe to those who trespass the boundaries between houses, who remove the landmarks between the fields, to steal the land”; and “Woe [to them] that join house to house, and add field to field, that they may take away something of their neighbour’s” (Ⲭ). The implication here is that those riches were obtained through the exploitation and oppression of the poor, the widow, and the orphan, or outright theft.¹⁵ Barnes and Delitzsch well point out, that the Lord established the jubilee, so that those who ended up losing their land through either misfortune or mismanagement, would not have to always endure in their poor condition. The Law of Jubilee means that every 50 years the land reverted to the original owners.¹⁶ ¶ That they may be placed alone in the midst of the earth! Turning, once again, to the Targum (ⲧ), Syriac (Ⲫ) and LXX (Ⲭ), we have: “[Saying], Until we posses every place; and they think they shall dwell alone in the midst of the land” (ⲧ); “That they may dwell alone in the midst of the earth!” (Ⲫ); and, “Will ye dwell alone in the land?” (Ⲭ). It points to a greedy and insatiable need for obtaining or conquering more land. Henry pointed out that Alexander wept when he “fancied he had conquered the world,” as he contemplated that there was no more to subjugate. Delitzsch suggests that “luxury was the leading vice of Judah” at the time. Brigham Young warned Latter-day Saints, “The worst fear I have about this people is that they will get rich in this country, forget God and His people, wax fat, and kick themselves out of the Church and go to hell. This people will stand mobbing, robbing, poverty, and all manner of persecution, and be true. But my greater fear is that they cannot stand wealth.”¹⁷ With some concern, President Kimball, after quoting President Young, said, “To which I can hear many of you say, ‘Hasten the day.’” I have lived to see, sadly, this sort of pride manifested in intellectual arrogance on the part of a few ‘enlightened’ LDS, some of which trust more in the arm of the flesh than in the Brethren or in the Scriptures.

¹⁴ Stenning.

¹⁵ So it was, for instance, that wicked Ahab and Jezebel by stratagem stole the vineyard or land of their neighbor (1 Kings 21:1–16). Other instances include: “Yet now our flesh is as the flesh of our brethren, our children as their children: and, lo, we bring into bondage our sons and our daughters to be servants, and some of our daughters are brought unto bondage already: neither is it in our power to redeem them; for other men have our lands and vineyards” (Nehemiah 5:5); “And they covet fields, and take them by violence; and houses, and take them away: so they oppress a man and his house, even a man and his heritage” (Micah 2:2).

¹⁶ “And ye shall hallow the fiftieth year, and proclaim liberty throughout all the land unto all the inhabitants thereof: it shall be a jubile unto you; and ye shall return every man unto his possession, and ye shall return every man unto his family” (Leviticus 25:10); “In the year of the jubile the field shall return unto him of whom it was

9 In mine ears, [said] the LORD~ of hosts, Of~ a truth many houses shall be desolate, [even] and great and fair cities, without inhabitant.

✓ This is in mine ears saith the LORD ✓ ✓ If not

In mine ears, said the LORD of hosts. (See also ISAIAH 22:14.) Ibn Ezra suggests that this expression means that the unjust nature of things had come to the attention of the Lord. Cheyne likewise explains that some words have fallen from the text, and that many have suggested the meaning to be something like, “The cry of the oppressed hath come up to my ears.” The LXX (Ⲭ) has, “For these things have reached the ears of the Lord of hosts: for thought many houses should be built, many and fair houses shall be no inhabitants in them.” The Talmud tradition (Seder Zera’im, Berachoth 58b) quotes this verse as “In mine ears, said the Lord of hosts: Of a truth many houses shall be desolate &c.” (Talmud, Soncino). ¶ Of a truth many houses shall be desolate. “Of a truth” (KJV, ASV), “surely” (Green, Tanakh, NAS, NRSV), or as in the margin ||, “if not” or bought, even to him to whom the possession of the land did belong” (Leviticus 27:24).

¹⁷ Brown, James S., Life of a Pioneer, Salt Lake City: Geo. Q. Cannon and Sons Co., 1900, pp. 122–23, quoted by Elder Dean L. Larsen, Beware Lest Thou Forget the Lord, Ensign (CR), May 1991, p.10).

לֹא־אִם¹⁸ is, according to Delitzsch (and others), an oath formula. The complete formula being: לֹא־אִם־אֲנִי־חַיִּים, that is, “as I live, if not” (Delitzsch). “אִם in swearing is properly conditional, if, as in Samuel 3:17, God do so to thee, and more so, if thou, &c; but the form of imprecation is elsewhere omitted, and it is conveniently rendered by a negation, not, and לֹא־אִם by an affirmative” (AHCL). Although it may sound counter-intuitive, oftentimes an אִם introduces an emphatic negative while the clause לֹא־אִם, a forceful positive (BDB, Delitzsch). An example of the negative formula is: “The LORD hath sworn by the excellency of Jacob, Surely I will never forget any of their works” (Amos 8:7, literally, surely I will not forget forever {Green}, and frequently translated as never forget). An example of the emphatic positive is: “The LORD of hosts hath sworn, saying, Surely as I have thought, so shall it come to pass; and as I have purposed, so shall it stand” (ISAIAH 14:24). לֹא־אִם, אִם, and חַיִּים often form part of an oath formula.¹⁹ In contrast to the riches spoken of in the previous verse, many houses would be left without inhabitant, abandoned. Few things can have as humbling an effect on a person of wealth as to lose their earthly possessions and find themselves to be as everyone else. ¶ And great and fair cities, without inhabitant. The cities, even the beautifully constructed ones, would not escape the desolating scourge that would come. These occurrences may have a man-based origin, or be the result of the forces of nature.

10 Yea, ten acres of vineyard shall yield one bath, and the seed of an homer shall yield an ephah.

Yea, ten acres of vineyard shall yield one bath. A bath was “a liquid measure roughly equivalent to five and one half gallons (U.S.) ... The bath was one-tenth of a homer” (HBD). An acre, אֵמָר, constituted the measure of land that could be ploughed by a team of oxen in one day (HBD, AHCL, TWOT) and corresponds roughly to a half acre in today’s measure (TWOT). Ten acres, then, would be equivalent to five in modern times. A viticulturist told me that one can count on harvesting about 5,000 gallons of grape juice with that amount of land, or about 1,000 gallons per acre. ¶ And the seed of an homer shall yield an ephah. A homer could be represented either as a dry or liquid measure. As a dry measure, a homer would be equivalent to ten ephahs (HBD). It is easy to see the disaster, when a farmer’s return on investment would be one tenth. Such a farmer would have been better off not planting at all. In Rain in Due Season we have: “Thou shalt carry much seed out into the field, and shalt gather but little in; for the locust shall consume it ... Thou shalt plant vineyards, and dress them, but shalt neither drink of the wine, nor gather the grapes; for the worms shall eat them” (Deuteronomy 28:38a, 39). While the land of Israel today has been dedicated for the restoration of Israel, and it growing agricultural abundance is something very much taken for granted by our present generation, this was not so even two hundred years ago, before Elder Orson Hyde, one of the Lord’s Twelve Apostles at the time, dedicated the Land of Israel from the Mount of Olives, on October 24, 1841.²⁰ Barnes, speaking of the lack of fertility of the Holy Land in the early 1800s wrote: “At present, this formerly fertile country is among the most unproductive on the face of the earth” (Barnes). The vineyard of the Lord had been destroyed: “I went by the field of the slothful, and by the vineyard of the man void of understanding; And, lo, it was all grown over with thorns, and nettles had covered the face thereof, and the stone wall thereof was broken down” (Proverbs 24:30–31).

¹⁸ אִם stands for if, while לֹא for no, or negation. For more on oath formulas, see ISAIAH 22:14; and especially ISAIAH 62:8.

¹⁹ Another example is: “Wherefore, as I live, saith the Lord GOD; Surely, because thou ...” (Ezekiel 5:11a). Indeed, Ezekiel includes a number of variations on the oath formula. For instance, “As I live ... ye shall not” as in “As I live, saith the Lord GOD, ye shall not have occasion any more to use this proverb in Israel” (Ezekiel 18:3).

11 Woe unto them that rise up early in the morning, [that] they may follow strong drink; and that continue until night, [till] and wine inflame~them!

✓ pursue

²⁰ Orson Hyde wrote: “On Sunday morning, October 24, a good while before day, I arose from sleep, and went out of the city as soon as the gates were opened, crossed the brook Kedron, and went upon the Mount of Olives, and there, in solemn silence, with pen, ink, and paper, just as I saw in the vision, offered up the following prayer to Him who lives forever and ever.” Among the things mentioned in that prayer were these words: “Grant, therefore, O Lord, in the name of Thy well-beloved Son, Jesus Christ, to remove the barrenness and sterility of this land, and let springs of living water break forth to water its thirsty soil. Let the vine and olive produce in their strength, and let the fig-tree bloom and flourish. Let the land become abundantly fruitful when possessed by its rightful heirs; let it again flow with plenty to feed the returning prodigals who come home with a spirit of grace and supplication; upon it let the clouds distil virtue and richness, and let the fields smile with plenty. Let the flocks and the herds greatly increase and multiply upon the mountains and the hills....” (Joseph Smith, History of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, introduction and notes by B. H. Roberts, Volume 4, pp. 456, 457.) I had the great privilege of being at the Orson Hyde memorial in the Mount of Olives in September 2012.

Woe unto them that rise up early in the morning, that they may follow strong drink. That is, woe unto those persons who begin their day partaking of alcoholic beverages. שכר also means, beside strong drink, an alcoholic beverage with intoxicating qualities. That is, drinks with a higher concentration of alcohol. The higher the sugar content of a liquid before fermentation (measured in degrees Brix), the higher the proof or alcohol content. Lowth, based on some Syrian authorities, suggests that strong drink “meant properly palm wine, or date wine, which was and is still much in use in the Eastern countries. Judea was famous for the abundance and excellence of its palm tree; and consequently had plenty of this wine.” This is very likely the way ancient strong drink was made, and peoples everywhere have been known to make alcohol out of various fruits and concoctions. For instance, in Chile, a famous alcoholic beverage is chicha, made out of apple juice. ¶ And that continue until night, and wine inflame them! And then, who continue until late at night drinking, and continue to drink until they are utterly drunk. People can be inflamed by alcohol or lust. The word inflame implies a burning or increase in heat, such as from a flame. “The American Indians appropriately call [their alcoholic beverage] fire-water” (Barnes). Similar verses to ISAIAH 5:11–13 can be found in Amos: “Woe to them that are at ease in Zion Ye that put far away the evil day,²¹ and cause the seat of violence to come near; That lie upon beds of ivory, and stretch themselves upon their couches, and eat the lambs out of the flock, and the calves out of the midst of the stall; That chant to the sound of the viol, and invent to themselves instruments of musick, like David; That drink wine in bowls, and anoint themselves with the chief ointments: but they are not grieved for the affliction of Joseph. Therefore now shall they go captive with the first that go captive, and the banquet of them that stretched themselves shall be removed” (Amos 6:1a, 3–7). There are records among a number of native peoples that have documented this type of drinking parties that may have lasted for days.²²

12 And the harp, and the viol, the tabret, and pipe, and wine, are in their feasts: but they regard not the work of the LORD, neither consider the operation of his hands.

²¹ Seems to be saying that the time when consequences are to be paid for wrongdoing are far away or can be ignored.

²² See for instance, El Cautiverio Feliz, by Angel Custodio González, which details these excesses among the Lamanites of Chile toward the end of the 1600s. This book also speaks much about the good qualities found in the native peoples.

And the harp, and the viol, the tabret, and pipe, and wine, are in their feasts. Men may take extreme measures to make sure their feasts have every needful ingredient. ¶ But they regard not the work of the LORD, neither consider the operation of his hands. Yet when it comes to things of eternal worth, in contrast, little thought is given. Such as the price paid by the Savior if we will but follow Him.

13 Therefore, my people are gone into captivity, because [they have] no knowledge; and their honourable men [are] famished, and their multitude dried up with thirst.

✓ glory are men of famine

Therefore, my people are gone into captivity. We again turn to Rain in Due Season: “The LORD shall bring thee, and thy king which thou shalt set over thee, unto a nation which neither thou nor thy fathers have known; and there shalt thou serve other gods, wood and stone” (Deuteronomy 28:36). Here Isaiah is saying, furthermore, you have provoked the Lord with your continual wickedness so that time which was written of aforetime will now come to pass. ¶ Because they have no knowledge. What knowledge is being spoken about here? Knowledge of the Law and of the Covenant made with the Lord. “And thou shalt grope at noonday, as the blind gropeth in darkness, and thou shalt not prosper in thy ways: and thou shalt be only oppressed and spoiled evermore, and no man shall save thee” (Deuteronomy 28:29). People will be blind to spiritual things. ¶ And their honourable men are famished. The idea of spiritual and physical bondage are both present (also see ISAIAH 5:6). ¶ And their multitude dried up with thirst. This thirst is associated with drought and famine of food and of the word of God. In Rain in Dues Season we have: “Therefore shalt thou serve thine enemies which the LORD shall send against thee, in hunger, and in thirst, and in nakedness, and in want of all things: and he shall put a yoke of iron upon thy neck, until he have destroyed thee” (Deuteronomy 28:48). Barnes applies this to the coming Babylonian captivity: “The punishment here specified, refers particularly to a journey through an arid, desolate region, where drink could be obtained only with difficulty. Such was the route which the nation was compelled afterwards to take in going to Babylon.” Certainly, the captivity and scattering of Israel into Assyrian and Babylonia is included.

14 Therefore, hell hath enlarged herself, and opened her mouth without measure; and their glory, and their multitude, and their pomp, and he that rejoiceth, shall descend into it.

Therefore, hell hath enlarged herself, and opened her mouth without measure. Hell is compared to a wild beast who has opened her mouth wide, and is ready to devour her prey. The Hebrew term for hell, as translated by the KJV, is שְׁאוֹל (sheol), and is often transliterated as Sheol in other scripture translations. “Therefore Sheol hath enlarged its desire, and opened its mouth without measure; and their glory, and their multitude, and their pomp, and he that rejoiceth among them, descend into it” (ASV, cf. NAS, NRSV, REB, NJB, Syriac (S), Tanakh). Sometimes it is translated as “nether world” (NAB, JPS). The LXX (G) uses the Greek term Hades, αδης. In the TWOT we read, “There is much difference of opinion on the meaning of the term, occasioned in part by differing approaches to the Old Testament teaching on a future life ... The New Testament verses are highly problematical [such as] Christ’s descent from heaven and return there.” Through modern-day revelation, as LDS we have a good understanding of these issues. It seems that the best equivalent to Sheol or Hades is the Spirit World. In the spirit world the righteous spirits of the dead go to paradise, while the wicked ones go to spirit prison. Here it seems to refer to the spirit prison, which seemed anxious to receive those who had done wickedly. D&C 138 is the beautiful and tender account of the visit of the Lord to the Spirit World, wherein “the Son of God appeared, declaring liberty to the captives who had been faithful.” And furthermore, “from among the righteous, he organized his forces and appointed messengers, clothed with power and authority, and commissioned them to go forth and carry the light of the gospel to them that were in darkness, even to all the spirits of men; and thus was the gospel preached to the dead.” ¶ And their glory, and their multitude, and their pomp, and he that rejoiceth, shall descend into it. All that is prideful and replete with vainglory will descend into that spirit prison.

15 And the mean man shall be brought down, and the mighty man shall be humbled, and the eyes of the lofty shall be humbled:

And the mean man shall be brought down, and the mighty man shall be humbled. The thought is an allusion to ISAIAH 2:9, where we saw that both the mean (or common) man as well as the mighty one refused to humble themselves before the Lord. While both versions of ISAIAH 2:9 are understandable, the JST correction makes the stronger contrast between a refusal to bow down before the Lord and subsequently being humbled before Him. ¶ LITV translates this clause as: “And man is bowed down, and man is humbled.” That is because two synonyms are used for the word man in the Hebrew: אָדָם (adam or man) and אִישׁ (ish, or man). Hebrew scholars suggest that the former is an ordinary man while the latter is a mighty one (also see ISAIAH 2:9). ¶ And the eyes of the lofty shall be humbled: Perhaps no other part of man can speak as eloquently the feelings and attitudes of a man as his eyes. So it will be that the prideful look of man shall also be brought down.

16 But the LORD of hosts shall be exalted in judgment, and God that is holy~ shall be sanctified in righteousness.

✓ or, the holy God; the God, the holy.

Delitzsch suggests: “God, who is both exalted and holy in Himself, demanded that as the exalted One He should be exalted, and that as the Holy One He should be sanctified. But Jerusalem had not done that; He would therefore prove Himself the exalted One by the execution of justice, and sanctify Himself ... by the manifestation of righteousness, in consequence of which the people of Jerusalem would have to give Him glory against their will, as forming part of ‘the things under the earth’ (Philippians 2:10).” Similarly we have Rabbi Ibn Ezra’s comments: “Then the excellence of the Lord will be known by the judgment (משפט) which He will have executed on Israel, and His holiness will be revealed by the kindness (צדקה) shown to them.”

17 Then shall the lambs feed after their manner, and the waste places of the fat ones shall strangers eat.

This verse has been given a number of contrasting meanings.²³ The context is key in properly interpreting this verse. It appears that the verse is an allusion to the contrast between ISAIAH 5:8 and the verses that follow—showing the great excesses of the day—and the desolation that would follow. Lambs now feed where the former beautiful and expensive homes and lands of the rich used to be. In my trip to the Holy Land I saw a shepherd feeding his flock in the ruins of one of the ancient buildings. Besides the literal lambs, these may also be meant to represent the poor of the people who were left behind after the Babylonian defeat of Judah.²⁴ In the 19th Century, Delitzsch observed, “And when we consider that the Holy Land is at the present time an extensive pasture-ground for Arab shepherds, and that the modern Jerusalem which has arisen from the dust is a Mohammedan city, we may see in this also a literal fulfillment of ISAIAH 5:17.” The fat ones represent the wealthy men of Judah, to whom the good things of the earth had been plentiful; the stranger, the foreign forces who took possession of the land.

²³ For instance, the Syriac (S) has a message of redemption: “Then shall the lambs feed there in their usual fashion, and the waste places that shall be rebuilt shall be the property of the rightful owners.” The Targum (T) has a message of reversed fortunes, between the rich and those they exploited: “And the righteous shall be nurtured as was promised concerning them, and the riches of the wicked shall the righteous possess.” The LXX (G) seems to indicate that the people who once lived lavishly would be reduced and humbled to the level of animals fed in pasture and carried away captive, while their own lands would be abandoned. “And they that were spoiled shall be fed as bulls, and lambs shall feed on the waste places of them that are taken away” (G).

18 ¶ Woe unto them that draw iniquity with cords of vanity, and sin as it were with a cart rope;

Woe unto them that draw iniquity with cords (בְּחִבְלֵי) of vanity. It is instructive to see how the word cord is used elsewhere in scripture: “And if they be bound in fetters, and be holden in cords of affliction” (Job 36:8); “Let us break their bands asunder, and cast away their cords from us” (Psalms 2:3); “The LORD is righteous: he hath cut asunder the cords of the wicked” (Psalms 129:4); and “His own iniquities shall take the wicked himself, and he shall be holden with the cords of his sins” (Proverbs 5:22). Cords can bind or hold something fast, as a prisoner. Sins can act to bind a man, taking away his freedom and obstructing his agency. To draw iniquity gives the impression of pulling or leading a prisoner with such cords: “lead captive silly women laden with sins” (2 Timothy 3:6b). Almost the same terminology is used of the opposite of sin, when man is drawn with the love of the Lord: “I drew them with cords (בְּחִבְלֵי) of a man, with bands of love: and I was to them as they that take off the yoke” (Hosea 11:4a). Matthew Henry suggests: “[Those intent on iniquity] think themselves as sure of compassing their wicked project as if they were pulling it towards them with strong cart-ropes; but they will find themselves disappointed, for they will prove cords of vanity, which will break when they come to any stress.” Perhaps one can picture the building of an ancient bridge made out of rope. Those made out of cords of vanity will give way to their loads, sending those who have trusted in them into certain spiritual death; those who have trusted in the Lord will, instead, be able to cross their bridge in confidence and fall at the feet of the Lord with eternal tears of gratitude. ¶ And sin as it were with a cart rope. One may picture, perhaps, an ox pulling a cart full of sins. The Targum (ܬܪܓܡ) has: “Woe to them that begin to sin by little, drawing sins with the ropes of vanity, and they go on and increase until they are strong, and their sins are as a cart-rope” (ܬܪܓܡ). Kimhi explains, “An evil inclination is the beginning like a fine hair-string, but at the finishing like a thick cart-rope” (Kimhi from ancient Rabbins, in Lowth). Bishop Patrick Rhoades, of the Modesto 3rd Ward, once compared sin to a swimming pool in a hot summer day. It is unusual for people to jump head in into the pool. Most first put a toe in, and swirl it around a bit. Others may splash themselves a little with the water. But before a person knows it, the individual finds himself in the water, fully immersed. Likewise, sin may begin as a thin strand that can easily be broken, but when strand is added to strand, the force of habit before long can bind as a cord. The Talmud tradition (Seder Mo’ed, Sukkah 52a) explains the tyranny of addiction: “Rabbi Assi stated, The Evil Inclination is at first like the thread of a spider, but ultimately becomes like cart ropes, as it is said, Woe unto them that draw iniquity with cords of vanity, and sin as it were with a cart-rope” (Talmud, Soncino).

19 That say: Let him make speed, [and] hasten his work, that we may see [it]: and let the counsel of the Holy One of Israel draw nigh and come, that we may know [it]!

That say: Let him make speed, hasten his work, that we may see it. The essence of this verse seems to be a taunt by the unbeliever, as to when the prophecies of good, or warnings of punishment for evil, would come to pass (see also ISAIAH 66:5). Their taunt would soon enough be addressed, as the Lord would allow other nations to fall upon them (see ISAIAH 8:3). Just prior to the first coming, there was a great commotion manifested in the people of the American continent, as regarding the sign that would be given indicating that Christ would be born (3 Nephi 1:4–9). In the last days there will be a similar unbelief (ISAIAH 66:5), as manifested in the ²⁴ “And in the fifth month, on the seventh day of the month, which is the nineteenth year of king Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon, came Nebuzaradan, captain of the guard, a servant of the king of Babylon, unto Jerusalem: And he burnt the house of the LORD, and the king’s house, and all the houses of Jerusalem, and every great man’s house burnt he with fire. And all the army of the Chaldees, that were with the captain of the guard, brake down the walls of Jerusalem round about. Now the rest of the people that were left in the city, and the fugitives that fell away to the king of Babylon, with the remnant of the multitude, did Nebuzaradan the captain of the guard carry away. But the captain of the guard left of the poor of the land to be vinedressers and husbandmen” (2 Kings 25:8–12).

New Testament: “Knowing this first, that there shall come in the last days scoffers, walking after their own lusts, And saying, Where is the promise of his coming?” (2 Peter 3:3–4a). ¶ And let the counsel of the Holy One of Israel draw nigh and come, that we may know it! In this parallel thought, essentially the same idea is manifested, in a taunting voice toward the prophet, as well as the taking of the Lord’s name in vain. In the Targum (Ⲯ) we read: “That say, When will He hasten and reveal His miracle, that we may see it: and let the counsel of the Holy One of Israel draw nigh and come, that we may know it!”

20 Woe unto them that call evil good,[✓] and good evil, that put darkness for light, and light for darkness, that put bitter for sweet, and sweet for bitter!

✓ or, Say concerning evil, It is good

Woe unto them that call evil good, and good evil, etc. The same thought is repeated three times, contrasting good with evil with ever increasing strength, light with darkness, and sweet with bitter. Evil is described as dark and bitter; good as light and sweet. While it should be easy to tell good apart from evil, the day is here where people are so blind that they can no longer see in noon day because the Scriptures have been set aside as a thing of naught. Speaking of this verse, President Kimball taught, “The Savior said that if it were possible the very elect would be deceived by Lucifer. He uses his logic to confuse and his rationalizations to destroy. He will shade meanings, open doors an inch at a time, and lead from purest white through all the shades of gray to the darkest black.”²⁵ President James E. Faust observed: “The gap between what is popular and what is righteous is widening.”²⁶ In that same General Conference, Elder M. Russell Ballard observed: “Let me say again that the family is the main target of evil’s attack and must therefore be the main point of our protection and defense. As I said once before, when you stop and think about it from a diabolically tactical point of view, fighting the family makes sense to Satan. When he wants to disrupt the work of the Lord, he doesn’t poison the world’s peanut butter supply, thus bringing the Church’s missionary system to its collective knees. He doesn’t send a plague of laryngitis to afflict the Mormon Tabernacle Choir. He doesn’t legislate against green Jell-O and casseroles. When evil wants to strike out and disrupt the essence of God’s work, it attacks the family. It does so by attempting to disregard the law of chastity, to confuse gender, to desensitize violence, to make crude and blasphemous language the norm, and to make immoral and deviant behavior seem like the rule rather than the exception.”²⁷ Elder Durrel A. Woolsey said, “The war is for the souls of men. The battle lines have been drawn since Adam: evil versus righteousness. In this the final dispensation and in preparation for the Millennium, the forces of evil have intensified and united under the powerful influences of Satan. On the opposite side of the line, the kingdom of God is clearly sounding the trumpet of righteousness, as perhaps never before. The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints is on the offensive in the declaration of good to be good and evil to be evil.”²⁸

²⁵ Kimball, Spencer W. The Teachings of Spencer W. Kimball. Edited by Edward L. Kimball. Salt Lake City, Utah: Bookcraft, 1982. p. 279.

²⁶ President James E. Faust, “Lord, I Believe; Help Thou Mine Unbelief.” October 2003 General Conference.

21 Woe unto ~~[them that are]~~ the wise in their own eyes, and prudent in their own sight![✓]

✓ before their face

Jacob, the brother of Nephi, exclaims: “O that cunning plan of the evil one! O the vainness, and the frailties, and the foolishness of men! When they are learned they think they are wise, and they hearken not unto the counsel of God, for they set it aside, supposing they know of themselves, wherefore, their wisdom is foolishness and it profiteth them not. And they shall perish. But to be learned is good²⁹ if they hearken unto ²⁷ Elder M. Russell Ballard, “Let Our Voices Be Heard.” October 2003 General Conference.

²⁸ Elder Durrel A. Woolsey, “A Strategy for War.” October 1995 General Conference.

²⁹ Without a doubt, the Saints have been commanded to study and not be ignorant: “And as all have not faith, seek ye diligently and teach one another words of wisdom; yea, seek ye out of the best books words of wisdom, seek learning even by study and also by faith; ... And do thou grant, Holy Father, that all those who shall worship in this house may be taught words of wisdom out of the best books, and that they may seek learning even by study, and also by faith ...” (D&C 109:7, 14). Furthermore, “And set in order the churches, and study and learn, and become acquainted with all good books, and with languages, tongues, and people” (D&C 90:15). We also learn that in the Church, the teacher is not to set himself higher than the student: “And when the priests left their labor to impart the word of God unto the people, the people also left their labors to hear the word of God. And when the priest had imparted unto them the word of God they all returned again diligently unto their labors; and the priest, not esteeming himself above his hearers, for the preacher was no better than the hearer, neither was the teacher any better than the learner; and thus they were all equal, and they did all labor, every man according to his strength” (Alma 1:26). When we leave this mortal life, we can take those things we have learned. “Whatever principle of intelligence we attain unto in this life, it will rise with us in the resurrection. And if a person gains more knowledge and intelligence in this life through his diligence and obedience than another, he will have so much the advantage in the world to come” (D&C 130:18–19). Knowledge ought to be searched by us not only through good books, but also through inspiration, as the Prophet Joseph Smith taught: “for the counsels of God” (2 Nephi 9:28–29). Regarding the last days, we are told that men will be “Ever learning, and never able to come to the knowledge of the truth” (2 Timothy 3:1–5, 7). We are also informed that in the last days a spirit of pride will be prevalent. “Yea, it shall come in a day when the power of God shall be denied, and churches become defiled and be lifted up in the pride of their hearts” (Mormon 8:28a).

22 Woe unto [them that are] the mighty to drink wine, and men of strength to mingle strong drink;

Woe unto them that are the mighty to drink wine. By repetition (see ISAIAH 5:11) a woe is pronounced against those who drink wine in excess. Alcoholism is probably among the worst ills to affect mankind. Latter-day Saints who faithfully keep the modern day commandment—the Word of Wisdom—to not drink any alcohol at all, are greatly blessed. ¶ And men of strength to mingle strong drink (שִׁכָּר). Such as men who boast in their ability to drink strong liquor.

23 Which Who justify the wicked for reward, and take away the righteousness of the righteous from him!

The NAS has, “Who justify the wicked for a bribe, And take away the rights of the ones who are in the right!” Nyman cries out against a hypocritical stance that considers the man who committed the crime: “The gross dishonesty and distorted value system accepted by some in our day labels a man a thief for petty stealing, but regards unscrupulous business deals involving thousands or millions of dollars as just a good business.” Of course we know that both of these behaviors are wrong in the sight of God.

24 Therefore, as the fire devoureth the stubble, and the flame consumeth the chaff, [so] their root shall be as rottenness, and their blossoms shall go up as dust; because they have cast away the law of the LORD of hosts, and despised the word of the Holy One of Israel.

✓ tongue of fire

Therefore, as the fire devoureth the stubble, and the flame consumeth the chaff. Stubble, or chaff, is the one truth revealed from heaven is worth all the sectarian notions in existence” (TPJS, p. 338).

leftover stalk after the wheat, oats, or other grain is removed. This leftover plant would dry out as it was no longer attached to the roots. And in those cases where the crop was removed from the plant without separating it from the roots, it also dries out because it is no longer irrigated. Two properties of stubble are its (1) lightness, so the wind could easily remove it and allow the heavier grain to remain, and (2) its high combustibility, largely because of its dryness. So it is that the flame would consume it quickly. The more literal Hebrew in the margin ¶ depicts the fire as having a devouring tongue that licks up all that is in his way.³⁰ We read in Jeremiah: “I will make my words in thy mouth fire, and this people wood, and it shall devour them. Lo, I will bring a nation upon you from far, O house of Israel, saith the LORD: it is a mighty nation, it is an ancient nation, a nation whose language thou knowest not, neither understandest what they say. Their quiver is as an open sepulchre, they are all mighty men. And they shall eat up thine harvest, and thy bread, which thy sons and thy daughters should eat: they shall eat up thy flocks and thine herds: they shall eat up thy vines and thy fig trees: they shall impoverish thy fenced cities, wherein thou trustedst, with the sword” (Jeremiah 5:14b–17). An important difference between the LDS and many other Christian faiths, is that as LDS we do not think the Lord has abandoned Israel in favor of the Gentile nations. “Nevertheless in those days, saith the LORD, I will not make a full end with you” (Jeremiah 5:18). The scriptures are replete with promises to Israel, for the Lord would in the last days begin to recover His people Israel from every corner of the earth. ¶ Their root shall be rottenness. Hosea used quite a similar expression and reasoning: “Ephraim is smitten, their root is dried up, they shall bear no fruit: yea, though they bring forth, yet will I slay even the beloved fruit of their womb. My God will cast them away, because they did not hearken unto him: and they shall be wanderers among the nations” (Hosea 9:16–17). Root rot is a major and serious disease of plants. One cause of root rot is overwatering. ¶ And their blossoms shall go up as dust. The blossom is what turns into a flower and then into the fruit. When there is excess blossom fall, then trees and plants yield little fruit. How different from the promise of the Lord to those who would keep His statutes: “For I will have respect unto you, and make you fruitful, and multiply you, and establish my covenant with you” (Leviticus 26:9, Rain in Due Season). When Matthew Henry says, “The sin of unfruitfulness is punished with the plague of unfruitfulness” he is more correct than he could have ever imagined, as it is only in the highest degree of the ³⁰ The ASV uses the margin in this verse: “Therefore as the tongue of fire devoureth the stubble, and as the dry grass sinketh down in the flame.”

Celestial Kingdom that man will be able to have increase and posterity. ¶ Because they have cast away the law of the LORD of hosts, and despised the word of the Holy One of Israel. This is a reminder that the people of Israel had not kept the Law, and would now suffer the consequences described in Rain in Due Season: “...and ye shall sow your seed in vain ... neither shall the trees of the land yield their fruits” (Leviticus 26:16b, 20b,); “The LORD shall smite thee ... with mildew ... Thou shalt have olive trees throughout all thy coasts, but thou shalt not anoint thyself with the oil; for thine olive shall cast his fruit. (Deuteronomy 28:22, 40).

25 Therefore, is the anger of the LORD kindled against his people, and he hath stretched forth his hand against them, and hath smitten them; and the hills did tremble, and their carcases [were] torn in the midst of the streets. For all this his anger is not turned away, but his hand [is] stretched out still.

✓ cut off

Therefore, is the anger of the LORD kindled against his people. We have seen the kindling of fire on the chaff, now we see the kindling of the indignation of the Lord. For “He that spareth his rod hateth his son: but he that loveth him chasteneth him betimes” (Proverbs 13:24); and “For whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth” (Hebrews 12:6a). But there is a pattern in all of this. The Lord does not destroy at the first sign of disobedience, but rather, after iniquity has ripened.³¹ ¶ And he hath stretched forth his hand against them, and hath smitten them. The outstretched hand of the Lord is symbolic of either judgment toward the children of Jacob, or mercy toward them. Here it is judgment. ¶ And the hills did tremble. Barns says: “Gesenius supposes that the expressions which follow are descriptive of pestilence. Lowth and Rosenmüller ³¹ Abraham would be greatly blessed of the Lord in the land of Canaan: “And the LORD said unto Abram, after that Lot was separated from him, Lift up now thine eyes, and look from the place where thou art northward, and southward, and eastward, and westward: For all the land which thou seest, to thee will I give it, and to thy seed for ever” (Genesis 13:14–15). This promise is later clarified, as it would not take place during Abraham’s own lifetime. Before this would happen, Israel would become a captive people in Egypt. The Lord would not displace the Amorites who inhabited the promised land quite yet: “And he said unto Abram, Know of a surety that thy seed shall be a stranger in a land that is not theirs, and shall serve them; and they shall afflict them four hundred years; And also that nation, whom they shall serve, will I judge: and afterward shall they come out with great substance. And thou shalt go to thy fathers in peace; thou shalt be buried in a good old age. But in the fourth generation they shall come hither again: for the iniquity of the Amorites is not yet full” (Genesis 15:13–16).

suppose that they refer to the earthquakes which occurred in the days of Uzziah, and in the time of the prophets.” It has also been suggested that during the Syro-Ephraimitish war (and one could add others such as the Syrian, Babylonian, and Roman invasions, for instance) that “the mountains may then have trembled with the marching of troops, and the din of arms, and the felling of trees, and the shout of war” (Delitzsch). ¶ And their carcases were torn in the midst of the streets. The Targum (☩) reads, “And their carcases were cast out as dung into the midst of the streets.” The picture is one of distress and pain. So we read in Jeremiah: “And the carcases of this people shall be meat for the fowls of the heaven, and for the beasts of the earth; and none shall fray them away (Jeremiah 7:33)”; as well as, “And the people to whom they prophesy shall be cast out in the streets of Jerusalem because of the famine and the sword; and they shall have none to bury them, them, their wives, nor their sons, nor their daughters: for I will pour their wickedness upon them. Therefore thou shalt say this word unto them; Let mine eyes run down with tears night and day, and let them not cease: for the virgin daughter of my people is broken with a great breach, with a very grievous blow. If I go forth into the field, then behold the slain with the sword! and if I enter into the city, then behold them that are sick with famine!” (Jeremiah 14:16–18a). ¶ For all this his anger is not turned away, but his hand is stretched out still. This phraseology is a formula similar to that in Rain in Due Season (“And if ye walk contrary unto me, and will not hearken unto me; I will bring seven times more [punishment] upon you according to your sins,” Leviticus 26:21, 24, 27, 28) for the multiplication of punishments to fall upon mankind in an effort to reclaim souls.

vv. 26–30. In Isaiah, we often see parallel structures that seem to be a simple repetition. Yet in them, we sometimes find that the Lord has a hidden statement within one of these parallel halves. Likewise, it would be easy to think that verses 26 through 30 are simply a description of further punishments to be poured out against Judah by the hand of a nation or nations to come from the north, namely Assyria and Babylonia. Alexander writes about the folly of forced parallelism, “These [false] constructions are so violent, and the contrary usage so plain, that the question naturally arises, why should the latter be departed from at all? The answer is, because the favorite notion of exact parallelism requires it. All the writers who maintain this opinion assume that the second clause must express the same idea with the first, and in the same order ... the modern writers must have parallelism still more exact, and to this rhetorical chimera both the syntax and the true sense of the passage must be sacrificed.” ¶ The reason these verses are challenging, is that ensigns can be raised for war as much as for spreading the gospel. Jeremiah 4 includes almost every single allusion in these verses in ISAIAH 5:26–30 and yet appears to be a warning to Judah to turn to the Lord or face dire consequences.³² We see the standard or ensign (v. 6), the lion (v. 7), swift chariots (v. 13) and horses (v. 13, 29), the coming from a far country (v. 16), and the impending darkness (v. 23, 28), the shaking mountains (v. 24), the bowmen (v. 29). But when we turn to Jeremiah 50, the tides have changed. It is now Babylon and Assyria—the subject that attacked Israel in Chapter 4—who is being pursued with force. So it is that in Jeremiah 50 we have the ensign (v. 2); a nation that comes out of the north against Babylon (v. 3); even “an assembly of great nations from the north country” (v. 9, also v. 41); Israel is redeemed in tears of joy, “In those days, and in that time, saith the LORD, the children of Israel shall come, they and the children of Judah together, going and weeping: they shall go, and seek the LORD their God” (v. 4); bowmen of great accuracy, “their arrows shall be as of a mighty expert man; none shall return in vain” (v. 9, also vv. 14, 29); although Israel had been devoured and her bones broken by the lion of Assyria and Babylon (v. 17, also 44), Jehovah would punish Assyria and Babylon (v. 18) and “bring Israel again to his habitation” (v. 19); a fire would be kindled (v. 32); the nations who shall fight against Babylon shall roar like the sea (v. 32); mighty horsemen (v. 42); and the voice of the armies shakes the land (v. 46)! ¶ In these verses the Lord hisses for the obedience of the nations from afar. In ISAIAH 18 we also see the speed with which the Lord’s ambassadors are sent to recover Israel. ¶ In ISAIAH 5:25 we read that the Lord’s hand is raised and stretched out still, ready to fall again on Judah. If ISAIAH 5:26 ff. are not about Judah being punished, it means that the Lord was left with the hand in the air. Is there any other analogous case? The answer is a resounding YES! Speaking of ISAIAH 9:21, Skinner says: “...we feel that the last word has not been spoken: the hand is still outstretched, we wait to hear of the final blow.” Indeed, there is nothing more frightening than a vague threat. The hanging expression is certainly filled with a great rhetorical power. ¶ Rawlinson, based on Oppert (Inscriptions des Sargonides, pp. 45, 46), wrote that “Sennacherib says in one of his inscriptions, that he carried off to Nineveh 200,150 captives on his first expedition against Jerusalem.” Furthermore, we also know the Babylonians took thousands of captives also. Kay, however, makes a beautiful set of connections here: (1) “Of old the Lord had been Himself a ‘standard’ for His people to fight under,” as shown in Exodus 17:15, “And Moses built an altar, and called the name of it Jehovahnissi³³.” (2) “The description in ISAIAH 5:29 is plainly parallel to Hosea 5:14: ‘For I will be unto Ephraim as a lion, and as a young lion to the house of Judah: I, even I, will tear and go away; I will take away, and none shall rescue him.’” (3) Rather than “and shall carry it away safe” read, “‘he shall take alive.’ This is a singular expression; which almost compels us to think of God Himself as the real Invader (cp. especially ISAIAH 31:4–6). The verb means to ‘liberate’ from danger, to ‘cause to escape.’” ¶ The opposite word to Invader is Savior. And thus we would see this logical development, from the perspective of the LDS, as one where Christ is the Savior of His people Judah and Israel. Of course He sends His army to the ends of the earth to proclaim the good news, but it is He, even Jesus Christ who is the Redeemer of Israel. ¶ In Deuteronomy 28:39, Rain in Due Season, the Lord teaches Israel that if she is disobedient, “The LORD shall bring a nation against thee from far, from the end of the earth, as swift as the eagle flieth; a nation whose tongue thou shalt not understand.” In ISAIAH 18, however, we see how the Lord would bless Israel in the end of days. After the nations shall have trodden Israel under foot and punished her, in the last days a great blessing would come upon her, “In that time shall the present be brought unto the LORD of hosts of a people scattered and peeled, and from a people terrible from their beginning hitherto; a nation meted out and trodden under foot, whose land the rivers have spoiled, to the place of the name of the LORD of hosts, the mount Zion.” And furthermore, we read: “Behold, I will gather them out of all countries, whither I have driven them in mine anger, and in my fury, and in great wrath; and I will bring them again unto this place, and I will cause them to dwell safely: And they shall be my people, and I will be their God: And I will give them one heart, and one way, that they may fear me for ever, for the good of them, and of their children after them: And I will make an everlasting covenant with them.” (Jeremiah 32:37–40, emphasis added). To summarize then, while these verses in ISAIAH, on the surface, appear as an impending punishment, they are in reality a message of hope and deliverance. The source of all hope is Jesus the Christ. The glorious Gospel Standard has been erected, to go out to every corner of the world in order to gather Israel.

³² Elder Orson Hyde quoted some of these key verses in modern day, in a letter to Brother Joseph, while in route to Jerusalem. They appear to have been given as a summary of the suffering of the Jews, but also of yet future troubles to come upon Israel. Despite all that, the Lord would soon bless Judah. See Elder Orson Hyde’s Letter to Rabbi Hirschell, in Joseph Smith, History of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, introduction and notes by B. H. Roberts, 4:375–378.

³³ That is, “The Lord is my banner,” or, יְהוָה נִסִּי

26 And he will lift up an ensign to the nations from far, and will hiss unto them from the end of the earth; and, behold, they shall come with speed swiftly; none shall be weary nor stumble among them.*

* KJV begins new verse with "None shall be weary nor stumble among them."

And he will lift up an ensign to the nations (לְנָחִים) from far. Speaking of the gathering of Israel and the flow of nations unto the House of the Lord, Joseph Field Smith taught: "This prediction has been literally fulfilled. Thousands of people have come to the valleys of these mountains from all lands and climes, proclaiming these words of Isaiah³⁴ and Micah,³⁵ and here they have found the word of the Lord and have entered into the covenants, in the house of the Lord which the prophets said would be offered them that they might walk in his ways. No other place on the earth is there to be found a place which fits this description and unto which the people are gathering. Isaiah said further: 'And he will lift up an ensign to the nations from far, and will hiss unto them from the end of the earth: and, behold, they shall come with speed swiftly: None shall be weary nor stumble among them; none shall slumber nor sleep; neither shall the girdle of their loins be loosed, nor the latchet of their shoes be broken: Whose arrows are sharp, and all their bows bent, their horses' hoofs shall be counted like flint, and their wheels like a whirlwind ...' This may not have been fulfilled yet in completeness, but people have gathered swiftly. They have crossed the continent on trains without unlatching their shoes or removing their clothes, on their way to Zion. The time may not be far distant when they will come by air and thus fulfill all the rest of this prophecy. Then in speaking of horses' hoofs and wheels, may it not be that the prophet endeavored to picture the railroads on which the people should travel? Remember, this prophecy was spoken in Palestine and that is about as far away from these valleys as need be to fulfill the prophecy."³⁶ Elder Orson Pratt likewise taught: "'Where was Isaiah when he delivered this prophecy? In Palestine. Do you think you could get much further from Palestine and have an ensign raised up from afar? It is not an ensign that is to be raised up in the land of Palestine, right where the prophet predicted it; but he saw from afar, from a great distance, the great work God would perform in the latter day. 'Lift up an ensign for the nations;' not for one nation, not for a few people; but it was a work that was general in its nature—an ensign or standard the raising of which was to affect all the inhabitants of the earth."³⁷ Speaking of the restoration of the Gospel of Jesus Christ, Joseph Fielding Smith also taught: "That ensign was the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, which was established for the last time, never again to be destroyed or given to other people. It was the greatest event the world has seen since the day that the Redeemer was lifted upon the cross and worked out the infinite and eternal atonement. It meant more to mankind than anything else that has occurred since that day. No event should have been heralded among the people with greater effectiveness and received with greater evidence of joy and satisfaction. The nations should have rejoiced and welcomed it with gladness of heart, for with it came the establishment of divine truth in the earth—the gospel of Jesus Christ, which is the power of God unto salvation unto all who believe. The world had been without this gospel for many hundreds of years, ever since the great apostasy and turning away from the truth which had been established by the primitive Church. Following the raising of this ensign, the Lord sent forth his elders clothed with the priesthood and with power and authority, among the nations of the earth, bearing witness unto all peoples of the restoration of his Church, and calling upon the children of men to repent and receive the gospel; for now it was being preached in all the world as a witness before the end should come, that is, the end of the reign of wickedness and the establishment of the millennial reign of peace. The elders went forth as they were commanded, and are still preaching the gospel and gathering out from the nations the seed of Israel unto whom the promise was made."³⁸ ¶ And will hiss unto them from the end of the earth. This hissing or whistling refers to a signal that beckons, summons, or invites people to come. Cyril is often quoted in this respect. In Lowth we have: "The metaphor is taken from the practice of those that keep bees; who draw them out of their hives into the fields, and lead them back again, συρισμασι, by a hiss or a whistle." Rawlinson likewise explains Cyril's words: "'Hissing' is said to have been practiced by bee-keepers to draw their bees out of the hives in the morning, and bring them home again from the fields at nightfall." We might say: to first disperse the children of Jacob to the four corners of the earth, but then to call Israel back home with tender mercies.

³⁴ ISAIAH 2:2.

³⁵ Micah 4:1.

³⁶ Joseph Fielding Smith, The Restoration of All Things, p.143–144.

³⁷ Pratt, Elder Orson, "The Restoration of the Jews, Etc." Journal of Discourses, Vol. 14, No. 9, May 26, 1871, pp. 58–70.

³⁸ Joseph Fielding Smith, Doctrines of Salvation, edited by Bruce R. McConkie, 3:254–255.

¶ And, behold, they shall come with speed swiftly. The response to the call to come to Zion shall be a quick one, as a parallel passage in Zechariah: “And I will strengthen the house of Judah, and I will save the house of Joseph, and I will bring them again to place them; for I have mercy upon them: and they shall be as though I had not cast them off: for I am the LORD their God, and will hear them. And they of Ephraim shall be like a mighty man, and their heart shall rejoice as through wine: yea, their children shall see it, and be glad; their heart shall rejoice in the LORD. I will hiss for them, and gather them; for I have redeemed them: and they shall increase as they have increased. And I will sow them among the people: and they shall remember me in far countries; and they shall live with their children, and turn again (וָשׁוּבוּ)” (Zechariah 10:6–9). The Lord’s armies of missionaries shall go out swiftly among the nations to help bring in the harvest of souls. The Targum (ܬܠܡܝܬ) has: “And He will lift up an ensign to the nations from far, and he will call him from the end of the earth: and, behold, a king with his army shall come swiftly, as light clouds” (ܬܠܡܝܬ). ¶ None shall be weary nor stumble among them. All of this would take place at a time when travelers would cover great distances in trains, boats and airplanes.

27 None shall be weary nor stumble among them;* None shall slumber nor sleep; neither shall the girdle of their loins be loosed, nor the latchet of their shoes be broken;

* Book of Mormon begins this verse with “None shall slumber ...”

28 Whose arrows [are] shall be sharp, and all their bows bent, and their horses' hoofs shall be counted like flint, and their wheels like a whirlwind, their roaring [shall be] like a lion.*

* KJV begins new verse with “Their roaring [shall be] like a lion.”

29 Their roaring like a lion.* They shall roar like young lions; yea, they shall roar, and lay hold of the prey, and shall carry [it] away safe, and none shall deliver [it].

* Book of Mormon and JST begins new verse with “They shall roar like young lions ...”

Lowth says, regarding these verses, “Kimhi has well illustrated this continued exaggeration or hyperbole, as he rightly calls it.” Kimhi, the Jewish exegete said,

“Through the greatness of their courage, they shall not be fatigued with their march; nor shall they stumble, though they march with the utmost speed: they shall not slumber by day, nor sleep by night; neither shall they ungird their armour, or put off their sandals, to take their rest: their arms shall be always in readiness, their arrows sharpened, and their bows bent: the hoof of their horses are hard as a rock; they shall not fail, or need to be shod with iron: the wheels of their carriages shall move as rapidly as a whirlwind” (Kimhi, in Lowth). There is much less hyperbole involved than what it appears to Kimhi and many other commentators. Elder Orson Pratt spoke of the swiftness with which the Saints would migrate to Zion: “‘Who are these that fly as a cloud, and as doves to their windows?’ (ISAIAH 60:8). Sure enough we come with great speed. As Isaiah has said in the fifth chapter—the Lord should hiss unto thee from the ends of the earth, he should lift up an ensign for the nations, and they should come with speed swiftly; just as you emigrants do when you get on board of these railroads, when, instead of being ninety or a hundred days coming to this elevated region, as was the case for several years, you come in two or three days. ‘They shall come with speed swiftly, and he shall lift up an ensign from afar.’”³⁹ Similarly, Elder LeGrand Richards wrote: “Since there were neither trains nor airplanes in that day, Isaiah could hardly have mentioned them by name. However, he seems to have described them in unmistakable words. How better could ‘their horses hoofs be counted like flint, and their wheels like a whirlwind’ than in the modern train? How better could ‘their roaring . . . be like a lion’ than in the roar of the airplane? Trains and airplanes do not stop for night. Therefore, was not Isaiah justified in saying: ‘none shall slumber nor sleep; neither shall the girdle of their loins be loosed, nor the latchet of their shoes be broken’? With this manner of transportation the Lord can really ‘hiss unto them from the end of the earth,’ that ‘they shall come with speed swiftly.’ Indicating that Isaiah must have foreseen the airplane, he stated: ‘Who are these that fly as a cloud, and as the doves to their windows?’ (ISAIAH 60:8).”⁴⁰ The Lord’s armies surely will be a great force, but at the end, it is only the converting power of the Spirit of the Holy Ghost that provides any safety. The Savior, as we alluded to in Hosea 5:14 is our Redeemer: “For I will be unto Ephraim as a lion, and as a young lion to the house of Judah: I, even I, will tear and go away; I will take away, and none shall rescue him.”

³⁹ Orson Pratt, Journal of Discourses, 16:85.

⁴⁰ LeGrand Richards, Israel! Do You Know?, p.182.

30 And in that day they shall roar against them like the roaring of the sea: and if ~~[one]~~ they look unto the land, behold, darkness [and] sorrow, [✓] and the light is darkened in the heavens thereof. [✓]

✓ or, distress

✓ ✓ or, when it is light it shall be dark in the destructions thereof

And in that day they shall roar against them like the roaring of the sea: It seems that Isaiah was getting excited with the day of restoration, but as often happened in his prophecies, returned to the impending gloom that would precede the Second Coming. In that day refers to the end of days. The coming forth of the Gospel light would make the contrast all the more pronounced. And even after the Restoration, there would be gloomy times ahead, such as the Holocaust and the commotion of the earth in preparation for the Second Advent of our Lord and Savior. Regarding the times when there would be great devastation to come forth we read: “Wherefore, be not deceived, but continue in steadfastness, looking forth for the heavens to be shaken, and the earth to tremble and to reel to and fro as a drunken man, and for the valleys to be exalted, and for the mountains to be made low, and for the rough places to become smooth-and all this when the angel shall sound his trumpet. But before the great day of the Lord shall come, Jacob shall flourish in the wilderness, and the Lamanites shall blossom as the rose. Zion shall flourish upon the hills and rejoice upon the mountains, and shall be assembled together unto the place which I have appointed. Behold, I say unto you, go forth as I have commanded you; repent of all your sins; ask and ye shall receive; knock and it shall be opened unto you.

Behold, I will go before you and be your rearward; and I will be in your midst, and you shall not be confounded. Behold, I am Jesus Christ, and I come quickly. Even so. Amen” (D&C 49:23–28). ¶ And the light is darkened in the heavens thereof. “But in those days, after that tribulation, the sun shall be darkened, and the moon shall not give her light” (Mark 13:24); “But, behold, I say unto you that before this great day shall come the sun shall be darkened, and the moon shall be turned into blood, and the stars shall fall from heaven, and there shall be greater signs in heaven above and in the earth beneath; And there shall be weeping and wailing among the hosts of men; And there shall be a great hailstorm sent forth to destroy the crops of the earth. And it shall come to pass, because of the wickedness of the world, that I will take vengeance upon the wicked, for they will not repent; for the cup of mine indignation is full; for behold, my blood shall not cleanse them if they hear me not. Wherefore, I the Lord God will send forth flies upon the face of the earth, which shall take hold of the inhabitants thereof, and shall eat their flesh, and shall cause maggots to come in upon them; And their tongues shall be stayed that they shall not utter against me; and their flesh shall fall from off their bones, and their eyes from their sockets; And it shall come to pass that the beasts of the forest and the fowls of the air shall devour them up. And the great and abominable church, which is the whore of all the earth, shall be cast down by devouring fire, according as it is spoken by the mouth of Ezekiel the prophet, who spoke of these things, which have not come to pass but surely must, as I live, for abominations shall not reign” (D&C 29:14–21).

11 November 2000

Isaiah 6

ISAIAH 6 is one of the most glorious chapters in Scripture. Isaiah sees the Living God and is commissioned to preach the gospel. Important implications about the nature of God cannot be swept aside as a consequence of the resulting theophany. Isaiah's stewardship is a type of that of the Savior: "Here am I; send me."

vv. 1–4. Isaiah's glorious vision was much like that of Ezekiel and that of John the Beloved,¹ he had seen the Savior seated on His throne.

1 ¶ IN the year that king Uzziah died, I saw also the Lord sitting upon a throne, high and lifted up, and his train[✓] filled the temple.

✓ or, the skirts thereof

IN the year that king Uzziah died, around 750 BC. Kay points out that 758 B.C. was a jubilee year, marked with associated forgiveness (see ISAIAH 6:7). The Targum (ⲧ) reads instead, "In the year in which King Uzziah was smitten with the leprosy." With reference to the latter, Barns explains: "The Rabbins say that the meaning is, that he then became civilly dead, by ceasing to exercise his functions as a king, and that he was cut off as a leprous man from all connection with the people, and from all authority." At any rate, Henry explains that Isaiah was called to preach, and "Those who are to teach others the knowledge of God ought to be well acquainted with him themselves." This certainly was the case with the Prophet Joseph Smith, who was intimately acquainted with the Lord. How he wished that others could come to an understanding of spiritual things: "It is my meditation all the day, and more than my meat and drink, to know how I shall make the Saints of God comprehend the visions that roll like an overflowing surge before my mind."² The Prophet Joseph Smith was well acquainted with God, and had seen both the Father and the Son. Brother Joseph had a great desire, as we said, for all to be partakers of the same knowledge: "There are but a very few beings in the world who understand rightly the character of God. The great majority of mankind do not comprehend anything, either that which is past, or that which is to come, as it respects their relationship to God. ... The scriptures inform us that 'This is life eternal that they might know thee, the only true God, and Jesus Christ whom thou hast sent.'"³ ¶ The Talmud tradition (Seder Nashim, Yevamoth 49b) has amora⁴ Rabbah Bar Nahmani speaking as if he were addressing himself directly to Isaiah and asking the Prophet to explain a seeming contradiction: "Raba said: Your teacher Moses said, 'For men shall not see Me and live' and you said, 'I saw the Lord sitting on a throne, high and lifted up'" (Talmud, Soncino). ¶ Yet we know that there was no contradiction, only a corruption of the Scriptures in some places—as well as a misunderstanding of them. Here, Isaiah was being called to the ministry. Such a calling is not to be taken lightly. Nor does man have a right to enter into such without the proper authority: "Behold, I command you that you need not suppose that you are called to preach until you are called ... Seek not to declare my word, but first seek to obtain my word, and then shall your tongue be loosed; then, if you desire, you shall have my Spirit and my word, yea, the power of God unto the convincing of men." (D&C 11:15, 21); "Again I say unto you, that it shall not be given to any one to go forth to preach my gospel, or to build up my church, except he be ordained by some one who has authority, and it is known to the church that he has authority and has been regularly ordained by the heads of the church” (D&C 42:11). ¶ Matthew Henry, who died before the Gospel was restored, admitted: “None are allowed to go for God but those who are sent by him; he will own none but those whom he appoints.” Furthermore, those who are called must teach by the Spirit: “And the Spirit shall be given unto you by the prayer of faith; and if ye receive not the Spirit ye shall not teach” (D&C 42:14). ¶ I saw also the Lord sitting upon a throne, high and lifted up. Many read this verse to mean that it was the throne which was exalted (e.g., Ibn Ezra, Delitzsch, and Barnes). I have, rather, always felt it was the Lord Himself who was exalted, but among the exegetes only find agreement from Kay. And now, over fifteen years later (August 2016), I also find agreement from Shalom Paul [in his exegetical words regarding ISAIAH 57:15—GB, עַל־כִּסֵּא רָם וְנִשָּׂא, upon a throne, high and lifted up], “According to the straightforward reading of ISAIAH 6:1, רָם וְנִשָּׂא refers to the divine throne. The Masoretic vocalizers, however, placed a pausal accent under כִּסֵּא, since according to the Masoretes only the Lord himself is ‘high and lofty’ (see S. Kogut, The Bible: Punctuation and Exegesis [Jerusalem, 1994], 139, 216–17, 238 [Heb.].” ¶ We can contrast the exalted nature of the Lord in a latter chapter: “For thus saith the high and lofty One that inhabiteth eternity, whose name is Holy; I dwell in the high and holy place, with him also that is of a contrite and humble spirit, to revive the spirit of the humble, and to revive the heart of the contrite ones” (ISAIAH 57:15, cf. 52:13). Even before the foundation of this world, our Savior was exalted and revered; He was the Yahweh⁵ of the Old Testament. He who sat on the throne magnified the throne. ¶ Isaiah had seen the Lord! Jehovah (or Yahweh) was the name for the premortal Messiah. This is admitted by a number of exegetes. For instance, Delitzsch says: יְהוָה צְדִיקְנִי (Jehovah our Righteousness) is also used as a name of the Messiah,—a Messianic name [one also included in Jewish teachings] (vid. Midrash Mishle 57a, where this is adduced as one of the eight names of the Messiah).⁶ ¶ But here we depart from the beliefs of our fellow Christian brothers, who believe in the mystery of the Holy Trinity, wherein God the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost are one and three in a way that cannot be explained. And that Jesus Christ is the incarnate expression of that Holy Trinity. Before I had ever heard of the Prophet Joseph and his glorious vision in which he saw both the Father and the Son, or before I ever held a copy of the Book of Mormon in my hands, it was revealed to me that the Godhead is composed of three distinct beings but one in purpose (see introduction). For a long time I did not know how peculiar a doctrine it was. The Prophet Joseph Smith explained: “Paul says there are Gods many and Lords many;⁷ and that makes a plurality of Gods, in spite of the whims of all men ... I testify that Paul had no allusion to the heathen gods ... The heads of the Gods appointed one God for us; and when you take [that] view of the subject, it sets one free to see all the beauty, holiness and perfection of the Gods” (TPJS, pp. 372). Joseph Smith taught that beginning with Genesis 1:1, “In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth,” what we have is not a correct translation of God, which should read Gods in the plural, or Elohim. A better rendition is that found in Abraham: “And then the Lord said: Let us go down. And they went down at the beginning, and they, that is the Gods, organized and formed the heavens and the earth” (Abraham 4:1). Joseph taught that the original in the Bible read ““In the beginning the head of the Gods brought forth the Gods,” or, as others have translated it, ‘The head of the Gods called the Gods together’” (TPJS, p. 371). Brother Joseph taught that the Hebrew word for beginning, Bereshit (בְּרֵאשִׁית), is a corruption with someone adding the letter bet (ב) to it, and should have been rendered rosh (רֹאשׁ), or head, instead, with the ת attached (רֹאשִׁית) being simply a grammatical termination (TPJS, p. 371). ראש and ראשית both can also have reference to the beginning, thus having a double meaning.⁸ Professor, W. H. Chamberlin, of BYU, wrote an excellent paper on the plural nature of the word Elohim of which we quote but a very brief summary.⁹ We know that Christ is Alpha and Omega, the Beginning and the End. The commentator on the Jewish Pentateuch and Haftorahs wrote: “[Genesis 1:1] is a majestic summary of the story of Creation: God is the beginning, nay, the Cause of all things” (Hertz). ¶ Brother Joseph also taught that that in John 17:21, the expression “be one” would more correctly be translated from the Greek as *be agreed*¹⁰: “‘I am agreed with the Father and the Father is agreed with me, and we are agreed as one.’ The Greek shows that it should be agreed. ‘Father, I pray for them which Thou hast given me out of the world, and not for those alone, but for them also which shall believe on me through their word, that they all may be agreed, as Thou, Father, are with me, and I with thee, that they may also be agreed with us,’ and all come to dwell in unity, and in all the glory and everlasting burnings of the Gods” (TPJS, pp. 372–373). ¶ Anthropomorphic Nature of God. Delitzsch has, “There the prophet sees the Sovereign Ruler ... seated upon the throne, and in human form (Ezekiel 1:26), as is proved by the robe with a train, whose flowing ends or borders (fimbriae: shūilm, as in Exodus 28:33–34) filled the hall. The Septuagint, Targum, Vulgate, etc., have dropped the figure of the robe and train, as too anthropomorphic. But John, in his Gospel, is bold enough to say that it was Jesus whose glory Isaiah saw¹¹ (John 12:41).” Such anthropomorphic theophany has some people throughout time uncomfortable. Many Jewish and Christian philosophers of today and yesteryear believe that God is a formless being, else, they argue, how could he dwell in the heart of men? How could His influence be so widespread? How could God be perfect and powerful if He is limited to a physical body? After the Hellenization of Israel,¹² during the intertestamental period, these strange notions of a God without a physical body came to prevail among both Jew and Gentile. Recently, a number of interesting books, quite a few written by Jews, have fallen into my hands, showing that indeed the ancient peoples did believe that God had a body. J. F. Stenning, in the introduction to the Jewish Targum of Isaiah explains: “Since the main object of the Targumist was to render the Hebrew original intelligible to the ordinary people it is not surprising to find that its chief characteristic is the use of paraphrase. This is especially noticeable in the case of the Prophets, where a strictly literal translation would often have failed to convey the meaning of the Hebrew. But the desire to give an intelligible reproduction of the Hebrew text was not the only motive which prompted the translator: he was also concerned to avoid any rendering which seemed to conflict with later religious ideas. The most striking illustration of this motive is afforded by the treatment of those passages which relate to the Divine Being. From the standpoint of later Jewish theology the primitive representations of God in the Old Testament, and especially the anthropomorphic figures applied to Him ...” (p. xii). Rawlinson is honest enough to ask: “How we are to reconcile Exodus 33:20¹³ with this passage, Job 42:5, and Ezekiel 1:26–28, is uncertain.” The Ezekiel verses read as follows: “And above the firmament that was over their heads was the likeness of a throne, as the appearance of a sapphire

¹ "After this I looked, and, behold, a door was opened in heaven: and the first voice which I heard was as it were of a trumpet talking with me; which said, Come up hither, and I will shew thee things which must be hereafter. And immediately I was in the spirit: and, behold, a throne was set in heaven, and one sat on the throne. And he that sat was to look upon like a jasper and a sardine stone: and there was a rainbow round about the throne, in sight like unto an emerald. And round about the throne were four and twenty seats: and upon the seats I saw four and twenty elders sitting, clothed in white raiment; and they had on their heads crowns of gold. And out of the throne proceeded lightnings and thunderings and voices: and there were seven lamps of fire burning before the throne, which are the seven Spirits of God. And before the throne there was a sea of glass like unto crystal: and in the midst of the throne, and round about the throne, were four beasts full of eyes before and behind. And the first beast was like a lion, and the second beast like a calf, and the third beast had a face as a man, and the fourth beast was like a flying eagle. And the four beasts had each of them six wings about him; and they were full of eyes within: and they rest not day and night, saying, Holy, holy, holy, LORD God Almighty, which was, and is, and is to come. And when those beasts give glory and honour and thanks to him that sat on the throne, who liveth for ever and ever, The four and twenty elders fall down before him that sat on the throne, and worship him that liveth for ever and ever, and cast their crowns before the throne, saying, Thou art worthy, O Lord, to receive glory and honour and power: for thou hast created all things, and for thy pleasure they are and were created" (Revelation 4:1–11).

² Teachings of the Prophet Joseph Smith.

³ Joseph Smith, History of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, introduction and notes by B. H. Roberts, 6:303–304.

⁴ Talmudic Jewish scholar (The Standard Jewish Encyclopedia).

⁵ John the beloved testifies that Yahweh is Jesus. It is clear from these verses in Isaiah that the Seraphim are giving glory to Yahweh. For instance, see ISAIAH 6:3, Holy, Holy, Holy is Yahweh Tzebaoth: יְהוָה צְבָאוֹת; as well ISAIAH 6:5, “The King Yahweh Tzebaoth,” יְהוָה צְבָאוֹת. Since these Isaianic verses refer to Jehovah, now we can see that יְהוָה is Jesus the Christ, according to the Testimony of John regarding these same verses: “While ye have light, believe in the light, that ye may be the children of light. These things spake Jesus, and departed, and did hide himself from them. But though he had done so many miracles before them, yet they believed not on him: That the saying of Esaias the prophet might be fulfilled, which he spake, Lord, who hath believed our report? and to whom hath the arm of the Lord been revealed? Therefore they could not believe, because that Esaias said again, He hath blinded their eyes, and hardened their heart; that they should not see with their eyes, nor understand with their heart, and be converted, and I should heal them. These things said Esaias, when he saw his glory, and spake of him” (John 12:36–41, emphasis added).

⁶ See Delitzsch on ISAIAH 9:6, plus here there is a reference to the Lord as Messiah in Jeremiah, יְהוָה צְדִיקְנִי: “Behold, the days come, saith the LORD, that I will raise unto David a righteous Branch, and a King shall reign and prosper, and shall execute judgment and justice in the earth. In his days Judah shall be saved, and Israel shall dwell safely: and this is his name whereby he shall be called, THE LORD OUR RIGHTEOUSNESS” (Jeremiah 23:5–6).

⁷ “For though there be that are called gods, whether in heaven or in earth, (as there be gods many, and lords many,) But to us there is but one God, the Father, of whom are all things, and we in him; and one Lord Jesus Christ, by whom are all things, and we by him” (1 Corinthians 8:5–6).

⁸ See, for instance, Brown-Driver-Briggs, BDB.

⁹ W. H. Chamberlin of the Brigham Young College Logan Utah, “Use of the Word Elohim.” Improvement Era 1902. “Two words, El, of which Elim was the plural form, and Eloah, of which Elohim was the plural, were applied generally to Deity by the Hebrew people. All these forms are found in the other Semitic languages, and are, therefore, very ancient in origin. Under severest discipline the people of Israel were educated in the school of monotheism, in order that God’s nature might be revealed to man, and in order that unity might be introduced into the moral life of man. Under this discipline, the people of Israel must have learned to apply the plural form Elohim, which their fathers had used of Deity, in speaking of the one God whom they had been taught to serve. The Hebrew language would allow them to do this, for a few nouns, when used by them in the plural, seemed to magnify the original idea. In such cases the plural form was treated grammatically as singular. An example may be found in Job 40:15 where the plural form behemoth is used to intensify the image of the animal there being described, as is shown by context. In the same verse, the behemoth is referred to by the singular pronoun he. But the use of Elohim, in this sense, by the later writers of Israel, is not necessarily opposed to the view that in the earliest documents or writings which the Hebrews possessed, it was applied to a plurality of Gods. The objection to this view has been made that, with the plural form Elohim, in Genesis 1, the singular verb is used. Such a use of a singular predicate with a plural subject is, however, common in Hebrew [see] page 111 of Harper’s Hebrew Syntax.”

¹⁰ Regarding εν (εἷς, μία, ἓν), see the various lexicons for concurrence with the Prophet Joseph, including the New American Standard Exhaustive Concordance (concept of agreement); Theological dictionary of the New Testament (unanimous, as well as concept of unity between the Father and the Son, as well as with the Church, 2:440); Manual Greek Lexicon of the New Testament (of union and concord); Thayer’s Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament (to be united most closely, in will or spirit; and not given to dissensions); A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and other early Christian Literature (be of one mind).

¹¹ See my footnote on the same topic, above.

¹² Shayne J. D. Cohen suggests that all Jews were Hellenized; the question is to what degree. From the Maccabees to the Mishnah.

¹³ See notes on ISAIAH 6:5. We read in Exodus: “And he said, Thou canst not see my face: for there shall no man see me, and live” (Exodus 33:20). This text has been greatly corrupted, however, and the original was “And he said unto Moses, Thou canst not see my face at this time, lest my anger be kindled against thee also, and I destroy thee, and thy people; for there shall no man among them see me at this time, and live, for they are exceedingly sinful. And no sinful man hath at any time, neither shall there be any sinful man at any time, that shall see my face and live” (JST).

stone: and upon the likeness of the throne was the likeness as the appearance of a man above upon it. And I saw as the colour of amber, as the appearance of fire round about within it, from the appearance of his loins even upward, and from the appearance of his loins even downward, I saw as it were the appearance of fire, and it had brightness round about. As the appearance of the bow that is in the cloud in the day of rain, so was the appearance of the brightness round about. This was the appearance of the likeness of the glory of the LORD. And when I saw it, I fell upon my face, and I heard a voice of one that spake.” A quote of interest from Shayne Cohen is: “The God of the Hebrew Bible is for the most part an anthropomorphic and anthropopathic being, that is, a God who has the form and emotions of humans. He (it is a he) walks and talks, has arms and legs, becomes angry, happy, or sad, changes his mind, speaks to humans and is addressed by them, and closely supervises the affairs of the world. ... Philo is particularly careful to sanitize the anthropomorphic and anthropopathic passages ... Perhaps some Jews were concerned about the very unphilosophical image of God in the Hebrew scriptures, but most Jews were not. Apocalyptic visionaries and mystics persisted in seeing God sitting on his throne surrounded by his angelic attendants. The rabbis had no difficulty in believing in a God who loves and is loved and with whom one can argue. ... In the fourth century most of the monks in Egypt understood the anthropomorphisms of scripture literally. ... After hearing a pastoral letter from the Bishop of Alexandria and sermon from his abbot which insisted that the scriptural anthropomorphisms were to be understood allegorically because God has no shape, one elderly monk arose to pray but could not.”¹⁴ This last story is quoted by Robinson, who gives additional detail: “One Serapion, an elderly monk of great reputation, found himself unable to pray to the new God ... [and] falling to the ground he groaned: ‘Woe is me! They have taken my God away from me, and I have none to grasp, and I know not whom to adore or to address.’ Ultimately the anthropomorphic monks simply rebelled and refused to accept the new view, successfully forcing the bishop Theophilus into an abrupt about-face.”¹⁵ Do the Rabbis react to the anthropomorphism as do the philosophers? Is God really concerned about the doings of man? “The answers the Rabbis give indicate no concern with the problem of anthropomorphism. Is it possible to say that ‘the Lord went before them by day?’ Rabbi (Judah the Prince) replies by telling of how Antoninus would himself take the torch and light the way for his sons in the darkness, and that he would say to the notables who offered to perform that service: ‘It is not that I have no one to take the torch and light the way for my sons. But it is thus that I make known to you how beloved my sons are to me, so that you should treat them with respect.’ And Rabbi adds, ‘In like manner, the Holy One blessed be He made known to the nations of the world how beloved Israel is to Him: He Himself went before them, so that they (the nations) should treat them with respect’ (Mekilta, I. pp. 185–186). Obviously, no attention is paid here to the problem of anthropomorphism” (Max Kadushin, The Rabbinic Mind, pp. 274–275). Alfred Edersheim, a Jewish scholar who converted to Christianity had this to say about changes made to the scriptures in the LXX (6), “Difficulties—or what seemed such—are removed by the most bold methods, and by free handling of the text; it need scarcely said, often very unsatisfactorily. More especially a strenuous effort is made to banish all anthropomorphisms, as inconsistent with their ideas of the Deity” (Edersheim, Alfred, The Life and Times of Jesus the Messiah, 3rd Edition, 1886, p. 28). The philosophers and others, then, have tended to put their own limitations upon God. Many attempts have been given to minimize the importance of Isaiah’s vision, as well as that of Joseph Smith.¹⁶ I declare, that I know with every fiber of my being that indeed Joseph Smith did see the Father and the Son, and that Isaiah saw Yahweh, the Holy One of Israel. I know, for the Spirit of the Lord has revealed it unto me (see introduction). ¶ And his train filled the temple. The train, or as in the margin ||, the skirts, could be representative of the faithful Saints, dressed in white raiment (cf. Revelation 4:4). Rawlinson suggests that train means “the skirt of his robe” rather than “train of attendants,” and shows that indeed one of the meanings of the word is the latter. While for some the temple represented here is that of Jerusalem (e.g., Barnes, Lowth), for others it is one in heaven (e.g., Delitzsch) like the one seen by John the beloved, or in some way a combination of both.

2 Above it stood the seraphims; each one had six wings; with twain he covered his face, and with twain he covered his feet, and with twain he did fly.

Seraphims, or more correctly, seraphim (שֶׁרָפִים), which is the plural of *saraph*¹⁷ (שָׂרָף). These seraphim

¹⁴ Cohen, Shayne, From the Maccabees to the Mishnah, vol. 7 of the Library of Early Christianity, Philadelphia: Westminster Press, 1987, pp. 86, 87.

¹⁵ Chadwick, The Early Church, and Chadwick, Western Asceticism, Philadelphia: Westminster Press and Harmondsworth: Penguin, 1958 & 1976, respectively, in Robinson, Are Mormons Christian? 1991, pp. 83–84.

¹⁶ Joseph Smith—History, verses 23–25, Pearl of Great Price.

¹⁷ Seraph in English.

stood above, or perhaps about Him.¹⁸ In other Scripture we read: “And the four beasts had each of them six wings about him; and they were full of eyes within: and they rest not day and night, saying, Holy, holy, holy, LORD God Almighty, which was, and is, and is to come” (Revelations 4:8); Regarding these the Prophet Joseph Smith taught: “Q. What are we to understand by the eyes and wings, which the beasts had [in the verses in Revelation 4]? A. Their eyes are a representation of light and knowledge, that is, they are full of knowledge; and their wings are a representation of power, to move, to act, etc.” (D&C 77:4). In Ezekiel 1 these creatures are further described under the name of cherubim: “As for the likeness of the living creatures, their appearance was like burning coals of fire, and like the appearance of lamps: it went up and down among the living creatures; and the fire was bright, and out of the fire went forth lightning. And the living creatures ran and returned as the appearance of a flash of lightning” (Ezekiel 1:13–14, also see Ezekiel 10 & 41). In the Targum (T) the seraphim are translated as “holy ministers.” In Hebrew the root term saraph, שָׂרַף, or שָׂרָף, or plural seraphim, שְׂרָפִים, is pronounced essentially the same as in English. The root, means to burn or consume, and can also mean a possibly venomous serpent” (AHCL, BDB, TWOT). The use for the serpent may come from the “burning” pain or effect of its poison (BDB, TWOT). We also see שָׂרָף in ISAIAH 14:29 and 30:6, where it is translated as “a fiery flying serpent” in the AV. It is clear that the Lord abides in everlasting and glorious burnings (ISAIAH 33:14b). The seraphim were “angelic creatures ... These angelic beings were brilliant as flaming fire, symbolic of the purity and power of the heavenly court” (TWOT). Such a meaning corresponds well with Joseph Smith’s own description: “And help us by the power of thy Spirit, that we may mingle our voices with those bright, shining seraphs around thy throne, with acclamations of praise, singing Hosanna to God and the Lamb!” (D&C 109:79b). In the Pseudepigraphical work 2 Enoch, we read that Enoch had a similar experience to that of Isaiah. Enoch is said to have seen “cherubim and seraphim” around the throne, “six-winged and many eyed” (2 Enoch 21:1, MSS J, Andersen), and among them also “the fiery armies of the great archangels” (2 Enoch 21:1, MSS J, Andersen), or “the fiery armies of the incorporeal ones, archangels ...” (2 Enoch 20:1, MSS A, Andersen). Perhaps the word incorporeal here means pre-mortal, unembodied spirits, before these beings obtained a body upon the earth. Angels do not have wings,¹⁹ as Charles Penrose explained: “The popular notion that angels are winged beings, because it is stated by some scripture writers that they saw them ‘flying through the heavens,’ is a fallacy. Cherubim and Seraphim spoken of by Ezekiel and Isaiah, are not to be classed with the angels, for the angels are of the same race and descent as men, whether in body or in spirit, and do not need wings for locomotion, nor do they appear in birdlike form. They are of the family of Deity in different degrees of progression and are ‘in the image and likeness’ of the Most High.”²⁰ We also know that some aspects of these descriptions are symbolic, a representation of light, knowledge, and power to move and act.

3 And one cried unto another, [✓] and said: Holy, holy, holy, [is] the LORD of hosts; the whole earth [is] full of his glory. ^{✓ ✓}

✓ or, this cried to this

✓ ✓ or, his glory is the fulness of the whole earth

And one cried unto another, and said. We know little about the nature of the crying from the book of Isaiah. While the exact approach is not certain, various possibilities have been suggested. “The meaning is not that they all lifted up their voice in concert at one and the same time ... but that there was a continuous and unbroken antiphonal song. One set commenced, and the others responded, either repeating the ‘Holy, holy, holy,’ or following with ‘filling the whole earth is His glory’” (Delitzsch). In 2 Enoch we read that this was a “singing with [a] gentle voice in front of the face of the LORD” (2 Enoch 21:1, MSS J, Andersen). Another Pseudepigraphical work that speaks in great detail in regard to the beautiful hymns of praise that are sung to God and the Lamb, is the Martyrdom and Ascension of Isaiah (AscenIs) to which we have already alluded to. There are portions of this manuscript that are sublime beyond description. Isaiah is pictured as journeying through seven heavens, in order to see how the condescension of Jesus Christ would take place. Isaiah was first taken above the firmament to the first heaven. Each heaven had some similarities, such as a throne and the singing of praise towards the “the One who sits in the seventh heaven, the One who rests in the holy world, and to his Beloved” (AscenIs 7:17, Knibb). The glory of the angels on the right hand side was superior to the ones on the left, and so were their voices. All sung in one accord, however, toward the throne in the middle. The second heaven was like unto the first, except that “there was great glory in the second heaven.” They, likewise were united in praise. A personage was sitting on the throne, who was filled with more glory than both those on the left and on the right. Isaiah is said to have fallen on his face to worship, so great was the glory of this being, but was forbidden by his guide, “Worship neither throne, nor angel from the six heavens, from where I was sent to lead you, before I tell you in the seventh heaven” (AscenIs 7:21, Knibb). With each step toward a higher heaven, the glory of the persons in these heavens, as well as their singing, was greater, all the way to the fifth heaven. From the sixth heaven and above, there were no differences between those on the left and the right, nor was there a throne however. But the glory of the personages as well as of their singing continued to increase. Isaiah was, as he moved up through each of these heavens, transformed so his countenance began to be glorified more and more, and his voice was given like ability to those around him. The praises now also included those toward the Holy Ghost: “And there they all named the primal Father and His Beloved, the Christ and the Holy Spirit” (AscenIs 8:18, Charles). So very bright was the light in the sixth heaven, that “I thought the light which I had seen in the five heavens but darkness. And I rejoiced and praised Him who hath bestowed such lights on those who wait for His promise. And I besought the angel who conducted me that I should not henceforth return to the carnal world” (AscenIs 8:21–23, Charles). When Isaiah arrived at the seventh heaven, we read, “And then I heard the voices and the hymns of praise which I had heard in each of the six heavens—which I had heard as I ascended there; and all (the voices and hymns of praise) were directed to that Glorious One whose glory I could not see ... And all the praise which was sent (up) from the six heavens was not only heard, but seen” (AscenIs 10:1–2, 5). What happens next is beautiful beyond description; our Beloved Savior is commissioned to descend through each of the heavens, by the Father, until he takes upon Himself mortality. In each of the heavens the Savior changes His glory to match where He is. While those in the sixth heaven were allowed to recognize and worship our Savior, from there on, no knew who He was, for the Christ was made like unto those among whom He walked. (AscenIs, Knibb; AscenIs, Charles). I would love to say more, but shall leave the reading of this beautiful narrative to those who wish to rejoice and have their hearts filled—for I cannot read and meditate upon these things without tears of joy and gratitude. There are a number of special and sacred lessons to be gained from such a reading, especially by the LDS. For instance, these writings concur with the words of the Prophet Joseph Smith that God the Father presides in the Godhead; that the Godhead is composed by three distinct beings but one in purpose, and that the Holy Spirit is an actual male being, and not some disassociated matter. Knibb says, somewhat astounded, “What he has to say about the Trinity is of particular interest ... a superior status is attributed to the Father in that ‘the Lord’ and the angel of the Holy Spirit are presented as worshipping him.”²¹ Now I feel I have a better understanding of what is meant by the condescension of God, spoken about by Nephi (1 Nephi 11:14 ff.), who seems to have been privileged to see much of what Isaiah was shown, in terms of the miraculous birth, life upon the earth, death by crucifixion, and resurrection of Christ (see AscenIs 9:12–14; 11:1 ff.). The similarities between these writings and those of Nephi in this regard are compelling (see notes under ISAIAH 53:2). ¶ Holy, holy, holy, is the LORD of hosts (see also, Revelation 4:8). In Enoch we have: “Holy, Holy, Holy, LORD Sabaoth, Heaven and earth are full of his glory” (2 Enoch 21:1, MSS J, Andersen). In Hebrew the equivalent grammar of increasingly more holiness, as in holy, holier, or holiest (or holy, more holy, most holy) is not represented in the same way. By a three-time repetition of the word holy, קדוש, through a trishagion, the Hebrew (מ) conveys the same idea, perhaps in an even more powerful fashion. The Targum (ܬ) offers an interesting reading: “Holy in the highest and exalted heavens is the house of his Shekinah, holy upon the earth is the work of his might, holy for ever, world without end, is the Lord of hosts.” Before leaving this section that makes use of the repeated holiness of the Lord, several commentators have suggested that it is from this experience that Isaiah was moved to call Yahweh by yet another sacred name, that of קדוש ישראל “Holy One of Israel.”²² ¶ The whole

¹⁹ My daughter Cristina said: “And the LORD God said unto the serpent, Because thou hast done this, thou art cursed above all cattle, and above every beast of the field; upon thy belly shalt thou go, and dust shalt thou eat all the days of thy life” (Genesis 3:14). Do you suppose that before that serpent had legs?” Out of the mouth of babes! (Psalm 8:2a). Certainly, the thought had crossed my mind. Perhaps we may think of the Seraphim as glorious beings around the throne of God, including angels, who have much power as indicated by the symbolism of the eyes and wings. Instead of the loss of legs, perhaps the serpent in Genesis 3:14 is the representation of the fallen angels, including Satan, who have lost their fire, or light. “There are fallen angels, too, who were cast down for transgression, as mentioned by Jude (verse 6), chief among whom on this earth is Lucifer or Satan, who has sought on many occasions to appear as an ‘angel of light’ to deceive and lead astray, and who tempted the Son of God, but failed in his efforts as he did with Moses and with the Prophet Joseph Smith (see Luke 4:1–13; Visions of Moses 1:12–22; D&C 128:20). That great spiritual personage was an angel of God in his ‘first estate,’ and yet never had a body of flesh, but ‘was in authority in the presence of God’ as a spirit, before he rebelled and was ‘thrust down.’ (D&C. 76:25–28.)” (Charles W. Penrose, “Who and What are the Angels,” Improvement Era, August 1912.)

²⁰ Charles W. Penrose, “Who and What are the Angels,” Improvement Era, August 1912.

¹⁸ Sperry, Sidney B. Book of Mormon Compendium. Salt Lake City, Utah: Bookcraft, 1968, p. 193.

²¹ Michael A. Knibb, “The Ascension of Isaiah,” The Old Testament Pseudepigrapha, (James H. Charlesworth, Editor), Volume 2, p. 154.

²² “All the prophecies of Isaiah carry this name of God as their stamp. It occurs twenty-nine times (including ch. x. 17, xliii. 15, xlix. 7), viz. twelve times in ch. 1–xxxix., and seventeen times in ch. xl.–lxvi. As Luzzatto has well observed, ‘the prophet, as if with a earth is full of his glory. The Targum (Ⲯ) reads, “The whole earth is full of the brightness of His glory.” Jerome suggested, that the whole earth would be full of His glory, “and that the Jewish temple alone should not be, as formerly, the place of the Divine glory, for the whole earth should be filled with it” (Jerome, in Clarke).

4 And the posts of the door[✓] moved at the voice of him that cried, and the house was filled with smoke.

✓ thresholds

And the posts of the door moved at the voice of him that cried. Or, “And the posts of the threshold of the temple moved at the voice of him that cried” (Targum, Ⲯ). Delitzsch suggests that it was “the foundations of the thresholds” that shook. As the passing of a train shakes the ground, and lightning the sky; oh how beautiful it would be if our hearts would tremble to do the work of the Lord. The very foundations shook as they did when the Lord descended upon Sinai: “And mount Sinai was altogether on a smoke, because the LORD descended upon it in fire: and the smoke thereof ascended as the smoke of a furnace, and the whole mount quaked greatly” (Exodus 19:18). The fear of the Lord, to me, is not the trepidation and anxiety brought upon by terror, but rather, a great internal desire to please the Lord. To be more concerned with what the Lord would have us think, say, and do, than with that of any other consideration. We read, “... but to this man will I look, even to him that is poor and of a contrite spirit, and trembleth at my word” (ISAIAH 66:2b). ¶ And the house was filled with smoke. Smoke is representative of prayer, as it reaches God. “And the smoke of the incense, which came with the prayers of the saints, ascended up before God out of the angel’s hand” (Revelation 8:4). Hallelujah, Praise ye the Lord, הַלְלוּ־יְהוָה. Smoke also represents the Glory of the Lord: that the Lord has accepted man’s offering or dedication.

vv. 5–8. Isaiah feels awe, for he has seen the living God. One of the seraphs takes a live coal from the altar and applies it to Isaiah’s lips, thus cleansing Isaiah of his sins. Isaiah is commissioned to preach the Gospel.

presentiment that the authenticity of the second part of his book would be disputed, has stamped both parts with this name of God, “the Holy One of Israel,” as if with his own seal.’ The only other passages in which the word occurs, are three times in the Psalms (Psalm 71:22; 78:41; 89:19), and twice in Jeremiah (Jeremiah 50:29, 51:5), and that not without an allusion to [the writings of] Isaiah” (Delitzsch).

5 ¶ Then said I: Woe [is] unto me! for I am undone;[✓] because I [am] a man of unclean lips; and I dwell in the midst of a people of unclean lips; for mine eyes have seen the King, the LORD of hosts.

✓ cut off

Then said I: Woe is unto me! for I am undone. Woe means anguish and despair. To be undone, like the margin ||, means to be cut off. Some suggest that Isaiah had been reduced to silence. The Hebrew word for I am undone is נִדְמִיתִי, and its root, דָּמָה or even, some suppose from the unused root, דָּמָה (pronounced damah and dum, respectively). As a result, Isaiah was not able to join in the singing of praises, for he had not yet been cleansed by the atonement. “There is something exceedingly affecting in this complaint,” suggests Clarke, demanding a certain amount of introspection. “I am a man of unclean lips; I cannot say, Holy, holy, holy! which the seraphs exclaim. They are holy; I am not so: they see God and live; I have seen him, and must die, because I am unholy. Only the pure in heart shall see God; and they only can live in his presence for ever. Reader, lay this to heart; and instead of boasting of thy excellence, and trusting in thy might or comforting thyself in thy comparative innocence, thou wilt also be dumb before him, because thou hast been a man of unclean lips, and because thou hast still an unclean heart.” ¶ Because I am a man of unclean lips. All men who have reached the age of accountability are unclean: “If we say that we have not sinned, we make him a liar, and his word is not in us” (1 John 1:10). Yet we know that Isaiah was a righteous and noble man, “Among the great and mighty ones who were assembled in this vast congregation of the righteous [was] Isaiah, who declared by prophecy that the Redeemer was anointed to bind up the broken-hearted, to proclaim liberty to the captives, and the opening of the prison to them that were bound, were also there” (D&C 138:38, 42). The prophets are great men who have lost their desire for sin: “The nearer man approaches perfection, the clearer are his views, and the greater his enjoyments, till he has overcome the evils of his life and lost every desire for sin” (TPJS, p. 51). Yet, Isaiah felt overwhelmed by being in the presence of Yahweh. ¶ And I dwell in the midst of a people of unclean lips. Isaiah felt unclean, and in contact with others who were unclean. Under the Law of Moses, any physical contact with that which was unclean made a person unclean and required a physical purging: “And whosoever toucheth any thing that was under him shall be unclean until the even: and he that beareth any of those things shall wash his clothes, and bathe himself in water, and be unclean until the even” (Leviticus 15:10). We must even more so guard ourselves from coming into contact with that which is spiritually degrading: “Depart ye, depart ye, go ye out from thence, touch no unclean thing; go ye out of the midst of her; be ye clean, that bear the vessels of the LORD” (ISAIAH 52:11). ¶ For mine eyes have seen the King, the LORD of hosts. This is one of the key lines upon which much of this discussion revolves: Isaiah had seen the living God! This seems natural to us as LDS. Not so to the Jews of a later period, as well as the Christian churches, for they believed that man could not see God and live. The Jewish tradition is that Manasseh, son of Hezekiah, sawed Isaiah through with a wooden saw, because Isaiah had claimed to have seen²³ the Living God. Belkira²⁴ brought railing accusations against Isaiah and the prophets as follows: “And Isaiah himself has said, ‘I see more than Moses the prophet.’ Moses said, ‘There is no man who can see the LORD and live.’²⁵ But Isaiah has said, ‘I have seen the LORD, and behold I am alive.’ Know therefore, O King, that they [are] false prophets. And he has called Jerusalem Sodom, and the princes of Judah and Jerusalem he has declared [to be] the people of Gomorrah.’ And he brought many accusations against Isaiah and the prophets before Manasseh ... Because of these visions, therefore, Beliar was angry with Isaiah, and he dwelt in the heart of Manasseh, and he sawed Isaiah in half with a wood saw” (AscenIs 3:7b–10; 5:1, Knibb).²⁶ A few more words from the story of Isaiah’s martyrdom are of interest: “And while Isaiah was being sawed in half, his accuser, Belkira, stood by, and all the false prophets stood by, laughing [maliciously] ... And Belkira said to Isaiah, ‘Say, “I have lied in everything I have spoken; the ways of Manasseh are good and right, and also the ways of Belkira and who are with him are good.”’ And he said this to him when he began to be sawed in half” (AscenIs 5:2, 4–6). Why is it that Satan seeks to make people deny what they know to be truth? The Lamanites, for instance, “... put to death every Nephite that will not deny the Christ. And I, Moroni, will not deny the Christ ...” (Moroni 1:2b:3a). Zeezrom tried to bribe Amulek so Amulek would deny Christ. “And Zeezrom said unto him: Behold, here are six onties of silver, and all these will I give thee if thou wilt deny the existence of a Supreme Being. Now Amulek said: O thou child of hell, why tempt ye me? Knowest thou that the righteous yieldeth to no such temptations? Believest thou that there is no God? I say unto you, Nay, thou knowest that there is a God, but thou lovest that lucre more than him” (Alma 11:22a–24). So again, why is it that Satan tries to get men to deny Christ? The answer was given by Christ himself, as recounted by Nephi, “But, behold, my beloved brethren, thus came the voice of the Son unto me, saying: After ye have repented of your sins, and witnessed unto the Father that ye are willing to keep my commandments, by the baptism of water, and have received the baptism of fire and of the Holy Ghost, and can speak with a new tongue, yea, even with the tongue of angels, and after this should deny me, it would have been better for you that ye had not known me” (2 Nephi 31:14, cf. words of Sherem in Jacob 7:19). ¶ The notion that man cannot see God is indeed a mistaken one. In Exodus we read: “And he said, Thou canst not see my face: for there shall no man see me, and live” (Exodus 33:20). Who is He in “And he said”? It is the Savior who is speaking, even Yahweh. Verses 17 and 21 make it clear that these verses, including verse 20, refer to יהוה. Yet there are multiple references about the children of Israel seen the Lord in the Old Testament. These include Isaiah’s vision. In future times, because of the condescension of our Savior, there would be thousands who would see Him. So we must understand this verse as speaking to seeing the Lord in his glory. The Inspired Version corrects this verse to read: “... for there shall no man among them see me at this time, and live, for they are exceeding sinful. And no sinful man hath at any time, ²³ The God of the Jews is an anthropomorphic one (also see notes on ISAIAH 5:6). Many scriptures make this absolutely clear: “So God created man in his own image, in the image of God created he him; male and female created he them” (Genesis 1:27); “And Jacob called the name of the place Peniel: for I have seen God face to face, and my life is preserved” (Genesis 32:30); “And the LORD spake unto Moses face to face, as a man speaketh unto his friend” (Exodus 33:11); “And there arose not a prophet since in Israel like unto Moses, whom the LORD knew face to face” (Deuteronomy 34:10). Now, Isaiah had been added to this select group who had seen the Lord face to face. Joseph Smith, Jr., Lorenzo Snow, and others would follow in the latter-days.

²⁴ A number of names for Satan are used in the Martyrdom and Ascension of Isaiah, including Belkira, Beliar, and Sammael Satan, and some variations of these. “According to Jewish tradition Sammael was originally one of the chief archangels, but after inciting the serpent to tempt Eve he became the leader of the Satans. It is in such a role that he appears in AscenIs, where Sammael seems to be merely another name for Beliar. ... Malkira, used here as an additional name for Sammael, means in Hebrew “king of evil”; elsewhere this name occurs as a variant of Belkira, the name of the Samaritan opponent of Isaiah” (Knibb, footnote u, in The Old Testament Pseudepigrapha, Vol. 2, Charlesworth, J. H., editor, p. 157).

²⁵ See notes on ISAIAH 6:1, including JST for Exodus 33:20.

²⁶ “According to the tradition preserved in the Babylonian Talmud (Yeb 49b) Isaiah was put on trial by Manasseh on a variety of charges; included among these is the charge made in the Ascension (3:8f.) that Isaiah claimed to have seen God, despite the fact that Moses said that no one can see God and Live. ... According to the Jerusalem Talmud Isaiah hid in a cedar to escape from Manasseh, but the fringes of his garment stuck out and betrayed his presence. Manasseh ordered the tree to be cut, and Isaiah was discovered” (Knibb, M. A., in The Old Testament Pseudepigrapha, Vol. 2, Charlesworth, J. H., editor, p. 151). In The Epistle of Paul the Apostle to the Hebrews we find that there were those “Choosing rather to suffer affliction with the people of God, than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season” (Hebrews 11:25). A list of people of faith is included, as well as the martyrs of the faith, and how they died, including “They were stoned, they were sawn asunder, were tempted, were slain with the sword ...” (Hebrews 11:37a).

neither shall there be any sinful man at any time, that shall see my face and live” (JST Exodus 33:20). After Christ was resurrected and took upon Himself a glorified an exalted body, we read: “Behold my hands and my feet, that it is I myself: handle me, and see; for a spirit hath not flesh and bones, as ye see me have” (Luke 24:39). Joseph Smith had not only seen the Living God, but also the Father! Furthermore we read about transfiguration as: “The condition of persons who are temporarily changed in appearance and nature—that is, lifted to a higher spiritual level—so that they can endure the presence and glory of heavenly beings.”²⁷ It is interesting that while the philosophers insist on a God without form or feelings, the believer in God—who hears about the true nature of God, both Father and Son with exalted bodies, as separate distinct glorified beings—can only express, “I knew that in my heart all along!”

6 Then flew one of the seraphims unto me, having a live coal in his hand,[✓] [which] he had taken with the tongs from off the altar;

✓ and in his hand a live coal

Then flew one of the seraphim unto me, having a live coal in his hand. Isaiah—like Adam and Eve in the Garden of Eden—has realized that he is “naked” or impure in the presence of God. This is a wonderful realization, indeed. Moses said: “Now, for this cause I know that man is nothing, which thing I never had supposed. But now mine own eyes have beheld God; but not my natural, but my spiritual eyes, for my natural eyes could not have beheld; for I should have withered and died in his presence; but his glory was upon me; and I beheld his face, for I was transfigured before him” (Moses 1:10b–11). The desire to turn and follow the Lord can only come as we realize our nothingness, and the infinite worth of the atoning sacrifice brought about by Him in whom there is no sin. Isaiah is in a state of humble despair, and of recognition of his un-holiness. ¶ Which he had taken with the tongs from off the altar. At the very moment of despair, He who is Most Holy commands a seraph to take a live coal from the expiatory altar. The allusion to the entering of the High Priest on Yom Kippur, or Day of Atonement, וּם כְּפָרִים, within the veil of the Most Holy Place (also called the Holy of Holies, קֹדֶשׁ הַקִּדְשִׁים,”) with burning coals and sweet incense²⁸ is an unmistakable type and shadow of the atonement. We now partake of the Sacrament in memory of the expiatory sacrifice. Henry wrote, “[The high priest] took a censer of burning coals and a dish full of the sweet incense and then went into the holy of holies, set the coals down upon the floor, and scattered the incense upon them, so that the room was immediately filled with smoke. The Jews say that he was to go in side-ways, that he might not look directly upon the ark where the divine glory was, then he must come out backwards, out of reverence to the diving majesty ...” (Henry). And furthermore we read, “Standing before the ark, he deposited the censer of coals on the floor, emptied the plate of incense into his hand, poured it on the burning coals; and the apartment was filled with fragrant smoke, intended, according to the Jewish writers, to prevent any presumptuous gazer prying too curiously into the form of the mercy seat, which was the Lord’s throne” (Faussett). The coal was so very hot that it required tongs to remove it from the altar.

²⁷ Transfiguration in the LDS “Guide to the Scriptures.”

²⁸ “And he shall take a censer full of burning coals of fire from off the altar before the LORD, and his hands full of sweet incense beaten small, and bring it within the vail” (Leviticus 16:12).

7 And he laid[✓] [it] upon my mouth, and said: Lo, this hath touched thy lips; and thine iniquity is taken away, and thy sin purged.

✓ caused it to touch

And he laid it upon my mouth, and said: Lo, this hath touched thy lips. James explained that when a man can control his speech, that he can control every aspect of his being: “If any man offend not in word, the same is a perfect man, and able also to bridle the whole body” (James 3:2). Thus, the importance of the lips. The Sacrament that we partake each Sabbath day, likewise, touches our lips. ¶ And thine iniquity is taken away, and thy sin purged. When a person who has been baptized worthily partakes of the Sacrament, and covenants to always remember the Lord, such a person may rejoice in the constant companionship of the Holy Ghost (Moroni 4:3). This powerful gift “acts as a cleansing agent to purify a person and sanctify him from all sin” (LDS BD).

8 Also I heard the voice of the Lord, saying: Whom shall I send, and who will go for us? Then said I, Here [am] I;[✓] send me.

✓ Behold me

This is the same question the Father asked in our pre-mortal existence: “And the Lord²⁹ said: Whom shall I send? And one answered like unto the Son of Man: Here am I, send me” (Abraham 3:27a). When the Father asked for volunteers, Jesus Christ stood up to take upon himself this infinitely difficult and almost incomprehensible task of being the Savior of mankind. Jesus desired all the glory to go to the Father: “But, behold, my Beloved Son, which was my Beloved and Chosen from the beginning, said unto me, Father, thy will be done, and the glory be thine forever” (Moses 4:2). This sequence with Isaiah seems to be a type and a shadow of what the Savior went through. Isaiah was ready, he said, “Here am I; send me.” In those Heavenly councils did we also volunteer for specific jobs to be had during this mortal probation? Are we living up to those obligations and pre-mortal covenants? Do we seek to glorify God? Elder Maxwell taught: “The men and women of Christ magnify their callings without magnifying themselves.”³⁰

²⁹ LORD, here, refers to God the Father, Elohim (see LDS FN)

vv. 9–13. Isaiah understands that his task will be a strenuous one. The people will hear with their ears but not comprehend with their hearts, and thus will not be converted. Isaiah desires to know how long it will be that such a state of blindness will prevail.

9 ¶ And he said: Go, and tell this people-- Hear ye indeed, ✓ but understand they understood not; and see ye indeed, but perceive they perceived not.

✓ or, without ceasing; HEBREW, in hearing

The Hebrew text (מ) is corrupted at this place and makes it seem as if the Lord was telling Isaiah that He did not wish the people to understand, be converted, and healed. The Book of Mormon preserved the correct rendering of the text: “And he said: Go and tell this people—Hear ye indeed, but they understood not; and see ye indeed, but they perceived not” (2 Nephi 16:9). The Targum (ט)³¹ reads very closely to the Book of Mormon: “And he said, Go and speak unto this people that hear indeed but understand not, but see indeed but know not.” Delitzsch and Kay note that the Lord here does not call Israel “my people” עַמִּי, but rather by the more impersonal, “this people” לְעַם הַזֶּה (see notes on ISAIAH 3:12, and Rain in Due Season introductory chapter).

10 Make the heart of this people fat, and make their ears heavy, and shut their eyes—lest they see with their eyes, and hear with their ears, and understand with their heart, and be converted, and be healed.

This verse shows a typical chiasmus pattern:

- A. Heart, “Make the heart of this people fat,”
- B. Ears, “And make their ears heavy,”
- C. Eyes, “And shut their eyes,” then a reversal,
- C. Eyes, “Lest they see with their eyes,”
- B. Ears, “And hear with their ears,” and back to
- A., Heart, “And understand with their heart.”

And as a result of that, “And be converted, and be healed.” We find in Zechariah: “And the word of the LORD came unto Zechariah, saying, Thus speaketh the LORD of hosts, saying, Execute true judgment, and shew mercy and compassions every man to his brother: And oppress not the widow, nor the fatherless, the stranger, nor the poor; and let none of you imagine evil against his brother in your heart. But they refused to hearken, and pulled away the shoulder, and stopped their ears, that they should not hear. Yea, they made their hearts as an adamant stone, lest they should hear the law, and the words which the LORD of hosts hath sent in his spirit by the former prophets: therefore came a great wrath from the LORD of hosts. Therefore it is come to pass, that as he cried, and they would not hear; so they cried, and I would not hear, saith the LORD of hosts: But I scattered them with a whirlwind among all the nations whom they knew not. Thus the land was desolate after them, that no man passed through nor returned: for they laid the pleasant land desolate” (Zechariah 7:8–14). ¶ Make the heart of this people fat, and make their ears heavy, and shut their eyes. The LXX (Ⲅ) seems to give the proper meaning, not that the Lord had made people’s hearts and minds dull, but rather, this was a description of what already existed: “For the heart of this people has become gross, and their ears are dull of hearing, and their eyes have they closed.” ¶ Lest they see with their eyes, and hear with their ears, and understand with their heart, and be converted, and be healed. This whole expression (ISAIAH 6:9–10)³² forms part of an uninterrupted, ³² So also Jeremiah, “But this thing commanded I them, saying, Obey my voice, and I will be your God, and ye shall be my people: and walk ye in all the ways that I have commanded you, that it may be well unto you. But they hearkened not, nor inclined their ear, but walked in the counsels and in the imagination of their evil heart, and went backward, and not forward. Since the day that your fathers came forth out of the land of Egypt unto this day I have even sent unto you all my servants the prophets, daily rising up early and sending them: Yet they hearkened not unto me, nor inclined their ear, but hardened their neck: they did worse than their fathers. Therefore thou shalt speak all these words unto them; but they will not hearken to thee: thou shalt also call unto them; but they will not answer thee” (Jeremiah 7:23–27, emphasis added).

³⁰ Neal A. Maxwell, Men and Women of Christ, p.13.

³¹ Stenning.

unified statement taken to its most happy conclusion (conversion³³ followed by spiritual healing through the atoning sacrifice of our Lord) for those might have been willing to heed and return unto the Lord. Throughout the Standard Works one can find invitation after invitation to turn or return unto the Lord. Isaiah is told that the people would not accept such an invitation with its sublime consequences, but would rather, instead, choose obstinacy and spiritual death. Thus the lamentation: “O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, thou that killest the prophets, and stonest them which are sent unto thee, how often would I have gathered thy children together, even as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, and ye would not!” (Matthew 23:37). Bryan Weston shared a few thoughts about how hens protect their chicks. He said that the hens, when they sense danger, will spread their wings in a protective fashion and all the chicks will run for cover, after which the hen covers her brood. The hen is willing to give her life, if needed, to protect her chicks.³⁴ Even though the hen offers the chicks protection, and even her life if need be, only the chicks who run for cover and hide under the hen obtain that refuge. The chicks that do not seek for asylum fend for themselves. So it is with Christ’s invitation to us. There are at least two important teachings to be derived from the Scriptures regarding such matters of inviting. The first is that from the beginning of days the Lord has sent his messengers to invite all to come unto Christ. “...and he inviteth them all to come unto him and partake of his goodness; and he denieth none that come unto him, black and white, bond and free, male and female; and he remembereth the heathen; and all are alike unto God, both Jew and Gentile” (2 Nephi 26:33b). The Scriptures are replete with such invitations to come. The second principle is that of mercy. A person who has been warned may be subject to more serious consequences if he does not heed the invitation. While the Spirit will touch our hearts to do something, it is never done in a forceful or compulsive manner. The Spirit does not nag. If we ignore the Spirit, eventually the Spirit withdraws. This is a source of mercy, for ³³ President Lee taught, “The greatest responsibility that a member of Christ’s church has ever had is to become truly converted—and it is just as important to stay converted. But again I ask, what is conversion? Some clues are given by the Lord. In answering a question as to why He spoke in parables, He quoted a scripture from Isaiah: ‘Make the heart of this people fat, and make their ears heavy, and shut their eyes; lest they see with their eyes, and hear with their ears and understand with their heart, and convert, and be healed.’ (ISAIAH 6:10.) As you can see, one is converted when he sees with his eyes what he ought to see; when he hears with his ears what he ought to hear; and when he understands with his heart what he ought to understand. And what he ought to see, hear and understand is truth—eternal truth—and then practice it.” (Stand Ye In Holy Places: Selected Sermons and Writings of President Harold B. Lee. Salt Lake City, Utah: Deseret Book, 1988, p. 92).

³⁴ A. Bryan Weston, “Pioneers, Gatherings to Zion, and the Lord’s Loving Kindness.” 1977 CES Book of Mormon Symposium.

otherwise the condemnation would be even greater, as people would sin against the greater light.³⁵ “For of him unto whom much is given much is required; and he who sins against the greater light shall receive the greater condemnation” (D&C 82:3). Alma teaches, “And now Alma began to expound these things unto him, saying: It is given unto many to know the mysteries of God; nevertheless they are laid under a strict command that they shall not impart only according to the portion of his word which he doth grant unto the children of men, according to the heed and diligence which they give unto him. And therefore, he that will harden his heart, the same receiveth the lesser portion of the word; and he that will not harden his heart, to him is given the greater portion of the word, until it is given unto him to know the mysteries of God until he know them in full. And they that will harden their hearts, to them is given the lesser portion of the word until they know nothing concerning his mysteries; and then they are taken captive by the devil, and led by his will down to destruction” (Alma 12:9–11a). In the New Testament, the Savior teaches: “And the disciples came, and said unto him, Why speakest thou unto them in parables? He answered and said unto them, Because it is given unto you to know the mysteries of the kingdom of heaven, but to them it is not given. For whosoever hath, to him shall be given, and he shall have more abundance: but whosoever hath not, from him shall be taken away even that he hath. Therefore speak I to them in parables: because they seeing see not; and hearing they hear not, neither do they understand. And in them is fulfilled the prophecy of Esaias, which saith, By hearing ye shall hear, and shall not understand; and seeing ye shall see, and shall not perceive: For this people’s heart is waxed gross, and their ears are dull of hearing, and their eyes they have closed; lest at any time they should see with their eyes and hear with their ears, and should understand with their heart, and should be converted, and I should heal them” (Matthew 13:10–15). ¶ Why is this such a serious matter? To be healed of the Lord? The Lord explains that when we have repented and turn back to our wicked ways, we are worse off than before: “[When] ...the unclean spirit is gone out of a man, he walketh through dry places, seeking rest, and findeth none. Then he saith, I will return into my house from whence I came out; and when he is come, he findeth it empty, swept, and garnished. Then goeth he, and taketh with himself seven other spirits more wicked than himself, and they enter in and dwell there: and the last state of that man is worse than the first” (Matthew 12:43–45a).

³⁵ I wonder if that is not the reason why the Lord’s disciples did not receive the Holy Ghost (John 14:16–18) as a constant companion until after He ascended back to the Father. Otherwise the people would have had a witness from two members of the Godhead, and their rejection of Christ would have been a greater cause for condemnation.

11 Then said I: Lord, how long? And he answered said: Until the cities be wasted without inhabitant, and the houses without man, and the land be utterly desolate;✓

✓ desolate with desolation

Then said I (אמר): Lord, how long? This is the question of the ages. It could mean anything from how long would Isaiah have to preach, to how long before the people would open their eyes, to how long before the coming of the Messiah, or how long would there be suffering. One of the attributes we are upon this earth to learn is patience. ¶ And he said (אמר): Until the cities be wasted without inhabitant, and the houses without man, and the land be utterly desolate. Note that the Book of Mormon and JST render the literal Hebrew, אמר, said rather than answered. ¶ Above all, this verse seems to point to the end of times, and is alluded to in ISAIAH 24:10 and 12, among others. The preaching and teaching would have to go until the very end, whether by the mouth of missionaries or else as a consequence of natural disasters. The Essenes (who lived in Qumran, the community who preserved the (Q) Dead Sea Scrolls) felt the time of desolation would be soon—which indeed was true ... for them. The Romans heaped destruction in Judea around 70 AD. Likewise, this scripture can be likened unto us. The time will come when all these things shall be fulfilled and we will have to stand before the bar of God. The Brethren have cautioned us against complacency, but also admonished us not to become paralyzed by thoughts of doom and gloom.³⁶

12 And the LORD have removed men far away, and for [there] shall [be] a great forsaking in the midst of the land.

And the LORD have removed men far away. Or, “... and the Lord have removed the children of men far away” (Targum, T). This seems to have reference to the scattering of Israel. So enormous has been the effect of the scattering, that among some earlier Jews, the Rabbis held that “if at present a non-Jew weds a Jewess, such a union was to be respected, since the stranger might be a descendant of the ten tribes.”³⁷ ¶ For there shall be a great forsaking in the midst of the land. Or, “and the forsaken places be many in the midst of the land”

(ASV). The word translated as forsaken in the KJV, הַעֲזוּבָה (the forsaking) is also translated as the desolation (עֲזָבָה³⁸) and related synonyms. The root, עָזַב, indeed means to leave, abandon, desert, or forsake. The idea in the KJV seems to indicate that the people had greatly forsaken the Lord in the midst of the land (which certainly was true), while most translations give the idea that the land was abandoned (which was also true).

13 But yet in it there [shall be] a tenth, and [it] they shall return, and shall be eaten,✓ as a teil-tree, and as an oak, whose substance✓✓ [is] in them, when they cast [their leaves; so] the holy seed [shall be] the substance✓✓ thereof.

✓ or, when it is returned, and has been broused³⁹

✓✓ or, stock, or, stem

I have chosen four translations from diverse sources:

(1) “But while a tenth part yet remains in it, it shall repent. It shall be ravaged like the terebinth and the oak, of which stumps are left even when they are felled: its stump shall be a holy seed” (Tanakh). (2) “And they that remain in it shall be a tenth, and again they shall be burned and shall be made like the terebinth or like an oak which is fallen from its stump. The holy seed is the source thereof” (Syriac, S). (3) “But yet in it shall be a tenth; And it shall revive (or restore), though it be [given] to barrenness; For as the ilex, or the oak, though felled down, Hath its vitality remaining in it, So the holy seed shall have a vitality within it” (SOT). (4)

“And there shall be left in it righteous men (צדיקים [righteous men]; in the Royal Polyglot omitted), one out of ten: they shall return, and they shall be for poverty, as the terebynth and the oak when their leaves fall, they are like to dry trees, nevertheless, they are moist to raise up seed from them; thus the captivity of Israel shall be gathered, and shall return to their land, for the seed which is holy is their plantation” (Targum, T). Much of the beauty and strength of a particular passage is in the word plays and allusions to other scriptures. Kay, for instance, noticed the great similarities found this verse

³⁷ Referring to the Talmudic book of Yebamoth (16b), in The Life and Times of Jesus the Messiah, by Alfred Edersheim, Vol. I, p. 15 and Leviticus 27:20, 32: “And all the tithe of the land, whether of the seed of the land, or of the fruit of the tree, is the LORD’S: it is holy unto the LORD ... And concerning the tithe of the herd, or of the flock, even of whatsoever passeth under the rod, the tenth shall be holy unto the LORD.” Let us examine the various parts of the verse separately. ¶ But yet in it there shall be a tenth, and they shall return. A tenth is a significant number, as it pertains to tithing. Henry has, “It is that which, under the law, was God’s proportion; they shall be consecrated to God as the tithes were, and shall be for his service and honour. Concerning this tithe, this saved remnant ... [they] shall return out of captivity to their own land. God will turn them, and they shall be turned.” Yet they would be consumed again, and only a remnant of that would remain: a tenth of a tenth, if you please. While the people of Israel paid their tithes to the Levites, these, in turn, would pay a tenth to the priests. “Thus speak unto the Levites, and say unto them, When ye take of the children of Israel the tithes which I have given you from them for your inheritance, then ye shall offer up an heave offering of it for the LORD, even a tenth part of the tithe” (Numbers 18:26). The remnant represents either those who are left behind during the deportation of Judah into Babylon, or those who return from the Babylonian captivity. ¶ Remnant that stayed behind during the Babylonian deportation. Some suggest that this remnant consisted of the “poor of the land” who were left behind in Judah under the rule of Gedaliah—who had been made ruler of Judah by the king of Babylon. “Now when all the captains of the forces which were in the fields, even they and their men, heard that the king of Babylon had made Gedaliah the son of Ahikam governor in the land, and had committed unto him men, and women, and children, and of the poor of the land, of them that were not carried away captive to Babylon; Then they came to Gedaliah ...” (Jeremiah 40:7–8a). The Jews who had escaped from Judah across the Jordan also made their way back to Judah. “Likewise when all the Jews that were in Moab, and among the Ammonites, and in Edom, and that were in all the countries, heard that the king of Babylon had left a remnant of Judah, and that he had set over them Gedaliah the son of Ahikam the son of Shaphan; Even all the Jews returned out of all places whither they were driven, and came to the land of Judah, to Gedaliah, unto Mizpah, and gathered wine and summer fruits very much” (Jeremiah 40:11–12). Jeremiah (and also Gedaliah) promised this remnant that they would be safe if they would serve the Chaldeans (i.e., here used interchangeably with Babylonians). Promises of protection were made void, however, if the people chose to lean upon Egypt and flee there for refuge. “And I will take the remnant of Judah, that have set their faces to go into the land of Egypt to sojourn there, and they shall all be consumed, and fall in the land of Egypt; they shall even be consumed by the sword and by the famine: they shall die, from the least even unto the greatest, by the sword and by the famine: and they shall be an execration, and an astonishment, and a curse, and a reproach. For I will punish them that dwell in the land of Egypt, as I have punished Jerusalem, by the sword, by the famine, and by the pestilence: So that none of the remnant of Judah, which are gone into the land of Egypt to sojourn there, shall escape or remain, that they should return into the land of Judah, to the which they have a desire to return to dwell there: for none shall return but such as shall escape” (Jeremiah 44:12–14) and “Yet a small number that escape the sword shall return out of the land of Egypt into the land of Judah, and all the remnant of Judah, that are gone into the land of Egypt to sojourn there, shall know whose words shall stand, mine, or their’s” (Jeremiah 44:28, for a more complete overview see Jeremiah chapters 40–44). Sadly, the people of Judah did not trust in the Lord and fled to Egypt despite the explicit warnings. “And as for the people that remained in the land of Judah, whom Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon had left, even over them he made Gedaliah the son of Ahikam, the son of Shaphan, ruler. ... And Gedaliah sware to them, and to their men, and said unto them, Fear not to be the servants of the Chaldees: dwell in the land, and serve the king of Babylon; and it shall be well with you. ... And all the people, both small and great, and the captains of the armies, arose, and came to Egypt: for they were afraid of the Chaldees” (2 Kings 25:22, 24, 26). Those who rebelled against Gedaliah took Jeremiah captive with them into Egypt, along with the remnant that had been left in the land of Judah. Matthew Henry summarizes as follows: “We have attended Jerusalem’s funeral pile, and have taken our leave of the captives that were carried to Babylon, not expecting to hear any more of them in this book: perhaps we may in Ezekiel; and we must in this and the four following chapters [referring to Jeremiah 40–44] observe the story of those few Jews that were left to remain in the land after their brethren were carried away, and it is a very melancholy story; for though at first there were some hopeful prospects of their well-doing, they soon appeared as obstinate in sin as ever, unhumbled and unreformed, till, all the rest of the judgments threatened in Deuteronomy 28 [Rain in Due Season—GB] being brought upon them, that which in the last verse of that dreadful chapter completes the threatenings was accomplished, ‘The Lord shall bring thee into Egypt again.’” ¶ Remnant who returned from the Babylonian deportation. Ephraim, or the Northern kingdom, was taken captive by the Assyrians. They were soon lost to the world and became known as the Lost Tribes. Judah, or the Southern kingdom, the smaller of the two kingdoms, was deported into Babylon. After 70 years of Babylonian captivity or Diaspora, when the Jews would be allowed to return to Judea, there would be relatively few who would do so. The Hebrew for the word return in the KJV is שָׁבָה.

³⁸ The Targum uses the word צַדִּיקוּתָא whose root is צָדִיק (cf. with Hebrew lexicons, for root צָדַק) and also means to remove, make desolate, or depopulate.

³⁹ Or, burnt (ASV)

³⁶ Packer, Boyd K. Let Not Your Heart Be Troubled. Salt Lake City, Utah: Bookcraft, 1991, pp. 51–52. Also see, “Guilt is a warning to heed; repent and prepare for long life,” LDS Church News, Deseret News. 1997. Salt Lake City: Deseret News Publishing Company.

Meanings for the root שָׁבָה include mostly the notion of being taken captive or prisoner. A related root, to which the word seems to be associated or derived, is שׁוּב, whose meaning is to turn, return, turn back, repent or be converted. In this verse, then, the idea is that the people would return שָׁבָה to the Holy Land and to the Lord. ¶ And shall be eaten, as a teil-tree, and as an oak. Even that tenth that returns, however, will be eaten, smitten, ravaged, or burnt, too. After the death of Christ, the scattering of this tenth took place. The Hebrew for the KJV eaten is בָּעַר. It often means to be burned or consumed. ¶ Whose substance is in them, when they cast their leaves; so the holy seed shall be the substance thereof. Out of Judah, and out of David, was born Messiah (the Anointed One). As a trunk of an oak or terebinth tree could seem dead, and a tree can grow again, so would it be that God would grow no ordinary tree out of the stump of the Davidic line, for it would be a Holy Seed, even the Holy One of Israel in the flesh, Jesus the Christ. In ISAIAH 11, with important allusions to the Messiah, to the prophet Joseph Smith, and to the restored Church, the ideas in this verse are greatly expanded upon. A second allusion is to the role of the scattering and gathering of Israel, which would be scattered to every corner of the globe as seed is scattered. The Northern Kingdom, or Ephraim, would at first be scattered by the Assyrians; the Southern Kingdom, or Judah, would at first be scattered by Babylon. But the Lord would gather holy seed (contrast this with ISAIAH 1:4) in due time, as spoken by the prophet Zenos, in Jacob 5. This remnant of Israel would be put through the refiner's fire. The restoration of Israel is one of the core beliefs of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. As LDS we testify that indeed the process of restoration has begun to take place throughout the world beginning with Ephraim. Those who stay firm in the faith will be transformed through the cleansing of the Holy Ghost and through the expiatory sacrifice of Jesus Christ. We may be touched by the live coal of the atonement, and not be destroyed at the Second Coming. Those who thus endure will have within them holy seed, that is, the opportunity to receive of the Celestial glory and have eternal increase of posterity.

FIRST POSTED: 1 February 2001

Isaiah 7

Some commentators feel to group ISAIAH 7 through 9:7 (e.g., Barnes, and cf. Clarke) while others suggest that ISAIAH 7 all the way through 14 are very strongly connected (Kay). Lowth says that in these chapters we see “the manifestation of Messiah; the transcendent dignity of his character; and the universality and eternal duration of his kingdom.” Isaiah warns King Ahaz of Judah, to stay—or lean—upon the Lord and not upon the strong nations of the day. The Immanuel prophecy is given: that is, the virgin birth of our Lord Jesus Christ, the light that would shine in darkness. Punishments that would come to an unbelieving people are announced against Judah.

HISTORICAL NOTE: After the death of Solomon (922 BC),¹ Israel was split in two. Although from time to time the kingdoms of Ephraim and Judah had acted together in friendship during the period of the divided kingdoms, the relationship between them was strained at best.

VV. 1–9. The chapter opens as Syria and Ephraim—governed by King Rezin and King Pekah respectively—joined forces against King Ahaz of Judah. From 2 Kings 15:32–38, one may gather that such antagonism was not new, but carried over from the times of King Jotham (father of Ahaz). The exact timing and chronology of these events, however, are not clear from the Biblical narrative.² Some have supposed that the contention was fueled by Jotham’s unwillingness to join forces with these nations against Assyria. Now, the plan was to unseat Ahaz and place a puppet king, the son of Tabeel, on the throne, and thus force Judah into submission. We find ourselves with a very agitated King Ahaz at the news of wars and rumours of wars. Isaiah was sent to invite Ahaz to put his confidence in the Lord, rather than a foreign power. Ahaz was more inclined to lean on Tiglath-pileser³ of Assyria.

1 ¶ AND it came to pass in the days of Ahaz the son of Jotham, the son of Uzziah, king of Judah, [that] Rezin the king of Syria, and Pekah the son of Remaliah, king of Israel, went up toward Jerusalem to war against it, but could not prevail against it.

AND it came to pass in the days of Ahaz the son of Jotham, the son of Uzziah, king of Judah. Amaziah, was the father of Uzziah (sometimes known as Ozias or Azariah), who was the father of Jotham, who was the father of Ahaz, who was the father of Hezekiah, who was the father of Manasseh. Regarding the King, we read: “Twenty years old was Ahaz when he began to reign, and reigned sixteen years in Jerusalem, and did not that which was right in the sight of the LORD his God” (2 Kings 16:2a). These are piercing words. The scriptures tell us a little regarding what made him such a wicked king: “But he walked in the way of the kings of Israel, yea, and made his son to pass through the fire,⁴ according to the abominations of the heathen, whom the LORD cast out from before the children of Israel. And he sacrificed and burnt incense in the high places, and on the hills, and under every green tree” (2 Kings 16:3–4). To say that “he walked in the way of the kings of Israel” (Israel here stands for the Northern Kingdom, also known as Ephraim) was a great insult. These ten tribes had been led by idolatrous rulers. He had done no better than the ancient inhabitants of Canaan: “...for every abominable thing which the LORD hates, they have done for their gods; for they even burn their sons and their daughters in the fire to their gods” (RSV, Deuteronomy 12:31b, cf. 2 Kings 17:17, 31), or “... for even their sons and their daughters do they burn in the fire to their gods” (TPAH, Deuteronomy 12:31b). The idolatrous worship in high places was associated, according to some scholars, with immoral sexual rituals. It is likely that such sexual transgressions were one of many forms of idolatry. When Ahaz died, he did not merit to be buried with the rest of the kings of Judah. “And Ahaz slept with his fathers, and they buried him in the city, even in Jerusalem: but they brought him not into the sepulchres of the kings of Israel” (2 Chronicles 28:27a). The greatest wickedness of Ahaz was that of not putting his trust in the Living God. ¶ That Rezin king of Syria. Or rather, Aram (אֲרָם), as the word Syria does not appear in the Hebrew text (אֲרָם).⁵ Aram lied above the Northern Kingdom of Israel, north of Galilee. Asshur and Aram were children of Shem, and fathers of Assyria and Syria respectively: “The children of Shem; Elam, and Asshur, and Arphaxad, and Lud, and Aram” (Genesis 10:22). The Aramaic language was spoken at the time of Christ. ¶ Damascus was one of the best known cities in Syria. At the time of our narrative, Rezin was king of Syria. The scriptures have little to say about Rezin, other than his joining forces with Pekah. According to Nägelsbach, Rezin was the last king of Syria before it became absorbed by Assyria. ¶ And Pekah the son of Remaliah, king of Israel. Regarding Pekah, the King of the Northern Kingdom, we know that: “In the two and fiftieth year of Azariah king of Judah Pekah the son of Remaliah began to reign over Israel in Samaria, and reigned twenty years.⁶ And he did that which was evil in the sight of the LORD ...” (2 Kings 15:27–28a). Pekah seized the throne by murdering king Pekahiah (see 2 Kings 15:23, 25). Most of the kings of Judah were direct line descendants of the former king. In contrast, most of the kings of Israel usurped power by murdering the previous king. According to the Biblical account, it was on the 17th year of Pekah’s reign, that Ahaz began to reign in Judah (2 Kings 16:1). ¶ Went up toward Jerusalem to war against it, but could not prevail against it. Some exegetes feel that the Isaiah and Kings narratives are at odds with the one in Chronicles.⁷ Others suggest that multiple events are described in these chapters, not a single war. Thus, making it possible for Judah to have suffered the serious reversed mentioned in 2 Chronicles 28, yet for Jerusalem herself not to have fallen to the enemy at that time. Whether part of one war or many we read: “And he shall pass through Judah; he shall overflow and go over, he shall reach even to the neck; and the stretching out of his wings shall fill the breadth of thy land, O Immanuel” (ISAIAH 8:8). So when we read, “but could not prevail against it,” the narrative refers to Jerusalem.

¹ Dates are approximate, and follow those given by John Bright, A History of Israel, 3rd Edition.

² The scriptures in 2 Kings 15 had already given us the summary of events for the life of King Jotham, ending up with the traditional formula: “Now the rest of the acts of ... and all that he did, are they not written ...” (v. 36). The actual death of Jotham is not mentioned until v. 38, while the alliance of the two kings against Judah is sandwiched in between these two verses (v. 37). This is probably what has led commentators and historians to suggest that Ahaz inherited this trouble from Jotham. The actual point in time may be further obscured because kings often ruled as co-regents before their fathers died. An argument to place the date after the death of King Jotham is that nations often took advantage of the death of a strong monarch to wage a war against their enemies. Beside the question of the date, there is yet another question: did the combined forces of Syria and Israel attack Judah more than once? There are some who feel that this is the second time that such an alliance had come against Judah during the time of Ahaz. From the scriptures it is hard to ascertain this question. What seems to be clear is that Syria and Israel actually did come upon Judah and caused some major damage, even though they “could not prevail against” her. Regarding such chronological uncertainty, Delitzsch says, “Indisputable as the credibility of these events may be, it is nevertheless very difficult to connect them together, either substantially or chronologically, in a certain and reliable manner”

³ While Owen C. Whitehouse calls Ahab’s action in seeking Assyrian help one of intelligence (DOTB, Vol. 3, p. 736), the move was hardly so, and a “fatal misstep” instead (Bright, p. 273). Rogers compares Ahaz to his grandfather Uzziah, “Ahaz was a weakling—of that the sequel leaves no doubt whatever; but he was also stiff-necked and unwilling to take counsel, however excellent. The wisdom of the prophet Isaiah, who was also an acute statesman, was lost on him. But in the nature of the case a man who, like him, gave little heed to the religion of Jehovah would be less likely to listen to a prophet’s words than to the words of foreign kings. His introduction of the manners, customs, and worship of foreign nations shows how open he was to outside influences (2 Kings 16:10, and comp. 2 Kings 23:12). Coward though he was personally, he was king of a land with great resources for defensive war, as Uzziah had sufficiently shown” (Rogers, Robert William, A History of Babylonia and Assyria, Volume II, p. 127.)

2 And it was told the house of David, saying: Syria is confederate with Ephraim. And his heart was moved, and the heart of his people, as the trees of the wood are moved with the wind.

✓ resteth on

And it was told the house of David, saying. The house of David is another expression for Judah, the Southern Kingdom. David was born of the lineage of Judah, and the Savior would be born of the lineage of David. Ahaz, then heard about this trouble. ¶ Syria is confederate with Ephraim. Syria and Ephraim had joined forces to come against Judah. Henry observes, “Ephraim did indeed envy Judah (ISAIAH 11:13) and sought the ruin of that kingdom, but could not prevail; for the sceptre should never depart from Judah till the coming of Shiloh.”⁸ ¶ And his heart was moved, and the heart of his people, as the trees of the wood are moved with the wind. In the strong biting force of Isaiah’s language, we find out that Ahaz, and all of the people of Judah also, trembled with fear: their hearts were agitated as trees

⁴ “He even burned his son as an offering,” RSV. In the Chronicles narrative, it implied that Ahaz “burnt his children in the fire.” Note the plural. (See 2 Chronicles 28:1–6.)

⁵ “The name [Syria] does not occur in the Masoretic Text (אֲרָם) nor the Peshitta of the Old Testament (ܣܝܪܝܐ), but is found in the Septuagint (Ἰσὴν), in the Peshitta of the New Testament (ܣܝܪܝܐ) and in the Mishna. In the Septuagint (Ἰσὴν) it represents ‘Aram’ in all its combinations, as Aram-zobah, etc.” (ISBE). Regarding Aram we read: “The word [Aram] means high, or highlands, and as the name of a country denotes that elevated region extending from the northeast of Palestine to the Euphrates. It corresponded generally with the Syria and Mesopotamia of the Greeks and Romans.” (Eaton’s Bible Dictionary).

⁶ Bright feels that the actual reign of Pekah was much shorter: “Perhaps he had in fact exercised semi-autonomous authority in Gilead (cf. v. 25) since the death of Jeroboam ...” (Bright, p. 273).

⁷ See 2 Kings 16; and 2 Chronicles 28.

⁸ “The sceptre shall not depart from Judah, nor a lawgiver from between his feet, until Shiloh come; and unto him shall the gathering of the people be” (Genesis 49:10).

violently moved by the wind. “Ahaz, what a wicked man!” I thought some years ago as I was studying this verse of Isaiah. “Why did you not place your confidence and trust in the Lord?” The Spirit of the Lord rebuked me, “You are like Ahaz!” And then I remembered what had happened the previous week. I had gone to a soccer referee clinic, in which the referee director was chastising some of the referees for an incident that had transpired the previous Saturday. “But it was not my fault,” I had protested at the meeting, and began to defend myself; and worse, I had begun to lay blame elsewhere. The referee director turned to me and quietly said, “Gregorio, I was not talking about you ...” I had, in essence, fell into my own trap: “...and the sound of a shaken leaf shall chase them; and they shall flee, as fleeing from a sword; and they shall fall when none pursueth” (Leviticus 26:36b, Rain in Due Season). But the Lord is merciful, and He does not teach us a lesson without giving us another chance, that is, another opportunity to learn from that lesson. It was a short while after that I was publicly criticized in my position at the University of California. Gladly, the words of the Spirit were still ringing in my ears regarding my overdefensive attitudes. This time I placed my trust in the Lord. Although I felt a little numb from the unjustified attack, I responded with a simple but frank apology. What happened next was interesting. Several of the people involved wrote privately and congratulated me on the hard work and success of my program. The colleague who had written the original letter accepted my apology. This little incident proved to be a great blessing. I hate to think of the consequences that a defensive response would have caused. ¶ When we rely on the Father, He sends a defender: “Ye shall not need to fight in this battle: set yourselves, stand ye still, and see the salvation of the LORD with you, O Judah and Jerusalem: fear not, nor be dismayed; to morrow go out against them: for the LORD will be with you” (2 Chronicles 20:17). Alma taught his son as follows: “And now, O my son Helaman, behold, thou art in thy youth, and therefore, I beseech of thee that thou wilt hear my words and learn of me; for I do know that whosoever shall put their trust in God shall be supported in their trials, and their troubles, and their afflictions, and shall be lifted up at the last day” (Alma 36:3).

3 Then said the LORD unto Isaiah: Go forth now to meet Ahaz, thou and Shearjashub thy son, at the end of the conduit of the upper pool in the highway of the fuller's field;

✓ That is, the remnant shall return

✓ or, causeway

Then said the LORD unto Isaiah: Go forth now to meet Ahaz, thou and Shearjashub thy son. Isaiah was sent to speak to Ahaz. Isaiah was to take his son—pronounced Shear-Yashuv שְׂאָר יָשׁוּב, whose name in Hebrew means “A remnant shall return” — to visit with Ahaz. In ISAIAH 6:13 we read about the remnant that would return. Isaiah and Hosea were two prophets who were instructed by the Lord to give their children names that would help them better teach the message that was intended for the people. The Lord used several types of teaching tools to make His point, including making an object lesson out of the names given to the children of the prophets. We have said that the word apostasy in Hebrew literally means “turn around backwards,” as in “they are gone away backward” (ISAIAH 1:4b). Wade suggests: “Isaiah, in taking his son with him to meet the king, perhaps hoped to convey to Ahaz a tacit warning not to precipitate by unbelief the calamity of which the boy’s name was ominous.” McFadyen says: “The prophet takes with him his son Shear-jashub, whose name means a remnant shall turn (i.e. to Jehovah), and who is therefore in his own person, even though no words be spoken, a living embodiment of Isaiah’s message of judgment and hope for a better Israel to be.” Such a return implies repentance and a course correction, as much as the turning around backwards signifies an apostasy. Isaiah, as a prophet and servant of the Lord was in tune with the Spirit, and heeded the command to go and speak to the King Ahaz of Judah and take his own son along for an object lesson. ¶ At the end of the conduit of the upper pool in the highway of the fuller's field. Isaiah and his son where to go to the “end of the aqueduct of the upper pool, at the highway of the fuller’s field” (SOT). The Targum (T) reads “at the end of the conduit of the upper pool, which is by the way of the field of the spreading of the fullers.” Webster explains that fuller means someone who ‘fulls’ cloth, and full means to “to shrink and thicken (woolen cloth) by moistening, heating, and pressing” (Webster). Fuller כֹּבֵס, comes from the Hebrew root כָּבַס, “to tread” and is used to describe how clothes were washed by treading (HBD, BDB) them by foot with putrid urine as a cleanser, and thus an activity carried out beyond the city walls—because of the smell! (HBD). In the LDS BD we find, “Their work was to cleanse garments and whiten them. The soap they employed consisted of salts mixed with oil, and was of two kinds, made with carbonate of soda or with borax. The Fuller’s Field ... was close to the walls of Jerusalem, possibly on the east side.” The term also appears once in the New Testament, “And his raiment became shining, exceeding white as snow; so as no fuller on earth can white them” (Mark 9:3). ¶ We shall meet with the same location, “the conduit of the upper pool in the highway of the fuller's field,” in ISAIAH 36:2, when the king of Assyria sent an envoy to meet with Hezekiah, king of Judah. ¶ Why was King Ahaz outside the city walls by the upper pool? Barnes suggests that perhaps it was the fear of an impending siege, and that even in those early times the inhabitants of Jerusalem were seeking a way to protect their water source. Yet it would be Hezekiah ben Ahaz who would eventually build an underground structure to protect the water, when he was threatened by Assyria. “And when Hezekiah saw that Sennacherib was come, and that he was purposed to fight against Jerusalem, He took counsel with his princes and his mighty men to stop the waters of the fountains which were without the city: and they did help him. So there was gathered much people together, who stopped all the fountains, and the brook that ran through the midst of the land, saying, Why should the kings of Assyria come, and find much water? (2 Chronicles 32:2–4). In fact, Hezekiah, in contrast to his father, would almost repeat Isaiah’s words (see ISAIAH 7:4–14 that follows) in the process of calming those who were afraid of the then impending attack by Sennacherib King of Assyria. Kay observes: “In 2 Chronicles 32:7, 8, when Hezekiah was standing near the spot where this prophecy was delivered, he all but quotes both Isaiah’s words in v. 4 and the great name Immanu-el עִמָּנוּ אֵל. ‘Be ye strong and courageous; fear not, neither be dismayed, because of the king of Assyria and of all the multitude that is with him: for with us (‘immanu עִמָּנוּ) is a Greater than is with him. With him is an arm of flesh; but with us (‘immanu עִמָּנוּ) is the Lord our God to help us and to fight our battles” (p. 79). See also ISAIAH 36–39.

4 And say unto him: Take heed, and be quiet; fear not, neither be faint-hearted[✓] for the two tails of these smoking firebrands, for the fierce anger of Rezin with Syria, and of the son of Remaliah.

✓ let not thy heart be tender

And say unto him: Take heed, and be quiet. Take heed means to listen up and take council, to obey. Take heed הִשָּׁמֶר, as Kay points out, is the frequent admonition of Yahweh to the children of Israel, “It is the word that is used so often in law (e.g., Exodus 34:12; Deuteronomy 4:9; 6:12; 12:13, 19, 30), when Israel is cautioned against heathen alliances and practices.” Obedience is one of the most essential elements of religion, that of subjecting our own will to that of God. “Now therefore, if ye will obey my voice indeed, and keep my covenant, then ye shall be a peculiar treasure unto me above all people: for all the earth is mine: And ye shall be unto me a kingdom of priests, and an holy nation. These are the words which thou shalt speak unto the children of Israel” (Exodus 19:5–6). Be quiet is an invitation to calm down, to be still, to listen: “Be still, and know that I am God” (Psalms 46:10a). Rawlinson notes the contrast with “For thus saith the Lord GOD, the Holy One of Israel; In returning and rest shall ye be saved; in quietness and in confidence shall be your strength” (ISAIAH 30:15a). ¶ Fear not, neither be faint-hearted. This is an invitation not to fear anything but God. The sentiment is first recorded in Deuteronomy: “... let not your hearts faint, fear not” (Deuteronomy 20:3), and repeated by Jeremiah as well: “Therefore fear thou not, O my servant Jacob, saith the LORD; neither be dismayed, O Israel: for, lo, I will save thee ...” (Jeremiah 30:10a). Calvin says, “It is impossible, I acknowledge, not to fear when dangers threaten, for faith does not deprive us of all feeling ... for no man has made such proficiency [of faith] as not to have any remains of that distrust against which we ought continually to strive.” Henry adds, since “God is found of those who seek him not, much more will he be found of those who seek him diligently.” So, let us seek after the Lord! Also, remember this beautiful scripture: “I love them that love me; and those that seek me early shall find me” (Proverbs 8:17). ¶ For the two tails of these smoking firebrands. Or, “... because of these two stubs of smoldering firebrands” (NAS). The word firebrand is synonymous to someone who stirs the pot, or is a troublemaker. A smoking firebrand gives the impression of a bully who is more smoke than fire. Several commentators describe it as torches that once burnt brightly but now have nothing more to give than annoying smoke. To Nägelsbach, it is “the charred stick of wood that may have been used to stir the fire.” ¶ For the fierce anger of Rezin with Syria, and of the son of Remaliah. Or, “By the fierce anger of Rezin, and by the son of Remaliah” (Syriac, §). The § leaves out the words “of Syria.” These smoldering tails represent Rezin of Syria and Pekah of Israel. Most commentators feel these words are full of sarcastic contempt for Pekah, since Isaiah only calls him the son of Remaliah. “It is by way of contempt that the king of Israel is not called by his own name. The Hebrews and Arabians, when they wish to speak reproachfully of any one, omit his proper name and call him merely the son of this or that, especially when his father is but little known or respected. So Saul names David, in contempt, the son of Jesse; 1 Samuel 20:27, 31 (Hengstenberg in Barnes). To the Arabians of the desert, even today, “it is an insult of the worst sort to ask a man his father’s name—such a question is equivalent to telling an adult male that he, ‘with all his inches of beard, is nothing save by virtue of being his father’s son.’”⁹ Two sources of possible contempt towards the son of Remaliah are (1) the way Pekah gained power, by assassinating his predecessor, Pekahiah, and (2) the idea that Judah would be attacked by her very brothers, the Northern Kingdom. Fierce anger against us can do little¹⁰ if we are willing to put our trust in the Lord.

⁹ Youssouf, Ibrahim Ag; Grimshaw, Allen D.; and Bird, Charles S. “Greetings in the Desert.” In A Cultural Approach to Interpersonal

5 Because Syria, Ephraim, and the son of Remaliah, have taken evil counsel against thee, saying:

Syria (through Remaliah) and Ephraim (through Pekah) had plotted harm, or taken evil counsel, against Judah. No evil counsel will triumph against a people the Lord wishes to protect. Regarding the Lord's Church today, the Prophet Joseph Smith taught, "...the Standard of Truth has been erected; no unhallowed hand can stop the work from progressing; persecutions may rage, mobs may combine, armies may assemble, calumny may defame, but the truth of God will go forth boldly, nobly and independently, till it has penetrated every continent, visited every clime, swept every country and sounded in every ear; till the purposes of God shall be accomplished, and the great Jehovah shall say the work is done."¹¹

6 Let us go up against Judah, and vex it[✓], and let us make a breach therein for us, and set a king in the midst of it, yea [even] the son of Tabeal.

✓ or, waken

Communication: Essential Readings (Leila Monaghan and Jane E. Goodman, editors), Blackwell Publishing, 2007, p. 58.

¹⁰ See the April 2004 General Conference talk by Elder Dennis E. Simmons of the Seventy, "But if not." Elder Simmons said: "Centuries ago, Daniel and his young associates were suddenly thrust from security into the world—a world foreign and intimidating. When Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego refused to bow down and worship a golden image set up by the king, a furious Nebuchadnezzar told them that if they would not worship as commanded, they would immediately be cast into a burning fiery furnace. 'And who is that God that shall deliver you out of my hands?' The three young men quickly and confidently responded, 'If it be so [if you cast us into the furnace], our God whom we serve is able to deliver us from the burning fiery furnace, and he will deliver us out of thine hand.' That sounds like my eighth-grade kind of faith. But then they demonstrated that they fully understood what faith is. They continued, 'But if not, . . . we will not serve thy gods, nor worship the golden image which thou hast set up.' That is a statement of true faith. They knew that they could trust God—even if things didn't turn out the way they hoped. They knew that faith is more than mental assent, more than an acknowledgment that God lives. Faith is total trust in Him."

¹¹ Smith, Joseph Jr. History of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. Edited by B. H. Roberts. 2nd ed., rev. Salt Lake City, Utah: The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, 1932-51, 4:540.

Let us go up against Judah, and vex it. The margin || suggests that they would go up against Judah to wake her up, to help her realize her obligation. Other words for vex include annoy, disturb, bother, irritate; but here, to attack her. ¶ And let us make a breach therein for us. To make a breach has reference to the fact that Jerusalem was fortified, and they planned to make a whole, aperture, or opening in wall through which they could enter and take the city. פתח often has violent connotations as in the ripping open of pregnant women or bursting into a city to capture it by force (see Gesenius, BDB, Nägelsbach). Breach can also mean, as Kay explains, to "take by storm" (2 Chronicles 32:1). The verb is used for the final 'breaking up' of Jerusalem at the end of the Chaldean siege, Jeremiah 39:2; 52:7)." A breach, then, in this context, meant that pressure was put upon the wall until it would give in one spot. Likewise, in our own personal lives, Satan attacks us in our weakest points (or even where we might, in prideful confidence, believe *all is well*¹²), coming against us with his battering rams. We must lean on the Lord for strength. ¶ And set a king in the midst of it, yea even the son of Tabeal. We know little of this ben Tabeal (i.e., God is good),¹³ but can assume he would have been either a puppet king, or someone who was of the same philosophy of the Ephraimite and Syrian kings. This idea of setting kings loyal to the conquering powers is seen often during this time period in the orient.

7 Thus saith the Lord GOD: It shall not stand, neither shall it come to pass.

Isaiah spoke on behalf of the Lord, that despite all the planning, plotting and evil counsel against Judah, nothing would come of it. Kay suggests: "Whatever Ahaz's guilt might be, God would be faithful to His covenant with David." Certainly, "no unhallowed hand" would be permitted to touch Judah and Israel without the consent of the Lord.

8 For the head of Syria [is] Damascus, and the head of Damascus, [is] Rezin; and within three score and five years shall Ephraim be broken that it be not a people.[✓]

✓ from a people

¹² Elder Dallin H. Oaks, Our Strengths can become our Downfall, BYU Devotional Address, 7 June 1992; October 1994 Ensign.

¹³ This name has its origin in Syriac (ܐ) rather than the Hebrew tongue (Kay) and the spelling in the Hebrew (מ) has been changed so the name instead reads "Good for nothing" (Holman, Nägelsbach).

Kay as well as Nägelsbach perceptively point out that the head of these nations is a man! In contrast, “Behind Jerusalem and the house of David, stands the Lord as the true head in chief of Israel” (Nägelsbach). When the titular head of Judah, Ahaz, would not trust in the true Head,¹⁴ he would be removed. This would be true until the House of David had fulfilled its mission with respect of the Messiah. The idea of the scripture here in Isaiah is similar to the often quoted, “as night follows the day, so will....” The first fact here is that “as surely as the head or capital of Syria was Damascus,” and the second fact is “as surely as the head or leader of Damascus was Rezin,” just as surely it would follow that “Ephraim (Northern Kingdom) would cease to be, and would be broken up, all within the space of three score and five years, that is, 65 years.” The head of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints is the Lord. President Brigham Young taught: “The Lord Almighty leads this Church, and he will never suffer you to be led astray if you are found doing your duty. You may go home and sleep as sweetly as a babe in its mother’s arms, as to any danger of your leaders leading you astray, for if they should try to do so the Lord would quickly sweep them from the earth. (9:289).”¹⁵

¶ Ephraim would be taken captive to the north, and the ten northern tribes would be lost to the world. This prophecy was fulfilled, explains Lowth, “to the total depopulation of the kingdom of Israel by Esarhaddon, who carried away the remains of the ten tribes which had been left by Tiglath Pileser, and Shalmaneser, and who planted the country with new inhabitants. That the country was not totally stripped of its inhabitants by Shalmaneser appears from many passages of the history of Josiah, where Israelites are mentioned as still remaining there, 2 Chronicles 34:6, 7, 33; 35:18; 2 Kings 23:19, 20.” Delitzsch also calculates that “we get exactly sixty-five years from the second year of the reign of Ahaz to the termination of Ephraim’s existence as a nation (viz. Ahaz 14; Hezekiah, 29; Manasseh, 22; in all, 65) ... [assuming] this took place in the twenty-second and twenty third years of Manasseh ...”¹⁶ Kay agrees, “If the second year of Ahaz (741 B.C.) be taken as the starting-point, the 65th year would be 677 B.C.—the 22nd year of Manasseh; in which (according to the ‘Seder Olam’) he was carried away (2 Chronicles 33:11) by the Assyrian armies to Babylon. It is most probable that the importation of Cuthaeans into Samaria (2 Kings 17:24; Ezra 4:2),—the event which sealed the doom of Ephraim,—took place at the same time. From that time onward Ephraim has been scattered and lost among the nations.” ¶ What do we know about Esarhaddon? He was the son of Sennacherib, the King of Assyria who came so close to overpowering Jerusalem at the time of Hezekiah King of Judah, were it not for the intercession of the Lord (see ISAIAH 37). The accounts in Isaiah and Kings are silent about what involvement he may have had in the murder of his father (see 2 Kings 19:36–37). Very little is known about this campaign by Esarhaddon against Israel. From the present threats by Tiglath-pileser (who reigned between 745–727 BC), other kings of Assyria included Shalmaneser V (726–722 BC, who began the horrible three year siege of Samaria), Sargon II (721–705 BC, during the fall of Samaria in Israel), Sennacherib (704–681 BC, related to the troubles with Judah) and Esarhaddon (680–669 BC).¹⁷ These deportations took place in waves. The policy of Assyria was to move people around and thus reduce their political strength. But there were some Israelites left who were not deported and who intermingled with a new people, thus forming a much loathed group from the perspective of the Jews, the Samaritans.

¹⁴ This point, about who is, or shall we say ought to be, our head reminds me of one of the most tender and striking exegeses presented by a BYU religion scholar M. Catherine Thomas at a CES meetings regarding Paul’s writings: “But I would have you know, that the head of every man is Christ; and the head of the woman is the man; and the head of Christ is God. Every man praying or prophesying, having his head covered, dishonoureth his head. But every woman that prayeth or prophesieth with her head uncovered dishonoureth her head: for that is even all one as if she were shaven. For if the woman be not covered, let her also be shorn: but if it be a shame for a woman to be shorn or shaven, let her be covered. For a man indeed ought not to cover his head, forasmuch as he is the image and glory of God: but the woman is the glory of the man. For the man is not of the woman: but the woman of the man. Neither was the man created for the woman; but the woman for the man. For this cause ought the woman to have power on her head because of the angels. Nevertheless neither is the man without the woman, neither the woman without the man, in the Lord. For as the woman is of the man, even so is the man also by the woman; but all things of God” (1 Corinthians 11:3-12). Sister Thomas was able to explain how the word head needs to be understood in its proper context to our Head, Christ, and to the Temple ordinances. But our Head is Christ, “For by him were all things created, that are in heaven, and that are in earth, visible and invisible, whether they be thrones, or dominions, or principalities, or powers: all things were created by him, and for him: And he is before all things, and by him all things consist. And he is the head of the body, the church: who is the beginning, the firstborn from the dead; that in all things he might have the preeminence” (Colossians 1:16-18). M. Catherine Thomas. “Paul and the Daughters of Eve,” CES New Testament Symposium, 1992.

¹⁵ Young, Brigham. Discourses of Brigham Young. Compiled by John A. Widtsoe. Salt Lake City: Deseret Book, 1978, p. 137.

¹⁶ “Wherefore the LORD brought upon them the captains of the host of the king of Assyria, which took Manasseh among the thorns, and bound him with fetters, and carried him to Babylon.” (2 Chronicles 33:11) This marked an important break in the kingdom of Manasseh after which he was restored to the throne. Delitzsch suggests that this would have been a natural time for Esarhaddon to have taken the rest of Israel captive (beside those who were left behind and never taken, and eventually mingled with other peoples and became the Samaritans. Returning to Manasseh, King of Judah, we read, “And when he was in affliction, he besought the LORD his God, and humbled himself greatly before the God of his fathers, And when he was in affliction, he besought the LORD his God, and humbled himself greatly before the God of his fathers, And prayed unto him: and he was intreated of him, and heard his supplication, and brought him again to Jerusalem into his kingdom. Then Manasseh knew that the LORD he was God” (2 Chronicles 33:12-13).

¹⁷ See Bright, History of Israel. Chronological Chart VI.

9 And the head of Ephraim [is] Samaria, and the head of Samaria [is] Remaliah's son. If ye will not believe surely ye shall not be established.✓

✓ or, Do ye not believe? it is because ye are not stable

Using the very same logic and construction, we likewise see that as it follows that (1) the head or capital of Ephraim was Samaria and (2) the head or leader of Samaria was Remaliah's son (Pekah), so (3) would it follow that Judah would also suffer for her disobedience (as Ephraim would suffer for hers). Judah would be permitted to return to her land, but this return would be relatively short-lived. ¶ Lowth, leaning upon Secker and Durell, suggests that perhaps the original reading was not "If ye will not believe surely ye shall not be established," but rather, "If ye will not believe me ye shall not be established." The Hebrew for surely, כִּי, could have been misread for that of me, בִּי. Lowth notes support for this concept in the Chaldee, "If ye will not believe in the words of the prophet."¹⁸ Lowth often gets carried away with suggested changes in the text, however. ¶ Ahaz here stands for all of Judah, being a type and a shadow. And why would Ahaz not be established? Ahaz would turn to Assyria and idolatry for help rather than to the Lord. Speaking of the second clause in this verse, Kay suggests: "There is an assonance in the Hebrew between the two clauses which cannot well be transferred. The effect is:—"Be firm in faith, or ye will not be made firm in fact." God's faithfulness is as the strong mountains; if ye would be strong, ye must plant your feet on His promise." The paronomasia is as follows¹⁹:

אִם	לֹא	תֵאֱמִינוּ
If	not	will-ye-believe
כִּי	לֹא	תֵאֱמִינוּ
surely	not	shall-be-ye-established

When we lean upon the Lord for our stay and our staff, we can act in confidence: "... for the LORD will go before you; and the God of Israel will be your reward" (ISAIAH 52:12b).

¹⁸ Or rather, "the words of the prophets." See also, The Aramaic Bible.

¹⁹ Cf. with Green.

vv. 10–25. The Lord, through Isaiah, offers Ahaz the opportunity to put Him to the test, by asking for a sign. Ahaz, like Satan, distorts the scriptures and through false piety refuses to accept a sign. The Lord gives a sign anyway: the virgin shall conceive, and shall bear a son, and shall call his name Immanuel. Thus, the birth of the Christ child is predicted over 600 years before it takes place. The death of the kings of both Israel and Syria, presently a threat to Judah, is also announced.

10 ¶ Moreover, the LORD spake again✓ unto Ahaz, saying:

✓ And the LORD added to speak

The Lord spoke again to Isaiah, giving him a message for Ahaz. The prophets have, from the beginning of times, prophesied of the coming of the Messiah and have testified of Jesus Christ. From the Talmudic Tractate, we have:

כל הנביאים כולן לא
תנבאו אלא לימות המשיח

That is, "All the prophets prophesied not but of the days of the Messiah," (Sanhedrin 99a).²⁰ There is an interchange of voices between those of the Prophet Isaiah and the Lord. This interchange is so natural, that it takes place not only between the Prophet and the Lord, but also between Yahweh and Elohim. Through the principle of Divine Investiture the Lord speaks for Elohim (John 12:49, also see Introduction).

11 Ask thee a sign of the LORD thy God; ask it either in the depths,✓ or in the heights above.

✓ or, make thy petition deep

Ask thee a sign of the LORD thy God. Is this not in a way, what is happening to those who receive the Book of Mormon and the message of the restored gospel truths? "And when ye shall receive these things, I would exhort you that ye would ask God, the Eternal Father, in the name of Christ, if these things are not true; and if ye shall ask with a sincere heart, with real intent, having faith in Christ, he will manifest the truth of it unto you, by the power of the Holy Ghost. And by the power of the Holy Ghost ye may know the truth of all things" (Moroni 10:4–5).²¹ Is not the Lord saying to us, “prove me now herewith ...” (Malachi 3:10)? Ask me for a sign. It is wonderful and truly astonishing. Ahaz had the opportunity to ask for a sign from the Lord. ¶ Ask it either in the depths, or in the heights above. Ahaz was asked to put the Lord to the test: to prove Him.²² Whether it be in the heights above, such as what took place in the day of Ahaz (ISAIAH 38:8) or in the depths of the earth. The Scriptures are full of promises if we are willing to keep the associated commandments: “And when we obtain any blessing from God, it is by obedience to that law upon which it is predicated” (D&C 130:21). The key is that the Lord wants us to obtain these blessings.

²⁰ This from the Talmud, as quoted in The Life and Times of Jesus the Messiah (3rd Edition), Alfred Edersheim, E.R. Herrick & Company, New York: New York. 1886, p. 1.

²¹ The truth will be manifested with as much strength as is needed for that individual to know for a certainty that this truth came from God.

12 But Ahaz said: I will not ask, neither will I tempt the LORD.

Satan attempted to tempt Jesus by twisting the scriptures to fit his evil purposes, with the words “it is written.” So did Ahaz distort the scriptures under Satan’s influence: “Ye shall not tempt the LORD your God ...” (Deuteronomy 6:16). Kay observes: “In speaking of Ahaz, God had condescendingly said: ‘Ask of the Lord, thy God.’ Ahaz replied distantly: ‘I will not tempt the Lord;’” omitting the privileged expression ‘my God.’ The prophet now supplies the missing term: ‘Will ye weary out my God?’” Nägelsbach has, “The insult to his God is the chief matter to the Prophet. Notice that by ‘my God’ here [ISAIAH 7:13], he in a measure retracts the ‘thy God.’” King Ahaz was too proud to humble himself before the Lord, or to put the Lord to the test. Ahaz had no trouble, however, debasing himself—and desecrating the temple—before the King

There is an important pattern in the verses Moroni 10:3-5. The Lord will manifest the truth through personal revelation to the individual who has a grateful disposition, and asks the Father sincerely in the name of Christ. When as a youth of 15 I opened the Book of Mormon and read those words for the first time, I was overpowered with the warmth of the Spirit of the Holy Ghost.

²² The lack of rain was apparent during my 1988 Sabbatical trip to Chile where I taught a course for the University of Chile. The Lord has told us that if we walk in His statutes, and keep His commandments, that we will have “rain in due season” (Leviticus 26:4). As I now prayed for the needed moisture in Chile, I felt the time was not right, not just yet. Instead, I felt to pray that when the time would be right, that I would be prompted to ask for rain. Several months later, such a day came when I did pray for rain. I had been informed that the barometric pressure was such that there were no chances of rain. As I prayed for rain before retiring for bed, the Spirit chided me somewhat. That eventually it would rain—in a week or a month—and I would attribute it to the Lord. I felt inspired, instead, to pray that it would rain before the night was over. I broke into a cold sweat of fear as I tried my faith in prayer. A few hours later I was awakened by my wife who told me it was raining. It poured for ten hours. The Lord has a great love for each one of us. It is His desire to pour rain upon us, not just physical rain, but the type of rain that will help us bring forth fruits of repentance and of good works. But we must ask and we must walk in His ways.

of Assyria (2 Kings 16:7–19). It is somewhat ironical that the very people who Ahaz sought to make an alliance with, would be the ones who not much later would cause so very much harm to Judah. King Ahaz sought Assyria as a protector against Syria and Ephraim. The history of Judah shows that this move was of only temporary satisfaction, as Judah then had to pay tribute to Assyria and lost strength through adopting her idolatrous ways (2 Chronicles 28), for we read: “And Tilgathpileser king of Assyria came unto him [i.e., Ahaz], and distressed him, but strengthened him not” (2 Chronicles 28:20). Had Ahaz trusted in the Lord, matters would have ended differently. Let us, rather, not be afraid to put our confidence in God, and be ever ready to follow the Brethren and whisperings of the Spirit. “Trust in the LORD with all thine heart; and lean not unto thine own understanding” (Proverbs 3:5).

13 And he said: Hear ye now, O house of David; [is it] a small thing for you to weary men, but will ye weary my God also?

And he said: Hear ye now, O house of David. Ahaz was of the house of David, from the tribe of Judah. But here the meaning seems to be deeper, calling upon the house of David to be a witness of what Ahaz was saying this day, and his refusal to put his trust on the Lord. The sign to follow was given to the house of David, not to Ahaz. ¶ Is it a small thing for you to weary men, but will ye weary my God also? Or, “... is it not enough for you to try the patience of men, that you try the patience of my God also?” (Berkeley).

vv. 14–16. Faithful Christian commentators all agree that ISAIAH 7:14 has reference to the miraculous birth of the Savior. There has been much effort, however, for others to attempt to destroy all Messianic scriptures, including this one.

14 Therefore the Lord himself shall give you a sign—Behold, a virgin shall conceive, and shall bear a son, and shall call his name Immanuel.

✓ or, thou, O virgin, shalt call

Therefore the Lord himself shall give you a sign.

Therefore or לָכֵן. Kay has, “There is a similarly weighty Therefore in ISAIAH 28:16;²³ where a most comforting promise to the faithful, and a most solemn menace to the perverse, are combined, as here.” This sign is given—not for Ahaz—but to those who would look forward to the birth of Messiah. The sign was given to Judah, or the house of David, and to all those who waited for Messiah. And also for a sign and a wonder for all who believe in Jesus the Christ and see in Him and in none else the fulfillment of this wonderful sign. ¶ Behold, a virgin shall conceive. Barnes writes, “This interjection [i.e., behold, lo, הִנֵּה] is a very common one in the Old Testament. It is used to arrest attention; to indicate the importance of what was about to be said.” Delitzsch says that in Isaiah, הִנֵּה is used to introduce a future event. The expression is not עֲלָמָה but rather הַעֲלָמָה, and should have been rendered “the virgin” (as does LITV). Likewise, in Isaiah 7:16 it is not “a child” but rather “the child,” הַיֶּלֶד. The use of the word the, makes it so it “points to some special virgin, preeminent above all others” (Rawlinson). Every effort has been set forth to attempt to explain that עֲלָמָה does not mean virgin, but simply any young woman. TWOT well indicates that “There is no instance where it can be proved that עֲלָמָה designates a young woman who is not a virgin” (TWOT). There is no agreement on the exact publication date of the LXX (6), the Hebrew to Greek translation of the Old Testament), but all agree it was finished well before the birth of the Savior (at least 80 years before). The translators used the word παρθένος, virgin. They had no way of knowing the pivotal significance this would have. ¶ This scripture in Isaiah was used to comfort Joseph, espoused to Mary: “the argument that convinced Joseph was the fact, pointed out to him by the angel, that such an event had already been predicted by Isaiah” (TWOT): “Now all this was done, that it might be fulfilled which was spoken of the Lord by the prophet, saying, Behold, a virgin shall be with child, and shall bring forth a son, and they shall call his name Emmanuel, which being interpreted is, God with us. Then Joseph being raised from sleep did as the angel of the Lord had bidden him, and took unto him his wife” (Matthew 1:22–25). The testimony of the Book of Mormon is also clear on this subject: “Behold, the virgin whom thou seest is the mother of the Son of God” (1 Nephi 11:18b); “And behold, he shall be born of Mary, at Jerusalem which is the land of our forefathers, she being a virgin, a precious and chosen vessel, who shall be overshadowed and conceive by the power of the Holy Ghost, and bring forth a son, yea, even the Son of God” (Alma 7:10). ¶ And shall bear a son, and shall call his name Immanuel. The male child that the virgin would give birth to would be called Immanuel, or God is with us, or with us is God. Nägelsbach explains that the Savior would “spring as a son of a virgin from the apparently dried up root” of the house of David. The Hebrew for Immanuel,²⁴ or rather Immanu-el, is אֱמַנּוּ אֵל, where El, אֵל means God and עִמָּנוּ, with us.

²³ “Therefore thus saith the Lord GOD, Behold, I lay in Zion for a foundation a stone, a tried stone, a precious corner stone, a sure foundation: he that believeth shall not make haste” (ISAIAH 28:16).

15 Butter and honey shall he eat, that he may know to refuse the evil, and to choose the good.

Butter and honey shall he eat. Or perhaps, curd²⁵ and honey. Some have suggested that this is food intended for royalty while others for the common people. I suspect that curd and especially wild honey were the foods for those who traveled in the desert wilderness.²⁶ And certainly, Jesus was involved in much such travel—as he went to Egypt and returned to the Holy Land upon the death of Herod. They traveled past Judea onto Nazareth in Galilee. His family traveled yearly from Nazareth to Jerusalem for the feast of Passover (Luke 2: 41). This included the better known visit when He was twelve, and was found at the Temple expounding Scriptures with the learned. Once the Savior entered His full ministry we know he constantly traveled in the wilderness: “The foxes have holes, and the birds of the air have nests; but the Son of man hath not where to lay his head” (Matthew 8:20b). ¶ That he may know to refuse the evil, and to choose the good. That is, that Messiah would be born of a mortal mother and immortal Father. In other words, Messiah would be afforded the same opportunity given to every person who has come upon this earth: that of taking upon himself a mortal tabernacle with all its attendant frailties. Another characteristic of mortality is that those who reach the age of accountability must continually make choices between right and wrong; between good and evil. In the Scriptures we read that the Savior “was in all points tempted like as we are, yet without sin” (Hebrews 4:15b). So “that he may know to refuse the evil, and to choose the good,” then, is an allusion to the great condescension of God,²⁷ that Yahweh indeed took upon himself a mortal tabernacle.

²⁴ Barnes notes: “Nothing was more common among the Jews than to incorporate the name, or a part of the name, of the Deity with the names which they gave to their children. Thus, Isaiah denotes the salvation of JEHOVAH; Jeremiah, the exaltation or grandeur of JEHOVAH, each compounded of two words, in which the name JEHOVAH constitutes a part. Thus, also in Elijah, the two names of God are combined, and it means literally, God the JEHOVAH. Thus also, Eliab, God my father; Elidada, knowledge of God; Eliakim, the resurrection of God; Elisha, salvation of God.”

²⁵ Barnes writes, “The word rendered butter (חֲמָצֵת), denotes not butter, but thick and curdled milk. This was the common mode or using milk as an article of food in the East, and is still. In no passage of the Old Testament does butter seem to be meant by the word.”

²⁶ “So the LORD alone did lead him, and there was no strange god with him. He made him ride on the high places of the earth, that he might eat the increase of the fields; and he made him to suck honey out of the rock, and oil out of the flinty rock; Butter of kine, and milk of sheep, with fat of lambs, and rams of the breed of Bashan, and goats, with the fat of kidneys of wheat; and thou didst drink the pure blood of the grape” (Deuteronomy 32:12–15).

16 For before the child shall know to refuse the evil and choose the good, the land that thou abhorrest shall be forsaken of both her kings.

For before the child shall know to refuse the evil and choose the good. It seems that Isaiah has now stopped speaking of the Christ child and is now giving Ahaz yet another sign. Such a sign was to take place very soon, one that Ahaz would come to recognize and remember. It would be in relation to Isaiah’s own son. There are several definitions that one might use to say that a child is of an age to understand the difference between good and evil. A child (1) begins to have a measure of understanding between 3 and 8 years old; (2) at 8 enters the age of spiritual accountability; and (3) at 12 years old, the age of accountability or coming of age for Jewish children. ¶ The land that thou abhorrest (אֶרֶץ) shall be forsaken (אֶזְזַב) of both her kings. Gill explains: “... but the land of Israel [i.e., Ephraim] and Syria, called one land, because of the confederacy between the kings of them, Rezin and Remaliah’s son, which Ahaz and his nobles abhorred, because of their joining together against them; and so it was, that in a very little time both these kings were cut off; Pekah the son of Remaliah was slain by Hoshea the son of Elah, who reigned in his stead (2 Kings 15:30), and Rezin was slain by the king of Assyria (2 Kings 16:9). So also Barnes: “The land concerning which thou art so much ‘alarmed or distressed,’ that is, the united land of Syria and Ephraim. It is mentioned here as ‘the land,’ or as one land, because they were united then in a firm alliance, so as to constitute, in fact, or for the purposes of invasion and conquest, one people or nation. The phrase, ‘which thou abhorrest,’ means properly, which thou loathest, the primary idea of the word - קִוִּי – being to feel a nausea, or to vomit. It then means to fear, or to feel alarm; and this, probably, is the meaning here. Abaz, however, evidently looked upon the nations of Syria and Samaria with disgust, as well as with alarm.”

vv. 17–25. Judah would not be left unscathed but would suffer greatly. Such punishment would come from Assyria and from Egypt. The desolation would be as total as a person being shaved of all his body hair. The few people who would be left in the land would take upon them a nomadic rather than agricultural life.

17 ¶ The LORD shall bring upon thee, and upon thy people, and upon thy father's house, days that have not come from the day that Ephraim departed from Judah; [even] the king of Assyria.

The LORD shall bring upon thee, and upon thy people, and upon thy father's house. The punishment that would now come upon Ahaz, the people of Judah, and the monarchy, would be devastating. ¶ Days that have not come from the day that Ephraim departed from Judah. The Lord would bring such punishment upon Judah as she had not seen since the civil war had divided the nation in two. ¶ The king of Assyria. While Judah would eventually fall to Babylon, she was about to be scourged by Assyria. Delitzsch well says: “The very king to whom Ahaz had appealed in terror, would bring Judah to the brink of destruction.” Jerusalem would survive by a thread through a miraculous intervention.

18 And it shall come to pass in that day [that] the LORD shall hiss for the fly that [is] in the uttermost part of the rivers of Egypt, and for the bee that [is] in the land of Assyria.

And it shall come to pass in that day that the LORD shall hiss. Just as we saw in ISAIAH 5:26, the word hiss (יִשְׁרַק) means to summon. ¶ For the fly that is in the uttermost part of Egypt, and for the bee that is in the land of Assyria. The fly and the bee seem to be nicknames for Egypt and Assyria, respectively.²⁸ These two nations are specified because Judah was predisposed to lean upon them—rather than on the Lord—for help. Yet each of these powers would bring much mischief upon Judah. During Isaiah’s lifetime it would be the Assyrian attacks that would be the more salient than those of Egypt. Isaiah was looking at future times, even to the time of Jeremiah, when Pharaoh

²⁸ Delitzsch explains: “The Egyptian nation, with its vast and unparalleled numbers, is compared to the swarming fly; and the Assyrian nation, with its love for war and conquest, to the stinging bee which is so hard to keep off (Deuteronomy 1:44, Psalms 118:12). The emblems also correspond to the nature of the two countries ... Egypt abounds in gnats, etc., more especially in flies (muscaria), including a species of small fly (nemath), which is a great plague to men throughout all the country of the Nile (see Hartmann, Natur-geschichtlich-medizinische Skizze der Nilländer, 1865, pp. 204-5) ... and the bee to the more mountainous and woody Assyria, where the keeping of bees is still one of the principal branches of trade.”

²⁷ 1 Nephi 11:1, 14-20, 26-33.

Nechoh would put the king of Judah in bands and place upon the throne a king of his liking (2 Kings 23:29–37).

19 And they shall come, and shall rest all of them in the desolate valleys, and in the holes of the rocks, and upon all thorns, and upon all bushes. ✓

✓ or, commendable trees

And they shall come, and shall rest all of them. They, that is, the enemies of Judah, shall settle (נָחָה) themselves in her land. ¶ In the desolate valleys, and in the holes of the rocks, and upon all thorns, and upon all bushes. They shall be a complete nuisance, leaving no spot where they shall not conquer. The allusion of the fly and the bee is continued in the form of pestilence. Thorns were abundant in the Holy Land. Kay explains: “the thorns (or ‘prickly lotus;’ only here and in ISAIAH 55:13), which were so abundant; and upon the bushes, or, ‘spiny thickets’ (here only). It is noticed that ‘there are at least eighteen Hebrew words used to express different kinds of prickly shrubs or weeds’ in the Bible; and that Palestine, from ‘the combined heat and dryness of its climate’ and the rockiness of its surface, has a peculiar ‘tendency to form thorns even in groups where we would least expect them’ (Dr. Tristram, ‘N.H.B.’ p. 423.) ISAIAH 55:13,²⁹ The only other place where the ‘prickly lotus’ is mentioned, helps suggest the right view of the figurative language here made use of: 32:13.”³⁰ These happenings are a type of the Second Coming when the wicked: “shall go into the holes of the rocks, and into the caves of the earth, for fear of the LORD, and for the glory of his majesty, when he ariseth to shake terribly the earth” (ISAIAH 2:19b).

20 In the same day shall the Lord shave with a razor that is hired, [~~namely~~], by them beyond the river, by the king of Assyria, the head, and the hair of the feet; and it shall also consume the beard.

In the same day shall the Lord shave with a razor that is hired. Or, in that day יוֹם יְהוָה will the Lord (ASV). The Lord does not need to personally castigate His people, but rather, does it through a “hired razor.” That is, a foreign force that would humble Judah. Kay (following Duguet) and Nägelsbach suggest that it was Ahaz who hired the razor himself. The word razor is very descriptive of the attacking armies, who would shave their captives, as a sign of dominion over them. Being shaved was a sign of defeat and ignominy, and often a sign of slavery over the conquered people: “Wherefore Hanun took David's servants, and shaved off the one half of their beards, and cut off their garments in the middle, even to their buttocks, and sent them away” (2 Samuel 10:4). Or of coming humiliation, to be acted out by Ezekiel before the fact: “And thou, son of man, take thee a sharp knife, take thee a barber's razor, and cause it to pass upon thine head and upon thy beard” (Ezekiel 5:1a). Ludlow offers additional reasons for the shaving of slaves: hygiene and insurance against escape. An escaped slave would not blend with the people and could thus easily be recaptured. The figure of the razor is also one that points to the ceremonial purification of the leper (Kay, Henry, Nägelsbach), for Judah was now full of disease from the top of the head down to the feet: “And he that is to be cleansed shall wash his clothes, and shave off all his hair, and wash himself in water, that he may be clean: and after that he shall come into the camp, and shall tarry abroad out of his tent seven days. But it shall be on the seventh day, that he shall shave all his hair off his head and his beard and his eyebrows, even all his hair he shall shave off: and he shall wash his clothes, also he shall wash his flesh in water, and he shall be clean” (Leviticus 14:8–9). It could well be said that the process of scattering and gathering of Israel is one of cleansing, also. ¶ By them beyond the river, by the king of Assyria. The river (נָהָר) is thought to be the Euphrates. It is much like in modern day when we say, the city. If you live close to New York City, or San Francisco, the expression the city stands for those places. The Lord would bring upon Judah the king of Assyria, from the other side of the Euphrates. ¶ The head, and the hair of the feet; and it shall also consume the beard. This hired razor or foreign army would shave the hair of the head as well as the beard. The hair of the feet may be a euphemistic expression for pubic hair (e.g., see Gill, and Tanakh footnote). Lowth rather suggests: “To shave with the hired razor the head, the feet, and the beard, is an expression highly parabolical; to denote the utter devastation of the country from one end to the other, and the plundering of the people, from the highest to the lowest.  The hairs of the head are those of the highest order in the state; those of the feet, or the lower parts, are the common people; the beard is the king, the high priest, the very supreme in dignity and majesty.”

21 And it shall come to pass in that day, [that] a man shall nourish a young cow and two sheep;

²⁹ “Instead of the thorn shall come up the fir tree, and instead of the brier shall come up the myrtle tree: and it shall be to the LORD for a name, for an everlasting sign that shall not be cut off.” (ISAIAH 55:13)

³⁰ “Upon the land of my people shall come up thorns and briars; yea, upon all the houses of joy in the joyous city.” (ISAIAH 32:13)

Commentators seems to be agreed that this is an allusion to the poverty to which those who would be left behind in the Holy Land would be subjected to. To nourish, or “keep alive” (Green) a young cow or heifer עֵזְרָה, is probably to keep her for milking purposes.

22 And it shall come to pass, for the abundance of milk [that] they shall give he shall eat butter; for butter and honey shall every one eat that is left in the land.

✓ the midst of

And it shall come to pass, for the abundance of milk they shall give he shall eat butter. The general view among commentators is that there will be such a reduced number of animals, that there will be plenty of feed for them to produce sufficient milk; and furthermore, that there will be so few people left in the land, that those who are left will have plenty of milk or milk products to drink and eat. ¶ For butter and honey shall every one eat that is left in the land. This seems to be an allusion to the type of food that would be consumed, the food of shepherds and caravans, not that of stationary and cultivated agriculture. The foodstuff of kings was also the foodstuff of those surviving of the wilderness. Furthermore, if the swarms of bees were also literal, beside the invading nation of Assyria, then there would be plenty of honey, also.

23 And it shall come to pass in that day, [that] every place shall be, where there were a thousand vines at a thousand silverlings, it which shall [even] be for briers and thorns.

Where grapevines used to grow, they shall be replaced by briers and thorns. Barnes suggests: “The word rendered ‘silverlings’ here—כֶּסֶף—denotes, properly, silver, of any amount. But it was also used to denote the silver coin which was in use among the Jews, the shekel. Perhaps this was the only silver coin which, in early times, they possessed, and hence the word shekel is omitted, and so many pieces of silver are mentioned.” As in the Song of Solomon, what seems to be meant in this verse, is that the proceeds from a single harvest would yield this sum, rather than the sale of the whole vineyard: “Solomon had a vineyard at Baalhamon; he let out the vineyard unto keepers; every one for the fruit thereof was to bring a thousand pieces of silver” (Song of Solomon 8:11). The contrast is between a very productive vineyard of great worth being compared to a worthless one that has now been overcome by briers and thorns.

24 With arrows and with bows shall [men] come thither, because all the land shall become briers and thorns.

The land would become a wild place, suitable for hunting wild animals. Nägelsbach, leaning on Gesenius, feels that people went in with bows not only to hunt animals but for self-protection. Such devastation, when contrasted with the former days of grapevines, olive and fig trees is painful. Like her sister Ephraim to the north, Judah’s fruitful treasures would be removed from her: “And I will destroy her vines and her fig trees, whereof she hath said, These are my rewards that my lovers have given me: and I will make them a forest, and the beasts of the field shall eat them” (Hosea 2:12).

25 And [the] all hills that shall be digged with the mattock, there shall not come thither the fear of briers and thorns; but it shall be for the sending forth of oxen, and for the treading of lesser cattle.

And all hills that shall be digged with the mattock. Many moderns use the word hoe instead of mattock. A mattock is an implement that has a pick on one side and an ax or adz (sharp cutting tool set at 90 degree angle to the handle) on the other (Webster). The adz side is a heavy duty hoe. I have seen the mattock used as a weeding instrument in a horse pasture at our farm in Chile. This heavy instrument can get at the roots of difficult weeds, where the work of a hoe would be more cosmetic, and only remove the tops of weeds while leaving the roots intact. In ancient Israel, such a tool would be particularly valuable in hilly terrain, where it would be difficult to cultivate with oxen or horses. ¶ There shall not come thither the fear of briers and thorns. Or perhaps rather, as the AB, “you will not go there for fear of briers and thorns.” ¶ But it shall be for the sending forth of oxen, and the treading of lesser cattle. This land, which at one time was highly cultivated and contained precious grapevines would now serve for pasturage for cattle, sheep and goats. The term used in the KJV translation is oxen, from the Hebrew שֹׁר. The oxen, a castrated male, is primarily used as a beast of agricultural husbandry. The Hebrew is less specific, and may include “single head of cattle, without emphasis on sex” (BDB); or “without distinction of age or sex” (Gesenius). A more generic translation that includes bullocks, oxen, and cows makes sense, given that they would have plentiful milk from cows. Perhaps it compares to the use of the word horse today. Depending on the context, it could mean any equine from a stallion to a mare, colt or filly, or even a gelding (a castrated male). The term translated as lesser cattle in the KJV is שִׁירָה. It is based on the root שִׁיר, and can refer to sheep or goats (Gesenius). See also Jastrow's A Dictionary of the Targumim, the Talmud Babli and Yerushalmi, and the Midrashic Literature.

FIRST POSTED: 16 April 2001

Isaiah 8

After leaving the subject of the birth of the Savior for a moment—Isaiah now speaks of the punishment that would befall Ephraim and Syria. In ISAIAH 9 the prophet returns to the Messianic prediction with great force.

VV. 1–4. The Lord commands Isaiah to write upon a large tablet the words, מָהֵר שָׁלַל חָשׁ בָּז, Maher-shalal-hash-baz, representing the impending attack of Assyria upon the Northern Kingdom and her partner in crime, Syria. Through the law of witnesses, Isaiah is commanded to make this event perfectly clear in the minds of the people. The prophet's wife gives Isaiah a new son, who is to be named: מָהֵר שָׁלַל חָשׁ בָּז.

Before Isaiah's son could cry אָבִי (my daddy) or אִמִּי (mi mommy) Assyria would be upon Ephraim and Syria.

1 ¶ MOREOVER the word of the LORD said unto me: Take thee a great roll, and write in it with a man's pen, concerning Maher-shalal-hash-baz. ✓

✓ In making speed to the spoil he hasteneth they prey, or, Make speed &c.

MOREOVER the word of the LORD said unto me. The Prophet Joseph Smith clarified the passage to include the “word of the Lord,” דְּבַר יְהוָה. This is similar to what we find in Jeremiah 1:4 and 1:13. There are many ways individuals can receive the word of the Lord, including seeing an apparition, hearing an audible voice, or being moved by the still small voice of the Spirit. ¶ Take thee a great roll. Gesenius explains that a גְּזֵיזִין, or tablet, was normally “made of wood, stone, or metal, on which anything is inscribed.” HALOT adds leather or papyrus to this list. Metal tablets or plates are of special interest to us as LDS, as the Book of Mormon was inscribed on thin metal plates.¹ The etymology of the word tablet (גְּזֵיזִין) is interesting, as it is associated by Hebrew scholars to Amos 3:7, the process of revealing hidden things to the Lord's servants, the prophets (TWOT), or to uncover, make clear or clarify (HALOT). This is to be no ordinary roll, but rather, a large tablet, גְּזֵיזִין גָּדוֹל. ¶ And write in it. Either write or engrave upon it, as in Jeremiah 31:33b, “I will put my law in their inward parts, and write it in their hearts; and will be their God, and they shall be my people” (emphasis added). Barnes explains: “On these tablets, or smooth plates, writing was performed by cutting the letters with an iron stylus, or small chisel. The process was slow, but the writing was permanent.” ¶ With a man's pen, בְּחֶרֶט אָנוּשׁ. Rather than pen, with an engraving tool. A similar expression, “after a cubit of a man” בְּאַמַּת־אִישׁ, is found in Deuteronomy 3:11b.

Except that in Deuteronomy for ‘man’ we have אִישׁ instead of אָנוּשׁ. A number of commentators suggest that there is an intended connection here, especially since the Syriac (ܫ) in Deuteronomy has “... according to the measure of the cubit of giants.” The idea is that the engraving would be quite large, as if written by a giant. ¶ Concerning Maher-shalal-hash-baz. It is quite possible that Isaiah was simply commanded to fill the large tablet only with the words: מָהֵר שָׁלַל חָשׁ בָּז, (or, To speed to the spoil, he hasteneth the prey, LDS HEB). That is, the Lord would fall upon the enemies of Judah. These characters would have had to be quite large to fill the large tablet. A sort of banner, if you will. Perhaps it was placed in such a way that passersby may have been able to gaze upon it (Calvin). Much like the Title of Liberty in the Book of Mormon. ¶ Isaiah had been commended to write down this prophecy. Keeping a journal of our spiritual experiences is a way to show gratitude to the Lord for the manifestation of His holy hand in our lives.

2 And I took unto me faithful witnesses to record, Uriah the priest, and Zechariah the son of Jeberechiah.

And I took unto me faithful witnesses to record. Knowing of the incredulity of man, the Lord takes pains to command Isaiah that he seek for witnesses who can later testify of the truth of this prophecy regarding the Assyrian invasion of Damascus and Samaria. This is a frequent theme in Isaiah, that the Lord shows His mighty hand: “Fear ye not, neither be afraid: have not I told thee from that time, and have declared it? ye are even my witnesses” (ISAIAH 44:8a). The key point here is the lest thou shouldst say principle (that is, the giving of credit to anyone or anything instead of God): “I have even from the beginning declared it to thee; before it came to pass I shewed it thee: lest thou shouldst say...” (ISAIAH 48:5a). The Lord knew that evil and designing men would, both in that day and in the latter days, teach that prophets were wise men who could discern the signs of their own times—but could not predict the future through divine revelation. To them, “prophecy is nothing more than an expression of men’s fears and longings,” and furthermore, “The fundamental principle of the rationalistic school is that there cannot be distinct foresight of the distant future.”² In order to counteract the wresting of the scriptures, the Lord has given us the law of witnesses, such that “In the mouth of two or three witnesses shall every word be established” (2 Corinthians 13:1b). ¶ Uriah the priest, and Zechariah the son of Jeberechiah. While it is possible that Uriah was the same individual in 2 Kings 16, I go along with Nägelsbach in suggesting the evidence is simply too flimsy to make such an assertion—contrary to the many exegetes who so have.

¹ On the topic of ancient metal plates or tablets, used to inscribe writings, see Chapter 10, “Ancient Records on Metal Plates” in Franklin S. Harris, Jr., The Book of Mormon: Message and Evidences, 2nd. ed, Chapter 10, pp.98–108.

3 And I went[✓] unto the prophetess; and she conceived and bare a son. Then said the LORD to me: Call his name, Maher-shalal-hash-baz.

✓ approached

And I went unto the prophetess; and she conceived and bare a son. The prophetess³ (הַנְּבִיאָה) here stands for the wife of the prophet (הַנְּבִיא) Isaiah. She conceived a baby boy. ¶ Then said the LORD to me: Call his name, Maher-shalal-hash-baz. This is the name inscribed in the scroll mentioned in ISAIAH8:1, מְהֵרָה שְׁלַל חֵשׁ בָּז, i.e., To speed to the spoil, he hasteneth the prey (LDS

² Elliott, Charles. Old Testament Prophecy: Its nature, organic connection with Old Testament history, messianic prophecy, and New Testament fulfilment. New York, A. C. Armstrong and Son. 1889, p.58.

³ Joseph Smith, when confronted as to whether he was a prophet quoted from Revelation 19:10b. In the TPJS (emphasis added) we have: “If any person should ask me if I were a prophet, I should not deny it, as that would give me the lie; for, according to John, the testimony of Jesus is the spirit of prophecy; therefore, if I profess to be a witness or teacher, and have not the spirit of prophecy, which is the testimony of Jesus, I must be a false witness; but if I be a true teacher and witness, I must possess the spirit of prophecy, and that constitutes a prophet; and any man who says he is a teacher or a preacher of righteousness, and denies the spirit of prophecy, is a liar, and the truth is not in him; and by this key false teachers and impostors may be detected” (30 December 1842). Any woman who is a preacher of righteousness, then, and is filled by the Holy Ghost with the testimony of Christ, may likewise be called a prophetess (also see prophet, LDS Bible Dictionary).

HEB). Once again, the Lord would permit great damage to come upon the enemy of His people.

4 For before behold, the child shall not have knowledge to cry, My father, and my mother, before the riches of Damascus and the spoil of Samaria shall be taken away before the king of Assyria.[✓]

✓ or, he that is before the king of Assyria shall take away the riches, &c.

For behold, the child shall not have knowledge to cry, My father, and my mother. The child mentioned here is Isaiah’s newly born son. Among the first words that infants speak are those equivalent to father and mother in their native languages. Or, as Rawlinson points out, the Hebrew equivalent is closer to papi or mami. The Hebrew for my father is אָבִי (avi), and for my mother אִמִּי (im-mi).⁴ Before מְהֵרָה שְׁלַל חֵשׁ בָּז could say either אָבִי or אִמִּי, the prophecies mentioned next would come to pass. Depending on how precocious children are, the time may vary for such verbalization. The indication, at any rate, is that the time was imminent. Lowth puts a time period as follows: “The prophecy was accordingly accomplished within three years; when Tiglath Pileser, king of Assyria, went up against Damascus, and took it, and carried the people of it captive to Kir, and slew Retzin [KJV renders it Rezin but it is as Lowth has it, רִצְיִן—GB]; and also took the Reubenites and the Gadites, and the half-tribe of Manasseh, and carried them captive to Assyria, 2 Kings 15:29; 16:9; 1 Chronicles 5:26.” Delitzsch feels the time between the child’s birth and the coming invasion was closer to a year.⁵ Delitzsch also informs us that there was nothing consolatory in the nature of the prophecy, as Assyria would also come upon Judah. ¶ Before the riches of Damascus and the spoil of Samaria shall be taken away. Damascus was the capital of Syria, and Samaria, the capital of Ephraim. The capitals were the center of the riches of many nations, and also the capitals often stand for the nations themselves. ¶ Before the king of Assyria. The word before לְפָנַי, literally means before the face. They were brought into the presence of the King of Asshur (מֶלֶךְ אַשּׁוּר). Calvin says: “alluding perhaps to an ancient custom of carrying the spoils of the enemy before the chariot of those who received a public triumph. In like manner shall the spoils of Samaria and Damascus be carried before the king of Assyria.”⁶

⁴ Interestingly, my first granddaughter, Eliza Marie Billikopf, calls my wife אִמִּי (im-mah).

⁵ “It is true that Tiglath-pileser only conquered Damascus, and not Samaria; but he took from Pekah, the king of Samaria, the land beyond the Jordan, and a portion of the land on this side. The trophies, which he took thence to Assyria, were no less the spoil of Samaria than if he had conquered Samaria itself (which Shalmanassar did twenty years afterwards). The birth of Maher-shalal took place about three-quarters of a year later than the preparation of the table ...; and the time appointed, from the birth of the boy till the chastisement of the allied kingdoms, was about a year. Now, the Syro-Ephraimitish war did not commence later than the first year of the reign of Ahaz, i.e. the year 743, and the chastisement by Tiglath-pileser occurred in the lifetime of the allies, whereas Pekah was assassinated in the year 739, the interval between the commencement of the war and the chastisement of the allies cannot have been more than three years; so that the preparation of the table must not be assigned to a much later period than the interview with Ahaz” (Delitzsch).

VV. 5–8. The people of Israel and Judah had rejected the gentle waters of Shiloah, which represented the Temple and the Savior. Now the torrential waters of the Euphrates, or Assyria, would come upon them. In time, Assyria would not only attack the Syro-Ephramite coalition, but also Judah, and come to surround Jerusalem. Although the daughter of Zion would be spared, the surrounding cities that formed Judah would not. In these verses the Lord directs His comments to both houses of Israel.

5 The LORD spake also unto me again, saying:

The Lord continues speaking to the Prophet. This may mean a brief interruption, or a longer one. Or a completely new revelation. In my own life I have noticed a pattern wherein the Spirit may reveal something to me and while I am still pondering the wonder of it all, a second wave descends upon me with additional information.

6 Forasmuch as this people refuseth the waters of Shiloah that go softly, and rejoice in Rezin and Remaliah's son;

Forasmuch as this people refuseth the waters of Shiloah that go softly. The Targum (ܬܪܓܡ) clearly directs itself to those of Ephraim who had broken away from Judah: “Forasmuch as this people refuseth the kingdom of the house of David, which guides them in quietness, like the waters of Shiloah, which flow softly (literally, in quietness), and delight themselves in Rezin and Remaliah's son. Rather than the kind or gentle rule of the Davidic kings, the gentle waters instead represent the House of the Lord and the Lord Himself. Faussett notes the displeasure in “this people” (הָעָם הַזֶּה)

⁶ The mutilated arms of those who tried to scatter the flocks of King Lamoni were likewise brought before him after being defeated by Ammon (Alma 17:26–39).

rather than “my people” (עַמִּי). From John 9:7 we come to understand the meaning of Shiloah: “And said unto him, Go, wash in the pool of Siloam, (which is by interpretation, Sent⁷). He went his way therefore, and washed, and came seeing.” In the New Testament, the Lord invites us again to partake of the living water, “If thou knewest the gift of God, and who it is that saith to thee, Give me to drink; thou wouldest have asked of him, and he would have given thee living water ... But whosoever drinketh of the water that I shall give him shall never thirst; but the water that I shall give him shall be in him a well of water springing up into everlasting life” (John 4:10b, 14). Slow moving water will penetrate deeply into the soil; fast currents cause soil erosion and much damage. There is much irony in all this: a tree that is overwatered actually dies of thirst. The roots rot and are not capable of taking in water. Such were the waters represented by the Assyrian invasion. The soft running waters of Shiloah stand as a type of Messiah. Cheyne has, “The brook of Shiloah, therefore, which flowed past Zion and Moriah, became a type of the Temple and its almighty but gracious Lord.” Skinner, similarly observes, “The point of the metaphor is that the waters ... are a type ... of the silent unobtrusive presence and majesty of Jehovah, who ‘dwells in mount Zion’ (v. 18; cf. Psalm 46:4).”

Certainly, the people of Ephraim had rejected the dedicated House of the Lord found in Jerusalem. King Jeroboam, of Ephraim, greatly feared the righteous influence that the Temple could have on his Northern Tribes: “If this people go up to do sacrifice in the house of the LORD at Jerusalem,” Jeroboam reasoned, “then shall the heart of this people turn again unto their lord” (1 Kings 12:27a). So King Jeroboam made idols: “Whereupon the king took counsel, and made two calves of gold” (1 Kings 12:28a), an altar, and called false priests. This he did in Bethel and Dan (1 Kings 12). All of this is another way of saying that Israel (as well as Judah) had refused her stay and her staff, even the Lord, in exchange for the vanity of the strength of man. ¶ And rejoice in Rezin and Remaliah's son. This clause is an accusation against Ephraim and her two golden calves which stand in contrast to the House of the Lord. At the time of Isaiah, Ephraim was rejoicing or leaning on the confederacy between King Pekah of Ephraim (referring to Pekah as “Remaliah's son” was the height of insult, see ISAIAH 7:4) and Rezin of Syria.

7 Now therefore, behold, the Lord bringeth up upon them the waters of the river, strong and many, [even] the king of

⁷ שְׁלַחְנִי. Gesenius has “to send” for שְׁלַח

Assyria and all his glory; and he shall come up over all his channels, and go over all his banks.

Now therefore, behold, the Lord bringeth up upon them the waters of the river, strong and many. Not simply a river, but the river נַחֲלֵי, meaning the Euphrates, here symbolic of the Assyrian power. Henderson explains: “This noble river, so frequently referred to in Scripture, has its source in the mountains of Armenia, and running in a south and south-easterly direction, and, uniting with the Tigris below Babylon, flows into the Persian Gulf. As far as Bir it is impetuous in its course; after this it flows more or less gently through the plains of Mesopotamia; but like the Nile, has its annual inundations, in consequence of the melting of the snow in Armenia, during which it often covers great part of the adjacent country. To prevent, as much as possible, the injury committed by these inundations, and to divert the water so as profitably to irrigate the fields, numerous canals were dug, and embankments were raised, some of which were of considerable strength. These canals the prophet calls אֶפְקִים,⁸ which is used both of pipes or tubes, Job 40:18, and of the beds or channels of streams, Ezekiel 32:6, and by metonymy of brooks, and the valleys through which they flow, Psalms 42:2; Job 6:15.—נֶגֶד,⁹ a bank or embankment; Chaldee נִגְדָא, a wall... Nothing could more fitly represent the incursion of a large and powerful army, than the inundation of a river, which breaks through every barrier that is thrown in its way, and sweeps all before it.” And when the Lord is behind such a ‘river,’ well then: “As well might man stretch forth his puny arm to stop the Missouri river in its decreed course, or to turn it up stream” (D&C 121:33b). In the ancient writings of Cyrus (557–529 BC, pp. 206–208, in Pritchard),¹⁰ we see the same analogy of armies to that of a river, “His widespread troops—their number, like that of the water of a river, could not be established—strolled along, their weapons packed away.” ¶ Even the king of Assyria and all his glory; and he shall come up over all his channels, and go over all his banks. The influence of the king of Assyria is represented as overflowing beyond the territory his own nation. Barnes points out, “Eastern kings marched in the midst of vast splendour. They moved with all the magnificence of the court, and were attended usually with their princes and nobles; with a splendid retinue; and with all the insignia of royalty.” The expression to come up over all his channels means the Euphrates would—like the Nile and so many rivers in ancient times before flood control measures were taken—go over its banks and spread great distances to each side.

8 And he shall pass through Judah; he shall overflow and go over, he shall reach [even] to the neck; and the stretching out of his wings shall fill the breadth of thy land, O Immanuel.

✓ fulness of the breadth of thy land shall be the stretchings out of his wings

And he shall pass through Judah; he shall overflow and go over. The invading river of the Assyrian army would reach all the way to Judah. “And he shall pass through the land of the house of Judah as an overflowing torrent” (Targum, ת). ¶ He shall reach even to the neck. The ת continues, “unto Jerusalem shall he come.” Indeed, “The prophet compares Jerusalem here to the head of the human body. As when the waters reach to the neck of a man, he is very near drowning, so here, the prophet intimates that the whole land would be deluged, and that it would be nearly utterly destroyed” (Rabbi D. Kimhi in Barnes). ¶ And the stretching out of his wings shall fill the breadth of thy land. Such “stretching out” of the “wings” seems to be an allusion to the great breadth and width of the attack by Assyria upon Judah—as the great width that waters spread to the sides of overflowing rivers. Kay observes that the gods of the Assyrians are represented as beasts with a “mystical head with outstretched wings.” Henderson has, “The prophet here drops the figure of an overflowing river, and employs that of the extended wings of a bird, which, in various languages, are applied to the flanks or side-bodies of an army, because of their stretching out from the centre, and covering the ground which they occupy.” ¶ O Immanuel. During the time of King Hezekiah, the armies of Assyria would surround Jerusalem with a tight hold upon her. If it were not for the Lord, Immanuel or God with us, even Jerusalem would have been taken (ISAIAH 37:36).

Giving utterance to the holy name אֱלֹהֵינוּ was a prayer of thanksgiving. If it were not for the Lord who suffered for us in Gethsemane and was lifted up on the cross with outstretched arms for our sake, we too would perish without any hope of redemption.

⁸ In the Masoretic text (א), his channels אֶפְקֵי.

⁹ In the Masoretic text (א), his banks נֶגְדֵי.

¹⁰ Pritchard, James B. (editor), The Ancient Near East, Volume 1: Anthology of Texts and Pictures. Princeton University Press, 6th Paperback printing, 1973, pp. 188–210.

vv. 9–15. The words “far countries” helps us understand how the fury of the Lord would now fall upon the nations that presently are attacking Judah. No unhallowed hand can come upon Zion. Christ shall be a stone of stumbling, and a rock of offence unto those who reject Him, but a sanctuary to those who love Him.

9 ¶ Associate yourselves, O ye people, and ye shall be broken in pieces; and give ear all ye of far countries; gird yourselves, and ye shall be broken in pieces; gird yourselves, and ye shall be broken in pieces.

✓ or, yet

Associate yourselves, O ye people, and ye shall be broken in pieces. To associate means to come together to build, to trade, to defend, or to attack. The Hebrew here is the plural, ye peoples עַמִּים. These distant nations could associate and make mutual pacts, but such would be of no avail unless the hand of the Lord would allow it. At the moment it was Syria and Ephraim who had associated themselves against Judah, but one could also include Assyria and Babylon to the list of such nations. At the end, it matters little who it is that fights against Zion, for they shall not prosper. ¶ And give ear all ye of far countries; gird yourselves, and ye shall be broken in pieces; gird yourselves, and ye shall be broken in pieces. The LXX (6) has, “Know, ye Gentiles, and be conquered; hearken ye, even to the extremity of the earth: be conquered, after ye strengthened yourselves; for even if ye should again strengthen yourselves, ye shall again be conquered.” The idea seems to be that no amount of strengthening for war on the part of Syria and Ephraim would yield their desired results, but rather, they themselves would be conquered. Girding yourselves in the Biblia Hebraica gives the same idea as strengthening yourselves in the LXX (6). The ancient peoples would wear long robes that would get in the way of fast or quick movement, unless they brought it up to the loin area and there tied or secured in a fashion that would leave the legs free to move. This is where the expression, “gird up your loins” comes from.

10 Take counsel together, and it shall come to nought; speak the word, and it shall not stand; for God [is] with us.

Take counsel together, and it shall come to nought. In the words of the Berkeley edition, “Devise a plan and it shall be frustrated.” These words are directed to Syria and Ephraim, although they could be directed to anyone who tries to frustrate the plans of the Lord. “What power shall stay the heavens?” (D&C 121:33b). ¶ Speak the word, and it shall not stand; for God is with us. Henry paints the picture of a people who seem to be pumping themselves to go out to war (see the principle of group think in psychology): “You prepare for action; you address yourselves to it with resolution; you gird on your swords; you gird up your loins. You animate and encourage yourselves and one another with all the considerations you can think of” But all of this is to no account, for with us is God, Immanuel. ¶ Those who act in righteousness need not be concerned when others take counsel against them, for the Lord is on their side. We find similar sentiments elsewhere in the scriptures: “Only rebel not ye against the LORD, neither fear ye the people of the land; for they are bread for us: their defence is departed from them, and the LORD is with us: fear them not” (Numbers 14:9); “And, behold, God himself is with us for our captain, and his priests with sounding trumpets to cry alarm against you. O children of Israel, fight ye not against the LORD God of your fathers; for ye shall not prosper” (2 Chronicles 13:12); “The LORD of hosts is with us; the God of Jacob is our refuge. Selah” (Psalm 46:7 and 46:11). And, “If God be for us, who can be against us?” (Romans 8:31b). “Elder Henry D. Taylor once referred to the missionary slogan which the late Elder B. H. Roberts adopted when he served as mission president. The slogan was “Immanuel,” which of course means “God be with us.” President Roberts also used this slogan in his discourses, in his correspondence, in autographing books and photos, and on numerous other occasions, according to Elder Taylor’s report (see CR, Oct. 1975, p. 93)” (Nyman).

11 For the LORD spake thus to me with a strong hand, and instructed me that I should not walk in the way of this people, saying:

✓ in strength of hand

For the LORD spake thus to me with a strong hand. The Spirit of the Lord most often comes to us in a still small voice. But there are times when the Spirit is so strong, that it can be overpowering. It seems that this occasion was one of those times. ¶ Clarke suggests that “with a strong hand” the “influence of the prophetic Spirit” is felt. Ezekiel wrote, “And the hand of the LORD was there upon me; and he said unto me, Arise, go forth into the plain, and I will there talk with thee” (Ezekiel 3:22). There are times when the Spirit of the Lord, as we mentioned, is strongly felt. ¶ And instructed me that I should not walk in the way of this people, saying: The Lord warned Isaiah not to also fall victim to the panic and fear of those around him. I am saddened when those who have believed in the testimony of the Elders have not joined the Church out of fear—whether in relation to family pressure, tithing, or keeping the Sabbath day holy. We make more money on Sunday, they explain, than in the rest of the week.¹¹ “For, behold, you should not have feared man more than God. Although men set at naught the counsels of God, and despise his words—Yet you should have been faithful; and he would have extended his arm and supported you against all the fiery darts of the adversary; and he would have been with you in time of trouble” (D&C 3:7–8). ¶ Regarding the idea of not walking the way of this people, I feel that I was likewise warned. During one of my trips to Chile, during my career with the University of California, I had a dream that for a long time I hesitated to write down.¹² This dream took place at a time when there was relatively speaking no dissention against the Brethren and teachings of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints among its members. I dreamt that some members of the Church were running towards false doctrine with much energy and there were many who fell in the pits thereof. They sank to their spiritual death. I remember moving along in the same direction as these people were moving and trying to engage their attention and asking, “What have the Brethren said about this? What has the Prophet said about this?” It turned out that the Prophet and the Brethren had not spoken in favor of this thing. At that time I wrote, “Whatever this dream may have meant or mean, it has come to my attention that this thing should be carved in our hearts, in our bones, in our every muscle and nerve, ‘Follow the living Prophet!’” Elder M. Russell Ballard wrote: “I have discovered in my ministry that those who have become lost [and] confused are typically those who have most often ... forgotten that when the First Presidency and the Quorum of the Twelve speak with a united voice, it is the voice of the Lord for that time ... As I have known people who have not stayed in the boat and have not held on with both hands during times of trials and troubles or who have not stayed in the boat during times of relative calm, I have observed that many of them have lost their focus on the central truths of the gospel—the reasons why they joined the Church in the first place; the reasons they remained fully committed and active in living gospel standards and blessing others through dedicated, consecrated service; and the ways in which the Church has been in their lives ‘a place of spiritual nourishment and growth.’ ... Sometimes faithful Latter-day Saints and sincere investigators begin to focus on the ‘appendages’ instead of on the fundamental principles. That is, Satan tempts us to become distracted from the simple and clear message of the restored gospel. Those so distracted often give up partaking of the sacrament because they have become focused, even preoccupied, with less important practices or teachings. Others may focus on the questions and doubts they experience. Of course, having questions and experiencing doubts are not incongruent with dedicated discipleship. Recently, the Council of the First Presidency and the Quorum of the Twelve Apostles stated: ‘We understand that from time to time Church members will have questions about Church doctrine, history, or practice. Members are always free to ask such questions and earnestly seek greater understanding.’ ... And if any one of you have fallen out of the boat, we will seek you, find you, minister to you, and pull you safely back onto the Old Ship Zion, where God our Father and the Lord Jesus Christ are at the helm and will guide us right.”

¹¹ In 1990, Linda & I started looking at new homes, although we loved our own, it was too small for our growing family. There was a recession and homes were not selling. When we met with our realtor we told him we did not want the house to be shown on the Sabbath Day. He countered explained that Sunday and Saturday were the big days to sell homes and that if we did not show the house on Sunday, that we may be greatly reducing our chances. But we left it in the hands of the Lord. Some months later we received a call from our agent who was trying to sell the house for us. He told us that someone who had already seen the house but lived out of town wanted to come and look at it one more time. On Sunday. While I stood firm on not showing the house on Sunday, I feel that not all in my household had gained a testimony of Sabbath day observance. There was some murmuring, although I was at the end sustained. We found out a few days later that the potential buyer bought a different home and paid full price. As a result, we lost the opportunity to buy the home Linda had so much wanted. My faith in God’s hand in the matter did not waver. The story may have ended there, but the postscript is interesting. We should not plan to see the consequences of all of our actions rewarded in this lifetime, but sometimes they simply are. Although other homes were not selling, eventually our home did, and although it was not as large as the first house it was beautiful and we got a substantial price break. As it turned out, had we bought the larger home, we would have lost it or become strapped economically. For over fifteen years, the economic situation faced by the University of California was such that we got few raises. That year we actually got a temporary reduction in pay, instead. We simply must not be moved to walk in the fear of the people, but rather, we need to always walk in the light of the Lord.

¹² I eventually did write it down in my journal on 10 January 2003.

12 Say ye not, A confederacy, to all [them to] whom this people shall say, A confederacy; neither fear ye their fear, nor be afraid.

Say ye not, A confederacy, to all to whom this people shall say, A confederacy. The ASV uses the word conspiracy and the Targum (ܥܡܝܢܐ), rebellion (ܡܪܝܕܐ). The prophet warns the people against running out in a panic, listening to those who feared the Syro-Ephraimite forces. Nor, should Judah join a confederacy with Assyria. Our confederacy ought to be with the Lord. ¶ Neither fear ye their fear, nor be afraid. This is an invitation to leave the fear of this world to those of this world. Instead, we are to walk with our confidence squarely on the Lord, on the Holy One of Israel. We do this by staying close to the Spirit, by following the Prophet, Apostles, and other General and local authorities.

13 Sanctify the LORD of hosts himself, and [let] him [be] your fear, and [let] him [be] your dread.

Sanctify the LORD of hosts himself. The Targum (T) has, “The Lord of hosts Him shall ye call holy.” ¶ And let him be your fear, and let him be your dread. These are among the most beautiful words in Holy Writ. The fear of the Lord is like no other fear. Any time the word fear is used in relation to the Lord, the word takes on an exquisite meaning: trust and hope in the Lord, or in other words, let the Lord be your hope.

14 And he shall be for a sanctuary; but for a stone of stumbling, and for a rock of offence to both the houses of Israel, for a gin and for a snare to the inhabitants of Jerusalem.

And he shall be for a sanctuary. Lowth prefers the Vulgate (V), “And He shall be unto you a sanctuary,”¹³ and thus clearly distinguishes between the consequences for the righteous in contrast to those who prefer the works of evil. Calvin insightfully suggests that when we fear man more than God, we value God as a dead idol. The Hebrew word for a sanctuary is קֹדֶשׁ based on the root שָׁבַע, to be holy. It can include the notion of a consecrated holy tent (Gesenius) or the temple, Holiness to the Lord. Delitzsch explains, “All who sanctified the Lord of lords He surrounded like temple walls; hid them in Himself, whilst death and tribulation reigned without, and comforted, fed, and blessed them in His own gracious fellowship.” We are frequently reminded today to stand in holy places: “But my disciples shall stand in holy places, and shall not be moved” (D&C 45:32a); and “Behold, it is my will, that all they who call on my name, and worship me according to mine everlasting gospel, should gather together, and stand in holy places; And prepare for the revelation which is to come, when the veil of the covering of my temple, in my tabernacle, which hideth the earth, shall be taken off, and all flesh shall see me together” (D&C 101:22–23). ¶ But for a stone of stumbling, and for a rock of offence. When the Christ child was taken to the Temple, he was blessed by Simeon who explained that Jesus was the consolation of Israel and furthermore stated, “Behold, this child is set for the fall and rising again of many in Israel” (Luke 2:25–35). The JST reads: “Unto you therefore who believe, he is precious; but unto them who are disobedient, who stumble at the word, through disobedience, whereunto they were appointed, a stone of stumbling, and a rock of offense. For the stone which the builders disallowed, is become the head of the corner. But ye are a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, a holy nation, a peculiar people; that ye should show forth the praises of him who hath called you out of darkness into his marvelous light” (JST 1 Peter:7–9). While many Gentile commentators are quick to despise the Jews for stumbling against the Rock of Christ, Calvin suggests that the Christians of his own day, also stumbled against the same rock, “when we see the state of religion throughout the whole Christian world brought nearly to ruin. Many boast that they are Christians who are strongly alienated from God, and to whom Christ is a stone of stumbling.” Certainly it is true even today, when the Church of Jesus Christ is upon the earth, that much of Christendom has stumbled upon The Rock, and have been offended by the Living Christ. Although it may sound as a harsh saying, some who claim to be followers of Christ today have persecuted the restored Church, The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, and have found thus offense in Christ. Yet from the beginning the Lord has made His intentions clear, that He would restore his ancient covenant people. In the Title Page of the Book of Mormon we see that the restored Gospel and Book of Mormon would reach out “to the convincing of the Jew and Gentile that JESUS is the CHRIST.” ¶ To both the houses of Israel. That is, to the divided kingdom of Ephraim and Judah. Neither would hold fast unto the Lord, but turned after idols instead. ¶ For a gin and a snare to the inhabitants of Jerusalem. Gin is a more archaic word for trap. פֶּקַע is usually used in connection to a bird trap. מִוְקֵשׁ is a snare, a synonym for trap. From the general (the divided houses of Israel and Judah) we go to the specific (Jerusalem), as to those who would suffer the consequences for not leaning upon the Lord. Many in Judah felt that Jerusalem—with the Holy Temple on Mount Zion—was somehow exempt from punishment. Through Isaiah, the Lord is letting Judah know that even Jerusalem would not escape.

¹³ The Vulgate (V) reads: “et erit vobis in sanctificationem in lapidem autem offensionis et in petram scandali duabus domibus Israel in laqueum et in ruinam habitantibus Hierusalem.” The Douay translation has, “And he shall be a sanctification to you: but for a stone of stumbling and for a rock of offence to the two houses of Israel, for a snare and a ruin to the inhabitants of Jerusalem.”

15 And many among them shall stumble and fall, and be broken, and be snared, and be taken.

And many among them shall stumble and fall. In this line is encompassed much of the results of the teachings of Christ in the New Testament, for there were few who believed in Him. Not only did the people of Judah and Israel fall into this trap before Christ was born, so too during His mortal ministry, and even now. The Lord, He who created the heavens and the earth under the direction of the Father would yet be recognized and honored by few. In each dispensation the nature of this misunderstanding has changed, but nevertheless the misunderstandings about the Lord are just as pronounced today as at any time in the history of man. Image, the one and only true Church upon the phase of the whole planet, The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, is attacked by some as ‘not a Christian church.’ Yet this is the Church that the Lord established Himself, as the promised restoration that has been written about from the beginning of time. Also see Matthew 23:37. ¶ And be broken, and be snared, and be taken. Ludlow has, “Using five verbs that develop a ‘downward’ pattern, Isaiah describes the results befalling those who reject the Lord (v. 15)—they stumble—they falter in their faith; they fall—they commit sins; they are snared—they are enticed by Satan’s temptations; they are captured—they are turned over to Satan’s buffetings.”

vv. 16–22. Those who would be Christ’s disciples give place to His words; hold on to the iron rod. Christ would, for a time, hide his face from the house of Jacob. Isaiah testifies that he will look to the Lord. Isaiah, as well as his children, are symbolic of the teachings he was supposed to share with men. Wicked men will seek to the forces of evil and the dark side, when instead they should seek God. Those who heed such wicked practices will only find darkness and lack of hope. They will starve for things spiritual and blame both their rulers and their God. The darkness will be so thick that it can be felt.

16 ¶ Bind up the testimony, seal the law among my disciples.

The Targum (ܬܪܓܡ) ¹⁴ here is helpful: “O prophet, keep the testimony, testify not the testimony among them, ¹⁴ Several commentators direct us to Daniel: “But thou, O Daniel, shut up the words, and seal the book, even to the time of the end:

because they do not obey; seal and hide the law, they are not willing to learn it.” To bind up ܐܒܪ, means to secure, bundle, or tie up something. Barnes suggests, “The meaning here is, to secure, to close up—perhaps by passing a cord or string around the volume, and making it secure, denoting that it was finished.” Henderson (leaning on Hitzig), explains: “The verb ܐܒܪ can only properly apply to the wrapping up of a ܐܢܦܪ, or volume... The words apply to the prophetic testimonies which had just been borne to the Messiah, and other prophetic matter then in existence, together with the law, in its more extended signification, as comprising the rest of the Jewish Scriptures. These might be unheeded, or misconstrued, as indeed they were, by the great body of the nation; but they would minister needful instruction and comfort to the disciples of Christ. For their benefit, they were carefully to be preserved.” ¶ The law, or rather, instruction, or doctrine, Torah, ܬܘܪܐ. While the term is often used to mean the Pentateuch or five books of Moses, it can mean all of the Hebrew Holy Scriptures, or Tanakh. ¹⁵ “In rabbinical Judaism, the scope of Torah is sometimes expanded to include all of the Scriptures or even the entirety of God’s revelation” (Holman). In Deuteronomy the Lord commanded that the scriptures should be bound to our hearts and hands and become part of us: “And these words, which I command thee this day, shall be in thine heart: And thou shalt teach them diligently unto thy children, and shalt talk of them when thou sittest in thine house, and when thou walkest by the way, and when thou liest down, and when thou risest up. And thou shalt bind them for a sign upon thine hand, and they shall be as frontlets between thine eyes” (Deuteronomy 6:6–8). These words were taken literally by those who bound the phylacteries as a form of worship. The destroying angel passed through the homes marked over with the blood of the Pascal lamb and did no harm to the inhabitants thereof. Through the acceptance of the Word we can likewise be spiritually protected—but by rejecting the same we are instead bundled for destruction and burning. ¶ A disciple of the Lord has the same meaning as that of a saint, that is, a follower of Christ. ¶ The expression bind up the testimony, seal the law has a very specific meaning in scripture, as alluded to in the Targum (ܬܪܓܡ). It is that of inviting others to turn and come unto Christ with urgency, for after such are done away with, God would provide His own ‘sermons’ through war and nature and other disasters, but not through the warning voice of many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased” (Daniel 12:4, cf. 12:9, 8:26; Revelations 22:10).

¹⁵ The three main divisions of the Holy Scriptures are the Law ܬܘܪܐ, Prophets ܡܢܒܝܐ, and Writings ܟܬܘܒܝܡ.

man.¹⁶ The Prophet Joseph Smith taught: “When you are endowed and prepared to preach the gospel to all nations, kindred, and tongues, in your own languages, you must faithfully warn all, and bind up the testimony, and seal up the law, and the destroying angel will follow close at your heels, and exercise his tremendous mission upon the children of disobedience; and destroy the workers of iniquity, while the Saints will be gathered out from among them, and stand in holy places ready to meet the Bridegroom when He comes”¹⁷ The Prophet Joseph Fielding Smith therefore taught, “Whenever I go in the mission field I try to impress this truth upon the missionaries. They are sent into the world for two definite purposes; to gather out the scattered people of the House of Israel who are willing to repent and receive the Gospel, and to leave all others without excuse . . . ‘Therefore, tarry ye, and labor diligently, that you may be perfected in your ministry to go forth among the Gentiles for the last time, as many as the mouth of the Lord shall name, to bind up the law and seal up the testimony, and to prepare the saints for the hour of judgment which is to come’ (D&C 88:84).”¹⁸ ¶ We could call this process the Ezekiel principle, that if a person is warned and repents, then both the individual who provided the warning voice and the person who repents are blessed. However, if a person is not warned, he who should have warned his brother is also condemned (Ezekiel 3:16–21). Elder McConkie suggests an essential task of a disciple: “As set forth in latter-day revelation, the ‘disciples,’ those who are the Lord’s servants, ‘go forth’ with power given them ‘to seal both on earth and in heaven, the unbelieving and rebellious; Yea, verily, to seal them up unto the day when the wrath of God shall be poured out upon the wicked without measure’ (D&C 1:8–9). Of these wicked and unbelieving ones the revealed word says: ‘Behold, and lo, there are none to deliver you; for ye obeyed not my voice when I called to you out of the heavens; ye believed not my servants, and when they were sent unto you ye received them not. Wherefore, they sealed up the testimony and bound up the law, and ye were delivered over unto darkness. These shall go away into outer darkness where there is weeping, and wailing, and gnashing of teeth’ (D&C 133:71–73).”¹⁹ Brigham Young explained: “All we have yet heard and we have experienced is scarcely a preface to the sermon that is going to be preached. When the testimony of the Elders ceases to be given, and the Lord says to them, ‘Come home; I will now preach my own sermons to the nations of the earth,’ all you now know can scarcely be called a preface to the sermon that will be preached with fire and sword, tempests, earthquakes, hail, rain, thunders and lightnings, and fearful destruction. What matters the destruction of a few railway cars? You will hear of magnificent cities, now idolized by the people, sinking in the earth, entombing the inhabitants. The sea will heave itself beyond its bounds, engulfing mighty cities. Famine will spread over the nations and nation will rise up against nation, kingdom against kingdom and states against states, in our own country and in foreign lands; and they will destroy each other, caring not for the blood and lives of their neighbors, of their families, or for their own lives.”²⁰ Elder Orson Pratt spoke of these things as related to the fulfillment of the time of the Gentiles: “Who is able to declare when the times of the Gentiles will be fulfilled? . . . before the times of the Gentiles can possibly be fulfilled, a proclamation must come from heaven and be sounded in their ears—namely, that an angel must come from heaven and bring the everlasting Gospel, not for the Jews, the descendants of Israel, alone, but for every nation, kindred, tongue and people. Gentiles and Jews, all must hear it, for the prediction is that when the angel comes forth with that message from heaven, it is to be preached to all nations, kindreds, tongues and people. This, of course, includes Gentiles as well as Jews. We cannot, therefore, suppose that the times of the Gentiles will be fulfilled until after that event takes place. When the angel comes, when the servants of God are sent forth by Divine authority with a proclamation, and have fulfilled that prediction by declaring the everlasting Gospel to all the nations and kingdoms of the Gentiles, then their times will be fulfilled, and not before. What would be the use of sending the Gospel to the Gentiles if their times were fulfilled and there was no hope or chance for them to receive salvation? The very declaration—that an angel shall come forth with the Gospel in the latter days before the destruction of the wicked, and that that Gospel is to be preached to Gentiles as well as Jews, is proof and evidence to every reflecting mind that believes the Bible that the Gentiles will have an opportunity, until that message is delivered and the prediction concerning it fulfilled. When that is done the law is bound, the testimony is sealed, so far as they are concerned . . . The Jews will then come in remembrance before the Lord. That is, the set time for their deliverance and restoration will have come, the period predicted by the mouth of the ancient prophet in which the Gospel shall be proclaimed to them . . . Will ¹⁶ “And I will make thy tongue cleave to the roof of thy mouth, that thou shalt be dumb, and shalt not be to them a reprover: for they are a rebellious house.” (Ezekiel 3:26).

¹⁷ Smith, Joseph Jr. History of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. Edited by B. H. Roberts. 2d ed., rev. Salt Lake City, Utah: The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, 1932–51, 2:309. Also, see TPJS, p. 92.

¹⁸ Smith, Joseph Fielding. The Signs of the Times. Salt Lake City, Utah: Deseret News Press, 1952. pp. 79–80. See also D&C 88:80–91.

¹⁹ McConkie, Bruce R. The Messiah Series. Salt Lake City, Utah: Deseret Book Company, 1978–82. The Promised Messiah, p. 174.

²⁰ Brigham Young, Journal of Discourses 8:123, 15 July 15, 1860.

the Gentiles be entirely cut off? Oh no, there will be a great many, even when Israel are gathering, who will come along and say, ‘Let us be numbered with Israel, and be made partakers of the same blessings with them; let us enter into the same covenant and be gathered with them and with the people of God.’ Though the testimony is bound, and though the law is sealed up, yet there will be an opening for you to come in. But you will have to come of your own accord, there will be no message sent to you, no ministration of the servants of God expressly directed to you.”²¹

17 And I will wait upon the LORD, that hideth his face from the house of Jacob, and I will look for him.

And I will wait upon the LORD. Isaiah testifies that while he lives his eyes will look to the Lord and wait upon Him. What does this beautiful expression, to wait upon the Lord mean? The idiom appears in Psalms and Isaiah: “...but those that wait upon the LORD, they shall inherit the earth” (Psalm 37:9b, cf. 123:2); “But they that wait upon the LORD shall renew their strength; they shall mount up with wings as eagles; they shall run, and not be weary; and they shall walk, and not faint” (ISAIAH 40:31). To me, to wait upon the Lord means to act when moved upon by the Holy Ghost. To wait upon the Lord means to put our trust in Him who is mighty to save. While חָכַה means to wait for something, חָכַה לַיהוָה is a beautiful expression about waiting for the Lord. There is nothing passive about the word wait, as it means to serve the Lord with all of our might, mind and strength. It was after the October 2011 General Conference, during Elder Robert D. Hales talk on Sunday morning, that I began to better understand the meaning of this phrase (see notes under ISAIAH 40:31). ¶ That hideth his face from the house of Jacob. In Deuteronomy the Lord repeatedly warned the children of Israel about the consequences of disobedience: “And he said, I will hide my face from them, I will see what their end shall be: for they are a very froward generation, children in whom is no faith” (Deuteronomy 32:20). But there is a glorious point here, a hope for the restoration of Israel, for the day would come when: “Neither will I hide my face any more from them: for I have poured out my spirit upon the house of Israel, saith the Lord GOD” (Ezekiel 39:29). ¶ And I will look for him. This has the same meaning as that of waiting upon the Lord. Micah’s exclamation is almost identical to that of Isaiah: “Therefore I will look unto the LORD; I will wait for the God of my salvation: my God will hear me” (Micah 7:7).

18 Behold, I and the children whom the LORD hath given me [are] for signs and for wonders in Israel from the LORD of hosts, which dwelleth in mount Zion.

Behold, I and the children whom the LORD hath given me are for signs and for wonders in Israel. Isaiah explains that his own name as well as those of his children have been given as words of prophecy of the signs and wonders that would come to pass. Yet, one may also see these comments as representing the Savior, who “Behold, this child is set for the fall and rising again of many in Israel; and for a sign which shall be spoken against” (Luke 2:34b). Rather than say that it is the Lord who is speaking here—as a number of commentators do—I would rather think that Isaiah was a type and a shadow of the Savior. So similarly, in this place, Cheyne, “The conception is, that God selects certain men to be shadows or types of still greater men or things to come.” Elder McConkie wrote that this verse shows “that when God gives children to men on earth, he is simply sending to them his own spirit offspring.”²² Isaiah, or Yeshayahu (יֵשַׁעְיָהוּ), means Salvation of Yahweh. The work of Isaiah was to proclaim that salvation would come through Jehovah. It would not come through the arm of flesh nor through idols or false gods, but only through the Lord. Isaiah’s first son was named Shearjashub, The remnant shall return, in reference to the latter-day gathering of Israel. While few gentile commentators get this point, Kay insightfully says, “... the terms ‘remnant of Jacob,’ ‘remnant of Israel’ (10:21, 22), and remnant of His people’ (11:11), taken in combination with the words of Moses, Deuteronomy 30:2 [Rain in Due Season—GB], seemed to point to some greater restoration; including, it might well seem, ‘broken’ Ephraim (7:8; cp. 11:12). But further; the name said unqualifiedly ‘the rest:’—might not that include what Amos had spoken of ‘the rest of Edom,’ and, indeed, ‘all the nations’ (Amos 9:12²³; Psalm 22:27²⁴), even Assyria and Egypt (19:23–25), and ‘the uttermost part of the earth’ (24:16)? Nay;

²² McConkie, Bruce R. Doctrinal New Testament Commentary, Volume III, Salt Lake City, Utah: Bookcraft, 1973, p. 145.

²³ “That they may possess the remnant of Edom, and of all the heathen, which are called by my name, saith the LORD that doeth this.” (Amos 9:12) must it not go deeper yet? must it not include a redemption of those who had sunk into the grave (26:19; cp. Hosea 13:14²⁵; 14:7), and the ‘prisoners gathered in the pit’ (24:22)?” As LDS we know that the work of the Temples is a critical part of such redemption, and that through Israel all the nations of the world would be blessed. Isaiah’s second son was named מָהֵר שָׁלַל הַשָּׁבַץ, Mahe-shalal-hash-baz, or To speed to the spoil, he hasteneth the prey, in reference to the punishment that would come upon Syria and Ephraim, who sought to destroy Judah. Today these words may well stand for the punishment that would come upon those who lift up their hand against Israel. Isaiah and the prophets were often commanded to not only give their children special names, but also dress or act out with prophetic implications.²⁶ ¶ From the LORD of hosts which dwelleth in mount Zion. Mount Zion seems to be a reference to the House of the Lord, or His Holy Temple, wherein the Lord made His presence from time to time. In the last days so would also the Lord make His presence manifest unto many in His Holy Temples, and among the pure in heart. “And inasmuch as my people build a house unto me in the name of the Lord, and do not suffer any unclean thing to come into it, that it be not defiled, my glory shall rest upon it; Yea, and my presence shall be there, for I will come into it, and all the pure in heart that shall come into it shall see God” (D&C 97:15–16). Some scriptures seem to have a reference to a Millennial day presence of the Lord: “In that day, saith the LORD, will I assemble her that halteth, and I will gather her that is driven out, and her that I have afflicted; And I will make her that halted a remnant, and her that was cast far off a strong nation: and the LORD shall reign over them in mount Zion from henceforth, even for ever” (Micah 4:6–7).

²⁴ “All the ends of the world shall remember and turn unto the LORD: and all the kindreds of the nations shall worship before thee.” (Psalm 22:27)

²¹ Orson Pratt, March 26, 1871. Journal of Discourses. 26 vols. London: Latter-day Saints’ Book Depot, 1854–1886. Discourse by Elder Orson Pratt, Delivered in the Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, March 26, 1871. The restoration of the Jews and the rebuilding of Jerusalem—the latter-day Kingdom of god—gathering of Israel, pp. 59–70.

19 And when they shall say unto you: Seek unto them that have familiar spirits, and unto wizards that peep and that mutter--should not a people seek unto their God? for the living to hear from the dead?

And when they shall say unto you: Seek unto them that have familiar spirits, and unto wizards that peep and mutter. Some will not turn to the Lord and accept the message of the scriptures and the prophets, but will prefer to lean upon divination and the arts of the occult.

²⁵ “I will ransom them from the power of the grave; I will redeem them from death: O death, I will be thy plagues; O grave, I will be thy destruction: repentance shall be hid from mine eyes.” (Hosea 13:14)

²⁶ Some notable examples include ISAIAH 20:3–4; Ezekiel 4:3, 10–11, 16; Hosea 1:2–4.

From the beginning the Lord has been explicit in this matter: “Regard not them that have familiar spirits, neither seek after wizards, to be defiled by them: I am the LORD your God” (Leviticus 19:31); “And the soul that turneth after such as have familiar spirits, and after wizards, to go a whoring after them, I will even set my face against that soul, and will cut him off from among his people” (Leviticus 20:6, also see 1 Samuel 28:6). In modern day, people also ought to avoid giving the philosophies of men more importance than the words of Christ’s servants and the Scriptures. ¶ Should not a people seek unto their God for the living to hear from the dead? This is a beautiful question, should not a people seek unto their God an none else?

20 To the law and to the testimony; and if they speak not according to this word, [it is] because [there is] no light in them.

✓ no morning

To the law and to the testimony. This is a call to hold fast to the law and to the testimony, to the sure word of prophecy and to leave evil things behind. It is a call for zeal towards God. Barnes well suggests that: “This is a solemn call of the prophet to try everything by the revealed will of God.” We all have to make constant decisions as to whether we will live our lives with the constant companionship of the Spirit of the Lord, or yield to some other spirit. “Put on the whole armour of God, that ye may be able to stand against the wiles of the devil. For we wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high [places]. Wherefore take unto you the whole armour of God, that ye may be able to withstand in the evil day, and having done all, to stand” (Ephesians 6:11–13). Elder McConkie taught: “Two spirits are abroad in the earth—one is of God, the other of the devil. The spirit which is of God is one that leads to light, truth, freedom, progress, and every good thing; on the other hand, the spirit which is of Lucifer leads to darkness, error, bondage, retrogression, and every evil thing. One spirit is from above, the other from beneath; and that which is from beneath never allows more light or truth or freedom to exist than it can help.”²⁷ ¶ And if they speak not according to this word, it is because there is no light in them. Anything short of this word, of the word of the Lord, is because it is spoken without the Spirit of the Lord. The light of the Gospel truth is absent in such a person’s life. Helaman asks: “Yea, how long will ye suffer yourselves to be led by foolish and blind guides? Yea, how long will ye choose darkness rather than light?” (Helaman 13:29b). There is another allusion here made clear by the ASV translation of the word light, “If they speak not according to this word, surely there is no morning (שָׁחַר, or dawn, see margin ||, Gesenius, HALOT, BDB, and others) for them” (ASV). Such would not partake of the morning of the first resurrection. According to Clarke, “R. D. Kimhi says this was the form of an oath: ‘By the law and by the testimony such and such things are so.’ Now if they had sworn this falsely, it is because there is not light, no illumination, שָׁחַר, no scruple of conscience, in them.” Those who reject the light of Christ will have to pass through darkness, through the black of the night (contrast with D&C 50:22–25).

²⁷ McConkie, Bruce R. Mormon Doctrine. 2d ed. Salt Lake City, Utah: Bookcraft, 1966, p. 270.

21 And they shall pass through it hardly bestead and hungry; and it shall come to pass that when they shall be hungry, they shall fret themselves, and curse their king and their God, and look upward.

And they shall pass through it hardly bestead and hungry. Or, “And they shall pass through it, sore distressed and hungry” (ASV). The word hungry may well mean more than physical hunger, but a hunger for the companionship and words of the Spirit. ¶ *And it shall come to pass that when they shall be hungry, they shall fret themselves, and curse their king and their God,*²⁸ and look upward. Men will blame God and king for their misfortunes. Job’s wife suggested a way for Job to escape his misery: “Then said his wife unto him, Dost thou still retain thine integrity? curse God, and die” (Job 2:9).

22 And they shall look unto the earth and behold trouble, and darkness, dimness of anguish, and [they shall be] driven to darkness.

And they shall look unto the earth and behold trouble, and darkness, dimness of anguish. Dimness is sometimes translated as gloom. Everywhere they shall look, they will see the horrors of darkness and anguish. Kay says, “This darkness was owing to the ‘hiding away of God’s face’ from the sinful people.” ¶ And shall be driven to darkness. Or, “and into thick darkness they shall be driven away” (ASV, cf. Kay). Lowth says, “palpable Egyptian darkness” as in “And the LORD said unto Moses, Stretch out thine hand toward heaven, that there may be darkness over the land of Egypt, even darkness which may be felt” (Exodus 10:21). This is the type of darkness seen before Christ came to the American continent, and ministered to some of His other sheep (3 Nephi 8:20–23).

23 ¶ NEVERTHELESS, the dimness [shall] not [be] such as [was] in her vexation, when at the* first he lightly afflicted the land of Zebulun, and the land of Naphtali, and afterwards did more grievously afflict [her by] the way of the Red Sea, beyond Jordan, in Galilee of the nations. ✓

✓ or, populous

* KJV and JST retain “the,” Book of Mormon does not.

NOTE: Verse 23 in the Hebrew Scriptures (מִן) constitutes verse 9:1 in the KJV.

FIRST POSTED: 11 July 2001

²⁸ See ISAIAH 9:4, for a note on “their king and their God” vs. “his king and his God.”

Isaiah 9

כִּי־יֵלֶד יֶלֶד־לָנוּ בֶן נֹתָן־לָנוּ
וַתִּהְיֶה הַמְשָׁרָה עַל־שָׂכְמוֹ וַיִּקְרָא שְׁמוֹ
פֶּלֶא יוֹעֵץ אֵל גִּבּוֹר אָבִי עַד שָׁר־שָׁלוֹם :

This chapter opens with the glorious Light that would shine upon Israel, where only darkness had existed before. The birth of the Messiah is put forth, as well as some of the glorious names that would describe Him. Because of the pride of the people, the Lord would stretch forth His hand with specific and terrible punishments. These thoughts are interrupted three quarters of the way through and continued in ISAIAH 10. Alexander notes: “The division of chapters is in this part of the book peculiarly unfortunate; the first part of the ninth ... containing the conclusion of the eighth, and the first part of the tenth ... the conclusion of the ninth.”

vv. 1–8. These verses are foremost Messianic in nature, although many have found application to the times when they were given.

1 ¶ NEVERTHELESS, the dimness [shall] not [be] such as [was] in her vexation, when at *the first he lightly afflicted the land of Zebulun, and the land of Naphtali, and afterwards did more grievously afflict [her by] the way of the Red Sea, beyond Jordan, in Galilee of the nations. ✓

✓ or, populous

* KJV and JST retain “the,” Book of Mormon does not.

NOTE: Verse 9:1 is included as 8:23 in the Hebrew scriptures (אח).

The ASV presents a beautiful and clear rendition of this verse: “But there shall be no gloom to her that was in anguish. In the former time he brought into contempt the land of Zebulun and the land of Naphtali; but in the latter time hath he made it glorious, by the way of the sea, beyond the Jordan, Galilee of the nations” (ASV). The ASV uses gloom rather than the KJV dimness for מוֹעֵף. The idea can also be one of a profound darkness (Gesenius, HALOT). הֵקֵל can mean lightly esteemed, or despised (Gesenius, HALOT), or “brought into contempt” (ASV), for the KJV “lightly afflicted.” Whitehouse explains, “The general sense of the passage as it stands in the Hebrew text is fairly clear. In the former troubled days, preceding the downfall of Samaria, Tiglath-Pileser III had deprived the kingdom of Ephraim of its northern provinces, Zebulun and Naphtali. The ruin which Tiglath-Pileser had begun

Sargon completed in 722.” ¶ Galilee of the nations,¹ גָּלִיל הַגּוֹיִם. Galilee (גָּלִיל) also means district, so this region (גָּלִיל הַגּוֹיִם) could also be properly called district of the gentiles. We also read: “In the days of Pekah king of Israel came Tiglathpileser king of Assyria, and took Ijon, and Abelbethmaachah, and Janoah, and Kedesh, and Hazor, and Gilead, and Galilee, all the land of Naphtali, and carried them captive to Assyria” (2 Kings 15:29). The idea, then, is that in the former הָרִאשׁוֹן, derived from ראש, or first (times, days or epoch), Assyria, one of the gentile nations, would humiliate this area and take her away captive. These would be certainly some of the darkest days of Israel. But all of this in contrast to a day to come (הָאֲחֵרִי) or the latter in contrast to former (Gesenius), something wonderful would happen in this same land of Galilee. In the context of the day when it was written, this Isaianic verse seems to be saying, that the dimness and vexation that would befall the land of Israel (Ephraim) by the hand of Assyria would not be everlasting. The time would come, where the very land occupied by the Northern Tribes, and more specifically, the tribes of Zebulun² and Naphtali,³ would become

¹ The words גּוֹיִם, goyim, and ἔθνος, ethnos, can mean either gentiles, gentile nations, or nations, depending on their context. For instance, in Luke 2:32, it is my opinion that the verse should read “A light to lighten the nations, and the glory of thy people Israel.” By putting the word Gentiles in this verse, it implies that the Jews are left out. I do not believe that is the intent here. My interpretations are affected by my pro-Semitic stance.

² Zebulun was Israel’s tenth son, Leah’s 6th. “And Leah conceived again, and bare Jacob the sixth son. And Leah said, God hath endued me with a good dowry; now will my husband dwell with me, because I have born him six sons: and she called his name Zebulun” (Genesis 30:19–20).

³ Naphtali was Israel’s sixth son, Bihah’s 2nd. Bilhah was Rachel’s maid. “And Bilhah Rachel’s maid conceived again, and bare Jacob a Holy, for the Savior of Mankind would live and walk there during His Galilean ministry. All that gloominess in ISAIAH 8:21–22 is about to explode forth with a Great Light. Henderson tells us that the Rabbinic tradition states, “[in] the book of Zohar, part i. folio 119, Amst. יתגלי מלכא משיחא בארעה דגליל Messiah the King shall be revealed in the land of Galilee.” ¶ The New Testament confirms these thoughts: “Now when Jesus had heard that John was cast into prison, he departed into Galilee; And leaving Nazareth, he came and dwelt in Capernaum, which is upon the sea coast, in the borders of Zabulon and Nephthalim: That it might be fulfilled which was spoken by Esaias the prophet, saying, The land of Zabulon, and the land of Nephthalim, by the way of the sea, beyond Jordan, Galilee of the Gentiles; The people which sat in darkness saw great light; and to them which sat in the region and shadow of death light is sprung up” (Matthew 4:12–16). ¶ By the way of the Red Sea. A number of critics have ridiculed the expression Red Sea (contained in both the Book of Mormon and the Inspired Version) and used it as a proof that the Book of Mormon is not true. They argue that the Red Sea is not exactly related in any way to Galilee. Yet we find a defense for the Prophet Joseph Smith and for the Book of Mormon in the ancient Targum (ܬ) which alludes to the miracles, by the power of God, that took place as Israel left Egypt behind (see ISAIAH 9:1–4—or 8:23–9:3—in the ܬ). Recall that there were two miraculous partings, the one that took place at the Red Sea (Exodus 14) and the one that took place at the Jordan (Joshua 3–4). While the word red does not appear in the Targum (ܬ) itself, the allusion to the Red Sea is clear. Stenning’s translation is: “because they remembered not the mighty act which was done at the sea, the miracles of Jordan.” Chilton has, “because they did not remember the prodigy of the sea, the wonders of Jordan.” Pauli renders it as, “because they did not remember the power of the Red Sea, neither the wonders of the Jordan.” The Targum (ܬ), then, chides the children of Israel for not remembering the mighty [Red] sea nor the miracle of the Jordan:

 4“ܕܠܐ ܐܝܕܟܪܝ ܓܒܘܪܬ ܝܡܐ ܢܝܫܝ ܝܪܕܢܐ” In this place, Henderson well says that when we have ܕܝܡ, it could refer to the Mediterranean, the Red Sea or even the Dead Sea. Even though Henderson thinks of the Sea of Tiberias (or Cinnereth) best fits the ellipsis, he second son. And Rachel said, With great wrestlings have I wrestled with my sister, and I have prevailed: and she called his name Naphtali” (Genesis 30:7–8).

⁴ The Aramaic comes from the The Targums from the files of the Comprehensive Aramaic Lexicon Project, Targum Jonathan to the Prophets, ISAIAH 8:23, LOGOS. For different pointing, see Sperber, Alexander. The Bible in Aramaic based on Old Manuscripts and Printed Texts, Brill, 2004, p. 531; and Stenning, p. 31.

mentions that the Red Sea is mentioned in ISAIAH 10:26. We have already said that ISAIAH 10 is intimately connected with this chapter. In ISAIAH 10:24 we see, again, an allusion to Egypt, and more specifically to the deliverance from Egypt in the Red Sea: “and as his rod was upon the sea, so shall he lift it up after the manner of Egypt” (ISAIAH 10:26b). The Rabbis also ascribed this verse to the Red Sea, as we find in the Talmud tradition (Seder Nezikin, Sanhedrin 94b): “What is meant by, When aforetime the land of Zebulun and the land of Naphtali did lighten [its burden], but in later times it was made heavy by the way of the sea, beyond Jordan, in Galilea of the nations? — It is not as the early generations, who rejected the yoke of the Torah; but as for the latter generations who strengthened the yoke of the Torah upon themselves and are therefore worthy of having a miracle wrought for them, like those who passed over the [Red] Sea and the Jordan” (Talmud, Soncino).

2 The people that walked in darkness have seen a great light; they that dwell in the land of the shadow of death, upon them hath the light shined.

This verse forms a parallel structure: People that walked in darkness / Light / Land of the shadow of death / Light. Yet, as we have mentioned before, Isaiah would sometimes tuck in diverse thoughts in what many may have thought was simply parallel repetition. While the Light is the same in both cases, the two areas of darkness are different. ¶ The people that walked in darkness have seen a great light. To walk in darkness means to walk in apostasy and captivity (LDS footnote 2a). Isaiah has kept in this glorious thing, and now cannot contain it any longer. The Light of the world, even Christ, the very Messiah would burst upon the scene of mankind. From Matthew 4:12–16, it is clear that these Isaianic verses are a contrast between the horrors of war and removal by Assyria (a Gentile nation) and the Galilean ministry of the Christ. John wrote: “In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God. The same was in the beginning with God. All things were made by him; and without him was not any thing made that was made. In him was life; and the life was the light of men. And the light shineth in darkness; and the darkness comprehended it not” (John 1:1–5). Similar contrasts existed in the Savior’s ministry in the American continent after days of thick darkness—so also in the Spirit World.⁵ Anytime a person decides to walk in the way of the Lord, such transformation occurs—between darkness and light. They day will come, indeed, when: “The sun shall be no more thy light by day; neither for brightness shall the moon give light unto thee: but the LORD shall be unto thee an everlasting light, and thy God thy glory. Thy sun shall no more go down; neither shall thy moon withdraw itself: for the LORD shall be thine everlasting light, and the days of thy mourning shall be ended” (ISAIAH 60:19–20). ¶ They that dwell in the land of the shadow of death. Upon them hath the light shined. As we already saw in Matthew 4:12–16, these verses are particularly an allusion to the Savior’s Galilean ministry. Simeon had waited for the consolation of Israel, that is, the coming of the Holy Messiah. When the child Jesus was brought to the temple, and Simeon held the Savior, he gave thanks to God and said: “Lord, now lettest thou thy servant depart in peace, according to thy word: For mine eyes have seen thy salvation, Which thou hast prepared before the face of all people; A light to lighten the nations, and the glory of thy people Israel” (Luke 2:29–32, KJV, ἔθνος, nations substituted for Gentiles).⁶ The Targum (ܬܪܓܡ), interestingly, continues to make allusion to the darkness felt by Israel as she lived and escaped out of Egypt. This light we have been speaking off, is not only the Savior, but His restored Gospel. Just as when the Savior walked upon the earth in person but many did not recognize Him as such, so will it be when the Gospel is restored among the gentile nations: “And when the times of the Gentiles is come in, a light shall break forth among them that sit in darkness, and it shall be the fulness of my gospel; But they receive it not; for they perceive not the light, and they turn their hearts from me because of the precepts of men. And in that generation shall the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled” (D&C 45:28–30).

⁵ “While this vast multitude waited and conversed, rejoicing in the hour of their deliverance from the chains of death, the Son of God

3 Thou hast multiplied the nation, [and] ~~not~~ increased the joy—and they joy before thee according to the joy in harvest, [and] as [men] rejoice when they divide the spoil.

✓ or, to him

Thou hast multiplied the nation, and increased the joy. The Prophet Joseph Smith, by inspiration, corrected the verse to remove the negative. While the KJV reads לא, not, appeared, declaring liberty to the captives who had been faithful” (D&C 138:18).

⁶ YLT, LITV, MKJV, and not surprisingly the HNV, use the word nations for ἔθνος in this verse.

not, most Hebraists including Gesenius, Lowth,⁷ Delitzsch, Nägelsbach, Alexander, and others agree with the Prophet Joseph Smith in rendering it לו, to him. We have said that the original Hebrew text (מ) did not contain the many points and symbols, puncta extraordinaria, that it has since acquired. These were added by the Massoretes, as an aid in pronunciation and preservation of the text. Among the notes, there is what is known as the קרי and פתיב, Qeri and Kethiv, respectively. These stand for that which is read (קרי) vs. that which is written (פתיב). The Masoretes, we have said, wanted to avoid any further corruption of the text. So rather than making an orthographical correction by deleting the incorrectly spelled word, and substituting what they considered correct, they instead preserved the extant orthography or word, and suggested the changes in margin or critical apparatus. So it is that the Massora explains that this is “one of 17 instances where לא, written thus, has the meaning of לו” [Mm 1795]⁸ ¶ This verse seems to have reference to ISAIAH 54:1, “Sing, O barren, thou that didst not bear; break forth into singing, and cry aloud, thou that didst not travail with child: for more are the children of the desolate than the children of the married wife, saith the LORD” and ISAIAH 26:15, “Thou hast increased the nation, O LORD, thou hast increased the nation: thou art glorified: thou hadst removed it far unto all the ends of the earth.” While the Lord had permitted Israel to be scattered, Isaiah could see the day when she would be gathered in much increased in population. I would suggest that this increased nation would include such peoples as the Lamanites in the American continent and isles of the sea, as well as the Lost Tribes. The majority of Church members are literal descendants of Jacob⁹ rather than adopted. The first to join the Church in this dispensation of the fullness of times were generally from Ephraim, but as the Church expands into every corner of the earth, there are those from other tribes that are coming into the fold.¹⁰ So it is that a remnant would return. ¶ And they joy before thee according to the joy in harvest. That is, the joy of a plentiful harvest, often celebrated by end of season festivities. Henry suggests that those things that are hard bring more joy than those things that are easy: “When those who sowed in tears, and have with long patience waited for the precious fruits of the earth, reap in joy.” Barnes explains, “The phrase ‘before thee’ refers to the fact that the first fruits of the harvest among the Hebrews were presented with thanksgiving before God in the temple; Deuteronomy 12:7¹¹; 14:22–26¹² (also see Delitzsch). In ISAIAH 18 we see how Judah would be brought back to her Lord in the last days, even to the temple, to mount Zion. Harvest festivals and celebrations are an important part of agrarian societies. ¶ And as men rejoice when they divide the spoil. This is an allusion to the joy of the victor after a battle. Christ will be the victor.

⁷ Eleven manuscripts (two ancient) read לו, according to the Masoretic correction” (Lowth)

⁸ Kelly, P. H.; Mynatt, D. S. & Crawford, T. G. The Masorah of Biblia Hebraica Stuttgartensia: Introduction and Annotated Glossary. William B. Eerdmans Publishing Company: Grand Rapids, Michigan, 1998, p. 119. For more on this subject especially see pages 1–11. Also see The Masoretic Notes: Contained in the Edition of the Hebrew Scriptures published by The British and Foreign Bible Society, translated and explained by Alfred S. Geden. 1905; as well as Christian D. Gingsburg, The Massorah translated into English with a Critical and Exegetical Commentary, Vol. IV. 1905.

⁹ Smith, Joseph Fielding. Doctrines of Salvation, 3:246.

4 For thou hast broken ✓ the yoke of his burden, and the staff of his shoulder, the rod of his oppressor. ~~as in the day of Midian.~~

✓ or, When thou brakest

For thou hast broken the yoke of his burden, and the staff of his shoulder, the rod of his oppressor. With Ludlow, I see in this verse a Messianic utterance. In ISAIAH 10:27 we have a parallel scripture: “And it shall come to pass in that day, that his burden shall be taken away from off thy shoulder, and his yoke from off thy neck, and the yoke shall be destroyed because of the anointing.” Or rather, as the Targum (ܬܪܓܡ) in ISAIAH 10:27, “from before the Messiah”¹³ (מִן קִדְּם מְשִׁיחָא) or the Anointed One. This verse seems to speak of the sufferings of Christ, who would take upon the burdens of the world on His shoulder, and literally, on the way to Golgotha, he would bear a staff on His shoulders. Messiah has, through His suffering and resurrection, broken all bonds. I had expected at least one translator

¹⁰ See for instance, Faust, James E. “Priesthood Blessings,” Sunday Morning Session, October 1995 General Conference (November 1995 Ensign, p. 62).

¹¹ “And there ye shall eat before the LORD your God, and ye shall rejoice in all that ye put your hand unto, ye and your households, wherein the LORD thy God hath blessed thee” (Deuteronomy 12:7).

¹² “And thou shalt eat before the LORD thy God, in the place which he shall choose to place his name there, the tithe of thy corn [i.e., grain, such as wheat, oats, etc.—in old British English corn is not maize, something I learned from Rabbi Shaye J.D. Cohen], of thy wine, and of thine oil, and the firstlings of thy herds and of thy flocks; that thou mayest learn to fear the LORD thy God always” (Deuteronomy 14:23, also see verses 22, 24–26).

¹³ CAL.

to render ISAIAH 9:4 with capital letters: “For Thou hast broken the yoke of His burden, and the staff of His shoulder, the rod of His oppressor.” If “His burden” סְבִילוֹ is taken as representative of the Savior, who, then, is “His oppressor,” הַגֹּשֶׁשׁ בּוֹ? ¶ The rod of his oppressor. In the pre-existence and in mortality Satan attempted against Christ. As Elder James E. Talmage points out, this did not only happen in the wilderness, but at different points in the Savior’s life. In the last supper, speaking of His apostles, the Savior said, “Ye are they which have continued with me in my temptations” (Luke 22:28).¹⁴ But the idea here is that Christ would break the bands of death: “O death, where is thy sting?” (1 Corinthians 15:55a), and would crush Satan: “And I will put enmity between thee [Satan] and the woman [Eve], and between thy seed [Satan] and his followers] and her seed [Christ, born of Mary]; it [rather, He, Christ] shall bruise thy head [or crush Satan], and thou shalt bruise his heel” (Genesis 3:15).¹⁵ So also the Targum Pseudo-Jonathan to the Pentateuch, which has an explicit allusion to Christ, or “in the days of King Messiah”: בְּיוֹמֵי מַלְכָּא מְשִׁיחָא. Christ shall have power to overcome all things, even to “the destroying of Satan and his works at the end of the world” (D&C 19:3b). Many commentators have thought of this Isaianic verse as man being freed from bondage through Christ’s triumph. Certainly, this does not contradict what we have said. The burden would be lifted off the shoulders of each individual who will turn and walk in the way of the Lord. This was done through the infinite atonement as the burden was placed on the Savior. ¶ ~~As in the day of Midian.~~ The Book of Mormon does not contain the clause, “as in the day of Midian.” Nyman suggests: “This could be an intentional omission by Nephi, as it did not apply to his people.” In ¹⁴ Talmage explains: “It is not to be supposed that Christ’s victorious emergence from the dark clouds of the three specified temptations exempted Him from further assaults by Satan ... Luke closes his account of the temptations following the forty-day fast as follows: ‘And when the devil had ended all the temptation, he departed from him for a season.’ This victory over the devil ... [was] great but not final successes in the struggle between Jesus, the embodied God, and Satan, the fallen angel of light. That Christ was subject to temptation during the period of His association with the apostles He expressly affirmed ... Shortly before His betrayal, when admonishing the Twelve to humility, He said: ‘Ye are they which have continued with me in my temptations.’” Talmage, James E. Jesus the Christ: A Study of the Messiah and His Mission According to Holy Scriptures Both Ancient and Modern, pp.125, 127.

¹⁵ “Gen iii. 15. Schöttgen conjectures that the Talmudic designation of ‘heels of the Messiah’ (Sot. 49 b, line 2 from top) in reference to the near Advent of the Messiah in the description of the troubles of those days (comp. St. Matthew 10: 35, 36) may have been chosen partly with a view to this passage.” Edersheim, Alfred. Life and Times of Jesus the Messiah. Appendix IX. List Of Old Testament Passages Messianically Applied In Ancient Rabbinic Writings (Vol. i. Book II. ch. v.)

Midian the Lord saved Israel with only a few men “lest Israel vaunt themselves against me [the Lord], saying, Mine own hand hath saved me” (Judges 7:2); in His expiatory sacrifice, the Savior accomplished salvation by treading the wine press alone.

5 For every battle of the warrior [is] ✓ with confused noise, and garments rolled in blood; but [this] shall be with burning [and] fuel ✓ of fire.

✓ or, When the whole battle of the warrior was, &c.

✓ ✓ meat

This verse may be translated along these lines: “For every sandal / shoe / military boot that makes the earth tremble / quake / shake, and garment / clothing soaked in blood, shall come to be as combustible fuel for fire.” The noise of the soldiers advancing shakes the earth and resounds in the ear. Many modern Hebraists believe that rather than warrior, שַׁנְיָה means shoe, boot, or sandal, based on the root, שָׁנָה. Rabbi Kimhi (in Kay) renders it “For every boot of trampling warrior.” Lowth translates as “The greaves¹⁶ of the armed warrior” and explains: “This word, occurring only in one place, is of very doubtful signification. ... it seems as if something was rather meant which was capable of becoming fuel for the fire, together with the garments mentioned in the same sentence. In Syriac, the word, as a noun, signifies a shoe or a sandal, as a learned friend suggested to me some years ago: see Luke 15:22; Acts 12:8. I take it therefore to mean that part of the armour which covered the legs and feet, and I would render the two words [that is, שַׁנְיָה וְשָׂרָה] in Latin by caliga caligati. The burning of heaps of armour, gathered from the field of battle, as an offering made to the god supposed to be the giver of victory, was a custom that prevailed among some heathen nations; and the Romans used it as an emblem of peace: which perfectly well suits with the design of the Prophet in this place. A medal, struck by Vespasian on finishing his wars both at home and abroad, represents the goddess Peace, holding an olive branch in one hand, and with a lighted torch in the other setting fire to a heap of armour.” ¶ A large number of commentators are agreed that this verse represents the putting away of war in the millennium, to give place to peace, through Him whom peace comes. Lowth has compared this verse with one in Psalms that fits a similar context (in Psalms it is the chariot that is burnt to signify the end of war, while here it is the boots and the clothing of the soldier): “He maketh wars to cease unto the end of the earth; he breaketh the bow, and cutteth the spear in sunder; he burneth the chariot in the fire” (Psalm 46:8, also see Psalm 46:7–11). Henderson suggests that “this verse describes the sure indications of a state of lasting peace, in language borrowed from an ancient custom of burning implements of war that had been taken from the enemy.” While man’s typical battles entail both terrifying noise and bloodshed, at the end-of-days the wicked will be burnt. Delitzsch sees the verse as building to the glorious King mentioned in verse ISAIAH 9:6: “Upon the two sentences with כִּי [i.e., for] the prophet now builds a third. The reason for the triumph is the deliverance effected; and the reason for the deliverance, the destruction of the foe; and the reason for all the joy, all the freedom, all the peace, is the new great King.”

6 For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given; and the government shall be upon his shoulder; and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, The Mighty God, The Everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace.

For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given. This beautiful verse is beloved of all Christendom and made immortal by Handel’s Messiah. It testifies of Messiah, who would be born of woman, yet be Son of God. “By means of the words יָלַד, ‘child,’ and יָלַד, ‘is born,’ [Isaiah] has called attention to the Messiah’s humanity, but by the phrase אֵל נִבְרָר we are brought face to face with Messiah’s deity. This interpretation is strengthened by the word פֶּלֶא in the first name. He is a Wonder, and in the light of this strong designation, we may well expect that in the second name also the prophet is attributing deity to the Messiah” (Young). Nyman suggests: “The angel who spoke to the shepherds on the night of Christ’s birth paraphrased ISAIAH 9:6 (see Luke 2:10–11)¹⁷ (Nyman). ¶ And the government shall be upon his shoulder. Although a rightful heir of the Davidic monarchy, Christ would not be a ruler in meridian of time, when He came upon the earth as the Lamb, but will be such when He comes as the Lion, and reigns personally upon the earth during the Millennium. Contrasting the government upon His shoulder and the staff of His shoulder (in ISAIAH 9:4), Calvin says, “I agree with those who think that there is an indirect contrast between the government which the Redeemer bore on his shoulders and the staff of the shoulder

¹⁶ “Armor for the leg below the knee” (Webster).

¹⁷ “And the angel said unto them, Fear not: for, behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people. For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord” (Luke 2:10–11).

which was just now mentioned; for it agrees well, and is not liable to any objections.” ¶ *And his name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, The Mighty God,*¹⁸ The Everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace. To those who deny the divinity of Christ, we point to this scripture, which clearly states that the Christ child is the Mighty God, or אֱלֹהִים גִּבּוֹר. LDS understand, also, that Christ is also our Everlasting Father, אָבִי עֶד, in several types of contexts. Jesus Christ is: “the Father as creator... ‘Father’ of Those Who Abide in His Gospel ... [and] ‘Father’ by Divine Investiture of Authority.”¹⁹ The Savior is also our Brother and Son of God, Elohim. Some moderns have made ‘wonderful’ an adjective pertaining to the title ‘Counselor,’ and thus render it, ‘Wonderful Counselor.’ Such joining of these words, explains Henderson, “on the specious ground, that all the other titles are in pairs; but whatever uniformity in point of construction might thus be introduced into the passage, it is completely at variance with Hebrew construction. To admit of this rendering, the form must be פֶּלֶא יוֹעֵץ, and not פֶּלֶא עֶזֶר.” So also Delitzsch and Alexander, regarding the distinctiveness of the two titles. Regarding the title שֵׁר-שָׁלוֹם, Prince of Peace, Cheyne says, “[is] in striking contrast to the false ideal represented by Assyria.” The Targum (C) reads: “The prophet saith to the house of David, For unto us a Child is born, unto us a Son is given, and He has taken the law upon Himself to keep it. His name is called from eternity, Wonderful, The Mighty God, who liveth to eternity, The Messiah, whose peace shall be great upon us in His days.” Note again how Messiah and God are interchangeable titles here. ¶ Henderson makes an important contribution here: “For thought they are not [the words describing Messiah] expressly or verbally quoted, it is evident the angel Gabriel thus applies them in his annunciation to Mary, Luke 1:32, 33). First, her child was to be ‘the Son of the Highest,’ in reference to the part of the prophecy, ‘To us a Son is given.’ Secondly, he was to be ‘great,’ which the assemblage of exalted and distinguished names in the prediction sufficiently indicates. Thirdly, he was to have given to him ‘the throne of his father David,’ which corresponds to ‘his government upon the throne of David’ in the prophecy; and his ‘reigning over the house of Jacob,’ to his being ‘over the kingdom of David’ in the following clause. Fourthly, the words, ‘Of his kingdom there shall be no end,’ are almost a literal quotation of the words, ‘Of the increase of his government—there shall be no end.” ¶ Despite the preferred translation of שֵׁר-שָׁלוֹם, as Prince of Peace, we read of the following dilemma in the translation of this passage by the Jewish Publication Society, “... but they had trouble with the translation of שֵׁר-שָׁלוֹם.’ Leiser²⁰ employed the phrase ‘prince of peace,’ using the lower case to avoid (presumably) misinterpretation. Samuel Schulman of the JPS translation committee urged his colleagues to follow the same practice, since ‘it calls attention to the fact, that we wish to avoid any possible Christological interpretation of the phrase.’ Max L. Margolis and Cyrus Adler, by contrast, insisted that using the lower case would imply that the ‘prince of peace’ was a human being, ‘exactly the thing we wished to avoid.’ Strongly worded letters flew back and forth. The final translation, clearly influenced more by the desire to instruct Christians and defend Jews than by considerations of scholarship, banished ‘prince of peace’ altogether: ‘For a child is born unto us, / A son is given us; / And the government is upon his shoulder; / And his name is called / ^aPele-joez-el-gibbor-Abi-ad-sar-shalom. That is, Wonderful in counsel is God the Mighty, the everlasting father, the Ruler of peace.”²¹

¹⁸ There is an interesting exegetical note here by Nägelsbach, regarding the use of the word אֱלֹהִים or God and its implications within the doctrine of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints: “The question arises: can this name אֱלֹהִים ‘God’ be applied to a creature, and in what sense? Ps. 82:1, 6, comp. John 10:34 sq., are cited, where princes are called אֱלֹהִים ‘gods.’ When the Jews would have stoned Jesus ‘for blasphemy and because, being a man, he made himself God,’ Jesus replied by referring to the Psalm: ‘Is it not written in your law, I said, Ye are gods?’ Evidently He would say that it is not under all circumstances blasphemy to predicate divinity of a man, because otherwise the Psalm could not possibly have spoken so of men. He [Christ] therefore does not deny that he had called Himself God, but He challenged the right of the Jews to charge Him on that account with blasphemy, because it was possible He may have called Himself God in that sense that was allowable from their standpoint. It appears therefore that the notion אֱלֹהִים certainly can be used in various senses, and in some circumstances may be said of a creature, and without blasphemy. But there is a difference between אֱלֹהִים and אֱלֹהִים. For the former is never used in the wide sense in which we see the latter used.” Nägelsbach goes on to argue that אֱלֹהִים only takes place where God is intended, rather than god. Regardless of the merit of such an argument about the distinction between אֱלֹהִים and אֱלֹהִים, this discussion is of interest. In the LDS footnotes in the KJV, we find regarding Psalm 82:6, footnote a, after the word child in this context, “Topic Guide Man, A Spirit Child of Heavenly Father; Man, Potential to Become Like Heavenly Father; Sons and Daughters of God; Spirit Creation.”

¹⁹ Mosiah 15:1–7, Ether 3:12, and “The Father and the Son: A Doctrinal Exposition by the First Presidency and the Twelve,” in James E. Talmage, The Articles of Faith, 12th ed. [1924], pp. 465–73). Also see April 2002 Ensign.

²⁰ Isaac Leiser (1806–1868) was one of the earliest Jewish translators of the Holy Scriptures into English, and one of my very favorite translators. I began to appreciate Leiser’s work long before I realized it was a Jewish translation. I first came across it through e-Sword. Later, I purchased my own hard copy. I love literal translations and Leiser’s is quite literal. What is much sadder to me, are translations produced for Christian audiences which obscure the Christ.

²¹ Frerichs, Ernest S. (editor). The Bible and Bibles in America. Scholars Press, Atlanta, 1988, p. 100. Of particular interest in this

7 Of the increase of [his] government and peace [there shall be] is no end, upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom, to order it, and to establish it with judgment and with justice from henceforth, even for ever. The zeal of the LORD of hosts will perform this.

Of the increase of his government and peace there is no end. These words refer to Christ, and His theocratic government. Some of the allusions are to the first coming of Christ and others to the second. Elder Holland writes: “One of the beautiful reminders in this magnificent passage, even with its splendor and royalty and sense of triumph, is the gentle declaration that through all of his power and majesty, Christ is still ‘the Son’...humble, obedient, submissive, willing to yield to the demands of mortality, doing all this that he might ultimately order the government of temporal beings (the flesh) after the higher laws of divine transcendence (the spirit). We are reminded here that he is, gloriously, the Son of God, a child of heaven. The fact that the government would eventually be upon his shoulders affirms what all the world will one day acknowledge—that he is Lord of lords and King of kings and will one day rule over the earth and his Church in person, with all the majesty and sacred vestments belonging to a holy sovereign and a high priest. All can take comfort from the fact that because the government—and the burdens thereof—will be upon his shoulders, they will be lifted in great measure from our own. This is yet another reference in Isaiah to the Atonement, the bearing away of our sins (or at very least in this reference, our temporal burdens) on the shoulders of Christ.”²² For Christ, says Calvin, “shall reign ... over the house of Jacob for ever, and of his kingdom there shall be no end (Luke 1:33). We see that the mightiest governments of this world, as if they had been built on a slippery foundation (Psalm 73:18), are unexpectedly overturned and suddenly fall. How fickle and changeable all the kingdoms under heaven are, we learn from history and from daily examples.” Regarding שָׁלוֹם, Alexander explains: “Peace, though included in שָׁלוֹם, is not a full equivalent. The Hebrew word denotes not only peace as opposed to war, intestine strife, or turbulence, but welfare and prosperity in general as opposed to want and sorrow. The reign here predicted was to be not only peaceful but in every respect prosperous. And this prosperity, like the reign of which is predicted, is to have no limit, either temporal or local. It is to be both universal and eternal.” ¶ Upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom. Christ or Messiah would be born of the house of David, descendant of Judah. “The sceptre shall not depart from Judah, nor a lawgiver from between his feet, until Shiloh come; and unto him shall the gathering of the people be” (Genesis 49:10). Furthermore we read, “Behold, the days come, saith the LORD, that I will raise unto David a righteous Branch, and a King shall reign and prosper, and shall execute judgment and justice in the earth. In his days Judah shall be saved, and Israel shall dwell safely: and this is his name whereby he shall be called, THE LORD OUR RIGHTEOUSNESS” (Jeremiah 23:5–6). David is also another name given to King Messiah: “For it shall come to pass in that day, saith the LORD of hosts, that I will break his yoke from off thy neck, and will burst thy bonds, and strangers shall no more serve themselves of him: But they shall serve the LORD their God, and David their king, whom I will raise up unto them. Therefore fear thou not, O my servant Jacob, saith the LORD; neither be dismayed, O Israel: for, lo, I will save thee from afar, and thy seed from the land of their captivity; and Jacob shall return, and shall be in rest, and be quiet, and none shall make him afraid. For I am with thee, saith the LORD, to save thee: though I make a full end of all nations whither I have scattered thee, yet I will not make a full end of thee: but I will correct thee in measure, and will not leave thee altogether unpunished” (Jeremiah 30:8–11); “And I will set up one shepherd over them, and he shall feed them, even my servant David; he shall feed them, and he shall be their shepherd” (Ezekiel 34:23–24, and see also Ezekiel 37:24–25); “Afterward shall the children of Israel return, and seek the LORD their God, and David their king; and shall fear the LORD and his goodness in the latter days” (Hosea 3:5). Of the Second David Elder McConkie wrote: “How beauteous the holy word is! How better could the ancient prophets have taught the glory and power of Christ’s millennial reign than to equate it with the image David had in the eyes of the people? And David’s greater Son shall soon come as the Second David to rule and reign over Israel and the world forever.”²³ ¶ To order it, and to establish it with judgment and with justice from henceforth, even for ever. The kingdom of the Messiah will be eternal, book to LDS readers, it mentions the good regard held by the Prophet Joseph Smith for his Hebrew tutor, Joshua Seixas: “Joshua Seixas, son of the famous Shearith Israel minister and also the author of a Hebrew grammar (1833, 1834), taught Hebrew at various colleges in Ohio. His best known student was Joseph Smith, the Mormon prophet, who held Seixas in high regard.” (p. 91). Also of interest is all of Chapter 7, entitled, “The Sacred Literature of the Latter-day Saints,” by Kent P. Jackson (pp. 163–191).

²² Jeffrey R. Holland, Christ and the New Covenant: The Messianic Message of the Book of Mormon, p.80.

²³ Bruce R. McConkie, The Millennial Messiah: The Second Coming of the Son of Man, p.610.

עוֹלָם. The words judgment (מִשְׁפָּט) and justice (צֶדֶקָה) are frequent ones in the Old Testament, and are characteristic of what is expected of His disciples. Yet they are best exemplified by the Lord Himself. Justice implies acting in rectitude, while judgment has to do with fairness. ¶ The zeal of the LORD of hosts will perform this. This great work would be carried out by God, not man. Regarding zeal, Barnes explains: “The word used here denotes ‘ardor,’ intense desire in accomplishing an object.”

vv. 8–21 and these thoughts continue through ISAIAH 10:4. These verses, says Lowth, when “healed of the dislocation which it suffers by the absurd division of the chapters, makes a distinct prophecy, and a just poem, remarkable for the regularity of its disposition, and the elegance of its plan.” While on the surface, it appears that these verses, beginning with verse 8, are directed solely at Ephraim, they also seem to encompass the ungodly in Judah and Jerusalem. Israel would be punished for her iniquities. Chapter 8, which is also part of this larger thought, contains the idea of the darkness and burning that would exist, and here in Chapter 9, we return to these same thoughts, and in the middle of the chiasmic pattern, is the good news about coming Messiah in the meridian of times.

8 ¶ The Lord sent a his word into unto Jacob, and it hath lighted upon Israel.

With this play on words, the Lord (Lowth knows of thirty Hebrew manuscripts that have LORD, or Yahweh, rather than Adonai, Lord), seems to now address Ephraim. According to Alexander, “The word which God had uttered against Israel had reached them as a message from him, as a revelation, so that there could be no doubt as to its authority and genuineness.” Nyman notes, “The Book of Mormon renders it ‘his word’ rather than ‘a word’ in the KJV. This retention broadens the meaning to include the gospel rather than just a single prophecy” (Nyman).

9 And all the people shall know, [even] Ephraim and the inhabitants of Samaria, that say in the pride and stoutness of heart:

And all the people shall know, even Ephraim and the inhabitants of Samaria. Samaria was the capital of Ephraim. The Targum (ܬ) reads: “The people, all of them have become great; Ephraim and the inhabitants of Samaria, that say in the greatness and stoutness of heart.” ¶ That say in the pride and stoutness of heart:

The words beginning with ISAIAH 9:10, spoken by the inhabitants of Samaria and Ephraim (both of whom had combined against Judah) are those of great conceit and arrogance.

10 The bricks are fallen down, but we will build with hewn stones; the sycamores are cut down, but we will change [them into] cedars.

This verse seems to refer to the pride of the people of Ephraim, and particularly those in Samaria, in terms of the construction of their edifices. “Tear our buildings down,” they bragged, “and we will build them again of even stronger materials.”²⁴ Alexander explains, “The oriental bricks are unburnt, so that most of their brick structures are as little durable as mud walls. The sycamore is durable, but too light and spongy to be used in solid building.” Hewn refers to that which is “cut with blows of a heavy cutting instrument ... to give form or shape to with or as if with heavy cutting blows” (Webster). These, perhaps, were quarried stones (see writings of Esarhaddon, in notes to ISAIAH 10:34). The exegetes are not in agreement as to which tree is intended here by שִׁקְמָה, translated as sycamores. It seemed to have been a common tree of little value, in contrast to the rare, yet lofty, cedar אַרְזֵי. Rawlinson points out such a contrast in 2 Chronicles 1:15: “And the king made silver and gold at Jerusalem as plenteous as stones, and cedar trees made he as the sycamore trees that are in the vale for abundance.” We find a similar scripture about the futility of re-building, unless one builds upon the Rock of Jesus Christ, in Malachi 1:4a, “Whereas Edom saith, We are impoverished, but we will return and build the desolate places; thus saith the LORD of hosts, They shall build, but I will throw down.” The pride and arrogance of the people is made clearly manifest.

11 Therefore the LORD shall set up the adversaries of Rezin against him, and join[✓] his enemies together;

✓ mingle

²⁴ Just coincidentally, I have been working on this chapter of Isaiah for the last couple of months, and it was yesterday, 11 September 2001, that the horrible events surrounding the attack on the World Trade Center twin towers, the Pentagon, and so on took place. Today is the 12th of September, and as I was getting ready to come to work, a member of Congress stood up to make a declaration, which I heard on television. He quoted this verse of Isaiah with no further explanation. I do not know if he quoted in ignorance, for left alone, it is a self-accusation of the pride and arrogance of a nation that did not fear God.

12 The Syrians before and the Philistines behind; and they shall devour Israel with open mouth. For all this his anger is not turned away, but his hand [is] stretched out still.

✓ whole

Therefore the LORD shall set up the adversaries of Rezin against him, and join his enemies together. Rezin was the King of Syria (introduced in ISAIAH 7:1). The Lord would bring enemies against Ephraim because she had arrogantly boasted. The Northern Kingdom prided in that her war-torn structures would be rebuilt with finer manmade edifices. Among these enemies would be both Syria (i.e., Aram, who at present was her ally) and the Philistines (even though the scriptures are otherwise silent on this matter). These two verses in Isaiah are difficult indeed. I will share three of the leading options suggested by the exegetes, although none of them give a truly satisfactory explanation: (1) that the adversary of Rezin was Assyria (Asshur is not explicitly among the nations mentioned in ISAIAH 9:12, although some feel it is implied); (2) that one ought to read שָׂרִי (princes) for צָרִי (enemies), based on Hebrew manuscripts found by Houbigant;²⁵ and (3) that “devour Israel” implies all of Israel, not Ephraim alone but Judah also. This third view is espoused by Delitzsch “... for the northern kingdom never suffered anything from the Philistines; whereas an invasion of Judah by the Philistines was really one of the judgments belonging to the time of Ahaz (2 Chronicles 28:16–19). Consequently by Israel here we are to understand all Israel, the two halves of which would become a rich prize to the enemy. Ephraim would be swallowed up by Aram,—namely, by those who had been subjected by Asshur, and were now tributary to it,—and Judah would be swallowed up by the Philistines.” ¶ The Syrians before and the Philistines behind. The expression (אַרְם מִקֶּדֶם) Aram before is sometimes translated as “Aram from the East”; while for מִפְּלִשְׁתִּים מֵאַחֲרֵי and Phelishtim behind is translated as “and the Philistines from the West.” Rawlinson explains, “The Semitic races regarded the world as looking to the rising sun, and used for the east the preposition signifying ‘in front,’ for the west that signifying ‘behind.’” The Vulgate (V) thus has: “Syriam ab Oriente, et Philistiim ab Occidente,” and the LXX (G), “The Syrians from the east, and, the Philistines from the west.” ¶ And they shall devour Israel with open mouth. With these words Isaiah paints a picture of the horror and completeness of the attack. ¶ For all this his anger is not turned away, but his hand is stretched out still. In connection with the Lord, the words hand (יָד) and his arm (זְרוֹעַ) are reflexive of the power of God: “I will redeem you with a stretched out arm, and with great judgments” (Exodus 6:6b); “Or hath God assayed to go and take him a nation from the midst of another nation, ... by a mighty hand, and by a stretched out arm (וּבְיָד חֲזָקָה וּבְזְרוֹעַ נְטוּיָה), ... according to all that the LORD your God did for you in Egypt before your eyes? Unto thee it was shewed, that thou mightest know that the LORD he is God; there is none else beside him” (Deuteronomy 4:34–35). The idea of a hand that is stretched out is frequent in Isaiah, and the expression “stretched out still” appears four times in ISAIAH 9–10. This expression means that the Lord is not asleep or gone away on a trip, but that His hand or power is very much alive and active. In ISAIAH 9 and 10, it is equivalent to the repeated expression in Rain in Due Season, Leviticus 26, “and will punish you yet seven times for your sins.” The number seven in Hebrew has a special significance, and among its meanings is the implication of perfection. Seven or שֶׁבַע often stands for the word perfect. So the Lord would punish Israel with a perfect punishment. In the latter days the Lord would explain that likewise, Endless Punishment meant God’s Punishment: “For, behold, the mystery of godliness, how great is it! For, behold, I am endless, and the punishment which is given from my hand is endless punishment, for Endless is my name” (D&C 13:10a).

²⁵ “For צָרִי, enemies, Houbigant by conjecture reads שָׂרִי, princes; which is confirmed by twenty-one MSS (two ancient), and nine more have צ upon a rasure, and therefore had probably at first שָׂרִי.” —Lowth. This second alternative simply means that Syria, who had been an ally to Ephraim, would turn against Ephraim. And not Syria alone, but also the Philistines.

13 For the people turneth not unto him that smiteth them, neither do they seek the LORD of hosts.

וְהָעָם לֹא־שָׁב. Regarding ו, often translated as and (e.g., Targum, T and Vulgate, V), rather than the Hebrew כִּי, that is, for. Calvin explains, “The copulative ו is rendered by some interpreters for, as if the Prophet were assigning a reason why the Lord does not cease to employ his scourges in the continual infliction of chastisements; that is, because the people are so hardened and obstinate that they will not repent.” The fact is here mentioned, that the people turneth not (לֹא־שָׁב), that is, refuse to repent. One of the first signs of repentance might be that of seeking after the Lord.

14 Therefore ~~will~~ the LORD ~~will~~ cut off from Israel head and tail, branch and rush in one day.

15 The ancient ~~and honourable~~, he [is] the head; and the prophet that teacheth lies, he [is] the tail.

Therefore will the LORD cut off from Israel head and tail. Isaiah interprets verse 14 for us by explaining that: “The ancient, he is the head; and the prophet that teacheth lies, he is the tail.” The prophets referred to here are either the false prophets—those who had not been ordained and commissioned by the Lord—or the fallen prophets. In the whole of the Bible narrative there were few men of God who fell away. Most likely, Isaiah was speaking of the false prophet.²⁶ This verse, then, can be better understood if we fill in the missing ellipsis, “the false prophet that teacheth lies.” As LDS we often equate the word prophet with the leader of the Lord’s Church upon the earth, the Prophet, Seer, and Revelator. While some prophets in former times also led the Church (Moses, Joshua, and Nephi being notable examples), many prophets had no administrative obligations. Furthermore, there often were several prophets serving the Lord upon the earth at one time. In olden times there was also what was called the “school of the prophets,”²⁷ not totally unlike the school of the prophets instituted by the Lord during Brother Joseph’s time. In D&C 88:127 we read that the school of the prophets was established so Church leaders and officers could be instructed in the ways of the Lord. ¶ The ancient. These seem to be the elders who preferred error over light. Such as when the elders came to Samuel and asked to have a king like unto other nations (1 Samuel 8:4–5). In another instance, the elders acted in all prudence, such as when they advised Solomon’s son, Rehoboam, to act in kindness toward the people (1 Kings 12:6–7). So, this class of men included those who advised the kings or rulers. In the time of Isaiah and Jeremiah, most of these elders were past feeling in terms of spiritual matters. ¶ Head and tail / Branch and rush. Isaiah seems to avail himself of both expressions—head and tail—to ridicule the leaders of the people, and most especially the pretended prophets, for whom he reserved the ‘honor’ of being the tail. Alexander explains, “The false prophets are called the tail ... because the false prophets were morally the basest of the people, and because they were the servile adherents and supporters of the wicked rulers.” In contrast to the high branches, rushes grow in swamps or marshes. This description is probably reserved for the common people, who normally are more humble and tend to follow the Lord, to indicate that even they had despised and turned away from the Holy One. The rush stands in contrast to the branch, or the higher class. All had done wickedly before the Lord. ¶ In one day. The word day יום can have different significations, such as a 24 hour period of time or a season. In one day means quickly, at one time, and refers to the elders and false priests as well as society and the common people, all of which would be affected at the same time. All would be punished. Note the textual deletion in the Book of Mormon of the expression: “and honourable.”

²⁶ In Ezekiel 13:3 we read: “Thus saith the Lord GOD; Woe unto the foolish prophets, that follow their own spirit, and have seen nothing!” In Jeremiah the Lord also speaks of false prophets that He did not send: “Then the Lord said unto me, The prophets prophesy lies in my name: I sent them not, neither have I commanded them, neither spake unto them: they prophesy unto you a false vision and divination, and a thing of nought, and the deceit of their heart” (Jeremiah 14:14). Also see Jeremiah 23:14.

²⁷ ISBE has, “Since the days of Samuel we hear of schools of prophets, or ‘sons of prophets.’ These associations probably originated in this way, that an experienced prophet attracted to himself bands of youths, who sought to receive a measure of his spirit. These disciples of the prophets, together with their families, lived in colonies around the master.”

16 For the leaders of this people ~~cause~~ [them] to err; and [they that are] led of ~~them~~ [are] destroyed.

✓ or, they that call them blessed ✓ ✓ or, called blessed of ✓ ✓ ✓ swallowed

The people deserve to be led by those who should have pointed the way by their good example, but instead, have led their followers astray by their own iniquity. So it is that Alma laments the bad example set by his son Corianton: “Behold, O my son, how great iniquity ye brought upon the Zoramites; for when they saw your conduct they would not believe in my words. And now the Spirit of the Lord doth say unto me: Command thy children to do good, lest they lead away the hearts of many people to destruction; therefore I command you, my son, in the fear of God, that ye refrain from your iniquities; That ye turn to the Lord with all your mind, might, and strength; that ye lead away the hearts of no more to do wickedly; but rather return unto them, and acknowledge your faults and that wrong which ye have done.” (Alma 39:11–13).

17 Therefore the Lord shall have no joy in their young men, neither shall have mercy on their fatherless and widows; for every one of them [is] ~~an~~ a hypocrite and an evildoer, and every mouth speaketh folly[✓]. For all this his anger is not turned away, but his hand [is] stretched out still.

✓ or, villany

In a General Conference one of the Brethren was lamenting that he had been driving behind some young women who behaved in the most indelicate way, and where lacking in the virtues of femininity and decency.²⁸ As these young women had made themselves gross, so it would be that young men, the fatherless, and the widows, often mentioned as groups for whose wellbeing the Lord is especially concerned, would become evil in the sight of God, for they would speak and do vulgarly. In Deuteronomy 28:54, 56, Rain in Due Season, the Lord speaks of both the tender and delicate men and women who would act in the grossest manner. Note the marginal || note on the word folly. Rawlinson explains: “The word translated here (and generally) ‘folly’²⁹ is rendered ‘villany’ in ISAIAH 32:6 and Jeremiah 29:23. Its proper meaning seems to be ‘lewdness’ or ‘profligacy.’”

18 For wickedness burneth as the fire; it shall devour the briers and thorns, and shall kindle in the thickets of the forests, and they shall mount up [like] the lifting up of smoke.

For wickedness burneth as the fire; it shall devour the briers and thorns, and shall kindle in the thickets of the forests. Fire would consume the wicked as fire devours dry briers, thorns and even forests. See for instance, the parable of the wheat and the tares (Matthew 13:30). This, in contrast to the purifying effect of fire on the righteous: “Who among us shall dwell with the devouring fire? who among us shall dwell with everlasting burnings?” (ISAIAH 33:14b). ¶ And they shall mount up like the lifting up of smoke. This expression shows the awfulness of the consuming fire rising to the skies together with terrible smoke. This in contrast to the untold joy of those who turn to the Lord: “But they that wait upon the LORD shall renew their strength; they shall mount up with wings as eagles; they shall run, and not be weary; and they shall walk, and not faint” (ISAIAH 40:31).

²⁸ Elder Richard G. Scott, The Sanctity of Womanhood, General Conference, April 2000.

²⁹ The Hebrew, נְבִילָה, Green prefers to translate as “foolishness.”

From the root נָבַל, senseless, foolish, disgraceful, ungodly, wicked, and impious—opposite of noble and distinguished (BDB, AHCL).

19 Through the wrath of the LORD of hosts is the land darkened, and the people shall be as the fuel[✓] of the fire; no man shall spare his brother.

✓ or, meat

Through the wrath of the LORD of hosts is the land darkened, and the people shall be as the fuel of the fire. It can be said that there are clouds of spiritual darkness, “The people that walked in darkness &c.” (ISAIAH 9:2a). But also, fire can reach such proportions that the land can be darkened by clouds of thick smoke. Smoke from burning all things in its path, including men. Kay quotes a description of an event that seems a type of things to come: “After the great forest fires of 1871 in Wisconsin and Michigan, ‘so deep was the darkness caused by immense volume of smoke that the sun was totally obscured for a distance of 200 miles. This midnight darkness continued for a week’ (‘The Guardian,’ 1 Nov. 1871).” ¶ It is not possible to read that “people shall be as the fuel of the fire” without thinking of the untold atrocities of the Holocaust (or Shoah, שואה), where millions of Jews were systematically slaughtered and burned. ¶ No man shall spare his brother. While there are many reasons why wicked men will die in the last days, perhaps none of them is more horrible than the carnage produced when man lifts his hand against man.

20 And he shall snatch[✓] on the right hand and be hungry; and he shall eat on the left hand and they shall not be satisfied; they shall eat every man the flesh of his own arm:

✓ or, cut

Here is a strong allusion to the punishments promised in Rain in Due Season if Israel would not repent and lean upon the Lord, the Holy One of Israel. “And thou shalt eat the fruit of thine own body, the flesh of thy sons and of thy daughters, which the LORD thy God hath given thee, in the siege, and in the straitness, wherewith thine enemies shall distress thee: So that the man that is tender among you, and very delicate, his eye shall be evil toward his brother, and toward the wife of his bosom, and toward the remnant of his children which he shall leave: So that he will not give to any of them of the flesh of his children whom he shall eat: because he hath nothing left him in the siege, and in the straitness, wherewith thine enemies shall distress thee in all thy gates. The tender and delicate woman among you, which would not adventure to set the sole of her foot upon the ground for delicateness and tenderness, her eye shall be evil toward the husband of her bosom, and toward her son, and toward her daughter, And toward her young one that cometh out from between her feet, and toward her children which she shall bear: for she shall eat them for want of all things secretly in the siege and straitness, wherewith thine enemy shall distress thee in thy gates” (Deuteronomy 28:53–57). Likewise, we find, “And I will cause them to eat the flesh of their sons and the flesh of their daughters, and they shall eat every one the flesh of his friend in the siege and straitness, wherewith their enemies, and they that seek their lives, shall straiten them” (Jeremiah 19:9). The Talmud tradition (Seder Mo’ed, Shabbath 33a) does well in suggesting: “Read not, the flesh of his own arm [זרעו], but, the flesh of his own seed [זרעו]” (Talmud, Soncino). Lowth (in support of Secker) prefers to translate flesh of his own arm as the flesh of his neighbour. I understand the flesh of his own arm as that of members of his family, clan or tribe. “The Chaldee manifestly reads רעו, not זרעו; for he renders it by קריביו, his neighbour. And Jeremiah has the very same expression: ואיש בשר רעהו אכלו, ‘And every one shall eat the flesh of his neighbour’ (Jeremiah 19:9).³⁰ Lowth explains that such a context fits perfectly well with the next verse, where Manasseh and Ephraim would fight against each other, and then together against Judah. The expression קריביו can also be translated as relative, besides neighbor. The Targum (ܬ) substitutes substance (property, goods or possessions) for flesh, נכסי קריביו יבזין, both here in Isaiah and in Jeremiah 19:9, “they shall plunder everyone the goods of his neighbour.” The context in both scriptures is one of extreme famine. The Syriac (ܣ) renders it, “... they shall eat every man the flesh of his own kinsmen.” The LXX (ܬ) reads, “... and a man shall by no means be satisfied with eating the flesh of his own arm.” Alexander suggests, “Judah and Joseph were the most important branches of the stock of Israel, as well before as after the disruption; and secondly, because the tribes of Ephraim and Manasseh were more nearly related to each other than to any of the rest, and therefore their hostility afforded the most striking illustration of the mutual rancour which the Prophet has described as prevalent.” Delitzsch says, “This interminable self-immolation, and the regicide associated with the jealousy of the different tribes, shook the northern kingdom again and again to its utter destruction. And the readiness with which the unbrotherly feelings of the northern tribes towards one another could turn into combined hostility towards Judah, was evident enough from the Syro-Ephraimitish war, the consequences of which had not passed away at the time when these prophecies were uttered. This hostility on the part of the brother kingdoms would still further increase. And the end of the judgments of wrath had not come yet.” Nägelsbach comments, “It may be said that the Israelites did themselves more harm than all foreign foes could ever have done. Thus dissension was the destruction of Israel.” All of this reminds us of the atrocious wars among the unbrotherly nations of the Nephites and Lamanites upon the American continent.

21 Manasseh, Ephraim; and Ephraim, Manasseh; [and] they together [shall be] against Judah. For all this his anger is not turned away, but his hand [is] stretched out still.

There shall be hatred among brothers, between Manasseh and Ephraim (both in Northern Israel), as well as the two against their brother Judah³¹ (continued contention between the Northern Kingdom and Judah). Such contention in itself could give rise to sieges and great hunger among the people (Isaiah 9:20). “Manasseh and Ephraim were the two sons of Joseph (Genesis 46:20), and their names are used as expressive of tender union friendship: compare Genesis 48:20. The tribes of Ephraim and Manasseh were near each other, and they always were allied together. The expression here denotes that they who had hitherto been joined in tender alliance, would be rent into contending factions, thirsting for each other’s blood” (Barnes). Gladly, in the latter days, with the coming forth of the Book of Mormon, these disputes and hatred between the tribes would end among those who would join The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints: “And I will make them one nation in the land upon the mountains of Israel; and one king shall be king to them all: and they shall be no more two nations, neither shall they be divided into two kingdoms any more at all” (Ezekiel 37:22).

The first four verses of chapter 10 are a direct continuation of these verses, beginning with verse Isaiah 9:8.

FIRST POSTED: 27 September 2011

³⁰ “And I will cause them to eat the flesh of their sons and the flesh of their daughters, and they shall eat every one the flesh of his friend in the siege and straitness, wherewith their enemies, and they that seek their lives, shall straiten them” (Jeremiah 19:9).

³¹ Although literally Judah was uncle to Ephraim and Manasseh, through the blessing of Jacob, they were made essentially brothers.

Isaiah 10

The Lord is unhappy with Israel's behavior, more specifically, with the way she has treated the poor. The role that Assyria would play in humbling Judah is detailed. Because Assyria would boast of having done this of her own accord and power she would be humbled herself. This is a type of the last days, when Jerusalem shall be attacked by the gentile nations of the earth but the Lord shall be her salvation.

vv. 1–4 constitute the fourth warning in a row to Israel, each of which ends with “but his hand is stretched out still.” These verses belong with those of ISAIAH 9, when “The Lord sent a word into Jacob, and it hath lighted upon Israel” (ISAIAH 9:8). This woe, or complaint against Israel, comes because of the way she treated her poor.

1 ¶ WOE unto them that decree unrighteous decrees, and that write grievousness[✓] [which] they have prescribed;

✓ or, to the writers that write grievousness

WOE unto them that decree unrighteous decrees. The Lord is not pleased with those who are unjust or unrighteous, especially with those who pass unrighteous rulings. Woe. In ISAIAH 18 we note that הוֹי—Hoy!—can be a salutation, while here it is more of a sigh, Ah! a calling attention to the wicked. The Hebrew word for judge is שֹׁפֵט. “In the early patriarchal times the heads of families and the elders of the tribes were the judges” (ISBE). All people who rule—whether they be the kings of Judah or Ephraim, or those who passed judgment at the gates of Jerusalem, parents and supervisors—may well be said to also be judges. Every individual may profitably ask this question: Am I involved in righteous judgment? Giving righteous judgment is one of the most praiseworthy traits. Through Jeremiah, the Lord Himself gives us the example we are to emulate: “Thus saith the LORD, Let not the wise man glory in his wisdom, neither let the mighty man glory in his might, let not the rich man glory in his riches: But let him that glorieth glory in this, that he understandeth and knoweth me, that I am the LORD which exercise lovingkindness, judgment, and righteousness, in the earth: for in these things I delight, saith the LORD” (Jeremiah 9:23–24). ¶ And that write grievousness which they have prescribed. Barnes explains, “It does not refer to the mere scribes, or recorders of the judicial opinions, but to the judges themselves, who pronounced the sentence, and caused it to be recorded.” Calvin explains that the Lord: “attacks generally, and without distinction, princes and magistrates, who oppressed the people by unjust and tyrannical decrees, in such a manner that they approached to absolute robbery; and therefore he includes every class of magistrates and governors.”

2 To turn aside away the needy from judgment, and to take away the right from the poor of my people, that widows may be their prey, and [that] they may rob the fatherless!

The scriptures frequently warn us against taking advantage of the poor, the widow, the orphan, and the foreign immigrant¹—all those who have the least recourse to defend themselves. “To turn away the needy from judgment” takes place when those in authority either refuse to hear the plight of the needy or favor the wealthy without regard to the merits of the case. The Lord’s standard of righteous (צְדִיקָה) judgment (מִשְׁפָּט) is expressed in Leviticus 19:15, and protects both the poor and the rich, “Ye shall do no unrighteousness in judgment: thou shalt not respect the person of the poor, nor honor the person of the mighty: but in righteousness shalt thou judge thy neighbor” (Leviticus 19:15). ¶ Among the various other definitions of נָטָה (root of לְהַטּוֹת), apart from turn aside, is to turn away (Gesenius), as it is translated in the Book of Mormon. ¶ Prey ... rob, יָבִיד, ... שָׁלַל. Kay astutely observes that some of the same Hebrew roots in the name Maher-shalal-hash-baz, מְהֵרָה שָׁלַל הָשַׁבַּז (ISAIAH 8:1, To speed to the spoil, he hasteneth the prey), are found here and in ISAIAH 10:6, and adds: “Yes;—that was why Asshur was let loose upon them to plunder and to spoil. Asshur was but the rod in the hand of Retributive Justice; meting out the law.”

¹ In Deseret News we read: “Amid the controversy swirling around President Trump’s executive order banning refugees from seven Muslim countries, the LDS Church issued a statement late Saturday night urging solutions that relieve refugee suffering. ‘The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints is concerned about the temporal and spiritual welfare of all of God’s children across the earth,’ the statement said, ‘with special concern for those who are fleeing physical violence, war and religious persecution. The church urges all people and governments to cooperate fully in seeking the best solutions to meet human needs and relieve suffering.’” ... This is the second time the LDS Church has responded to a call by Trump to block immigration. Church leaders issued a strong statement in December 2015 soon after Trump, on the campaign trail, called for a ban on Muslim immigration to the United States. Like Saturday’s statement, the December 2015 statement did not name Trump or refer specifically to the controversy, but it said that while the faith is neutral in regard to party politics and election campaigns, ‘it is not neutral in relation to religious freedom.’ It drew on two statements by church founder Joseph Smith to reaffirm its longstanding position of support for religious pluralism. In 1841, Smith was the mayor of the largely Mormon city of Nauvoo, Illinois, when it passed a religious freedom ordinance that protected the rights of all faiths. In 1843, Smith said he was willing to die to defend the religious freedom rights of people of any denomination” 28 January 2017.

3 And what will ye do in the day of visitation, and in the desolation [which] shall come from far? to whom will ye flee for help? and where will ye leave your glory?

And what will ye do in the day of visitation, and in the desolation which shall come from far? To whom will ye flee for help? The inherent question seems to be, “Since you have not turned to the Lord when you leaned upon man, to whom do you plan to turn to in your day of trouble?” Regarding the day of visitation, Alexander notes: “Cocceius understands by the phrase, here and elsewhere, even in Psalm 8:5, the time when God should be incarnate, and literally visit his people as a man. According to the usage of the Old Testament, the day of visitation is a time when God manifests his presence specially, whether in mercy or in wrath, but most frequently the latter.” For Israel, that day of affliction and visitation would come from afar, from Assyria² itself. ¶ And where will ye leave your glory? In Exodus the word glory כְּבוֹד was frequently used in reference to theophany, or the visitation of the Lord’s presence, as in אֶת־כְּבוֹד יְהוָה, the glory of the Lord (Exodus 16:7). Yet here we see the contrast between the Lord’s glory and the honor of man. The latter is fleeting. Israel was about to be humiliated and dishonored.

² “Assyria, a Greek name formed from Asshur (אַשּׁוּר; Ἀσσοῦρ, Assoúr): The primitive capital of the country ... which was built on the western bank of the Tigris” (ISBE). Furthermore, Asshur was “originally a colony from Babylonia, and was ruled by viceroys from that kingdom. It was a mountainous region laying to the north of Babylonia, extending along the Tigris as far as to the high mountain range of Armenia, the Gordiaean or Carduchian mountains. It was founded in B.C. 1700 under Bel-kap-kapu, and became an independent and a conquering power, and shook off the yoke of its Babylonian masters” (Easton’s Bible Dictionary).

4 Without me they shall bow down under the prisoners, and they shall fall under the slain. For all this his anger is not turned away, but his hand [is] stretched out still.

Without me they shall bow down under the prisoners, and they shall fall under the slain. Certainly, without the Lord, Israel would be humbled. The Syriac (ܣ) has, “Without me you shall bow down under the prisoners, and you shall fall under the slain.” The idea, in either case, is that some would be taken prisoners; others would taste death. ¶ For all this his anger is not turned away, but his hand is stretched out still. This is the fourth and final reminder, in these verses, that the Lord has given a stern warning that better be heeded—each one an allusion to Rain in Due Season.

vv. 5–19. With ISAIAH 10:5 a new prophecy begins. The Lord turns Isaiah’s attention from that of Israel to that of Asshur. In these verses the Lord makes it clear that if Assyria punishes Israel, it is because the Lord has permitted her to do so. Therefore, Assyria should not boast nor overstep her boundaries. She could have accomplished nothing on her own. About Assyria, the Lord would say, “Because thy rage against me, and thy tumult, is come up into mine ears, therefore will I put my hook in thy nose, and my bridle in thy lips, and I will turn thee back by the way by which thou camest” (ISAIAH 37:29).

5 ¶ O Assyrian, the rod of mine anger, and the staff in their hand is ~~mine~~ their indignation.

✓ or, Woe to the Assyrian ✓ ✓ Asshur
✓ ✓ ✓ though

Once again Isaiah begins with הוֹי, here intended to be a sigh, Ah! or a woe. Delitzsch says, “The הוֹי (woe) pronounced upon Israel becomes a הוֹי upon Asshur.” The Lord calls Assyria “the rod of mine anger,” and in the Book of Mormon “the staff in their hand is their indignation,” speaking of the staff in Assyrian hands. The LXX (6) preserves a reading that is closer to that of the Book of Mormon: “Woe to the Assyrians; the rod of my wrath, and anger are in their hands.” The Inspired Version preserves the Masoretic (מ) rendering. Monte S. Nyman observes: “In Mormon 4:5 we read, ‘But, behold, the judgments of God will overtake the wicked; and it is by the wicked that the wicked are punished.’”

6 I will send him against an hypocritical nation, and against the people of my wrath will I give him a charge to take the spoil, and to take the prey, and to tread them down[✓] like the mire of the streets.

✓ lay them a treading

I will send him against an hypocritical nation. Who is meant by “him”? It seems to be Assyria, as represented by Sennacherib, the King of Asshur: “... the Lord bringeth up upon them the waters of the river, strong and many, even the king of Assyria, and all his glory” (ISAIAH 8:7). Israel of that day is the hypocritical nation who had rejected the Lord and had rather be governed by earthly kings rather than their King and their God (1 Samuel 10:19). ¶ And against the people of my wrath will I give him a charge to take the spoil, and to take the prey, and to tread them down like the mire of the streets. Or, as most translators render it, with capitalized letters to represent the Lord who is doing the sending, “And against the people of My wrath &c.” Once again we see the words spoil (שָׁלַל) and prey (בָּזָז) as a reminder of מִהַר שָׁלַל חֶשֶׁל בָּזָז. Such repetition³ gives emphasis to each, and could be translated as to utterly spoil and plunder or, as Green has it, “to plunder plunder and spoil spoil.” Seeing the Hebrew (מִהַר) gives us an idea of the forcefulness of the original. Assyria and King Sennacherib were sent to spoil (plunder) Israel; and to prey upon her (perhaps includes the idea of taking Israel captive); and to tread them down like the mire of the streets (to trample the people down like dirt or mud in the streets). In those days there were probably few streets paved with stones, and most dirt roadways were easily turned to mud with a little rain.

7 Howbeit he meaneth not so, neither doth his heart think so; but [it is] in his heart it is to destroy and cut off nations not a few.

Howbeit he meaneth not so, neither doth his heart think so. This transitional verse seems to be saying that Sennacherib is not content with doing what he was permitted to accomplish, but rather, he wanted to do much more. “But he does not so intend, nor does he so plan in his heart” (Berkeley). Frances Siewert uses a translation approach where she attempts to give the meaning of a word in its various colors: “However, this is not his intention [nor is the Assyrian aware that he is doing this at My bidding], neither does his mind so think and plan” (AMP). ¶ But in his heart it is to destroy and cut off nations not a few. It was the intention of Sennacherib, the king of Asshur, to not only castigate Israel, but other nations such as Egypt, Babylonia, Media and others. Although these things were in his wicked heart, the Lord “is a discernor of the thoughts and intents of the heart” (Hebrews 4:12b).

³ In Hebrew, repetition of the same word is used to give it emphasis, as we saw in ISAIAH 6:3, with the word holy or קָדֹשׁ.

8 For he saith: [Are] not my princes altogether kings?

Sennacherib, the king of Assyria is quoted here through ISAIAH 10:11, and then again in ISAIAH 10:13–14. The Targum (ܬ) reads: “For he saith, Are not all my rulers altogether as kings considered before me?” The LXX (Θ) has, “And if they should say to him, Thou alone art ruler.” King Asshur boasts that his provincial rulers are as kings, and that he is thus a king of kings.⁴ Gladly, we have a number of just such boastful inscriptions preserved⁵ from various monarchs of the time.

9 [Is] not Calno as Carchemish? [is] not Hamath as Arpad? [is] not Samaria as Damascus?

Henderson explains: “The boast of the Assyrian monarch is, that none of these cities, however strongly fortified, had been able to resist his arms; they had all equally fallen before him.” Rawlinson, speaking of the punishment to come upon Asshur, says, “The menace is not levelled against any one particular king, as Sargon, or Sennacherib; but against the monarchy itself, which from first to last was actuated by the same spirit, and breathed the same tone, of pride, selfishness, and cruelty.” ¶ According to Alexander, Carchemish “was a fortified town on an island on the Euphrates ..., Calno was the Ctesiphon of the Greeks, on the east bank of the Tigris opposite Selucia ..., Hamath was a city of Syria, on the [river] Orontes ..., Arpad, another town of Syria, near Hamath.” Commentators offer varying opinions on which peoples were meant and the geographical locations of these places but we get the idea that the Assyrians felt that no city or nation could stand up to them but would rather fall without resistance.

⁴ Similar titles of supremacy can be found in various societies, such as Shahinshah, ‘the Shah of Shahs’ in Persia (Henderson).

⁵ “I scattered, I stormed and conquered their town ... I carried away as booty ..., his horses, broken to the yoke. I slew with the sword During this battle I personally captured ... I conquered the great cities ... I overthrew the ... (so that they became) like ruin-hills (left by) the flood. I received tribute from the kings of ... I marched straightaway, unopposed ... through the wide seashore. I fashioned a stela with an image of myself as overlord in order to make my name/fame lasting forever ... I ascended the mountains of the Amanus, I cut there cedar and pine timber ... I killed 2,900 of [their] battle-experienced soldiers; 14,600 I brought away as prisoners of war ... I crossed the Tigris and approached the towns of ... They became afraid of the terror emanating from my position of overlord, as well as the splendor of my fierce weapons, and killed [their own—GB] master with their own weapons. I entered the towns ... and brought my gods/images into his palaces ... I opened (his) treasury, inspected what he had hidden; I carried away as booty his possessions, bringing (them) to my town Asshur ... I departed from the banks of the Euphrates and approached Aleppo (Hal-man). They (i.e., the inhabitants of Aleppo) were afraid to fight and seized my feet (in submission). I received silver and gold as their tribute and offered sacrifices before the Adad of Aleppo ... [And so many were killed in a battle that—GB] with their corpses I spanned the Orontes before there was a bridge.” (Shalmaneser III, 858-824 BC, pp. 189-190, in Pritchard). The Ancient Near East, Volume 1: Anthology of Texts and Pictures. Princeton University Press, 6th Paperback printing, 1973, pp. see also pp. 188-210.

10 As my hand hath founded the kingdoms of the idols, and whose graven images did excel them of Jerusalem and of Samaria;

As my hand hath founded the kingdoms of the idols. For the expression נִסְּאָה in the Biblia Hebraica, the Book of Mormon and the Inspired Version have, ‘hath founded’ rather than the usual translation, ‘hath found.’ Gesenius gives several possible definitions for the root, נָסָא. Interestingly, Gesenius explains that especially when נִסְּאָה is used with יָד, hand, the meaning often is that of acquiring something, which fits well with the Book of Mormon definition, hath founded (established): Gesenius has, “‘My hand has acquired (something),’ i.q. I have obtained, got for myself, Leviticus 25:28; Job 31:25.” Of these, Job 31:25b is of special interest to us, “because mine hand had gotten.” Other words include gain, discover, secure (BDB), all of which represent the idea of founding. The King of Asshur was such a narcissist, that he probably considered the previous inhabitants of these places hardly civilized peoples, and thus he now considered himself, much like some of the conquerors of old, the founder of these civilizations. Sennacherib thinks that he has defeated other nations much greater, in his mind, than either Jerusalem (capital of Judah), or Samaria (capital of Ephraim); nations where the idols הָאֱלֹהִים, or as Cheyne would say, the no gods (see ISAIAH 2:8) were impotent beside those of Asshur. But the Lord is about to show Asshur the worthlessness of all idols. ¶ And whose graven images did excel them of Jerusalem and of Samaria. A graven image is often defined as one that is carved out of wood or hewn out of rock. Several Hebraists suggest that the idea that the idols from the already conquered lands excelled those of Jerusalem and Samaria is contained in one of the meanings of נָסָא, where the נ nun is dropped and the מ mem is incorporated into the word. Gesenius explains how נָסָא is sometimes used as a comparison of both number and power. So it is that the letter נ appears before the name of each of these cities in: מִירוּשָׁלַם וּמִשָּׁמָרֹן. A more literal translation would yield, “excel them of Jerusalem and excel them of Samaria.” Alexander says, “... the great majority of writers, not excepting the most learned of the Rabbins, David Kimhi, ... takes נָסָא as a particle of comparison.”

11 Shall I not, as I have done unto Samaria and her idols, so do to Jerusalem and to her idols?

Rabbi David Kimhi suggests that this verse was pronounced at a later time than ISAIAH 10:10 (in Gill). ISAIAH 10:10 seems to have Sennacherib looking ahead to the conquering of both Jerusalem and Samaria. In ISAIAH 10:11 the conquest of Samaria and removal of the 10 tribes of Israel seems to already have taken place. It is also possible that Isaiah is shown the future bragging of Sennacherib (see ISAIAH 36). Yet another possibility is that Sennacherib is building up his arguments slowly, first separating the children of Israel from the rest of the subjugated nations, and then adding Samaria to the list of the conquered. While it is true that Judah was greatly guilty of idolatry (Jeremiah 2:28, see also 11:10–13; 19:4, 13), these blasphemous words imply that the Holy One of Israel is just one more idol standing in the way of the King of Asshur.

12 Wherefore it shall come to pass, [that], when the Lord hath performed his whole work upon mount Zion and upon Jerusalem, I will punish the fruit of the stout heart of the king of Assyria, and the glory of his high looks.

- ✓ visit upon
- ✓ greatness of the heart

Wherefore it shall come to pass, that, when the Lord hath performed his whole work upon mount Zion and upon Jerusalem. The boasting of the Assyrian king is interrupted by a chastening word from the Lord. While Asshur would be permitted to greatly punish Judah and siege Jerusalem, Sennacherib would not accomplish his plans but would be punished herself. It would be Babylon who would subjugate Judah and Jerusalem. Rome and other powers would subsequently trample Jerusalem anew. Another meaning for performed for the Hebrew יָכַזַּע is finished (HALOT). A similar use for כַּיָּצֵר is made in Zechariah: “The hands of Zerubbabel have laid the foundation of this house; his hands shall also finish it; and thou shalt know that the LORD of hosts hath sent me unto you” (Zechariah 4:9). The word often means to cut off, or sever, or bring to an end, “a metaphor taken from a weaver who cuts off the finished web from the thrum” (Gesenius). This clause in Isaiah, then, seems to say that as soon as the Lord will have accomplished what he wanted in terms of punishing His people, the chastisement would then fall upon Asshur. ¶ I will punish the fruit of the stout heart of the king of Assyria, and the glory of his high looks. Likewise in Jeremiah 6:19a we have, “Hear, O earth: behold, I will bring evil upon this people, even the fruit of their thoughts.” The Lord had permitted Assyria this moment of glory, but now would punish her for her prideful arrogance.⁶ Pride and ingratitude seem to go together.⁷ Here pride has been manifested in both the heart and in the lofty looks of the monarch.

13 For he saith: By the strength of my hand, ~~I have done [it]~~, and by my wisdom I have done these things; for I am prudent; and I have removed the bounds borders of the people, and have robbed their treasures, and I have put down the inhabitants like a valiant [man]; ✓

✓ or, many people

For he saith: By the strength of my hand, and by my wisdom I have done these things. The Assyrian king sings his own praises, and gives merit to his own wisdom and strength. In the history of Israel many nations have been put in a position to bring the children of Jacob in line, but when they have done so cruelly and overstepped their bounds, they have been punished in turn. ¶ For I am prudent; and I have moved the borders of the people, and have robbed their treasures. Moffatt has it, “I shifted the boundaries of nations” The King of Asshur brags of being a prudent or wise man, who was able to enlarge the borders of Asshur and in the process steal and plunder the treasures of the conquered peoples. Some suggest that this may have reference to the Assyrian practice of moving conquered people from their own territories to other lands (Henry, based on White), in an effort to further prevent the uprising of conquered nations. Alexander explains it, rather, as that of “destroying the distinctions between nations by incorporation in a single empire.” An interesting citation, regarding the moving of borders by Vul-

Nirari I, King of Asshur, about 1320 B.C., which is mentioned by a number of exegetes who follow Dr. Weir includes the fact that the king was a “noble prince appointed by heaven [and] established by the gods ... [and thus was a] remover of boundaries and landmarks.”⁸ Alexander follows Lowth in emphasizing the plurality of peoples as found in the Biblia Hebraica, עַמִּים. ¶ And I have put down the inhabitants like a valiant man. The Biblia Hebraica has, rather, like a valiant, פֶּאֶבִּיר, permitting one to fill in the ellipsis with the word man. אַבִּיר means brave, mighty, valiant, powerful. Some (Delitzsch, Moffatt) would fill the ellipsis with the word bull, and while indeed the scriptures do have instances where bulls or equines are meant, Gesenius points out that the word bull, such as bulls of Bashan, is sometimes used as a euphemism for royalty. The allusion to a mixture between a mighty bull (hook in the nose) and a stallion (bridle in the lips) is used by the Lord as he humiliates Asshur: “Because thy rage against me, and thy tumult, is come up into mine ears, therefore will I put my hook in thy nose, and my bridle in thy lips, and I will turn thee back by the way by which thou camest.”

14 And my hand hath found as a nest the riches of the people: and as one gathereth eggs [that are] left, have I gathered all the earth; and there was none that moved the wing, or opened the mouth, or peeped.

And my hand hath found as a nest the riches of the people: and as one gathereth eggs that are left, have I gathered all the earth. The Assyrian king bragged that the plundering was as easy as gathering eggs that are left in a nest. The Targum (ܬ) reads, “And my hand hath found as a nest the riches of the people: and as one gathereth eggs that are left, I have gathered all the inhabitants of the earth.” ¶ And there was none that moved the wing, or opened the mouth, or peeped. The Targum (ܬ) continues, “And there was none that moved from thence and flew thither, that opened his mouth and spoke a word.” There were not even the birds or chickens to defend these nests, the analogy continues, because they had flown away by the fear of his approach. This is the end of the discourse of the Assyrian king. The next verse begins a stinging rebuke by the Lord.

⁶ For another example, in New Testament times, see Acts 12:20-23.

⁷ D&C 59:21.

⁸ Smith, George. Assyrian Discoveries: An Account of Explorations and Discoveries on the Site of Nineveh during 1873 and 1874, Scribner, Armstrong & Co.: New York, 1875, pp. 243-244.

15 Shall the axe boast itself against him that heweth therewith? [or] shall the saw magnify itself against him that shaketh it? as if the rod should shake [itself] against them that lift it up, ✓ [or] as if the staff should lift up [itself as if it were] no wood! ✓ ✓

- ✓ or, a rod should shake them that lift it up
- ✓ ✓ or, that which is not wood

Using four examples to make his point, the Lord shows that the Assyrian king is no more able to boast of his deeds as the axe, the saw, the rod, and the staff, all of which are tools handled and applied by another person. Without an external force acting upon these, they are useless. The Assyrian king, who so much boasts of his conquering activities, is likewise no more than a tool in the hands of God. The expression no wood לֹא עֵץ here signifies that these inanimate objects, most of which had a wooden handle through which a person would move them, were pretending to be beings that acted for themselves rather than simply wood. Lowth explains: “The Hebrews have a peculiar way of joining the negative particle לֹא to a noun, to signify in a strong manner a total negation of the thing expressed by the noun,” Lowth gives several examples: “How hast thou given help, לֹא כֹחַ, to the no-strength? And saved the arm, לֹא עֵז, of the no-power? How hast thou given counsel, לֹא חֲכָמָה, to the no-wisdom?” that is, the man totally deprived of strength, power, and wisdom: Job 26:2,3.” Other examples given by Lowth include Amos 6:13, in no-thing לֹא דָבָר; Hosea 11:9, and no-man לֹא אִישׁ. Some have well suggested that the allusion goes past the idea of man, אִישׁ, to that of אֱלֹהִים, God: “If Isaiah, as the context shows, by not-wood means men, it is on the supposition that the reader of himself will recognize the true contrast (not-wood but much greater) and the (even phonetic) allusion to לֹא-עֵץ” (Nägelsbach); “... and so in the present instance by him who is not wood, is meant God, who is of a nature altogether different” (Henderson). ¶ In all of this, let there be no confusion that the false doctrine of predestination is at play. Barnes correctly explains: “In all these passages, however, there is not the slightest intimation that the Assyrian was not free. There is no fate; no compulsion. He regarded himself as a free moral agent; he did what he pleased; he never supposed that he was urged on by any power that violated his own liberty. If he did what he pleased he was free.” In other words, the principle of moral agency was always in effect. It should also be understood we are not tempted by the Lord to act in negative ways, but that rather, the Lord knows us so well that He perceives the very intent and desires of our hearts (Alma 41). And of course, while Satan cannot read our mind, he has a fair idea about our desires. Gladly, the Prophet Joseph Smith taught: “The devil has no power over us only as we permit him. The moment we revolt at anything which comes from God, the devil takes power”⁹

16 Therefore shall the Lord, the LORD of hosts, send among his fat ones leanness; and under his glory he shall kindle a burning like the burning of a fire.

Therefore shall the Lord, the LORD of hosts, send among his fat ones leanness. The expression therefore, לָכֵן, is used to tie together what has been said, to the punishment that would fall on the Assyrians. Here the fat ones represent the Assyrians who have boasted of great strength. Sometime after the Assyrian triumph over Ephraim, her power began to dwindle, while Babylonia gained strength. Some have suggested that this is the same consumption (Rain in Due Season) mentioned in Leviticus 26:16 and Deuteronomy 28:22, but there the word used is שִׁחָפָת, while here it is רֵיוֹן. ¶ And under his glory he shall kindle a burning like the burning of a fire. Some translators take the burning and associate it with the wasting disease, and thus render the second half of this verse: “And beneath his glory kindle a fever burning like a fire” (NJB). While the term glory in this verse seems to refer to the king of Asshur or his people, a related term in ISAIAH 10:17, “the light of Israel” speaks of the glory of God, which does the burning. The transition is particularly poetical in the Spanish version: “Por tanto el Señor Jehova de los ejércitos enviará flaqueza sobre sus gordos; y debajo de su gloria encenderá encendimiento, como encendimiento de fuego. Y la luz de Israel será por fuego, y su Santo por llama que abrase y consuma en un día sus cardos y sus espinas” (SB1906). The expression יִקְדַּח יִקְדַּח בִּיקְדֹחַ אֵשׁ is translated as kindle a burning like the burning of a fire (KJV). Note the paronomasia, or play on words, in the Hebrew text (מִן). Delitzsch writes: “In accordance with Isaiah’s masterly art of painting in tones, the whole passage is so expressed, that we can hear the crackling, and spluttering, and hissing of the fire, as it seizes upon everything within its reach.” We read in the LDS introduction to this verse: “Destruction of Assyria is a type of destruction of the wicked at the second coming.”

⁹ Teachings of the Prophet Joseph Smith, p. 181.

17 And the light of Israel shall be for a fire, and his Holy One for a flame: and it shall burn and shall devour his thorns and his briers in one day;

And the light of Israel shall be for a fire, and his Holy One for a flame. This is a parallel statement with the same meaning. The Light of Israel and the Holy One represent Christ. Henderson writes: “אֵשׁ-יִשְׂרָאֵל, Jehovah is called the Light of Israel, because he was the author of their prosperity and happiness; so that the phrase contains a double metaphor.” Alexander adds: “There seems to be an antithesis between light and fire. He who was a light to Israel was a fire to Assyria.” This light will either purify¹⁰ or burn. ¶ And shall burn and shall devour his thorns and his briers in one day. The idea of in one day, בְּיוֹם אֶחָד, does not mean it took place literally within a 24 hour period, but rather, at one time, all of a sudden, quickly. The thorns and briers represent, here, the Assyrians and very likely the Babylonians who persecute the Lord’s people. In a broader sense, they represent all who do wickedly, and who shall burn at His coming.

18 And shall consume the glory of his forest, and of his fruitful field, both soul and body; ✓ and they shall be as when a standard-bearer fainteth.

✓ from the soul, and even to the flesh

And shall consume the glory of his forest, and of his fruitful field, both soul¹¹ and body. The allusion in ISAIAH 10:18–19 is to the Assyrian armies. The wicked will lose what they value—the forest,¹² the fruitful field, and man himself—destroyed by fire. Regarding the destruction of the forest, the thought is continued in the most striking manner in ISAIAH 10:19. The Targum (Ⲯ) reads, “And it shall consume the glory of the multitude of his army, and their souls with their bodies, and he shall be broken, and be a fugitive.” The fulfillment may well be both the literal one spelled out in the Hebrew text (ⲙ), as well as to the allusion of the armies mentioned in the Targum (Ⲯ). In Isaiah we often read how the mighty men are compared to those in the plant kingdom. It is unclear as whether the thorns and briers stand for the soldiers in the field; and the fruitful field and forest the mighty royalty. Or perhaps it is a general figure for all the inhabitants, humble and proud. Barnes writes, “Perhaps in all this, there may be allusion to the proud boast of Sennacherib (2 Kings 19:23), that he would ‘go up the sides of Lebanon, and cut down the cedars thereof, and the choice fir-trees thereof, and enter into the forest of Carmel.’” ⲙִנְפֶשׁ וְעַד-בָּשָׂר, soul and body. Regarding the Hebrew word for soul, נֶפֶשׁ, it is a hard one to translate into English as it has so many meanings. One of them has to do with breathing (HALOT) or giving life. This signification is in some ways similar to that of רוּחַ, often translated as breathe, spirit, and wind. So we might translate this expression here, perhaps, as spirit and body, both of which together compose the soul. At any rate, the expression is meant to convey the totality of the matter. ¶ And they shall be as when a standard-bearer fainteth. A standard, in this case, can be representative of a flag or ensign. Such symbols give courage, and act as a reminder, to those who fight for a cause. So it was with Moroni’s Title of Liberty. Now, if someone is holding up a flag or an ensign, a standard-bearer, and that person begins to faint, then people will not have the courage, for it is as if they are left without a leader, without a cause.¹³ In this verse of Isaiah, the Lord is talking about a standard bearer who is fainting. The representatives of the Assyrian power would buckle visibly. In contrast, our Standard is the Savior, יְהוָה נֹסִי, “And Moses built an altar, and called the name of it Jehovahnissi” (Exodus 17:15). Jehovahnissi means, “The LORD is our Ensign.” Indeed, Christ is our Standard of Truth. “The Standard of Truth has been erected; no unhallowed hand can stop the work from progressing; persecutions may rage, mobs may combine, armies may assemble, calumny may defame, but the truth of God will go forth boldly, nobly, and independent, till it has penetrated every continent, visited every clime, swept every country, and sounded in every ear, till the purposes of God shall be ¹⁰ “Now this is the commandment: Repent, all ye ends of the earth, and come unto me and be baptized in my name, that ye may be sanctified by the reception of the Holy Ghost, that ye may stand spotless before me at the last day” (3 Nephi 27:20, emphasis added).

¹¹ In this place C. Edward Nægelsbach says, “Have not the beast and the plant a soul too?”

¹² “Isaiah (10:19, 33, 34) likens the Assyrian host under Sennacherib (q.v.) to the trees of some huge forest, to be suddenly cut down by an unseen stroke” (Easton’s Bible Dictionary).

¹³ A few more thoughts here, about the recent event that shook the world about three weeks ago, September 11, 2001. Terrorists high jacked planes and flew them into the Twin Towers, and the Pentagon, and would have flown one into the Capitol Building or the White House, had it not been for some very brave men and women in that plane who brought the plane down rather than allow the terrorists to carry out their perfidious act. I have felt that had the terrorists brought down either of those two ensigns that represent liberty and constitutional government, they would had brought down the standard bearer [of freedom] in an even more compelling way, because of the symbolism involved.

accomplished, and the Great Jehovah shall say the work is done.”¹⁴

19 And the rest of the trees of his forest shall be few, [✓] that a child may write them.

✓ number

So few shall be the trees in the forest, that a child will be able to number them. Certainly, Isaiah, is a master in painting mental pictures. We know that little children are seldom able to count to a very high number. Some suggest that the trees represent the armies (Henry) or the nobles that will be left. Barnes writes, “And compared to the whole army, the remnant might bear a striking resemblance to the few decaying trees of a once magnificent forest of cedars.” I can picture in my mind a portion of Yosemite National Park after one of the big fires leaving the sides of the mountains bare except for an occasional scorched tree still standing here and there. In ISAIAH 10:33–34 we return to the subject of the decimation of the Assyrians through the figure of a forest.

vv. 20–23. We are permitted to glimpse into the latter-day glory, when the children of Jacob will no longer lean upon man, but only upon God.

20 ¶ And it shall come to pass in that day, [that] the remnant of Israel, and such as are escaped of the house of Jacob, shall no more again stay upon him that smote them, but shall stay upon the LORD, the Holy One of Israel, in truth.

And it shall come to pass in that day, that the remnant of Israel, and such as are escaped of the house of Jacob. The writings now turn away from the punishment to be inflicted upon Assyria, to the glorious gathering of the remnant of Israel. After the Assyrians and Babylonians would be finished scattering Israel, only a remnant would remain. Exegetes often distinguish between a historical remnant (those who are left after a devastation) and an eschatological remnant (portions of the historical remnant who at the last day come unto the Lord).¹⁵ The words, in that day also clue us to the multiple fulfillment of this prophecy, and allude to the eschatological remnant of Israel as well. Those who are escaped of the house of Jacob is a parallel meaning for the remnant of Israel. ¶ Shall no more again stay upon him that smote them, but shall stay upon the LORD, the Holy One of Israel, in truth. Wildberger notes (in ISAIAH 30:12): “It is interesting to see which verbs Isaiah uses when describing the dangerous self-deception: בטח [see discussion in ISAIAH 30:15] (trust) and נשען על (rely upon).

Concerning נשען (see ISAIAH 1–12, p. 437); here it might be used as a parallel term for האמין (‘trust’). But Isaiah uses it only when he wants to speak about false trust (see ISAIAH 31:1).” The time would come that men would truly turn to the Lord (eschatological remnant) and lean upon Him. This prophecy was not fulfilled in the time of Isaiah. During the times of Jeremiah the leaning on supposedly strong nations became an even greater problem and was among the uppermost complaints on the part of Jeremiah. The periods where the people leaned on the Lord in Old Testament times as well as New Testament ones were very temporary. Rather, this is a prophecy about the remnant of Israel in the last days. Then the time would come when Israel would finally understand the importance of leaning upon the Lord in truth. We need to lean upon the Lord in confidence.¹⁶ To lean upon the Lord in truth (באמת)

¹⁶ During the first week of March 2001, the weather forecasters began to predict the “most terrible winter storm that the eastern part of the US had felt for half a century.” The storm was predicted for exactly the two days that I would be traveling to and returning from Pennsylvania, as I was to fly there on the 6th of March, give my short talk on the 7th, and fly back after my talk on the 7th. The day before the storm was to hit, numerous airlines announced the cancellation of flights to the affected area. This was an important trip for me, as we had paid for the airplane ticket out of our own pocket, and would be reimbursed later. Furthermore, with two of our children at BYU, and a third who would soon be accepted, our economic situation was tight. As Linda and I heard the weather reports, talk about closing down airports (Harrisburg, Pennsylvania was specifically mentioned as a trouble spot), we were quite concerned. Certainly I was scared of getting stranded in some airport along the way. I was about to write the organizer an E-mail and strongly urge her to postpone the seminar. Instead, the Spirit constrained me and reminded me that I had not inquired of the Lord. All I wrote the organizer instead was something to the effect that I would see her in a few days. The Spirit reassured me that all would be well with my trip and that I need not worry. While I had a couple of hours of delay, it was my last leg on the first day, and it was due to a mechanical malfunction that had to be cleared up, not bad weather. In fact, the weather problems were hardly seen. While there was some strong turbulence in one of the flights towards PA, there was no added snow there, as the day was truly beautiful. I crossed the Susquehanna river on the way to the hotel. During this particular trip the Lord greatly blessed me. My wife and children prayed diligently for me during this trip. My talk went particularly well and I was able to give out pass along cards where people could call a toll free phone number and have either a Church video or the Book of Mormon sent or delivered to four individuals, including the driver of the airport shuttle from the Hotel, with whom I had a wonderful gospel conversation. In no way do I want to suggest that we ought to ignore the warnings of forecasters, but rather, that above all things we need to listen to the whisperings of the Spirit and lean upon the Lord.

¹⁴ History of the Church, 4:540.

¹⁵ G Johannes Botterweck, Helmer Ringgren, Heinz-Josef Fabry. Theological Dictionary of the Old Testament. Volume XI, 2000, pp. 562-564.

means to do so in a sincere manner, where man's works are consistent with his belief in God. So we see the opposite in "Wherefore the Lord said, Forasmuch as this people draw near me with their mouth, and with their lips do honour me, but have removed their heart far from me, and their fear toward me is taught by the precept of men" (ISAIAH 29:13).

21 The remnant shall return, yea, [even] the remnant of Jacob, unto the mighty God.

This is one of the most beautiful promises found in the Old Testament, שְׂאֵר יִשְׂרָאֵל. That is, a remnant shall return, or re-turn to God. This remnant of Israel spoken of in ISAIAH 1:9; 7:3 (Shearjashub, or more correctly, Shear-Yashuv, was the name given to Isaiah's oldest son, שְׂאֵר יִשְׂרָאֵל); and here in 10:21–22. The children of Jacob would turn or return (יָשׁוּב) towards the Lord. The Targum (ܬ) has: "... and have turned away from sin, the remnant of the house of Jacob, shall return to worship before the mighty God." While many commentators are specific about such a return to God, Alexander properly states, "The return here spoken of is one that was to take place at various times and in various circumstances" and more particularly to include "... the general conversion of Israel to God [Christ], which is yet to be expected." Alexander does well in so stating, because so many who call themselves Christian feel that the house of Israel has already played whatever role they are to play, and that the gentiles have inherited the kingdom of God. Such have forgotten the glorious promises to Israel (Hosea 1:10b). This process of gathering and return has already commenced with Ephraim, the tribe, and shall not stop until all of the tribes are gathered back in, including Judah, at the time of the Second Coming. We also read this glorious promise to be fulfilled in the latter-days, "Afterward shall the children of Israel return, and seek the LORD their God, and David their king; and shall fear the LORD and his goodness in the latter days." (Hosea 3:5). The words mighty God remind us of the name of that Child that would be born unto Israel and the world in Bethlehem, אֵל נִבְּרָר (ISAIAH 9:6). In The Book of Mormon we read: "And it came to pass that I, Nephi, spake much unto them concerning these things; yea, I spake unto them concerning the restoration of the Jews in the latter days. And I did rehearse unto them the words of Isaiah, who spake concerning the restoration of the Jews, or of the house of Israel; and after they were restored they should no more be confounded, neither should they be scattered again" (1 Nephi 15:19–20a).

22 For though thy people Israel be as the sand of the sea, [yet] a remnant of them shall return; the consumption decreed shall overflow with righteousness.

✓ in, or, among

✓ or, in

For though thy people Israel be as the sand of the sea, yet a remnant of them shall return. The word remnant, שְׂאֵר, or residue, means "a few," especially in contrast to the "sand of the sea." Though a small group, they would turn again or return, יָשׁוּב, unto the Lord. ¶ The consumption decreed shall overflow with righteousness. Barnes explains, "Shall overflow, שִׁטַּף. This word is usually applied to an inundation, when a stream rises above its banks and overflows the adjacent land; ISAIAH 30:28; 66:12; Psalm 78:20. Here it means evidently, that the threatened judgment would spread like an overflowing river through the land, and would accomplish the devastation which God had determined." The words justice and righteousness are used often to translate the Hebrew צְדִיקָה (HALOT, Gesenius). Indeed, the Lord's judgment is righteous, and as such both words fit in well together. It is certainly easier to understand this verse when we include the notion of destruction as a consequence of justice.¹⁷ NJB well has: "A destruction has been decreed which will make justice overflow." Bagot (in Lowth), translates כְּלִיֹּן as accomplishment besides the typical use of the word as destruction, annihilation (Gesenius, HALOT). Lowth quotes Bagot, "The accomplishment determined overflows with justice; for it is accomplished, and that which is determined the Lord God of Hosts doeth in the midst of the land." Lowth suggests that this has reference to "the predictions of Moses; the blessing and the curse which he laid before the people" (allusion to Rain in Due Season). Lowth himself translates it as: "The consummation decided, overfloweth with strict justice; For a full and decisive decree Shall JEHOVAH the Lord of Hosts accomplish in the midst of the land." Speaking of כְּלִיֹּן and its root כלה (see v. 23) Calvin suggests, "כלה means to finish, and it means also to consume." The latter is more appropriate. He calls this diminution of the people a consumption, and one that is completed; for he employs exaggerated language, the import of which is, that they were not far from utter extermination, there being very few that were saved.” Alexander and Kay feel that this consumption points back to Rain in Due Season, Deuteronomy 28:65, “And among these nations shalt thou find no ease, neither shall the sole of thy foot have rest: but the LORD shall give thee there a trembling heart, and failing of eyes, and sorrow of mind” (see also Leviticus 26:16 and Deuteronomy 28:22, and notes on ISAIAH 10:16 above). So the question is, who would be punished? In ISAIAH 10:12 it is made clear that Judah and mount Zion would be punished first, before her Assyrian foes would be punished. It seems that ISAIAH 10:22–23 refer to the punishment that would befall Judah.

¹⁷ The Syriac (ܫ) has, "Their number decreased, cut off, but flooded with righteousness." The Targum (ܬ) paraphrase is no less intriguing: "The remnant that have not sinned, and they that have turned away from sin, for them shall be done mighty acts, which shall be mightily displayed and carried out in righteousness." Both of these, however, speak of man's righteousness, rather than the Lord's.

23 For the Lord GOD of hosts shall make a consumption, even determined, in the midst of all the land.

The ASV reads: “For a full end, and that determined, will the Lord, Jehovah of hosts, make in the midst of all the earth.” Kay suggests, “The dependence of this verse on the preceding is more obvious in the Hebrew; since the words rendered ‘the consumption decreed,’ in ISAIAH 10:22, have a close verbal relation to those represented by ‘a final work and a decisive.’ This expression occurs again in ISAIAH 28:22; ‘For a final (sentence) and a decisive have I heard (proceeding) from the Lord, the Lord of Hosts.’ It is found once more in Daniel 9:27 (compare Daniel 9:26; 11:36); where it seem to apply to the doom of excision, which lighted first on the ten tribes, to persistently impenitent Judah.” ¶ The Targum (T), LXX (G), and Syriac (S), like the JST (or Inspired Version) and Book of Mormon all drop the expression “the midst of” בְּקֶרֶב.¹⁸ Henderson explains that the expression בְּקֶרֶב כָּל־יִשְׂרָאֵל “in the midst of all Israel” is found in Deuteronomy 11:6, while “in the midst of all the land,” בְּקֶרֶב כָּל־הָאָרֶץ, does not appear anywhere else in the Hebrew Holy Scriptures (M). The more common form, Henderson explains,¹⁹ is בְּכָל־הָאָרֶץ, “in all the land,” as is found in the Book of Mormon. ¶ The Lord, then, would bring judgment upon the land. Most interpretations focus on the decisive force of the judgment. We read, “For thus saith the Lord, I will cut my work short in righteousness, for the days come that I will send forth judgment unto victory” (D&C 52:11). Note that both the words judgment and righteousness are used here. There is an allusion to the fact that the Lord, in mercy, would shorten the days of chaos for the sake of His friends. “And except those days should be shortened, there should no flesh be saved: but for the elect’s sake those days shall be shortened” (Matthew 24:22).

vv. 24–33. The Lord will now punish Assyria for her boastful pride. She would come all the way to Jerusalem and think she would conquer, but instead only a remnant of the Assyrian warriors would be left. The Holy One of Israel is still Judah’s protector. Man ought not to fear Asshur, Egypt, or any forces that threaten to disturb his peace. A detailed move by the Assyrian forces as they move from city to city, toward Jerusalem, is given.

24 ¶ Therefore thus saith the Lord GOD of hosts, O my people that dwellest in Zion, be not afraid of the Assyrian; he shall smite thee with a rod, and shall lift up his staff against thee, after the manner of Egypt.

✓ or, but he shall lift up his staff for 25 For yet a very little while, and the indignation shall cease, and mine anger in their destruction.

Therefore thus saith the Lord GOD of hosts, O my people that dwellest in Zion, be not afraid of the Assyrian. We have another therefore, לָכֵן, to indicate a change in topic, back to the punishment that would fall upon Assyria. Beginning with Isaiah 10:12 the Lord had made it clear that there would be a punishment that would befall Assyria after Judah had been punished. This לָכֵן, therefore, seems to indicate that now that this has been accomplished, the Lord’s mighty arm would turn towards Asshur. The children of Israel had been invited to put their faith in the Lord and not worry about nor fear the Assyrian boasting. It is an expression of tenderness, when the Lord calls Israel, my people. These are words of comfort for those who dwell in Zion. Alexander recognized these extended meanings of the word Zion, close to our own views as LDS, “According to Ibn Ezra and Kimhi, Zion is here put simply for Jerusalem, and the address is here to the population of that city, whether permanent or temporary, during ¹⁸ “For a completion, and an end, the Lord, the God of hosts is making with all the wicked in the midst of the earth” (Targum, T); “He will finish the work, and cut it short in righteousness: because the Lord will make a short work in all the world” (LXX, G); “Because the Lord God of hosts shall bring destruction and make decrees throughout all the earth” (Syriac, S).

¹⁹ Another possibility, Henderson points out, is “in the midst of the land,” בְּקֶרֶב כָּל־הָאָרֶץ which appears in 7 verses, only in the books of Isaiah and Ezekiel.

Sennacherib's invasion. But as Zion was the seat of the true religion, and the people of God are often said to inhabit Zion, not in a local but a spiritual sense, most interpreters understand the object of address to be Israel in general, while some restrict it to the pious and believing Jews, the remnant of Israel, who were now to be consoled and reassured amidst the judgments which were coming on the nation." ¶ He shall smite thee with a rod, and shall lift up his staff against thee, after the manner of Egypt. The sense here is that as Egypt had been permitted, for a season, to punish Israel, the Lord had placed a limit to this punishment. ¶ For yet a very little while, and the indignation shall cease, and mine anger in their destruction. Soon, after Judah had been sufficiently punished by Assyria, the wrath of the Lord would turn toward her punisher. There seems to be an ellipsis here such that "and mine anger in their destruction," might be understood to mean, "and mine anger would now be made manifest in their [i.e., the Assyrian] destruction." Lowth explains: "Senacherib, soon after his return from his Egyptian expedition, which, I imagine, took him up three years, invested²⁰ Jerusalem. He is represented by the Prophet as lifting up his rod in his march from Egypt, and threatening the people of God, as Pharaoh and the Egyptians had done when they pursued them to the Red Sea. But God in his turn will lift up his rod over the sea, as he did at that time, in the way, or after the manner, of Egypt: and as Senacherib has imitated the Egyptians in his threats, and came full of rage against them from the same quarter; so God will act over again the same part that he had taken formerly in Egypt, and overthrow their enemies in as signal a manner." This scripture could also have an eschatological fulfillment, in which the "little while" could represent the scattering and subsequent gathering of Israel before the second coming of our Lord and Savior. At any rate, during this mortal period we must endure the vicissitudes of this live "for a little while" but then, if we have been faithful; joy unspeakable.

26 And the LORD of hosts shall stir up a scourge for him according to the slaughter of Midian at the rock of Oreb; and [as] his rod [was] upon the sea so shall he lift it up after the manner of Egypt.

And the LORD of hosts shall stir up a scourge for him according to the slaughter of Midian at the rock of Oreb. We read about Midian and the rock of Oreb as the story of Gilead unfolds (Judges 7:1–25, see also Judges 8:3). Just like the people of Midian and their princes or those in high power had suffered, so would the Assyrians and their leaders likewise suffer for their persecution of Israel. Henry has, "And as, at the rock of Oreb, one of the princes of Midian, after the battle, was slain, so shall Sennacherib be in the temple of his god Nisroch, after the defeat of his forces, when he thinks the bitterness of death is past." Henderson explains, "As Oreb, one of the two kings of Midian, after escaping the slaughter of his troops, was taken and slain at a rock of the same name, so Sennacherib should escape from the calamity which destroyed his army, but he also should afterwards be killed." Nägelsbach points out the paronomasia between the expression shall stir up (עִוֵּר) and Oreb (עֹרֵב). ¶ And as his rod was upon the sea so shall he lift it up after the manner of Egypt. This reverses the order in a sort of historical chiasmus. In former times the rod was first lifted up by the King of Egypt (or Pharaoh) "after the manner of Egypt" against the children of Israel, and then the rod was lifted "upon the sea" by Moses—through the gift of the Lord—to part the Red Sea and make way for the escape of Israel (Exodus 14:21–31). When Israel was at the border of the Red Sea, it seemed as if she was doomed. It was the Egyptians who ended up drowning, however. The Lord had saved Israel with openly visible miraculous events. This and many other signs and wonders were given to the children of Israel to the intent they might believe. When Assyria would go over her banks she would come up to the neck of Judah, at the time of Sennacherib's invasion. Now, "his rod was upon the sea" in that the Lord spared Jerusalem—and saved her from the siege imposed by Sennacherib—in a likewise miraculous manner (ISAIAH 37:36). After that, the rod "was lifted up after the manner of Egypt" upon the King of Asshur. In Egypt, Pharaoh's first born son died from the plague because of his arrogance; here Sennacherib's sons Adrammelech and Sharezer are said to have killed their own father.

27 And it shall come to pass in that day [that] his burden shall be taken away from off thy shoulder, and his yoke from off thy neck, and the yoke shall be destroyed because of the anointing.

✓ remove

As in ISAIAH 9:4, the Targum (ܬ) once again makes mention of the Messiah, מְשִׁיחָא.²¹ This verse is essentially repeated from before, and speaks of the miraculous salvation brought about by our Lord and ²⁰ Enveloped, surrounded, sieged (see Webster, Oxford).

²¹ "And it shall come to pass at that time, that his dominion shall be removed from thee, and his yoke from upon thy neck, and the nations shall be destroyed from before the Anointed One (or, Messiah)."

Savior through His atoning sacrifice (for a fuller exposition, see notes on ISAIAH 9:4).

28 He is come to Aiath, he is passed to Migron; at Michmash he hath laid up his carriages.

He is come to Aiath. By counting the seconds between lightning and the thunder, one can determine if the storm is moving closer or farther away. Here, beginning with Aiath, we see the progression of the invading Assyrian armies coming, for the most part, closer to Jerusalem with each subsequent attack. Kay explains, “The prophet, in vision, beholds the invader moving towards Jerusalem. He sees him not following the ordinary route, the great north road; but striking across country in a line that is traversed by more than one deep ravine; hoping by a forced march to surprise Jerusalem” Aiath (Khirbet²² Haiyan), is located about 18 kilometers north of Jerusalem, and a little south of Bethel (OBA, also compare some of these cities with Moody, for slightly different measurements—although Moody is much less complete and most of these cities are missing). There are different views of where these locations were found. Consult Delitzsch, Henderson, Alexander, or Nägelsbach (who in turn recommends the well know work by Robinson and Smith, Bible Researches in Palestine, Volume II). ¶ He is passed to Migron. Migron (Tell²³ Miriam) is a little south east from Aiath, about 12 kilometers north of Jerusalem (OBA). ¶ At Michmash he hath laid up his carriages. Michmash (Mukhmas) was found about a kilometer north east of Migron, or about 13 kilometers north of Jerusalem (OBA). Calvin makes an interesting observation about laying up his baggage: “It is the custom of warriors not to lead forward any army without providing the means of support, which they lay up in a safe and convenient place, that the army may be supplied out of it with all that is needful. Under the word baggage or arms, he includes not only darts and swords, but all the supplies and provisions of war. The meaning of the word כֶּלִי²⁴ is extensive, and includes every kind of implements, and thus resembles the word (vasa) which denotes vessels in the Latin language.” Henry looks at this verse from quite a different perspective, and suggests that “At Michmash he has laid up his carriages, as if he had no further occasion for his heavy artillery, so easy was every place he came to reduced; or the store-cities of Judah, which were fortified for that purpose, had now become his magazines²⁵.” Nägelsbach also suspects that the baggage was left here in order to move at a faster pace. This might have been a necessary step in order to cross the defiant ravine at Michmash.

29 They are gone over the passage; they have taken up their lodging at Geba; Ramah is afraid; Gibeah of Saul is fled.

They are gone over the passage. The Targum (T) reads, “They waded, they passed through the Jordan.” There are only a few places where the Jordan can be crossed, however, and thus Calvin says, “I do not know if it could be crossed by a ford in that quarter.” Lowth proposes: “The strait here mentioned is that of Michmas, a very narrow passage between two sharp hills or rocks (see 1 Samuel 14:4, 5), where a great army might have been opposed with advantage by a very inferior force. The author of the book of Judith might perhaps mean this pass, at least among others: ‘Charging them to keep the passages of the hill country; for by them there was an entrance into Judea, and it was easy to stop them that would come up; because the passage was strait, for two men at the most’ (Judith 4:7). The enemies having passed the straight without opposition, shews that all thoughts of making a stand in the open country were given up, and that their only resource was in the strength of the city.” Nägelsbach describes the passage as “A deep, rough ravine, forty-eight minutes wide, immediately below Michmash. As it runs from East to West, they must cross it obliquely to approach Jerusalem. The ravine is difficult to traverse.” ¶ They have taken up their lodging at Geba. Geba (Jeba) is a little over a kilometer south of Migron, or about 10 kilometers north of Jerusalem (OBA). They must have stopped there for the night. ¶ Ramah is afraid. Ramah (er-Ram, not to be confused with cities of the same name: Rentis also known as Ramathaim-zophim nor Ramieh in Galilee) is about 4 miles East of Geba (OBA). “When such dread has seized their hearts,” notes Calvin, “they will freely surrender at the first attack of the enemy, so that the conquerors will be allowed to ravage at their pleasure.” And so it is, that in times of war, when panic sets in, often defenders of cities flee with all their might.²⁶ Alexander has, “It may imply either that Ramah was not in the direct line of the march, but within sight and

²² Khirbet means ruin (OBA).

²³ Tell means a mound covering an ancient site (OBA).

²⁴ כֶּלִי

²⁵ Magazine, магазин, was the word used in Russia for store when I visited in the early 1990s. Webster defines as “a place where goods or supplies are stored: warehouse; a room in which powder and other explosives are kept in a fort or ship.”

²⁶ In the recent weeks in the current war in Afghanistan against the Taliban, the Northern Alliance reported that cities formerly occupied by their enemies were falling like dominoes, with the Taliban fleeing and abandoning their strongholds (20 November 2001).

hearing of it, or on the contrary, that it was the next place to be reached, and was trembling in apprehension of it.” ¶ Gibeah of Saul is fled. Gibeah (Tell el-Ful) is a little over 5 kilometers north of Jerusalem (OBA). Alexander continues, “A still stronger metaphor is used [with Gibeah than what was used with Ramah]. There is here a rapid but marked climax. While Ramah trembles, Gibeah flees.”

30 Lift up[✓] thy voice, O daughter of Gallim; cause it to be heard unto Laish, O poor Anathoth.

✓ Cry shrill with

Lift up thy voice, O daughter of Gallim. Gallim (Khirbet Ka’kul) is about a kilometer southeast of Gibeah, and about 7 kilometers north of Jerusalem (OBA). Jerusalem was called daughter of Zion (ISAIAH 1:8) and so other cities or nations at times called daughter, such as O daughter of Tarshish (ISAIAH 23:10); daughter of Zidon (ISAIAH 23:12); O virgin daughter of Babylon and O daughter of the Chaldeans (ISAIAH 47:1); and daughter of Egypt (Jeremiah 46:11) to name a few. Barnes suggests that daughter in such cases is “a term often applied to a beautiful city or town.” ¶ Cause it to be heard unto Laish, O poor Anathoth. Anathoth (Ras el-Kharrubeh) is about the same distance to Jerusalem than Gallim, but situated about 2 kilometers south east of Gallim (OBA).

31 Madmenah is removed; the inhabitants of Gebim gather themselves to flee.

Madmenah is removed. Here the pattern seems to change, if OBA is correct about placing its location about 55 kilometers of Jerusalem, in a southeastern direction (OBA,). I think it likely that removed is another word for flee as so many of the inhabitants of the other cities and towns had done. Calvin suggests that remove is hyperbole for “that city to have been shaken to such a degree, as if it had been removed to another place.” Nägelsbach says that Madmenah means dung-heaps (see also Gesenius and HALOT). ¶ The inhabitants of Gebim gather themselves to flee. It is unknown where this town was located (OBA).

32 As yet shall he remain at Nob that day; he shall shake his hand [against] the mount of the daughter of Zion, the hill of Jerusalem.

Now we are getting very close to Jerusalem indeed. Nob (“city of priests, successor to Shiloh”) was about 2 kilometers northeast of Jerusalem (OBA). Kay explains that Nob was located at the “northern extremity of the Olivet line of hills.” According to the Talmud and Jerome, Nob and Jerusalem were within sight of each other (Alexander). It seems that the invading armies stopped at Nob for part of the day before proceeding toward Jerusalem. Henderson and others explain that the gesture of shaking the hand, in this verse, has reference to doing so in a threatening way. Daughter of Zion, בַּת־צִיּוֹן (see ISAIAH 1:8). Kay explains that the Kethiv (כְּתִיב, *that which is written*²⁷) is: “The mountain of the house in Zion, the hill-fort of Jerusalem” while the Qeri (קֶרִי, that which is read) is “mountain of the daughter of Zion.” Furthermore, Kay suggests that the Kethiv “is supported by the occurrence of the mountain of the house in Micah 3:12 (Jeremiah 26:18); and by the Targum, ‘the mountain of the house of the sanctuary which is in Zion.’ (Cp. ISAIAH 2:2, 3, ‘The mountain of the house of the Lord.’)”

33 Behold, the Lord, the LORD of hosts, shall lop the bough with terror; and the high ones of stature [shall be] hewn down; and the haughty shall be humbled.

Behold, the Lord, the LORD of hosts, shall lop the bough with terror. Kay points out that in Ezekiel 31:5–14 we have the word bough, or branch, in essentially the same manner, as to represent Asshur. So it is that there we read: “exalted above all the trees,” “his boughs were multiplied,” “All the fowls of heaven made their nests in his boughs,” “under his branches did all the beasts of the field bring forth their young,” “under his shadow dwelt all great nations,” and so on, even to the point that all other trees were insignificant in comparison and envied him. ¶ And the high ones of stature shall be hewn down; and the haughty shall be humbled. Inasmuch as Asshur had greatly lifted himself up in pride, the Lord would bring him down.

34 And he shall cut down the thickets of the forest with iron, and Lebanon shall fall by a mighty one.[✓]

✓ or, mightily

And he shall cut down the thickets of the forest with iron. Or, an axe would be taken to the bottoms of the trunks. These verses return to those in Isaiah 10:18–19, the defeat of Asshur. ¶ And Lebanon shall fall by a mighty one. לְבָנוֹן, Laban, means to be white (AHCL), ²⁷ For more on the Masorah Parva, see ISAIAH 9:3.

and Lebanon, לְבָנוֹן, is the name of the mountain. Henderson explains, “This celebrated mountain, in Hebrew לְבָנוֹן the White Mountain, Arab ... the Snow Mountain, from the perpetual snows which cover its summits, consists of two parallel ridges, stretching in a northerly direction between Phoenicia and Damascus, and intersected by ... the Bekaa, or valley, otherwise known by the name of Coelosyria. The most easterly goes by the name of Anti-Libanus, and is upwards of 9,000 feet high. The Arabs say of it, that it carries winter on its head, spring on its shoulders, harvest in its bosom, while summer sleeps at its feet. Its terraces are covered with gardens and cultivated fields, and present the most enchanting prospects to the eye of the traveller.” The great forests of Lebanon were highly esteemed, and it seems from this verse, would perish; unless the allusion was only to the mighty of Asshur. Perhaps both are intended. ¶ In Ezekiel we read this beautiful verse: “Thus saith the Lord GOD; I will also take of the highest branch of the high cedar, and will set it; I will crop off from the top of his young twigs a tender one, and will plant it upon an high mountain and eminent: In the mountain of the height of Israel will I plant it: and it shall bring forth boughs, and bear fruit, and be a goodly cedar: and under it shall dwell all fowl of every wing; in the shadow of the branches thereof shall they dwell. And all the trees of the field shall know that I the LORD have brought down the high tree, have exalted the low tree, have dried up the green tree, and have made the dry tree to flourish: I the LORD have spoken and have done it” (Ezekiel 17:22–24, note the Messianic implications). Just as in the times of Isaiah Jerusalem almost fell to her enemies, so will it be in the last days. Jerusalem will be surrounded and will have even begun to fall, when the Holy One of Israel will again defend her. “For I will gather all nations against Jerusalem to battle; and the city shall be taken, and the houses rifled, and the women ravished; and half of the city shall go forth into captivity, and the residue of the people shall not be cut off from the city. Then shall the LORD go forth, and fight against those nations, as when he fought in the day of battle. And his feet shall stand in that day upon the mount of Olives, which is before Jerusalem on the east, and the mount of Olives shall cleave in the midst thereof toward the east and toward the west, and there shall be a very great valley; and half of the mountain shall remove toward the north, and half of it toward the south. And ye shall flee to the valley of the mountains; for the valley of the mountains shall reach unto Azal: yea, ye shall flee, like as ye fled from before the earthquake in the days of Uzziah king of Judah: and the LORD my God shall come, and all the saints with thee. And it shall come to pass in that day, that the light shall not be clear, nor dark: But it shall be one day which shall be known to the LORD, not day, nor night: but it shall come to pass, that at evening time it shall be light” (Zechariah 14:2–7). It is then that Judah will recognize her Savior, “And one shall say unto him, What are these wounds in thine hands? Then he shall answer, Those with which I was wounded in the house of my friends” (Zechariah 13:6).

FIRST POSTED: 1 February 2002

Isaiah 11

Angel Moroni appeared to the young Prophet Joseph Smith on 21 September 1823. Moroni, among other things, “commenced quoting the prophecies of the Old Testament,” among which “he quoted the eleventh chapter of Isaiah, saying that it was about to be fulfilled” (JS-H 1:40). What a feeling of excitement runs through my body as I think of these things. In a chapter such as this one, where there is so much written on the text of Isaiah from the Brethren, and from other scriptures, there is less of a need to explore every possible translation and interpretation than in those chapters of Isaiah where little interpretative information is found. Nevertheless, some value may be obtained from a limited exploration. Where there has been much said by the Brethren, I have included additional comments mostly under the subheadings VERSIONS AND COMMENTARIES, although in some instances it has been incorporated into the exegetical comments. “With respect to the application of this prophecy to the Messiah,” says Henderson, interpreters seem to be almost unanimous. Barnes says, “It was a general principle with the Hebrew prophets, and particularly with Isaiah, when any event tending to console the people, or to excite the nation’s gratitude, occurred, to cast the eye forward to that great future deliverance which they anticipated under the Messiah.” ISAIAH 11, then, deals with Messiah as a righteous judge, of the millennial day, and of the glorious gathering of Israel.

vv. 1–5. Speaking of these verses John Taylor said, “The first of this was fulfilled when our Saviour came on this earth before; the second will be when he comes again, ‘he will smite the earth with the rod of his mouth, and with the breath of his lips will he slay the wicked.’”¹ In D&C 113 we have a revelation given by the Lord to the Prophet Joseph Smith on these verses. We learn several important facts from it: (1) something about the rod; (2) that the stem of Jesse mentioned in ISAIAH 11:1 is Christ; (3) that the focus of ISAIAH 11:2–5 is on the stem of Jesse, or on Christ; and (4) that the root of Jesse mentioned in ISAIAH 11:10 seems to have very similar characteristics as the rod mentioned in ISAIAH 11:1.

1 ¶ AND there shall come forth a rod out of the stem of Jesse, and a Branch shall grow out of his roots:

AND there shall come forth a rod out of the stem of Jesse. Jesse is the father of King David. The Stem of Jesse is another way of saying, “He who sprang forth through the line of David,” or Christ the Lord. David was a descendant of Judah. Judah was promised in his patriarchal blessing, that the Messiah would come forth out of his lineage: “The sceptre shall not depart from Judah, nor a lawgiver from between his feet, until Shiloh come; and unto him shall the gathering of the people be” (Genesis 49:10). Thus it is that the New Testament begins with the words “The book of the generation of Jesus Christ, the son of David, the son of Abraham” (Matthew 1:1). ¶ The rod that shall proceed out of Christ (i.e., out of the stem of Jesse), we are informed, is “a servant in the hands of Christ, who is partly a descendant of Jesse as well as of Ephraim, or of the house of Joseph, on whom there is laid much power” (D&C 113:4b). This servant receives his power through Christ. In ISAIAH 11:11 we learn a little more about this servant, where he is called the root of Jesse. So who is this rod or root of Jesse? President Brigham Young said: “Joseph Smith was a rod in the hands of the Lord to scourge the Elders of Israel; he was the mouthpiece of the Almighty, and was always ready to rebuke them when requisite.”² Monte S. Nyman has, “There can be no question that this is describing the Prophet Joseph Smith. By revelation he was told that he held the right to the priesthood (see D&C 86:8–9). That the keys of the kingdom had been given to him is a matter of record; that his labors were to stand as an ‘ensign’ to which the nations of the earth will gather is also a matter of scriptural promise (D&C 29:4, 7–8; 35:25; 38:33; 39:11; 45:9, 28).”³ ¶ And a Branch shall grow out of his roots. The expression “his roots” refers to David. Christ is the Branch that would grow out of David. The Stem of Jesse and the Branch both refer to the Messiah. Jeremiah speaks of this Branch: “Behold, the days come, saith the LORD, that I will raise unto David a righteous Branch, and a King shall reign and prosper, and shall execute judgment and justice in the earth. In his days Judah shall be saved, and Israel shall dwell safely: and this is his name whereby he shall be called, THE LORD OUR RIGHTEOUSNESS. Therefore, behold, the days come, saith the LORD, that they shall no more say, The LORD liveth, which brought up the children of Israel out of the land of Egypt; But, The LORD liveth, which brought up and which led the seed of the house of Israel out of the north country, and from all countries whither I had driven them; and they shall dwell in their own land” (Jeremiah 23:5–8, emphasis added); “In those days, and at that time, will I cause the Branch of righteousness to grow up unto David; and he shall execute judgment and righteousness in the land. In those days shall Judah be saved, and Jerusalem shall dwell safely: and this is the name wherewith she shall be called, The LORD our righteousness” (Jeremiah 33:15–16, emphasis added).⁴ VERSIONS AND COMMENTARIES: The Targum (Ⲯ) reads, “And a King shall come forth from the sons of Jesse, and from his children’s children the Messiah (ⲙⲣⲓⲁⲗⲁ) shall be anointed (or, exalted).” Hengstenberg quotes Luther on this passage: “This is a short summary of the whole of theology and of the works of God, that Christ did not come till the trunk had died, and was altogether in a hopeless condition; that hence, when all hope is gone, we are to believe that it is the time of salvation, and that God is then nearest when He seems to be farthest off.” Calvin makes the contrast between the growing shoot that rises out of what is left of the tree even stronger: “I have ... preferred translating נֶזֶע a dry stock, rather than a root, though it makes little difference as to the meaning, but the former expresses more fully what the Prophet meant, namely, that though the stock be dry, the branch which shall spring from it shall be more excellent than all the forests. Hence we infer that this prediction applies solely to the person of Christ; for till he came no such branch arose.  We see therefore that to the ... Jews, consolation was held out in the Messiah alone, and that their hope was held in suspense till he appeared. At the time of his appearance, there would have been no hope that the kingdom would be erected and restored, if this promise had not been added; for the family of David appeared to be completely extinct.

² Journal of Discourses. London: Latter-day Saints’ Book Depot. Volume 8, September 30, 1860, p. 190.

³ Monte S. Nyman, ed., Isaiah and the Prophets: Inspired Voices from the Old Testament, 1984 Religious Studies Center, Brigham Young University, p. 18.

¹ Taylor, John. The Government of God. Liverpool: S. W. Richards, 1852.

2 And the spirit of the LORD shall rest upon him, the spirit of wisdom and understanding, the spirit of counsel and ⁴ Messiah is called by the name of Branch in numerous scriptures, in Jeremiah, Zechariah, Ezekiel, and Isaiah (e.g., “For he shall grow up before him as a tender plant, and as a root out of a dry ground: he hath no form nor comeliness; and when we shall see him, there is no beauty that we should desire him” ISAIAH 53:2).

might, the spirit of knowledge and of the fear of the LORD;

Isaiah 11:2–5 describe the Messiah. The Targum tradition (Ⲯ) (Seder Nezikin, Sanhedrin 93b) has ISAIAH 11:2 refer to the Messiah. Through the principle of Divine Investiture, Christ speaks on behalf of the Father. ¶ And the spirit of the LORD shall rest upon him, the spirit of wisdom and understanding, the spirit of counsel and might, the spirit of knowledge and of the fear of the LORD. All these are the attributes of King Messiah. VERSIONS AND COMMENTARIES: The LXX (Ⲭ) renders it: “And the Spirit of God shall rest upon him, the spirit of wisdom and understanding, the spirit of counsel and strength, the spirit of knowledge and godliness shall fill him; the spirit of the fear of God.” The Syriac (Ⲫ) has, “And he shall be at peace, and the Spirit of the LORD shall rest upon him, the spirit of wisdom and understanding, the spirit of counsel and might, the spirit of knowledge and of the reverence of the LORD.” Calvin sees the manifestations of the gifts of the Spirit. Barnes says, “If it be asked how one, who was Divine in his own nature, could be thus endowed by the aid of the Spirit, the answer is, that he was also to be a man descended from the honoured line of David, and that as a man he might be furnished for his work by the agency of the Holy Ghost.” Furthermore, Barnes says that shall rest on him, means, “It shall not merely come upon him, but shall attend him permanently.” It is as if one were to say that the Spirit of the Holy Ghost was His constant companion. Rawlinson says that regarding the Messiah, and the Spirit of the Lord, “These influences were not in him transient or occasional, as in too many men...” Barnes continues, “That he was thus under the influence of the Holy Spirit, is abundantly taught in the New Testament. Thus in Matthew 3:16, the Holy Spirit is represented as descending on him at his baptism. In John 3:34, it is said, ‘For he whom God hath sent speaketh the words of God: for God giveth not the Spirit by measure unto him’ (compare Colossians 1:19,⁵ emphasis added).” The JST revolving around John 3:34, reads, “For he whom God hath sent speaketh the words of God: for God giveth him not the Spirit by measure, for he dwelleth in him, even the fullness.” The next verse reads: “The Father loveth the Son, and hath given all things into his hand” (John 3:35), or as is found in Moffatt: “The Father loves the Son and has given him control over everything.” We also read, “For since He Whom God has sent speaks the words of God [proclaims God’s own message], God does not give Him His Spirit sparingly or by measure,

⁵ “For it pleased the Father that in him should all fulness dwell” (Colossians 1:19). Our LDS footnote says, regarding this verse, “Jesus Christ, relationships with the Father.”

but boundless is the gift God makes of His Spirit!
[Deuteronomy 18:18⁶.] The Father loves the Son and has given (entrusted, committed) everything into His hand. [Daniel 7:14⁷.] (AMP).

3 And shall make him of quick understanding[✓] in the fear of the LORD; and he shall not judge after the sight of his eyes, neither reprove after the hearing of his ears.

✓ scent or, smell⁸

And shall make him of quick understanding in the fear of the LORD. We show fear of the Lord when we honor our Father in Heaven. Christ always honored His Father. It was the constant preoccupation of our Savior to do those things that would please His Father. There is something infinitely tender in the words of the Savior: “The Son can do nothing of himself, but what he seeth the Father do: for what things soever he doeth, these also doeth the Son likewise” (John 5:19). Truly, “The fear of the LORD is the beginning of wisdom” (Psalm 111:10a). Many commentators make note of the marginal || reading and he [will] smell, וְהִיחֵם. Barnes, leaning on Gesenius, explains that this word is derived from וְהִיחֵם, “used only in Hiphil, to smell; and is kindred with וְהִיחֵם, wind, breath, for fragrant substances breathe out an odour” and thus by extension it means to “to take delight in smelling.”⁹ Kay contributes the following grammatical note: “The rendering of the A.V. may be fairly justified by the analogy of the verb וְהִיחֵם; which has generally a simple transitive meaning, ‘to understand;’ yet sometimes signifies to ‘cause to understand’ (Job 6:24), or, ‘to give understanding’ (Job 32:8). Similarly, וְהִיחֵם though it commonly means ‘to smell,’ may signify, ‘to give him quick scent.’” In other

⁶ “I will raise them up a Prophet from among their brethren, like unto thee, and will put my words in his mouth; and he shall speak unto them all that I shall command him” (Deuteronomy 18:18).

⁷ “And there was given him dominion, and glory, and a kingdom, that all people, nations, and languages, should serve him: his dominion is an everlasting dominion, which shall not pass away, and his kingdom that which shall not be destroyed” (Daniel 7:14).

⁸ “He shall sense the truth” or “His sensing (shall be)” (Tanakh). The complete verse “He shall sense the truth by his reverence for the LORD: He shall not judge by what his eyes behold, Nor decide by what his ears perceive” (Tanakh).

⁹ To LDS this is also important in its anthropomorphic implications. The idea of smelling is one very often in the Old Testament one of acceptance of the sacrifices of men, or their sweet odours. God, in contrast to the dumb idols, can smell, and see, hear and eat. “And there ye shall serve gods, the work of men’s hands, wood and stone, which neither see, nor hear, nor eat, nor smell” (Deuteronomy 4:28, Rain in Due Season).

words, to quickly size up a situation. Or perhaps even better, quick to perceive and obey. LITV reads, “And He is made to breathe in the fear of Jehovah.” ASV gives this beautiful meaning: “And his delight shall be in the fear of Jehovah.” ¶ And he shall not judge after the sight of his eyes, neither reprove after the hearing of his ears. One of my favorite scriptures is: “But the LORD said unto Samuel, Look not on his countenance, or on the height of his stature; because I have refused him: for the LORD seeth not as man seeth; for man looketh on the outward appearance, but the LORD looketh on the heart” (1 Samuel 16:7). President Brigham Young taught that we need to cultivate a spirit of meekness in terms of others and be slow to judge, and rather “Bear with them.”¹⁰

4 But with righteousness shall he judge the poor, and reprove[✓] with equity for the meek of the earth; and he shall smite the earth with the rod of his mouth, and with the breath of his lips shall he slay the wicked.

✓ or, argue

But with righteousness shall he judge the poor, and reprove with equity for the meek of the earth. President Joseph Fielding Smith taught, “When that time shall come, the ‘earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea.’ Wickedness shall be destroyed, for with righteousness shall Jehovah ‘judge the poor, and reprove with equity for the meek of the earth: and he shall smite the earth with the rod of his mouth, and with the breath of his lips shall he slay the wicked.’ In that day there shall be no ‘divided Christianity.’”¹¹ All who will not repent and receive the gospel shall soon be removed, and they who shall remain shall learn to worship the true and living God in spirit and in truth. The Church of Jesus Christ shall have sway over all the earth, for Christ shall be the King and ¹⁰ “Judge not, that ye be not judged. Let no man judge his fellow being, unless he knows he has the mind of Christ within him. ... Do not judge such persons [who have transgressed], for you do not know the design of the Lord concerning them; therefore, do not say they are not Saints. What shall we do with them? Bear with them. ... A person who would say another is not a Latter-day Saint, for some trifling affair in human life, proves that he does not possess the Spirit of God. Think of this, brethren and sisters; write it down, that you may refresh your memories with it; carry it with you, and look at it often. If I judge my brethren and sisters, unless I judge them by the revelations of Jesus Christ, I have not the spirit of Christ; if I had, I should judge no man.” Brigham Young, Journal of Discourses. 26 vols. London: Latter-day Saints’ Book Depot, 1854–1886. Volume 1, December 5, 1853, p. 339.

¹¹ This must be later on in the Millennium, as there will be a time where different religions will exist, as taught by the Prophet Joseph Smith.

Deliverer. Peace shall prevail both among men and among beasts. Satan shall be bound and his dominion, which he has held by usurpation and fraud since the beginning of the earth's temporal existence, shall come to an end. The rightful King shall reign and his saints shall possess the kingdom according to the vision of Daniel. Jerusalem shall become a righteous city when Israel is gathered and redeemed. Zion also shall be cleansed of all iniquity, and in that day, when Christ shall rule, the word of the Lord to Isaiah shall be fulfilled, 'for out of Zion shall go forth the law, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem.'" ¹² ¶ And he shall smite the earth with the rod of his mouth, and with the breath of his lips shall he slay the wicked. President John Taylor taught, "when he comes again, 'he will smite the earth with the rod of his mouth, and with the breath of his lips will he slay the wicked.' The spirit of the Lord will be withdrawn from the nations, and after rejecting the truth, they will be left in darkness to grope their way, and being full of the spirit of wickedness, they will rage and war against each other, and finally, after dreadful struggles, plagues, pestilence, famine, etc., instigated by the powers of darkness, there will be a great gathering of the nations against Jerusalem, for they will be infuriated against its inhabitants, and mighty hosts will assemble, so that they will be like a cloud to cover the land, and the Lord will appear himself to the deliverance of his people, and the destruction of the wicked."¹³ VERSIONS AND COMMENTARIES: The Targum (Ⲯ) reads, "But with righteousness shall He judge the poor, and reprove with faithfulness the needy of the earth; and He shall smite the sinners of the earth with the word of His mouth,¹⁴ and with the speech of his lips He shall slay the wicked."¹⁵ The LXX (Ⲭ) renders it, "But he shall judge the cause of the lowly, and shall reprove the lowly of the earth: and he shall smite the earth with the word of his mouth, and with the breath of his lips shall he destroy the ungodly one." Alma was involved in a mission to bring back the apostate Zoramites: "their hearts were lifted up unto great boasting, in their pride" (Alma 31:25). Yet Alma found a poor people about them who were ready to hear the word, for "their afflictions had truly humbled them and that they were in a preparation to hear the word" (Alma 32:6). Calvin suggests, "When the Prophet says, by the breath of his lips, this must not be limited to the person of Christ; for it refers to the word which is preached by his ministers." Calvin then refers to Luke 10:16, "He that heareth you heareth me; and he that despiseth you despiseth me; and he that despiseth me despiseth him that sent me."¹⁶ In 2 Thessalonians we find a similar verse, in reference to the defeat of Satan and those who would oppose our Savior: "And then shall that Wicked be revealed, whom the Lord shall consume with the spirit of his mouth, and shall destroy with the brightness of his coming." Alexander suggests this refers to the defeat of the Anti-Christ (see term defined in LDS Bible Dictionary). Hengstenberg suggests that the expression "rod of His mouth" is equivalent to "And out of His mouth went a sharp two-edged sword."

5 And righteousness shall be the girdle of his loins, and faithfulness the girdle of his reins.

A girdle is a sash or cloth that is worn about the body. Barnes explains: "The girdle of his loins refers to the cincture, or band, with which the ancients girded themselves. A part of their dress consisted of an outward, loose, flowing robe. This robe it was necessary to gird up, or to confine close to the body in active labour, or in running; and the meaning of the figure here used is, probably, that the virtues of righteousness and justice would adhere to him as closely and inseparably as the garment does to the body to which it was bound." The loins correspond to the lower back, "between the hipbones and the ribs" (Webster).¹⁷ The reins here also correspond to the lower back, that is, to the region of the back corresponding to the location of the kidneys. The term is derived from the renal system. The Messiah, then, would be covered by righteousness and faithfulness.

vv. 6–9. These verses focus on the peacefulness of the millennium, with the earth returning to its paradisiacal glory. Regarding the Millennium and these verses in Isaiah, President Joseph Fielding Smith wrote: "A change shall come over every living creature, and all enmity shall depart and only love and peace remain."¹⁸

¹² Smith, Joseph Fielding. Doctrines of Salvation. Compiled by Bruce R. McConkie. 3 vols. Salt Lake City, Utah: Bookcraft, 1954–56, Volume 1, p. 169.

¹³ Taylor, John. The Government of God. Liverpool: S. W. Richards, 1852. Ch. 11.

¹⁴ Memra, or מֵימְרָא (here, meimar).

¹⁵ "The Chaldee Paraphrast," says Barnes of his Targum (Ⲯ) translation, "translates it, 'And by the word of his lips he shall slay the impious Armillus.'" Barnes, leaning on Castell, adds, "By Armillus, the Jews mean the last great enemy of their nation, who would come after Gog and Magog and wage furious wars, and who would slay the Messiah ben Ephraim, whom the Jews expect, but who would be himself slain the rod of the Messiah ben David, or the son of David."

¹⁶ We agree with Calvin but warn that the words of Paul must be added to these: "And no man taketh this honour unto himself, but he that is called of God, as was Aaron" (Hebrews 5:4).

¹⁷ The term is sometimes used, elsewhere, as a euphemism for the procreative organs.

¹⁸ Smith, Joseph Fielding. The Way to Perfection: Short Discourses on Gospel Themes. 9th ed. Salt Lake City: Genealogical Society of

6 The wolf also shall dwell with the lamb, and the leopard shall lie down with the kid; and the calf and the young lion and the fatling together; and a little child shall lead them.

The Targum (ܬ) makes it clear that this will take place during the Messianic age, when Messiah shall reign: “In the days of the Messiah of Israel peace shall be multiplied in the land. The wolf shall dwell with the lamb, and the leopard shall dwell with the kid; and the calf, and the lion, and the fatling together; and a little sucking child shall be leading them.” From the animal kingdom, the wolf and the leopard are chosen as types of violent behavior in animals. In his 2001 address to CES Institute and Seminary teachers, Elder Eyring suggested that there is much that we can do now—without waiting for the Millennium—to begin to change our human natures. ¶ From the TPJS we find: “Kindness to Animals Required of Man. The following incidents occurred while Zion’s Camp was on the march from Kirtland to Missouri. In pitching my tent we found three massasaugas or prairie rattlesnakes, which the brethren were about to kill, but I said, ‘Let them alone—don’t hurt them! How will the serpent ever lose its venom, while the servants of God possess the same disposition, and continue to make war upon it? Men must become harmless before the brute creation, and when men lose their vicious dispositions and cease to destroy the animal race, the lion and the lamb can dwell together, and the sucking child can play with the serpent in safety.’ The brethren took the serpents carefully on sticks and carried them across the creek. I exhorted the brethren not to kill a serpent, bird, or an animal of any kind during our journey unless it became necessary in order to preserve ourselves from hunger (26 May 1834).”

7 And the cow and the bear shall feed; their young ones shall lie down together; and the lion shall eat straw like the ox.

The nature of the beasts will revert to that which existed before the fall. The Targum (ܬ) has, “And the cow and the bear shall feed together, their young ones shall lie down together; and the lion shall eat straw like the ox.” The LXX (ϸ) has, “And the ox and bear shall feed together; and their young shall be together: and the lion shall eat straw like the ox.” It is rendered in the Syriac (ܣ) as: “And the cow and the bear shall feed together;

The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, 1951. p. 310. On other conditions related to the Millennium, read pp. 310–314.

and their young ones shall grow up together; and the lion shall eat straw like the ox.”

8 And the sucking child shall play on the hole of the asp, and the weaned child shall put his hand on the cockatrice’ den.

And the sucking child shall play on the hole of the asp. If there is presently enmity between beasts, such hostility exists between man and beast. Not only will there be peace within the animal kingdom, but also man and beast will live in perfect harmony. Henderson says: “שָׁעָע, the [root is שָׁעָע], to stoke, to rub gently with the hand; then as here, generally, to caress, play with the hand, find delight in playing.” Regarding שָׁחָ, or snake, Henderson has, “... an asp, or a kind of serpent, whose poison kills almost instantaneously.” ¶ And the weaned child shall put his hand on the cockatrice’ den. Regarding the adder, viper, or cockatrice, Henderson tells us, “צִפְּפוּרִי, Vulgate regulus, the basilisk; according to Michaelis, the Cerast or horned serpent—a small viper, little more than a foot in length; so called from the feelers which are protruded from its head, while it lies hid in the sand. It is exceedingly venomous. Compare ISAIAH 59:5; Jeremiah 8:17; Proverbs 23:32; and ISAIAH 14:29, where the cognate צִפְּפוּ occurs. In most of these passages, נָחָשׁ¹⁹ is used along with it.” Cheyne, leaning on Tristram opines, “Why go to Africa for the basilisk? One of the most beautiful but venomous of the vipers of Palestine is the large yellow one, called Daboia xanthina.”

9 They shall not hurt nor destroy in all my holy mountain, for the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the LORD, as the waters cover the sea.

They shall not hurt nor destroy in all my holy mountain. President John Taylor said: “Thus, having cleansed the earth, and glorified it with the knowledge of God, as the waters cover the sea, and having poured out his Spirit upon all flesh, both man and beast becoming perfectly harmless, as they were in the beginning, and feeding on vegetable food only, while nothing is left to hurt or destroy in all the vast creation, the prophets then proceed to give us many glorious descriptions of the enjoyments of its inhabitants.²⁰ ¶ For the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the LORD, as the waters cover the sea. (See also Habakkuk 2:14.) President Joseph Fielding Smith taught that Isaiah's words would soon be fulfilled, and that the earth would be transformed again, "Soon [the earth] is to be changed and brought back very largely to the condition in which it was found before man transgressed in the Garden of Eden and brought upon himself and the earth the temporal change. In this changed condition, which is shortly to take place, the earth will endure for one thousand years as a terrestrial sphere in purity and sanctification. The Savior will come to reign and take his rightful place. All kingdoms and governments will come to an end, and be superseded by Christ's government. There will be no more war, but peace and righteousness, for the knowledge of the Lord shall cover the earth as the waters do the sea."²¹ On another occasion President Joseph Fielding Smith said, "Joseph Smith holds the keys of this great dispensation which must endure until all things are finished. This Gospel is decreed to 'roll forth' until it shall eventually fill the earth. When Christ comes the wicked shall be destroyed, and righteousness will follow until it will cover the earth as the waters do the sea (ISAIAH 11:9). In that day the kingdom in heaven will come down and will be joined to the kingdom of God on earth, and they will be united in one kingdom."²² In Jeremiah we read: "Behold, the days come, saith the LORD, that I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel, and with the house of Judah: Not according to the covenant that I made with their fathers in the day that I took them by the hand to bring them out of the land of Egypt; which my covenant they brake, although I was an husband unto them, saith the LORD: But this shall be the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel; After those days, saith the LORD, I will put my law in their inward parts, and write it in their hearts; and will be their God, and they shall be my people. And they shall teach no more every man his neighbour, and every man his brother, saying, Know the LORD: for they shall all know me, from the least of them unto the greatest of them, saith the LORD: for I will forgive their iniquity, and I will remember their sin no more" (Jeremiah 31:31–34, emphasis added). Nyman wrote, "Joseph Smith also gave a different rendering of the last part of verse 9—"the earth will be filled with sacred knowledge, as the waters cover the great deep" (TPJS, p. 93)—and indicated that this prophecy would be fulfilled after Israel is gathered."

¹⁹ A snake or serpent, נָחָשׁ.

²⁰ President John Taylor quoted Parley P. Pratt, from Voice of Warning, stating that it cannot be described better (see pp. 110–122).

VERSIONS AND COMMENTARIES: The Targum (T)

Quoted in Taylor, John. The Government of God. Liverpool: S. W. Richards, 1852. Ch. 12.

²¹ Smith, Joseph Fielding. The Restoration of All Things. Salt Lake City: Deseret Book, 1973, p. 292.

²² Smith, Joseph Fielding. Church History and Modern Revelation. Salt Lake City, Utah: The Council of The Twelve Apostles of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, p. 16.

reads, "They shall not hurt nor destroy in all my holy mountain, for the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the fear of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea." The LXX (G) has, "And they shall not hurt, nor shall they at all be able to destroy anyone on my holy mountain: for the whole world is filled with the knowledge of the Lord, as much water covers the seas." Cheyne explains, "... it is by no means certain that 'mountain' in the passages mentioned means the Holy Land.—The next clause shows that the harmlessness of the animals on the holy mountain is only a symbol of 'paradise regained' throughout the whole world." Barnes says, regarding the expression waters cover the sea, "The vast waters of the ocean cover its depths, find their way into all the caverns, flow into all the recesses on the shore—and thus shall the knowledge of Jehovah spread like deep, flowing waters, until the earth shall be pervaded and covered with it."

vv. 10–16. Isaiah now he turns to the gathering of Israel and to the punishment of those who oppress His people. Regarding this great event, Zechariah says: "And I will strengthen the house of Judah, and I will save the house of Joseph, and I will bring them again to place them; for I have mercy upon them: and they shall be as though I had not cast them off: for I am the LORD their God, and will hear them. And they of Ephraim shall be like a mighty man, and their heart shall rejoice as through wine: yea, their children shall see it, and be glad; their heart shall rejoice in the LORD. I will hiss for them, and gather them; for I have redeemed them: and they shall increase as they have increased. And I will sow them among the people: and they shall remember me in far countries; and they shall live with their children, and turn again [וְשָׁבוּ]" (Zechariah 10:6–9).

10 ¶ And in that day there shall be a root of Jesse, which shall stand for an ensign of the people; to it shall the Gentiles seek; and his rest shall be glorious.

And in that day there shall be a root of Jesse, which shall stand for an ensign of the people; to it shall the Gentiles seek. "What is the *root of Jesse*²³ spoken of in the 10th verse of the 11th chapter? Behold, thus saith the Lord, it is a descendant of Jesse, as well as of Joseph,²⁴ unto whom rightly belongs the priesthood, and the keys of the kingdom, for an ensign, and for the gathering of my people in the last days” (D&C 11:5–6). ¶ Victor Ludlow quotes HC 6:363–64: “The Savior said ... the keys of knowledge, power and revelations should be revealed to a witness who should hold the testimony to the world ... The testimony is that the Lord in the last days would commit the keys of the priesthood to a witness over all people ... a special messenger—ordained and prepared for that purpose in the last days.” This special messenger that will help the world turn its gaze to the Savior is the Prophet Joseph Smith. ¶ The Prophet would play an integral part in the Lord’s restoration of the Gospel of Jesus Christ upon the earth, and thus we read: “[The Angel Moron] quoted the eleventh chapter of Isaiah, saying that it was about to be fulfilled” (JS-History 1:40b). ¶ And his rest shall be glorious. Before his martyrdom, the Prophet Joseph Smith began to send the ensign of the Gospel of Jesus Christ to the nations. “Joseph Smith, the Prophet and Seer of the Lord, has done more, save Jesus only, for the salvation of men in this world, than any other man that ever lived in it. In the short space of twenty years, he has brought forth the Book of Mormon, which he translated by the gift and power of God, and has been the means of publishing it on two continents; has sent the fulness of the everlasting gospel, which it contained, to the four quarters of the earth ... and left a fame and name that cannot be slain. He lived great, and he died great in the eyes of God and his people; and like most of the Lord’s anointed in ancient times, has sealed his mission and his works with his own blood; and so has his brother Hyrum. In life they were not divided, and in death they were not separated! ... The testators are now dead, and their testament is in force ... and in the midst of the throne and of the four beasts, and in the midst of the elders, stood a Lamb as it had been slain ...” (Revelation 5:1–6a).

²³ The root of Jesse is not to be confused with the ROOT OF DAVID in the book of Revelation. "And I saw in the right hand of him that sat on the throne a book written within and on the backside, sealed with seven seals. And I saw a strong angel proclaiming with a loud voice, Who is worthy to open the book, and to loose the seals thereof? And no man in heaven, nor in earth, neither under the earth, was able to open the book, neither to look thereon. And I wept much, because no man was found worthy to open and to read the book, neither to look thereon. And one of the elders saith unto me, Weep not: behold, the Lion of the tribe of Juda, the Root of David, hath prevailed to open the book, and to loose the seven seals thereof. And I beheld, and, lo,

²⁴ So, if Brother Joseph is a descendant of Ephraim how can he be a descendant of Ephraim and Judah? Hyrum L. Andrus wrote, “Brigham Young apparently understood the rights and promises of the divine patriarchal order; he believed that the [Prophet \[Joseph Smith\]](#) was a legal heir to its presidency in the last days. He spoke of Joseph Smith as ‘a pure Ephraimite,’ not that he had only the blood of Ephraim in his veins, but that ‘his descent from Joseph that was sold into Egypt was direct, and the blood was pure in him.’ ‘That is why the Lord chose him,’ President Young explained. ‘The decrees of the Almighty will be exalted—that blood which was in him was pure and he had the sole right and lawful power [to receive and exercise the keys of the priesthood in the flesh], as he was the legal heir to the blood that has been on the earth and has come down through a pure lineage.’ Because President Young understood that the line of Joseph Smith’s descent had been revealed, he affirmed: ‘I know who has the right to the Keys—the Prophet has!’ The latter-day Seer had ‘the blood and the Priesthood’ to extend the divine order to others. ‘The keys will rest upon the Prophet,’ President Young emphasized, ‘and there is no power on earth or in hell to take it from him.’” (Doctrines of the Kingdom, p.538.)

henceforward their names will be classed among the martyrs of religion; and the reader in every nation will be reminded that the Book of Mormon, and this book of Doctrine and Covenants of the church, cost the best blood of the nineteenth century to bring them forth for the salvation of a ruined world; and that if the fire can scathe a green tree for the glory of God, how easy it will burn up the dry trees to purify the vineyard of corruption. They lived for glory; they died for glory; and glory is their eternal reward. From age to age shall their names go down to posterity as gems for the sanctified ... and their innocent blood on the banner of liberty, and on the magna charta of the United States, is an ambassador for the religion of Jesus Christ, that will touch the hearts of honest men among all nations ...” (D&C 135:3–7). So Elder John Taylor was inspired by what he wrote in regard to our dear Brother and Prophet Joseph Smith in speaking both about the ensign and ambassador of truth as well as his glorious rest, that is, life eternal and exaltation. Through the Prophet of the restoration we received revelation, the Book of Mormon and other Scripture, Priesthood keys and authority, and the ordinances of salvation. ¶ Each disciple of Christ may so be lifted up, as the Savior taught: “... for the works which ye have seen me do that shall ye also do; for that which ye have seen me do even that shall ye do; Therefore, if ye do these things blessed are ye, for ye shall be lifted up at the last day” (3 Nephi 27:21b–22). VERSIONS AND COMMENTARIES: The Targum (Ⓢ) has, “And there shall be at that time a son of the son of Jesse, who shall stand for an ensign of the people; kings shall obey Him, and the place of His dwelling shall be in glory.” The LXX (Ⓛ) renders it: “And in that day there shall be a root of Jesse, and he that shall arise to rule over the Gentiles; in him shall the Gentiles trust, and his rest shall be glorious.”

11 And it shall come to pass in that day [\[that\]](#) the Lord shall set his hand again the second time to recover the remnant of his people which shall be left, from Assyria, and from Egypt, and from Pathros, and from Cush, and from Elam, and from Shinar, and from Hamath, and from the islands of the sea.

The expression וְהָיָה בַּיּוֹם, “and it shall come to pass in that day” is an eschatological one. If the Lord would put forth His hand the second time to gather Israel, when was the first time? Exegetes tend to disagree here between the Egyptian captivity and the Babylonian. In scripture, the miraculous rescue from Egypt is preeminent. Only the final gathering would overshadow the importance of the Egyptian one. “Therefore, behold, the days come, saith the LORD, that it shall no more be said, The LORD liveth, that brought up the children of Israel out of the land of Egypt; But, The LORD liveth, that brought up the children of Israel from the land of the north, and from all the lands whither he had driven them: and I will bring them again into their land that I gave unto their fathers.” (Jeremiah 16:14–15). Besides, the Babylonian diaspora had yet to take place at the time of Isaiah, and the Lord is unlikely to have used it as an example of how the Lord’s hand had rescued Israel. It was the delivery out of Egypt, which was a type and a shadow of both a literal gathering in the last days, as well as of a spiritual delivery, as promised in Rain in Due Season, Deuteronomy 30:1–10. ¶ Speaking of the Lord setting “his hand again the second time to recover the remnants of his people” the Prophet Joseph Smith has made it clear that “the time has at last arrived” for the fulfillment of this Isaianic scripture (TPJS, p. 14–15). And so it has been. Missionaries have gone forth to almost every corner of the globe and every year take the good news of the Gospel to other remote areas. The descendants of Jacob, beginning with Ephraim and Manasseh have begun to come into the Church by the millions. The day will soon be when descendants from all twelve tribes, including Judah, will join in great numbers from every corner of the earth. The story of the bringing forth of the children of Israel into the Church through the Lamanite line is truly beautiful. While space could not hold this fascinating and uplifting account, I would like to include a few words on the subject. Elder Orson Pratt explained that in the early Church history little had happened to help bring the Lamanites into the fold and the early members were almost discouraged. And then suddenly, this all began to change. They came from hundreds of miles away desiring baptism. “They say that men came to them in their dreams, and spoke to them in their own language, and told them that away yonder was a people who had authority from God to baptize them; but that they must repent of their sins, cease their evil habits and lay aside the traditions of their fathers, for they were false ...”²⁵ I am a witness that these things are true, that the Lamanite nations are joining the Church and that many have had such dreams. An even greater movement occurred in 1946 when Elder Spencer W. Kimball was called to work among the Lamanites by President George Albert Smith, in fulfillment to his patriarchal blessing.²⁶ And the word is to go out not to the Lamanite only, but also the Jew, as explained in these beautiful words by President Joseph Fielding Smith: “The time is now at hand spoken by ancient prophets when the Lord shall feel after them. The words of Isaiah are now being fulfilled: [ISAIAH 11:10–12 are quoted here.] Since the British mandate has been established in Palestine, the Jews are returning. The curse has been taken off the land and before many years have passed away they will again be worthy to enter into covenant with the Lord.”²⁷ VERSIONS AND COMMENTARIES: The LXX (6) renders the beginning of this verse, “And it shall be in that day, that the Lord shall again shew his hand, to be zealous for the remnant that is left of the people” The word translated as recover in the KJV is given a very powerful meaning by Alexander, with an allusion to the expiatory sacrifice of our Savior: “קָנִיתִי... does not mean merely to possess (Vulgate), but to acquire (Luther), especially by purchase, and so to redeem from bondage and oppression (Vitranga).”

12 And he shall set up an ensign for the nations, and shall assemble the outcasts of Israel, and gather together the dispersed of Judah from the four corners of the earth.

✓ wings

Here the ensign stands for the restored Gospel. The expression “for the nations” or “to the nations” is the proper translation, here of לְגוֹיִם. This shows that all are invited, and none excluded from coming unto Christ. ISAIAH 11:10 should also have been translated nations, rather than Gentiles. Elder Parley P. Pratt said, “Here you behold an ensign to be reared for the nations; not only for the dispersed of Judah, but the outcast of Israel. The Jews are called dispersed, because they are scattered among the nations; but the ten tribes are called outcasts, because they are cast out from the knowledge of the nations into a land by themselves. Now, the reader will bear in mind that the ten tribes have not dwelt in the land of Canaan since they were led captive by Shalmanezzer, king of Assyria.”²⁸ Elder Bruce R. McConkie wrote, “That ensign, the fullness of the everlasting gospel, has now been raised; and that ²⁵ Orson Pratt, Journal of Discourses. 26 vols. London: Latter-day Saints’ Book Depot, 1854–1886. Volume 24, April 11, 1875, p. 19.

²⁶ Elder Spencer W. Kimball (then a member of the Quorum of the Twelve), April 13, 1965. “Lamanite Prophecies Fulfilled,” An address given to the Brigham Young University Student body, pp. 4–16.

²⁷ Smith, Joseph Fielding. The Way to Perfection: Short Discourses on Gospel Themes. “Assembling the Outcasts of Israel” 9th ed. Salt Lake City: Genealogical Society of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, 1951. p. 134–135.

²⁸ Pratt, Parley P. A Voice of Warning and Instruction to All People Or, an Introduction to the Faith and Doctrine of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints By Elder Parley P. Pratt. New Edition. Salt Lake City: The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, 1957. Included is the preface to the First American Edition (1837) and the Second European Edition (December 4, 1846). P.35 trumpet, the gospel trumpet, is now sounding its clarion call.”²⁹ An commemorative Ensign was raised in what is called Ensign Peak in Utah, “Two days after the Mormon Pioneers entered this valley, Brigham Young and party climbed to that point, and with the aid of field glasses, made a careful survey of the mountains, canyons and streams. In addition to Brigham Young, the party included Heber C. Kimball, Wilford Woodruff, George A. Smith, Ezra Taft Benson, Willard Richards, Albert Carrington and William Clayton. ‘It was suggested that this would be a fitting place to “set up an ensign for the nations” where the Lord “shall assemble the outcasts of Israel, and gather together the dispersed of Judah from the four corners of the earth,” as foretold in ISAIAH 11:12. It was then named Ensign Peak, and in later years a standard was erected on its summit.”³⁰

13 The envy also of Ephraim shall depart, and the adversaries of Judah shall be cut off; Ephraim shall not envy Judah, and Judah shall not vex Ephraim.

The envy also of Ephraim shall depart. / Ephraim shall not envy Judah. After the civil war that divided the nation of Israel into Ephraim (the northern ten tribes) and Judah (the southern two tribes), there was much enmity between the both. Judah had the true temple cult, and Ephraim, in a spirit of envy, constructed two false temples to compete with Judah. “Elder [LeGrand] Richards then suggests that ‘we of Ephraim should lead out in establishing this friendly relationship, for we are to take the everlasting gospel to the Jewish people, including the Book of Mormon, which was preserved for “the convincing of the Jew and Gentile that Jesus is the Christ, the Eternal God, manifesting himself unto all nations’ (see title page to the Book of Mormon). He continues by saying that it will be through our doing this and their being restored to the church and fold of God that they ‘shall be sanctified in holiness before the Lord to dwell in his presence day and night forever and ever.”³¹ Also see Ezekiel 37:22, 24, about the unity between Judah and Ephraim under one King, even Christ. ¶ And the adversaries of Judah shall be cut off / And Judah shall not vex Ephraim. Sperry likewise explains, “The gathered remnants of Israel will not harass and vex each other as they did in ancient times after they were divided politically. Ephraim, representing the Northern tribes, and Judah, representing those to the South will, under the gospel banner, get along amicably, each with the other.”³²

²⁹ McConkie, Bruce R. A New Witness for the Articles of Faith. Salt Lake City, Utah: Deseret Book Company, 1985. p. 536.

³⁰ “Marker Memorializes ‘Ensign To Nations,’” LDS Church News, Deseret News. 29 July 1989. Salt Lake City: Deseret News Publishing Company.

³¹ Tate, Lucile C. LeGrand Richards: Beloved Apostle. Salt Lake City, Utah: Bookcraft, 1982.

14 But they shall fly upon the shoulders of the Philistines towards the west; they shall spoil them of the east together; they shall lay their hand upon Edom and Moab; and the children of Ammon shall obey them.

- ✓ the children of
- ✓ ✓ Edom and Moab shall be the laying on their hand
- ✓ ✓ ✓ their obedience

But they shall fly upon the shoulders of the Philistines towards the west; they shall spoil them of the east together. The Targum (Ⲯ) reads: “They shall be united in one mind (literally, one shoulder) to smite the Philistines towards the west.” United Israel (Judah and Ephraim) under the Gospel would be able to stand against their enemies by the border of the Philistines toward the sea (now the area of the Gaza Strip in Palestine and elsewhere). ¶ They shall lay their hand upon Edom and Moab; and the children of Ammon shall obey them. After attacking the Philistines, Israel would fall upon her other former enemies, including Edom and Moab.

15 And the LORD shall utterly destroy the tongue of the Egyptian sea; and with his mighty wind he shall shake his hand over the river, and shall smite it in the seven streams, and make [men] go over dryshod.

- ✓ in shoes

Regarding the לְשׁוֹן יַם־מִצְרַיִם “Tongue of the Egyptian sea” Gill has, “Which Kimhi and Abarbinel interpret of the Egyptian river Sichor, or the Nile; others of a bay of the Egyptian sea, so called because in the form of a tongue; the destroying of it designs the drying of it up, so that people might pass over it dry shod; the allusion is to the drying up of the Red Sea, when the Israelites came out of Egypt, and passed through it, as on dry land....” The expression הַנָּהָר “the river,” we said, often stands for the Euphrates. Elder Orson Pratt wrote: “The Lord says in the sixteenth chapter— ‘Behold the days shall come when it shall no more be said the Lord liveth that brought up the children of Israel out of the land of Egypt;’ but instead of that saying, there will be another more glorious saying, namely that ‘the Lord liveth who brought up the children of Israel from the north country, and from all other countries whither he had driven them.’ ... But notwithstanding they have retained this saying, it will be one day done away, superseded by the manifestations of God’s power in bringing Israel from the north country and all other countries whither they have been scattered, and gathering them to their own land. The Israel of the latter day has got to cross the sea dry shod, just as ancient Israel did. It is thus predicted in the eleventh chapter of Isaiah.”³³ Elder Parley P. Pratt wrote, “We have also presented before us, in the 15th verse, the marvelous power of God, which will be displayed in the destruction of a small branch of the Red Sea, called the tongue of the Egyptian Sea: and also the dividing of the seven streams of some river, and causing men to go over dryshod; and lest any should not understand it literally, the next verse says, ‘there shall be an highway for the remnant of his people, which shall be left, from Assyria; like as it was to Israel in the day that he came up out of the land of Egypt.’”³⁴

³² Sperry, Sidney B. Book of Mormon Compendium. Salt Lake City, Utah: Bookcraft, 1968. 2nd Book of Nephi, p. 228.

VERSIONS AND COMMENTARIES: The Targum (ⲧ) reads, “And the Lord shall dry up the tongue of the Egyptian sea; and shall lift up the stroke of His strength upon Euphrates by the word of his prophets, and shall smite it in seven streams, and men shall walk through it dryshod (literally, with sandals).” The LXX (Ⲭ) reading (as well as the Syriac, Ⲫ) is particularly interesting, in respects to a strong wind,³⁵ “And the Lord shall make desolate the sea of Egypt; and he shall lay his hand on the river with a strong wind, and he shall smite the seven channels, so that men shall pass through it dryshod.” In terms of the seven streams, Henderson adds, “i.e., completely into rivulets or torrents, and so dry up the Euphrates; the number seven being employed to express perfection or completeness. The appropriateness of the figure lies in the multitude of canals into which the Euphrates was divided....”

16 And there shall be an highway for the remnant of his people which shall be left,

³³ Orson Pratt, Journal of Discourses. 26 vols. London: Latter-day Saints’ Book Depot, 1854–1886. Volume 24, April 11, 1875, p. 24.

³⁴ Pratt, Parley P. A Voice of Warning and Instruction to All People Or, an Introduction to the Faith and Doctrine of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints By Elder Parley P. Pratt. New Edition. Salt Lake City: The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, 1957. Included is the preface to the First American Edition (1837) and the Second European Edition (December 4, 1846). P.35 from Assyria, like as it was to Israel in the day that he came up out of the land of Egypt.

³⁵ “And Moses stretched out his hand over the sea; and the LORD caused the sea to go back by a strong east wind all that night, and made the sea dry land, and the waters were divided” (Exodus 14:21).

And there shall be an highway for the remnant of his people which shall be left. Elder Bruce R. McConkie said, “... those who are left because they have abided the day of our Lord’s coming shall find a highway to lead them to their appointed gathering places. It shall then be, Isaiah says, ‘like as it was to Israel in the day that he came up out of the land of Egypt’ (ISAIAH 11:16). As the Lord provided a highway through the Red Sea for his people anciently, as they traveled to their promised land, so will he provide a way for them to travel in the latter days. Our latter-day revelation, after stating that the great deep shall be driven back into the north countries and that the continents shall become one land, states that ‘they who are in the north countries,’ meaning the Ten Tribes, shall return. ‘And an highway shall be cast up in the midst of the great deep’ for them (D&C 133:23–27). Would we go too far astray if we were to suggest that the highway is created by the joined landmasses, and that as ancient Israel found a dry path through the Red Sea, so latter-day Israel will find a dry path where the Atlantic Ocean once was? It is at least a thought to ponder, for surely we are expected to seek for interpretations relative to all that has been revealed concerning the Lord and his coming.”³⁶ Nyman wrote, “The remnant which left from Assyria are, of course, the ten tribes who were taken into the north. The apocryphal book of 2 Esdras tells of miracles which will attend their return like those that attended their departure: ‘Then they dwelt there until the last times; and now, when they are about to come again, the Most High will stop the channels of the river again, so that they may be able to pass over. Therefore you saw the multitude gathered together in peace’ (2 Esdras 13:46–47). And the Doctrine and Covenants gives an even more sure prophecy of the event spoken of in Isaiah (see D&C 133:26–33).

President Joseph Fielding Smith refers to the entire eleventh chapter of Isaiah in speaking of the lost tribes coming to their brother Ephraim, the firstborn in Israel, to receive their crowning blessings (see DS, 3:252).”

VERSIONS AND COMMENTARIES: The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “And there shall be a passage for my people, that is left in Egypt: and it shall be to Israel as the day when he came forth out of the land of Egypt.” Alexander suggests that the word מִסְלָה does not represent a path or natural way left after people traverse it, but rather is “an artificial road formed by casting up the earth (from ³⁶ McConkie, Bruce R. The Millennial Messiah. Salt Lake City, Utah: Deseret Book Company, p. 624.

לְלִי to raise),” which fits nicely with Elder McConkie’s thoughts, above. Regarding the remnant that shall return, Barnes makes some interesting comments. Many of the commentators are very anti-Semitic, but here are some remarks which I like and can identify with very much: “The Jews, when converted, make the best missionaries. There is a freshness in their views of the Messiah when they are converted, which Gentile converts seldom feel. The apostles were all Jews; and the zeal of Paul shows what converted Jews will do when they become engaged in making known the true Messiah ... We have every reason therefore, to expect that God intends to make great use of the Jews, whom he has preserved scattered everywhere—though they be but a ‘remnant’—in converting the world to his Son. And we should most fervently pray, that they may be imbued with love to their long-rejected Messiah [that they may become missionaries for Christ].” As a tribe, however, we know that Judah will be the last to be gathered in.

FIRST POSTED: 4 October 2002

Isaiah 12

ISAIAH 12 is a beautiful Psalm to the Lord (or two of them). This is a song of praise to God sung by those who will be redeemed in the last days, as part of the gathering of the children of Jacob. Isaiah sees future Israel singing praises to the Lord. According to Cheyne, and most expositors, this is “The song of the reunited and restored people, with whom the Prophet unites himself in spirit. It is the counterpart of the Song of Moses in Exodus 15; indeed, verse 2b is adopted from Exodus 15:2, and verse 5a alludes to the beginning of the song, Exodus 15:1.” Ludlow well reminds us of the Psalm found in D&C 84: “For I, the Almighty, have laid my hands upon the nations, to scourge them for their wickedness. And plagues shall go forth, and they shall not be taken from the earth until I have completed my work, which shall be cut short in righteousness—Until all shall know me, who remain, even from the least unto the greatest, and shall be filled with the knowledge of the Lord, and shall see eye to eye, and shall lift up their voice, and with the voice together sing this new song, saying: The Lord hath brought again Zion; The Lord hath redeemed his people, Israel, According to the election of grace, Which was brought to pass by the faith And covenant of their fathers. The Lord hath redeemed his people; And Satan is bound and time is no longer. The Lord hath gathered all things in one. The Lord hath brought down Zion from above. The Lord hath brought up Zion from beneath. The earth hath travailed and brought forth her strength; And truth is established in her bowels; And the heavens have smiled upon her; And she is clothed with the glory of her God; For he stands in the midst of his people. Glory, and honor, and power, and might, Be ascribed to our God; for he is full of mercy, Justice, grace and truth, and peace, Forever and ever, Amen” (D&C 84:96–102).

vv 1–3. On behalf of those gathered into Israel, Isaiah sings praises to the Lord, his strength, song and salvation. Regarding this song, Barnes says, “This song is far better applied to the times of the Messiah.”

1 ¶ AND in that day thou shalt say: O LORD, I will praise thee; though thou wast angry with me thine anger is turned away, and thou comfortedest me.

AND in that day [בַּיּוֹם] thou shalt say: O LORD, I will praise thee. The Targum (T) reads, “And thou shalt say at that time, I will confess¹ before Thee, O Lord.” Expressions of praise for the Lord are born out of gratitude for His great expiatory sacrifice on our behalf. ¶ Though thou wast angry with me thine anger is turned away, and thou comfortedest me. The Hebrew כִּי, the explanatory for or though, is used here. The LXX (G) reads, “For thou wast angry with me, but thou hast turned aside thy wrath, and hast pitied me.” Henry observes that “God sometimes brings his people into a wilderness that there he may speak comfortably to them.” Kay well observes that we can be full of gratitude when the Lord shows us His displeasure and thus guides us into repentance, “They can even thank Him for His severe discipline: which would not let them glide on smoothly to ruin. His wrath was but the ‘jealousy’ of true love.” Young states, “Isaiah [writes] as though the entire nation were but one man. The people are thus seen to be united in their praise of God.”

2 Behold, God [is] my salvation; I will trust, and not be afraid; for the LORD JEHOVAH [is] my strength and [my] song; he also is has become my salvation.

Behold, God is my salvation; I will trust, and not be afraid. As Daniel Ludlow observed, “The phrase ‘God is my salvation!’ is actually a play on Isaiah’s own given name, as his name has this exact meaning and uses the same Hebrew root.”² As mentioned by Cheyne, this verse is similar to the praise given by Moses: “The Lord is my strength and song, and he is become my salvation: he is my God, and I will prepare him an habitation; my father’s God, and I will exalt him” (Exodus 15:2, see also Psalm 118:14). ¶ For the LORD JEHOVAH is my strength and my song; he also has become my salvation. Once we recognize that the Lord is our Strength, our Stay and our Staff, then naturally we will desire to sing unto Him praises. The Hebrew (M) reads יהוה יְהוָה, or, “Yah Yahweh.” We see the word יהוה used only two other time in ISAIAH (26:4; 38:11). In both instances it appears as יהוה יְהוָה. The expression יהוה is frequently used in Psalms, although in the KJV we only see it used once, “Sing unto God, sing praises to his name: extol him that rideth upon the heavens by his name JAH, and rejoice before him” (Psalms 68:4). The word יְהוָה appears first in Exodus 15:2, and is used 44 times in the Old Testament. In the KJV the word יְהוָה Jehovah appears four times, as for the most part it is substituted for LORD. Two of these times are in ISAIAH: here and in the similar spot in 26:4. The other two are found in Exodus and Psalms (see also notes on ISAIAH 1:2).

¹ Or, praise, thank (see, CAL Targum Lexicon)

² Ludlow, Daniel H. A Companion to Your Study of the Old Testament. Salt Lake City, Utah: Desert Book, 1981.

3 Therefore, with joy shall ye draw water out of the wells of salvation.

The waters out of the well of salvation are the very same ones that the Savior invited the Samaritan woman to partake, “There cometh a woman of Samaria to draw water: Jesus saith unto her, Give me to drink ... Jesus answered and said unto her, If thou knewest the gift of God, and who it is that saith to thee, Give me to drink; thou wouldest have asked of him, and he would have given thee living water ... Jesus answered and said unto her, Whosoever drinketh of this water shall thirst again: But whosoever drinketh of the water that I shall give him shall never thirst; but the water that I shall give him shall be in him a well of water springing up into everlasting life” (John 4:7, 10, 13–14). In Jeremiah 2:13 we read that the Lord is “the fountain of living waters.” LDS and other exegetes alike suggest that this verse also has reference to the Holy Ghost, which bears witness that Jesus is the Christ. Lowth explains: “On the last day of the feast of tabernacles, they fetched water in a golden pitcher from the fountain of Siloah, springing at the foot of Mount Sion without the city; they brought it through the water-gate into the temple, and poured it, mixed with wine, on the sacrifice as it lay upon the altar, with great rejoicing. They seem to have taken up this custom, for it is not ordained in the law of Moses, as an emblem of future blessings, in allusion to this passage of Isaiah, ‘Ye shall draw waters with joy from the fountains of salvation:’ —(Jerusalem Talmud) ... Our Saviour applied the ceremony, and the intention of it, to himself, and to the effusion of the Holy Spirit, promised, and to be given, by him. The sense of the Jews in this matter is plainly shown by the following passage of the Jerusalem Talmud: ‘Why is it called the place, or house, of drawing?’ (for that was the term for this ceremony, or for the place where the water was taken up:) ‘Because from thence they draw the Holy Spirit; as it is written, And ye shall draw water with joy from the fountains of salvation’ (see Wolf. Curac Philol. In N. T. on John 7:37, 39).”

vv. 4–6. On behalf of restored Israel, Isaiah praises the Lord, declares His greatness, and exhorts us to share the knowledge of the Lord with others.

4 ¶ And in that day shall ye say: Praise the LORD, call upon his name, ✓ declare his doings among the people, make mention that his name is exalted.

✓ or, proclaim

And in that day shall ye say: Praise the LORD, call upon his name. We can call upon God the Father through the name of Jesus Christ. When we pass from this mortality, it will be the Savior who will be the keeper of the gate: “O then, my beloved brethren, come unto the Lord, the Holy One. Remember that his paths are righteous. Behold, the way for man is narrow, but it lieth in a straight course before him, and the keeper of the gate is the Holy One of Israel; and he employeth no servant there; and there is none other way save it be by the gate; for he cannot be deceived, for the Lord God is his name” (2 Nephi 9:41). ¶ Declare his doings among the people, make mention that his name is exalted. The Targum (ܬܪܓܡܐ) has, “Praise the Lord (literally, praise before the Lord), pray in His name, declare His doings among the people, remember ye that powerful is His name.” The LXX (Λ) and Syriac (ܣ) use Gentiles, but indeed, the KJV is correct in saying “among the people” בְּעַמִּים. This is an exhortation to share the Gospel with others once we have found it ourselves. Yeah, make mention that His name is exalted! Delitzsch would translate as, “Boast that His name is exalted.” In Alma we read the words of Ammon, in what could well be entitled the Psalm of Ammon: “Blessed be the name of our God; let us sing to his praise, yea, let us give thanks to his holy name, for he doth work righteousness forever ... I do not boast in my own strength, nor in my own wisdom; but behold, my joy is full, yea, my heart is brim with joy, and I will rejoice in my God.” (Alma 26:8, 11b, see also Alma 26: 8–16, Jeremiah 9:23–24). In this verse Henry speaks about sharing with others what we have come to know and love, “We must not only speak to God, but speak to others concerning him, not only call upon his name, but (as the margin|| reads it) proclaim his name; let others know something more from us than they did before concerning God, and those things whereby he has made himself known.” We must, indeed, invite all to come unto Christ. The Gospel is to be taken to every corner of the world, first to the Gentile Nations and then to the Jew, so that Israel can be gathered.

5 Sing unto the LORD; for he hath done excellent things: this [is] known in all the earth.

There is nothing more natural than bursting forth in expressions of love for the Lord, whether they are prose or song; whether expressed in loud voices, or the deepest feelings of our heart. Truly, the Lord has done excellent things. It is sweet to contemplate His loving kindness and His atoning sacrifice. We shall praise and sing and shout in thanksgiving, as is done in Solemn Assemblies with the Hosanna shout. For the Lord is Holy, yeah, three times Holy; קָדוֹשׁ קָדוֹשׁ קָדוֹשׁ, “Holy, holy, holy, [is] the LORD of hosts: the whole earth [is] full of his glory” (ISAIAH 6:3b). I have been greatly blessed of the Lord.

6 Cry out and shout, thou inhabitant ✓ of Zion; for great [is] the Holy One of Israel in the midst of thee.

✓ inhabitress

The Targum (ܬ) has, “Cry out and shout, O congregation of Zion, because He is great that promised to cause His Shekinah to dwell in the midst of thee, the Holy One of Israel.” Stenning renders it: “Shout for joy, and sing praises, O congregation of Zion; for the Great One hath promised to set his in thy midst, even the Holy One of Israel.” The term Shekinah שְׂכִינָה represents the dwelling place of the Lord, such as the Jerusalem Temple. The Lord shall dwell among His people.

FIRST POSTED: 11 April 2003

Isaiah 13

Regarding ISAIAH 13 and 14, Lowth says, “The former part of this prophecy is one of the most beautiful examples, that can be given, of elegance of composition, variety of imagery, and sublimity of sentiment and diction, in the prophetic style; and the latter part consists of an ode of supreme and singular excellence.” Isaiah was permitted to see into the future, to see (1) the role that Babylon would play in terms of punishing disobedient Judah, as well as (2) the eventual downfall of Babylon. Robert W. Rogers, after writing about the great history of Babylon concludes his book with, “The glory of Babylon is ended. The long procession of princes, priests, and kings has passed by. No city so vast had stood on the world before it. No city with a history so long has even yet appeared. From the beginnings of human history it had stood. It was in other hands now, and it would soon be a shapeless mass of ruins, standing along in a sad, untilled desert” (History of Babylonia and Assyria, Volume II). Babylon represents not only the ancient kingdom that was brought down to her knees, but also the dark side of the world. Henderson says, “Babylon was the seat of science, especially astronomy; the center of ancient idolatry; the storehouse of wealth and magnificence; and the asylum of all that was revolting in licentiousness and immorality.” Much is said about Babylon in Jeremiah, Ezekiel, Daniel, Micah, Zechariah, as well as in the New Testament. The Book of Revelation speaks of Babylon’s eventual fall, “Babylon is fallen, is fallen” (Revelation 14:8b). In D&C we are commanded, “Go ye out from among the nations, even from Babylon, from the midst of wickedness, which is spiritual Babylon” (D&C 133:14). This chapter marks the first of eleven dedicated to the nations. Many of these begin with the words the “burden,” and then address a particular nation. There are nine nations or regions that receive such burdens, beginning with Babylon. Then follow Moab (15:1), Damascus (17:1), Egypt (19:1), the “desert of the sea” (21:1), Dumah (21:11), Arabia (21:13), the “valley of vision” (22:1), and end with Tyre (23:1). Calvin makes some important points about the destruction of Babel: “It may be asked, Was this destruction [that would happen upon Babylon] as cruel as Isaiah here describes it to be? For history gives a different account and Daniel himself, who was an eye-witness of this destruction, relates that the city was only taken, for the Medes and Persians spared the citizens and inhabitants ... Now, when he declares that Babylon will be utterly destroyed, it is certain that he does not merely describe a single calamity, but includes the destruction which followed long afterwards. After having been subdued by the Persians, Babylon continued to flourish, and held the name and rank of a very celebrated city ... Having been gradually weakened, not long afterwards, Babylon again changed its master, and, after having been governed for a short period by Alexander, king of Macedon, immediately passed under the dominion of Seleucus, who endeavoured by every method to degrade it till it was completely ruined. Thus, so long as God permitted the city to remain in existence, it presented a shameful and revolting spectacle to the whole world, that the accomplishment of the prophecy might be more evident and more impressive. Hence the Prophet Isaiah has good reason for asserting that the anger of God will not be appeased till that den of robbers be utterly destroyed.”

vv. 1–5. The hosts are being commanded by the Lord of Hosts, and are ready to attack Babylon and destroy her strength. It is the word of the Lord that we hear in ISAIAH 13:2–3. All is set up for the great battle between good and evil.

1 ¶ THE burden of Babylon, which Isaiah the son of Amoz did see.

The word burden (בִּשָּׁא) is sometimes translated as prophecy or oracle.¹ Young explains that the minatory, or menacing, nature of the word is not universal. Here we do have a prophecy of a threatening nature, however, such that the word burden fits quite well. This prophecy of doom fell upon Babel, or Babylonia, מִשָּׂא בָבֶל. The prophecy was given to Isaiah, the son of Amoz, in the form of a vision: חֶזֶן יִשְׁעִיהוּ בֶן-אֲמוֹץ. The Targum (ܬܪܓܡ) reads, “The burden of the cup of cursing to give to Babylon to drink, which Isaiah the son of Amoz did prophesy.” Many modern exegetes, intent in destroying the word of God, would love to assign this prophecy to someone other than Isaiah, for the vision predicts things way into the future. Many in the critical school believe that a

¹ Henderson points out that it can sometimes mean uttering, such as in the words spoken by King Lemuel, who in turn had been taught by his mother (see Proverbs 31:1). Henderson shows, how in several scriptures, the expression uttered words fits the Hebrew expression, such as in Zechariah 9:1: “מִשָּׂא דְּבַר-יְהוָה” speaking of the word of the Lord, such as might be translated, the utterance of the word of the LORD.

prophet is simply a wise man who can discern the signs of the times, rather than one who can peer into the future with the Lord's help. Delitzsch well says, "We may therefore see from this, that the prophecy relating to Babylon was originally complete in itself, and was intended to be issued in that form. But when the whole book was compiled, these headings were retained as signal-posts of the separate portions of which it was composed. Moreover, in the case before us, the retention of the heading may be regarded as a providential arrangement. For if this 'oracle of Babel' lay before us in a separate form, and without the name of Isaiah, we should not dare to attribute it to him, for the simple reason that the overthrow of the Chaldean empire is here distinctly announced, and that at a time when the Assyrian empire was still standing."

2 Lift ye up my* banner upon the high mountain, exalt the voice unto them, shake the hand, that they may go into the gates of the nobles.

* A banner in KJV and Book of Mormon, my in JST.

Lift ye up my banner upon the high mountain. These are the words of the LORD that He speaks through the mouth of Isaiah. As stated by Nyman, "... the Joseph Smith Translation reads 'my banner,' which clarifies that it was the Lord's banner which was to be raised."

Regarding the high mountain, הַר-נִשְׁפָּה there are a number of translations. Gesenius explains that נִשְׁפָּה means bare, bald or naked when used of a mountain. BDB also suggests that נִשְׁפָּה can mean bare as in the bare treeless height. נִשְׁפָּה, based on the Arabian, means to appear, become visible, conspicuous, lofty, prominent, to stand out, and elevated place (AHCL). When mountains are very high, they certainly do not have vegetation on them, as the Andes Mountains, for instance. The scriptures, then, talk about raising a standard or an ensign on a high mountain where it could be seen. Two types of standards are frequently mentioned by Isaiah: one of them to call people to battle; the other to invite people unto Christ. In a spiritual sense, they are the same, "For we wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places" (Ephesians 6:12). Perhaps no more eloquent invitation to leave Babylon and come unto Christ can be found than in the Preface to the Doctrine and Covenants (D&C 1:1–39 as well as D&C 133:1–74). From a historical perspective, most exegetes here speak of the Medes being called to topple Babylon. ¶ Exalt the voice unto them, shake the hand, that they may go into the gates of the nobles. The LXX (6) says, "Exalt the voice to them, beckon with the hand." Henderson, instead of the raising of the voice unto them, הָרִימוּ קוֹל לָהֶם, can also imagine the voice of a trumpet (as does Barnes), קוֹל שׁוֹפָר (or, voice of the shophar, made of a ram's horn, see Jeremiah 4:21). Henderson explains that the לָהֶם, unto them, "is anticipative, and refers to the warriors under Cyrus, not named but further described [in] ISAIAH 13:3 and expressly stated [in] ISAIAH 13:17, to be the Medes. It can also be understood to be the hosts of God's army. Delitzsch suggests that the conquering armies will enter through the gates reserved for the nobles, "The destination of this army is to enter into a city of princes ... namely, to enter as conquerors; for it is not the princes who invite them, but Jehovah." Several commentators, including Henry, feel that the place is called the gates of the nobles on account of the "abundance of nobleman's houses that were in it." Nägelsbach supposed it might mean "the main gates of the hostile city, which alone (in contrast with the small side gates, figuratively called 'needle-eyes' –Matthew 19:24) serve for the entree of princes in pomp, in the present case for the victors. Still the expression occasions surprise." Barnes, leaning on Herodotus, explained: "The walls of Babylon are said by Herodotus to have been eighty-seven feet thick, and 350 high. They were built of brick, or clay dried in the sun, and not burned; and were cemented by a kind of glutinous earth, or bitumen, with which the adjacent region abounded. The whole city was surrounded by an immense ditch, from which this clay had been taken to make the walls of the city, and which, being always filled with water, contributed materially to its defence. There were 100 gates to the city, twenty-five on each side. These gates were solid brass. Between every two of them there were three tower, raised ten feet above the walls." Barnes adds, "If there was any ancient city that appeared to bid defiance to the attacks of enemies, or to the ravages of time, it was Babylon."

3 I have commanded my sanctified ones, I have also called my mighty ones, for mine anger, [even] is not upon them that rejoice in my highness.

The Targum (7) has, "I have commanded those that are prepared by me, I have also called together my mighty ones, that they may avenge my wrath upon them, my strength, and my praise." The sanctified ones, or 'my sanctified [or consecrated—Henderson; to be set apart, Barnes] ones' לְמִקְדָּשִׁי (from the verb, קִדַּשׁ) in the spiritual sense of this verse, are those who have been called to follow Christ in the last days, or the saints of the most High God. Most commentators speak of the emphatic role of “I” as in I myself (אני) have commanded, speaking of the LORD. Alexander explains, “The insertion of אני is not an idiom of the later Hebrew, as explained by Gesenius (Lehrg. P. 801), but as Maurer has correctly stated, an emphatic designation of God as the sole efficient agent, I myself, or I even I.” Calvin applies the label sanctified to those through whom the LORD would accomplish His work, that is, the Medes and the Persians: “[God] threatens, therefore, that Babylon shall be destroyed by the Medes and Persians, in the same manner as if they obeyed the call of God; for though they were prompted to battle by their own ambition, pride, and cruelty, yet God directed them, without [them] knowing it, to execute judgment.” ¶ More importantly, the sanctified are those who are involved in a spiritual fight for Zion and against Babylon. It is clear that the Lord is pleased with His servants who are true disciples and who rejoice in the Lord.

4 The noise of a the multitude in the mountains, like as of a great people; a tumultuous noise of the kingdoms of nations gathered together, the LORD of hosts mustereth the hosts of the battle.

✓ or, the likeness of

The noise of the multitude in the mountains, like as of a great people. Henderson explains: “The description is truly graphical. First, a tumultuous noise is heard, but not so distinctly as to discover the cause: then the appearance of a vast army presents itself; the din becomes louder and louder; and, at last, the hostile army is found to be so numerous, that it appears as if entire kingdoms had transferred their population, and were assembled for battle.” Alexander, and some after him, has noted that “The absence of verbs adds greatly to the vividness of the description. The sentence really consists of a series of exclamations, describing the impressions made successively upon the senses on an eye and ear witness.” In terms of the Medes and the Persians, Rawlinson well has, “The mention of ‘mountains’ here is very appropriate, both Media and Persia being, in the main, mountainous countries.” Nägelsbach calls this the Zagros mountains² but he rather thinks of this verse in a more spiritual or eschatological fashion, regarding a universal judgment that will fall upon the earth: “The army, then, which Jehovah musters, consists of people that have come from a far land, and from the end of heaven.” ¶ A tumultuous noise of the kingdoms of nations gathered together, the LORD of hosts mustereth the hosts of the battle. Henderson says, “To crown the whole [picture], Jehovah is introduced as inspecting the troops previous to the engagement.” Delitzsch imagines it, as troops running down the mountains in response to the invitation, “The command of Jehovah is quickly executed. The great army is already coming down from the mountains.” In Jeremiah we read, “Set ye up a standard in the land, blow the trumpet among the nations, prepare the nations against her, call together against her the kingdoms of Ararat, Minni, and Ashchenaz; appoint a captain against her; cause the horses to come up as the rough caterpillars. Prepare against her the nations with the kings of the Medes, the captains thereof, and all the rulers thereof, and all the land of his dominion. And the land shall tremble and sorrow: for every purpose of the LORD shall be performed against Babylon, to make the land of Babylon a desolation without an inhabitant” (Jeremiah 51:27–29). Henderson explains that Ararat is not only a mountain, but a region. Also, that the kings of the Medes probably refers to “satraps or viceroys ruling in the larger divisions of Media and Persia, who put themselves at the head of the quota of men which they severally brought into the field.” Alexander states that the verse is generic rather than specific in relation to a given mountain range as suggested by other commentators. “But these distinctions seem to rest upon a false view of the passage as a description of particular marches, battles, &c., rather than a generic picture of the whole series of events which ended in the downfall of Babylon.” The Berkeley edition has, “Listen, an uproar on the mountains as of a great multitude! Listen, an uproar of kingdoms, of nations assembling! The Lord of hosts is mustering a battle-host.” (See likewise also, ASV, Moffatt, Tanakh, NASB, NRSV, REB, NAB, NJB, AB, EB, AAT, to name a few.)

² Zagrus mons, now represented by the middle and southern portion of the mountains of Kurdistan.—Translators note to Nägelsbach.

5 They come from a far country, from the end of heaven, [even] yea, the LORD, and the weapons of his indignation, to destroy the whole land.

Several expositors explain that the ends of heaven has to do with where the heavens seem to meet the horizon. So Barnes explains, “The expression in the Hebrew, ‘From the end, or extreme part of heaven,’ means, the distant horizon by which the earth appears to be bounded, where the sky and the land seem to meet.” Barnes illustrates the point with Psalm 19 where the apparent circuit of the sun is described, “His going forth is from the end of the heaven, and his circuit unto the ends of it: and there is nothing hid from the heat thereof” (v. 6). While this may well be one meaning, there is no need to limit the ends of heaven to this definition as God is able to bring forth reinforcements from whence He pleases. Rawlinson makes this interesting observation, “With a most effective anthropomorphism, Jehovah is made to march with the army that he has mustered (ISAIAH 13:4) against the land that has provoked his wrath—i.e. Babylonia.” Likewise, the Lord will gather out of Babylon, or the world, the descendants of Israel from the ends of heaven: “If any of thine be driven out unto the outmost parts of heaven, from thence will the LORD thy God gather thee, and from thence will he fetch thee” (Deuteronomy 30:4, emphasis added³). Nägelsbach continues with an eschatological view: “The end that the LORD will accomplish by means of the ‘weapons of His indignation’ is: to overturn the whole earth. ‘The whole earth!’ For this judgment on Babylon belongs to ‘the day of the Lord.’ It is thus an integral part of the world’s judgment.”

vv. 6–18. Spiritual Babylon will be destroyed and then a description of physical Babylon’s destruction, and the fierce barbarism of those who would take her, is mentioned. Kay says, “Some of the language employed carries our thoughts far beyond the judgment on any single nation (ISAIAH 13:10, 11, 14). It is a world-wide visitation ...”

6 ¶ Howl ye; for the day of the LORD [is] at hand; it shall come as a destruction from the Almighty.

The Targum (T) reads, “Howl ye, for nigh is the day, ready to come from before the Lord; like spoil from before the Almighty it shall come.” ¶ Howl ye; for the day of the LORD is at hand. The day of the Lord, יְהוָה יוֹם, is an eschatological expression. It is a frequent expression in the scriptures. We read in Joel, “Alas for the day! for the day of the LORD is at hand, and as a destruction from the Almighty shall it come” (Joel 1:15); in Jeremiah, “For this is the day of the Lord GOD of hosts, a day of vengeance, that he may avenge him of his adversaries: and the sword shall devour, and it shall be satiate and made drunk with their blood: for the Lord GOD of hosts hath a sacrifice in the north country by the river Euphrates,” (Jeremiah 46:10); in Zephaniah, “The great day of the LORD is near, it is near, and hasteth greatly, even the voice of the day of the LORD: the mighty man shall cry there bitterly” (Zephaniah 1:14). The term is also used by Amos, Obadiah, and Malachi in its eschatological character.

³ To me, not only every quarter of the earth, but also from the Spirit world, will the Lord gather His people.

But who can escape the day? We read, “Seek ye the LORD, all ye meek of the earth, which have wrought his judgment; seek righteousness, seek meekness: it may be ye shall be hid in the day of the LORD’s anger”

(Zephaniah 2:3). The word קָרוֹב, which is translated as “at hand” in the KJV, means near. ¶ It shall come as a destruction from the Almighty. The destruction spoken off comes from the Almighty *יְהוָה*⁴, and thus it is an exquisite or perfect destruction (see also D&C 19:10–15).

7 Therefore shall all hands be faint, and every man’s heart shall melt;

✓ or, fall down

In the LXX (G) we read, Therefore every hand shall become powerless, and every soul of man shall be dismayed.” This verse is intended to reflect the absolute fear, panic and devastation in the faces and hearts of all those who are not prepared to meet the Lamb. Rawlinson suggests that the Babylonians were so afraid that they did not even resist their enemies: “Recently discovered accounts of the capture of Babylon by Cyrus show a great want of activity and vigour on the part of the defenders.”

8 And they shall be afraid; pangs and sorrows shall take hold of them; they shall be in pain as a woman that travaileth: they shall be amazed one at another; their faces [shall be as] flames.

✓ wonder ✓ every man at his neighbour
✓ faces of the flames

Note: Book of Mormon does not include, “they shall be in pain as a woman that travaileth” but JST does.

In the Targum (T) we have, “They shall be struck with consternation; distress and pangs shall take hold of them.” In the LXX (G), “And shall change their countenance as a flame.” It has been cleverly suggested that the expression לְהִבִּים פְּנֵיהֶם, their faces flames, may well mean pale with fear, such as that of the white ashes left after wood or coals are spent.⁵ Gill also says, “Not red with blushing, through shame, as Kimhi; but pale with fear.” ¶ Great pain and distress is often compared to that of a woman giving birth. Young says, “Theirs is the deepest anguish, for the day of Yahweh is breaking. And this is the forerunner of the great last day of which the apostle writes, ‘For when they shall say, Peace and safety; then sudden destruction cometh upon them, as travail upon a woman with child; and they shall not escape’ (1 Thessalonians 5:3).”

⁴ Gesenius explains, “It is the plural excellentiae, from the singular יָד powerful.”

⁵ I must apologize for I cannot find the original source for this clever citation at this time.

9 Behold, the day of the LORD cometh, cruel both with wrath and fierce anger, to lay the land desolate; and he shall destroy the sinners thereof out of it.

Barnes, speaking about the cruel אִכְזָרִי day of the Lord—mercy contrasted with justice, “his does not mean that ‘God’ is cruel, but that the ‘day of Yahweh’ that was coming should be unsparing and destructive to them. It would be the exhibition of ‘justice,’ but not of ‘cruelty;’ and the word stands opposed here to mercy, and means that God would not spare them. The effect would be that the inhabitants of Babylon would be destroyed.” ¶ President Howard W. Hunter explained it this way, “When these experiences humble us and refine us and teach us and bless us, they can be powerful instruments in the hands of God to make us better people, to make us more grateful, more loving, and more considerate of other people in their own times of difficulty ... Those problems and prophecies were never intended to do anything but bless the righteous and help those who are less righteous move toward repentance ... Our task is to live fully and faithfully and not worry ourselves sick about the woes of the world or when it will end. Our task is to have the gospel in our lives and to be a bright light, a city set on the hill, which reflects the beauty of the gospel of Jesus Christ and the joy and happiness that will always come to every people in every age who keep the commandments.”⁶ Delitzsch says, regarding the land that would be affected by the desolations, “not only the land [אֶרֶץ] of Babylon ... but the [whole] earth [תְּהִלָּה].” Young adds, “Over Babylon the judgment pours out, for it will also pour out over all the earth.”

10 For the stars of heaven and the constellations thereof shall not give their light; the sun shall be darkened in his going forth, and the moon shall not cause her light to shine.

⁶ Howard W. Hunter, Ensign, October 1993, An Anchor to the Souls of Men.

⁷ See ISAIAH 13:11.

Nyman explains, “Oliver Cowdery apparently was quoting or paraphrasing this verse, along with ISAIAH 13:13, when he reported what scriptures the angel Moroni quoted to Joseph Smith in September 1823 and noted that they were soon to be fulfilled (see MA, April 1835, pp. 111–112).” Regarding ISAIAH 13:10–13, Elder Bruce R. McConkie said: “From the Inspired Version we learn that the signs promised in Matthew 24:29 are to occur after the abomination of desolation sweeps Jerusalem for the second time. They will thus come almost at the very hour of the Second Coming. From other scriptural accounts of these same signs we learn that ‘the earth shall tremble and reel to and fro as a drunken man’ (D&C 88:87), and ‘shall remove out of her place’ (ISAIAH 13:10–13); that ‘the islands shall become one land’ (D&C 133:23); and that ‘the stars shall be hurled from their places.’ (D&C 133:49.) Thus it would seem, when the Lord makes his appearance and the earth is restored to its paradisiacal state, that there will be great physical changes. When the continents become one land and the earth reels to and fro, with all that then occurs, it will surely appear unto men as though the very stars of heaven were being hurled from their places, and so they will be as far as their relationship to the earth is concerned. That there may be other heavenly bodies, having the appearance of stars, that shall fall on the earth may also well be. Truly the scriptures testify of many signs and wonders in the heavens above (D&C 29:14; Joel 2:31; Revelation 6:12–17).”⁸ Also see notes under ISAIAH 13:13.

11 And I will punish the world for [their] evil, and the wicked for their iniquity; and I will cause the arrogancy of the proud to cease, and will lay low down the haughtiness of the terrible.

Those who have refused to turn and follow the Lord will not do so with impunity. The world תִּבְלָה refers both to the global nature of the punishment, and is also an allusion to the natural man. “Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world. If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him. For all that is in the world, the lust of the flesh, and the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life, is not of the Father, but is of the world” (1 John 2:15–16). At that time the pride of man will be brought low.

⁸ McConkie, Bruce R. Doctrinal New Testament Commentary. Salt Lake City, Utah: Bookcraft, 1:678.

12 I will make a man more precious than fine gold; even a man than the golden wedge of Ophir.

Gold is a precious metal, especially considered so because of the limited quantities available in the earth. There will be so few humans left after the disasters marking the end-of-days, that man will be considered more precious than the finest gold. Or, one can also think of the individuals who will inherit the earth and the exaltation of the Celestial Kingdom, and apply this verse to that circumstance. Indeed, “Who among us shall dwell with the devouring fire? who among us shall dwell with everlasting burnings?” (ISAIAH 33:14b). It is precisely this Celestial world view that the Targum (Ⓢ) seems to address: “And I will love them that fear me more than gold, in which the sons of men glory; and those that keep the law more than the fine gold of Ophir.” Kay likewise contends, “Of far greater value than all the ‘gold of Ophir’ (1 Chronicles 29:4; 2 Chronicles 3:6), and ‘fine gold’ (2 Chronicles 3:5, 8) which Solomon overlaid the sanctuary, was a sanctified human soul (Psalm 49:8).” The Lexicons give זָהָב as refined or pure gold, probably derived from זָהָב (refined, or refined gold, Gesenius, BDB, NAS Hebrew-Aramaic Dictionary). קֶטֶן, means something precious (Gesenius), often gold (BDB, HALOT). So it is that ASV rather has, “I will make a man more rare than fine gold, even a man than the pure gold of Ophir.” Barnes explains, “‘Ophir’ was a country to which the vessels of Solomon traded, and which was particularly distinguished for producing gold; but respecting its particular situation, there has been much discussion. The ‘ships of Tarshish’ sailed from Ezion-geber on the Red Sea, and went to Ophir (1 Kings 9:26; 10:22; 22:48). Three years were required for the voyage; and they returned freighted with gold, peacocks, apes, spices, ivory, and ebony (1 Kings 9:28, 10:11, 12; cf. 2 Chronicles 8:18). The gold of that country was more celebrated than that of any other country for its purity.” The exact location of Ophir is disputed.

13 Therefore, I will shake the heavens, and the earth shall remove out of her place, in the wrath of the LORD of hosts, and in the day of his fierce anger.

Rawlinson states, “In general, this sign is mentioned in connection with the end of the world, when a ‘new heaven and a new earth’ are to supersede the old (ISAIAH 65:17; 66:22; Revelation 21:1).” Another way of explaining the falling stars, is that if the earth is moved from this orbit to another location, it would surely seem as if the stars were falling.

14 And it shall be as the chased roe, and as a sheep that no man taketh up; and they shall every man turn to his own people, and flee every one into his own land.

The Targum (Ⓢ) has, “And he shall be as a roe chased, and as sheep when there is none to gather them together: they shall every man turn to his own people, and flee every one into his own land.” The LXX (Ⓛ), “And they that are left shall be as a fleeing fawn, and as a stray sheep, and there shall be none to gather them: so that a man shall turn back to his people, and a man shall flee to his own land.” The DSSB (Ⓢ) renders it, “Like a hunted gazelle and like unherded sheep, all will seek their own people and flee to their own land. The Syriac (Ⓢ), “And they shall be like gazelles when they flee, and like sheep that have no one to gather them.” While these animals run in herds, when frightened, each turns and runs where they can to escape the perceived danger. ¶ Nägelsbach suggests that beginning with ISAIAH 13:14, “The Prophet turns from the universal judgment that comprehends all the several acts of judgment against the world-power from first to last, to portray the special judgment to be accomplished on Babylon as the climax of the world power in its first stage, or as the head of the first world-monarchy.” And more specifically regarding ISAIAH 13:14 and those who would depart from Babylon and flee to their own lands, “When ruin impends over a community, whoever is not bound to it by ties of piety or of possession flees out of it. Thus first of all the foreigners flee. The crowd of such in Babylon will scatter like scared gazelles, like a herd panic-stricken. Babylon was the world’s capital, and consequently a resort for people of all nations. All these, therefore, will seek safety in flight.” ¶ Elder Parley P. Pratt suggests an eschatological angle: that the land masses shall move back to their former state, before they were divided, in a quick fashion, with the speed of a chased roe. And then Elder Pratt gives us the following poem: “Behold! the Mount of Olives rent in twain; / While on its top he sets his feet again. / The islands, at his word, obedient, flee; / While to the north he rolls the mighty sea; / Restores the earth in one, as at the first, / With all its blessings, and removes the curse.”⁹

⁹ Pratt, Parley P. A Voice of Warning and Instruction to All People Or, an Introduction to the Faith and Doctrine of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints By Elder Parley P. Pratt. New Edition. Salt Lake City: The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, 1957.

15 Every one that is found proud shall be thrust through; yea, and every one that is joined [~~unto them~~] to the wicked shall fall by the sword.

In the Targum (T) we read, “Every one that shall be found in her shall be slain, and every one that shall enter into the fortified cities shall be slain by the sword.” Delitzsch has, “By ‘every one that is found,’ we understand those that are taken in the city by the invading conquerors; and by ‘every one that is caught,’ those that are overtaken in their flight.” The corrected expressions, proud (well associated with Babylon, as we see in ISAIAH 13:19) and joined to the wicked, seem to indicate that the proud represent Babylon while the joined to the wicked are those who have adopted Babylon, or joined themselves to her. Kay explains that “Foreigners, who had attached themselves to the city and were resolved to abide in her. They must share in her ruin.” Alexander explains that most “seem agreed that to be thrust through, and to fall by the sword, are one and the same thing.”

16 Their children also shall be dashed to pieces before their eyes; their houses shall be spoiled and their wives ravished.

The expression here for their children וְעַלְלֵיהֶם is based on the root עַלַל, and has been variously translated—depending on the context—from a pre-pubescent child to an infant to a stillborn (BDB, DBLH). We read, “O daughter of Babylon, who art to be destroyed; happy shall he be, that rewardeth thee as thou hast served us. Happy shall he be, that taketh and dasheth thy little ones against the stones” (Psalm 137:8–9). Barnes says, “This is a description of the horrors of the capture of Babylon; and there can be none more frightful and appalling than that which is here presented. That this is done in barbarous nations in the times of war, there can be no doubt. Nothing was more common among American savages, than to dash out the brains of infants against a rock or a tree, and it was often done before the eyes of the afflicted and heart-broken parents.”

17 Behold, I will stir up the Medes against them, which shall not regard silver and [as ~~for~~] gold, nor ~~they~~ shall they ~~not~~ delight in it.

In the Targum (T) we read, “Behold, I am bringing upon them the Medes, who are not impelled by silver; and as for gold, they delight not in it.” Speaking of the end of days punishment that shall come upon the enemies of Israel, Zephaniah writes, “Neither their silver nor their gold shall be able to deliver them in the day of the LORD’s wrath; but the whole land shall be devoured by the fire of his jealousy: for he shall make even a speedy riddance of all them that dwell in the land” (Zephaniah 1:18). Regarding the Medes we read: “The ‘cities of the Medes’ are first mentioned in connection with the deportation of the Israelites on the destruction of Samaria (2 Kings 17:6; 18:11). Soon afterwards ISAIAH (13:17; 21:2) speaks of the part taken by the Medes in the destruction of Babylon (comp. Jeremiah 51:11, 28). Daniel gives an account of the reign of Darius the Mede, who was made viceroy by Cyrus (Daniel 6:1–28). The decree of Cyrus, Ezra informs us (6:2–5), was found in ‘the palace that is in the province of the Medes,’ Achmetha or Ecbatana of the Greeks, which is the only Median city mentioned in Scripture.”¹⁰ According to Lowth, the conquerors “shall not be induced, by large offers of gold and silver, for ransom, to spare the lives of those whom they have subdued in battle: their rage and cruelty will get the better of all such motives.” Lowth quotes Xenophon speaking to the Medes as follows, “Ye Medes and others who now hear me, I well know that you have not accompanied me in this expedition with a view of acquiring wealth” (Cyrop. Lib. v.). Rawlinson writes, “The Medes were not a particularly disinterested people: but in the attack on Babylon, made by Cyrus, the object was not plunder, but conquest and the extension of dominion. The main treasures of Babylon—those in the great temple of Belus—were not carried off by Cyrus, as appears both from his own inscriptions, and from Herodotus (i. 181–183).”

18 [Their] bows ~~also~~ shall also dash the young men to pieces; and they shall have no pity on the fruit of the womb; their eyes shall not spare children.

The expression *the fruit of the womb*¹¹ could either mean the unborn child or children in general. Violence against the unborn child was not unheard of (e.g., see 2 Kings 8:12; 15:16; Amos 1:13; Hosea 13:16). Calvin explains that some feel the language is exaggerated in this verse, but he rather feels represents the thought “that the cruelty of the Medes will be so great, that they will not spare even infant children, on whom men do not commonly lay hands unless where there is the utmost barbarity; and, in short, that no allowance will be made for age ... But we do not read that the Medes exercised so great cruelty, and Babylon stood and flourished for a very long period after that calamity... Besides, after the dawn of the following day, no cruelty was exercised but against those who bore arms. Though it was the Prophet’s design to include other judgments of God which awaited the Babylonians, and by which the first calamity was followed long afterwards,¹² yet it is not improperly or unseasonably that he describes the barbarous manners of the nation, that the Jews may be more fully aware that a just reward is prepared for the tyranny of Babylon.” Rawlinson tells it that “both the Medes and the Persians were skilled archers. Herodotus tells us that every Persian youth was taught three things—‘to ride, to draw the bow, and to speak the truth’ (i. 136).” Some exegetes stumble on the bow being mentioned as piercing the youth, rather than the arrow. Just as we might say today that “someone was killed by a gun,” when more properly it may be said that the same was “killed by the bullet,” so it is with the bow, for the mention of the one or the other corresponds to the same meaning.

¹⁰ Easton’s Bible Dictionary, Media

¹¹ Regarding and on the fruit of the womb, וּפְרִי-בֶטֶן, Lowth has found a manuscript that makes the “and upon the fruit” more explicit: וְעַל פְּרִי.

vv. 19–22. Babylon, the physical nation, despite her grandeur, would become a desert land.

19 ¶ And Babylon, the glory of kingdoms, the beauty of the Chaldees’ excellency, shall be as when God overthrew Sodom and Gomorrah.

✓ as the overthrowing

The Targum (Ⲯ) reads, “And Babylon shall become, she that was aforesaid the joy of kings, the beauty of the Chaldees’ excellency, as the overthrow wherewith the Lord overthrew Sodom and Gomorrah.” Alexander would translate as, “And Babylon, the beauty of kingdoms, the ornament, the pride of the Chaldees, shall be like God’s overthrowing Sodom and Gomorrah.” Both of these reference pride, and match the LDS scriptural correction to verse 15. Lowth states that ¹² Some historians call this telescoping. When a subject is looked upon with telescoping lenses (such as powerful binoculars, or telephoto lenses in a camera), it sometimes appears that two objects are close to each other when in reality vast distances may separate them.

“Cyrus took the city by diverting the waters of the Euphrates, which ran through the midst of it, and entering the place at night by the dry channel. The river, being never restored afterwards to its proper course, overflowed the whole country, and made it little better than a great morass: this, and the great slaughter of the inhabitants, with other bad consequences of the taking of the city, was the first step to the ruin of the place.” At the time of Lowth’s writing, they had not even discovered the location of Babylon! Much is known about ancient Babel בָּבֶל, or Babylon, today.

20 It shall never be inhabited, neither shall it be dwelt in from generation to generation: neither shall the Arabian pitch tent there; neither shall the shepherds make their fold there.

This did not happen at once, but rather, over a long period of time. Calvin makes some interesting comments in this place, which remind us of how even the fertility of the soil is affected by the righteousness of those who dwell in the land. “The picture is still further heightened by adding, that the desolation will be so great that in that place neither will the Arabians pitch their tents, nor the shepherds their folds. That place must have been marvelously forsaken and uncultivated, when it was disregarded by those roving tribes; for the Arabians were a wondering and unsettled nation, and had no fixed abode. Having left their native country, because it was barren, and is therefore called Arabia Deserta, ... they devoted themselves to feeding flocks and to hunting, and wandered without any fixed residence ... Now the country around Babylon was exceedingly fertile before that calamity, which rendered this change the more astonishing and almost miraculous, either because the place lost its former fertility, or because the constant slaughter made all men abhor the sight of it. Undoubtedly the Prophet means that not only will the buildings be thrown down, but the very soil will be accursed.” Barnes writes, “Babylon thus gradually declined until it lost all its importance, and the very place where it stood was, for a long time, unknown ... It became gradually a great desert; and, in the fourth century, its walls, repaired for that purpose, formed an enclosure for wild beasts, Babylon was converted into a hunting place for the pastime of the Persian monarchs.” Henderson writes about the gradual destruction of Babylon over the centuries, ending with a quote from Sir Robert Ker Porter, “My eyes ranged on all sides, while crossing this vast barren tract, which assuredly had of old been covered, if not by closely compacted streets, at least with the parks and gardens attached to distinct mansions or divisions of this once imperial city; but all was withered and gone, and comparatively level to the very horizon, till the object of my expedition presented itself, standing alone in the solitary waste, like the awful figure of Prophecy herself, pointing to the fulfillment of her word” (Travels, 2:306). Nägelsbach speaks of another instance of telescoping, “When the Prophet at the last declares the judgment on Babylon to be near, that is only in consequence of his having said generally (ISAIAH 13:6, 9) that the day of the LORD is at hand. Moreover the notion ‘near’ is a relative one. Here also from the Prophetic view-point that is represented as near, which according to common human reckoning, is still far off. As regards the fulfillment of this prophecy, it is sufficiently proved that it has been accomplished, not at once, but gradually in the course of the centuries. We have thus here again an example of that prophetic gaze which, as it were, sees in one plain what in reality is extended through many successive stages of time.”

21 But wild beasts[✓] of the desert shall lie there; and their houses shall be full of doleful creatures;[✓] and owls^{✓ ✓} shall dwell there, and satyrs shall dance there.

✓ Ziim ✓ ✓ Ochim
✓ ✓ ✓ or, ostriches

But wild beasts of the desert shall lie there; and their houses shall be full of doleful creatures. Calvin explains that little is known of the possible origin of the word צִיִּים (see margin ||), but that “the Prophet means either wild beasts which cannot be tamed, or birds which build their nests in distant forests ... and that צִיִּים is often used in Scripture for devils; and it is derived from צִיָּה which means dryness, or, a desert, as אֵיִם is derived from אִם, which means to terrify [and thus are names given to the Devil].” Nägelsbach writes, “צִיִּים (from צִי unused, from which צִיָּה *terra arida*¹³) are dwellers in the desert; whether men or beasts is undetermined. Yet analogy favors the latter; for in what follows only beasts are mentioned.” Alexander states that צִיִּים means “those belonging to or dwelling in the desert ... But if צִיִּים has the generic sense which all now give it, the very parallelism of the clauses favors the explanation of אֲחִים [howls and cries of animals] in its original and proper sense of howls or yells, viz. those uttered by the צִיִּים.” Nägelsbach (as does Alexander) includes quite a complete section on the subject at hand,

¹³ Latin for arid land.

but concludes that there have been two schools of thought, those who have taken the term in a more literal manner to mean “wild goats, or more generically hairy, shaggy animals” or else have taken it to mean demons. Alexander, however, complains that some commentators are too quick to try and expose “mythology in scripture” were none exists. If devils are intended, Alexander contends, this should be taken at face value.¹⁴ ¶ And owls shall dwell there, and satyrs shall dance there. The HEB has daughters of ostriches instead of owls: בָּנוֹת יַעֲנָה, or as Henderson explains, “daughters of greediness, a name given to ostriches, on account of their voracious appetite; and frequently used both of the males and the females ... they are also notorious for the doleful and hideous noise which they make, particularly at night.” Regarding the second term, translated as satyrs in our KJV, Henderson suggests that “It is most natural to suppose that real animals are intended; and as שְׂעִירִים elsewhere signify goats, there seems no reason why this sense should be departed from in the present instance ... by which they obviously meant hairy, shaggy animals, such as goats.” Delitzsch describes the animals similarly, as “the full-grown shaggy buck-goat.” (In my trip to the Holy Land I saw a shepherd bring his animals through the remains of an ancient magnificent building, to grace there for a while and then move on.)

22 And the wild beasts[✓] of the islands shall cry in their desolate houses,[✓] and dragons in [their] pleasant palaces; and her time [is] near to come, and her days shall not be prolonged. For I will destroy her speedily; yea, for I will be merciful unto my people, but the wicked shall perish.

✓ leaders, or, great goats ✓ ✓ or, palaces

And the wild beasts of the islands shall cry in their desolate houses, and dragons in their pleasant palaces. At this place Barnes speaks about islands in the same connotation as the word is used in the Book of Mormon to denote the American continent: “The word [rendered ‘islands,’ אֲרָצִים] denotes islands, or coasts, and as those coasts and islands were unknown and unexplored, the words seems to have denoted unknown and uninhabited regions in general.” And when it comes to the creatures involved, Alexander wisely adds, “But whatever be the species here intended, the essential idea is the same as in the foregoing verse, viz. that Babylon should one day be inhabited exclusively by animals peculiar to the wilderness, implying that it should become a wilderness itself.” One may here draw his mind to the wilderness mentioned back in ISAIAH 12, with the spiritual and physical wilderness co-existing. ¶ And her time is near to come, and her days shall not be prolonged. For I will destroy her speedily; yea, for I will be merciful unto my people, but the wicked shall perish. The LXX (6) has “It will come soon and will not tarry.” The Syriac (5), “Its time is soon to come, and its days shall not be prolonged.” The DSSB (9) has, “Its time is drawing near, and its days will not be drawn out any further,” with a note that any further appears in 1QIsa^a (9) but not in the Masoretic Text (11). Regarding the desolation of Babylon, it would be complete. Kay quotes Mr. Layard, “The site of Babylon [is] a naked and hideous waste.” Kay adds this quotation regarding the fulfillment of scripture: “For the vision is yet for an appointed time, but at the end it shall speak, and not lie: though it tarry, wait for it; because it will surely come, it will not tarry” (Habakkuk 2:3). Nyman points us to an interesting verse (2 Nephi 25:15), that states that because physical Babylon would be destroyed, the scattering of Judah would be left to other nations: “Wherefore, the Jews shall be scattered among all nations; yea, and also Babylon shall be destroyed; wherefore, the Jews shall be scattered by other nations.” Nevertheless, as in so many scriptures, the Lord offers the good news next through the Hosea Principle. “And after they have been scattered, and the Lord God hath scourged them by other nations for the space of many generations, yea, even down from generation to generation until they shall be persuaded to believe in Christ, the Son of God, and the atonement, which is infinite for all mankind—and when that day shall come that they shall believe in Christ, and worship the Father in his name, with pure hearts and clean hands, and look not forward any more for another Messiah, then, at that time, the day will come that it must needs be expedient that they should believe these things. And the Lord will set his hand again the second time to restore his people from their lost and fallen state. Wherefore, he will proceed to do a marvelous work and a wonder among the children of men.” ¶ Spiritual Babylon will be subdued quickly at the Second Coming.

¹⁴ Two interesting scriptures mentioned by Alexander are (1) in Matthew 12:43, regarding evil spirits and desert lands, “When the unclean spirit is gone out of a man, he walketh through dry places, seeking rest, and findeth none,” and (2) Revelation 18:2, with clear allusions to Isaiah, “And he cried mightily with a strong voice, saying, Babylon the great is fallen, is fallen, and is become the habitation of devils, and the hold of every foul spirit, and a cage of every unclean and hateful bird.”

FIRST POSTED: 2 June 2003

Isaiah 14

ISAIAH 14 is closely related to ISAIAH 13. The Lord has a message of hope and mercy for the children of Jacob who would be gathered to their lands of promise. The fall of Satan, from his former glory as well as that of the king of Babylon. The Philistines are also warned.

vv. 1–3 The Lord would gather Israel back to her lands of restoration, and many converts would join with her, and others would help her return to her lands of restoration. For the Lord's chosen people would not be forgotten.

1 ¶ FOR the LORD will have mercy on Jacob, and will yet choose Israel, and set them in their own land; and the strangers shall be joined with them, and they shall cleave to the house of Jacob.

FOR the LORD will have mercy on Jacob, and will yet choose Israel, and set them in their own land. The Targum (Ⲯ) reads, “For the Lord will have compassion upon the house of Jacob, and will delight again in Israel, and shall make them to dwell in their land.” This is the message of hope delivered by Isaiah (similar to the good words and comfortable words spoken in Zechariah 1:13), that indeed the Lord would have mercy on Israel, His ancient chosen people. Alexander well says, “Jacob and Israel are here used for the whole race.” Young says, “In this first verse we have in germ the entire blessed message of comfort which Isaiah develops in the last twenty-seven chapters of his book. Again Yahweh will show mercy, he declares, and again He will choose His people.” Kay says, regarding yet again, “‘Choosing’ again him who once had been ‘rejected’ (ISAIAH 2:6) as reprobate silver, but had now been purified ‘in the furnace of affliction’ (ISAIAH 48:10).” Many exegetes limit this mercy to the rescue of the people from Babylonian captivity, but such a rescue is only a type and a shadow of the greater latter-day rescue from spiritual Babylon. This verse uses the prophetic כִּי, for, as something that will come to pass, often, in that day, or in this case, as the second coming approaches and as part of the restoration of the Gospel of Jesus Christ. In Zechariah we find three instances of the Lord choosing His people again, there יְרוּשָׁלַם (Jerusalem) is put for all of יִשְׂרָאֵל (Zechariah 1:17; 2:12; 3:2). ¶ And set them in their own land? This refers to Israel or Jacob. What a sublime message, that the God of Israel would restore her to her lands. Lowth well writes, “[God] will still regard Israel as his chosen people; however he may seem to desert them, by giving them up to their enemies, and scattering them among the nations. Judah is sometimes called Israel; see Ezekiel 13:16, Malachi 1:1; 2:11; but the name of Jacob and of Israel, used apparently with design in this place, each of which names includes the twelve tribes, and the other circumstances mentioned in this and the next verse, which did not in any complete sense accompany the return from the captivity of Babylon, seen to intimate, that this whole prophecy extends its view beyond that event.” The Lord, then, would continue to make covenants with Israel and would not abandon her. It is the great message of the Lord, “For a small moment have I forsaken thee; but with great mercies will I gather thee” (ISAIAH 54:7). The time will come when it will be amor correspondido or reciprocated love. ¶ And the strangers shall be joined with them, and they shall cleave to the house of Jacob. Even strangers or converts would join Israel. The Targum (Ⲯ) has: “And proselytes shall be joined unto them, and they shall be united unto¹ the house of Jacob.” While the greatest number of proselytes will join with the Lord in the last days, it is believed that there were converts who joined in with those who returned from the Babylonian captivity. Henderson writes, “[In] Ezra 2:65 ... it is expressly stated, that seven thousand three hundred thirty and seven servants and maids accompanied the exiles on their return. That these were foreigners and not Israelites, is evident from their not being reckoned in the total number of the congregation.” Cheyne suggests that the Hebrew word ‘sojourner’ came to mean proselyte. ¶ Delitzsch suggests, “Babylon falls that Israel may rise. This is effected by the compassion of God. He chooses Israel once more ... and therefore makes a new covenant with it. Then follows their return to Canaan, their own land, Jehovah’s land (as in Hosea 9:3). Proselytes from among the heathen, who have acknowledged the God of the exiles, go along with them, as Ruth did with Naomi. Heathen accompany the exiles to their own place ... For, according to the prophet’s meaning, to be ruled by the people of God is the true happiness of the nations, and to allow themselves to be so ruled is their true liberty.” Henry quotes this beautiful scripture: “Thus saith the LORD of hosts; In those days it shall come to pass, that ten men shall take hold out of all languages of the nations, even shall take hold of the skirt of him that is a Jew, saying, We will go with you: for we have heard that God is with you” (Zechariah 8:23). Barnes states, “If it is asked what evidence there is that any considerable number of the people of Chaldea became Jewish proselytes, I answer, that it is expressly stated in Esther 8:17b: ‘And many of the people of the land became Jews; for the fear of the Jews fell upon them.’” In the last days, the number of proselytes from the gentile nations who would join themselves to the Lord would grow: “And the Gentiles shall come to thy light, and kings to the brightness of thy rising” (ISAIAH 60:3). ¶ President Joseph Fielding Smith explained that through the scattering of Israel the Gentile nations would be blessed, “So the Lord fulfilled his promise to Abraham in scattering his blood among all nations, and through the atonement made by Jesus Christ. It is written: ‘For the Lord will have mercy on Jacob, and will yet choose Israel, and set them in their own land: and the strangers shall be joined with them, and they shall cleave to the house of Jacob.’”²

¹ Stenning, “stay on.” יִסְתַּמְכִּין, that is, and lean on, or find support (CAL).

2 And the people shall take them, and bring them to their place; yea, from far, unto the ends of the earth; and they shall return to their lands of promise. And the house of Israel shall possess them, ~~in~~ and* the land of the LORD shall be for servants and handmaids; and they shall take them captives, ~~whose captives they were~~ ✓ unto whom they were captives, and they shall rule over their oppressors.

* KJV and JST use in; Book of Mormon, and.

 KJV and JST use for; Book of Mormon, shall be.

 KJV and JST use whose captives they were; Book of Mormon, unto whom they were captives.

✓ that had taken them captives

And the people shall take them, and bring them to their place; yea, from far, unto the ends of the earth; and they shall return to their lands of promise. Nyman well observes, “The second verse of the Book of Mormon contains an eighteen word retention which emphasizes the extent of the gathering of Israel—from ‘the ends of the earth’—and establishes that there will be more than one land for the gathering.” DSSB (Q), has in one instant, “To their land and their place” and in 1QIsa^a, “To their places.” Two important messages underscored by the Book of Mormon manuscript is that, along with 1QIsa^a (Q), there would be multiple gathering places (Israel and the American continent); and that the gathering would be universal in nature (Deuteronomy 30:4). Who shall bring the people to their place? Rawlinson says, “The heathen nations among whom they have dwelt shall rejoice at the restoration of Israel to their own land, and even escort them in a friendly spirit to their borders (comp. Ezra 1:4, 6; Nehemiah 2:7–9). Some shall go so far as voluntarily to become their bondservants in Palestine.” ¶ And the house of Israel shall possess them, and the land of the LORD shall be for servants and handmaids. The land of the LORD, אֶרֶץ יְהוָה, could be taken for the Promised Land. This includes both Israel and the American continent. ¶ And they shall take them captives, unto whom they were captives; and they shall rule over their oppressors. Ruling over their oppressors is given in contrast to: “they that hate you shall reign over you” (Leviticus 26:17, Rain in Due Season). Israel had been slave to other nations and now these other nations would be subservient to Israel—but not in the same way, but rather, “Now therefore ye are no more strangers and foreigners, but fellowcitizens with the saints, and of the household of God” (Ephesians 2:19). According to Alexander, “The true principle of exposition is adopted even by the Rabbins. Jarchi refers the promise to the future (לעתיד), to the period of complete redemption. Kimhi more explicitly declares that its fulfillment is to be sought partly in the restoration from Babylon, and partly in the days of the Messiah.” Once again, the idea is not one of vengeance and retribution, but rather one of prominence. Many of these wonderful things will begin to happen as Israel turns unto the Lord, and recognizes Jesus as the Messiah: “Until they shall be persuaded to believe in Christ, the Son of God, and the atonement, which is infinite for all mankind—and when that day shall come that they shall believe in Christ, and worship the Father in his name, with pure hearts and clean hands, and look not forward any more for another Messiah, then, at that time, the day will come that it must needs be expedient that they should believe these things. And the Lord will set his hand again the second time to restore his people from their lost and fallen state. Wherefore, he will proceed to do a marvelous work and a wonder among the children of men” (2 Nephi 25:16b–18a). I feel to rejoice that I am counted among those of Israel—being a descendant of Judah on my father’s side and Ephraim on my mother’s side—who have been found of the Messiah. Truly the Lord gathered me in mercies when I was not looking. This is the best thing that ever happened in my life and my feelings of gratitude swell in my heart as I write these words.

² Smith, Joseph Fielding. The Restoration of All Things. Salt Lake City: Deseret Book, 1973, p. 137.

3 And it shall come to pass in ~~the~~ that day that the LORD shall give thee rest, from thy sorrow, and from thy fear, and from the hard bondage wherein thou wast made to serve.

And it shall come to pass in that day that the LORD shall give thee rest, from thy sorrow, and from thy fear. Lowth contributes once again, with his collection of manuscripts: “in that day] כִּי־יוֹם הַהוּא.” The word הַהוּא³ is added in two MSS., and was in the copies from which the LXX and Vulgate translated . . . This is a matter of no great consequence: however, it restores the text to the common form almost constantly used on such occasions; and is one among many instances of a word lost out of the printed copies.” The Book of Mormon preserved the lost word, as does the LXX (6), which has “that” instead of “the”: “And it shall come to pass in that day, that the Lord shall give thee rest from thy sorrow and vexation.” The Douay (Vulgate (v)) translation) version also has that, “And it shall come to pass in that day, that when God shall give thee rest from thy labour.” As does SOT, “And it shall come to pass in that day that Jehovah will give thee rest . . .” ¶ And from the hard bondage wherein thou wast made to serve. The bondage refers to the servitude under which she had served when she was taken into captivity by Babylon and Assyria. The following warning was given in Rain in Due Season: “Thou shalt beget sons and daughters, but thou shalt not enjoy them; for they shall go into captivity” (Deuteronomy 28:41). The time would come when such bondage would be done away with, both physical and spiritual. The return from Babylon would represent but a partial fulfillment of the prophecy in ISAIAH 14:3, with the gathering of Israel in the last days being the more complete fulfillment.

vv. 4–23. The King of Babylon⁴ is compared to Satan, as both desired to be lifted up and displace God, but where instead brought to an inglorious end.

4 ¶ And it shall come to pass in that day that thou shalt take up this proverb[✓]

³ Or, “this, that, the same,” based on הַהוּא, AHCL. Gesenius thus has under הַהוּא: “כִּי־יוֹם הַהוּא in that day, an expression of frequent use in the prophets, in speaking of a future time. See ISAIAH 2:11.

⁴ Barnes and Alexander suggest that the king was Nabonned, also known as Belshazzar (Daniel 5:1). Such an opinion is not unanimous.

against the king of Babylon, and say: How hath the oppressor ceased! the golden city[✓] ceased!

✓ or, taunting speech

✓ ✓ or, exactress of gold

And it shall come to pass in that day that thou shalt take up this proverb against the king of Babylon. The

Inspired Version includes כִּי־יוֹם הַהוּא as in ISAIAH 14:3. Here begins a taunting speech against both the King of Babylon and Lucifer. Regarding the latter, we read: “And the great dragon was cast out, that old serpent, called the Devil, and Satan, which deceiveth the whole world: he was cast out into the earth, and his angels were cast out with him” (Revelation 12:9). The nation of Babylon and spiritual Babylon cannot be separated in these verses, but both are subject to the words of the Lord. As Christ reigns over Zion, Satan does over Babylon. Speaking of the proverb or satirical song, מִשָּׁל, Calvin says, “By the term witty saying, or parable, (for the Hebrew word מִשָּׁל denotes ‘saying that are weighty and remarkable, and worthy of being observed,’) he shows that the ruin of Babylon will be so great that it will even become a proverb, which usually happens in great and astonishing events.” Henderson explains further, “מִשָּׁל, Mashal, the term by which it is designated, is singularly appropriate, since it signifies not merely similitude, parable, figurative composition, but also, what is peculiarly sublime and energetic, what is calculated by its boldness and force to strike and influence the mind. The signification of the root מָשַׁל, is to assimilate, and also to rule or have dominion, to exert an influence over other . . . נִשְׂאֵמָשַׁל means to give utterance to such sublime composition in an elevated tone of voice.” Cheyne also explains regarding the meaning of מִשָּׁל, “[That it is] a parallelistic poem (Dichtung)—the parallelism may consist either in the moral application of emblems, or simply in the parallel disposition of the lines and the sense. From the fact that emblems were generally applied in a witty, satirical manner, mashal sometimes obtains the meaning of taunt-song, as here, and in Micah 2:4; Habakkuk 2:6.” Delitzsch has: “According to its primary and general meaning, mashal signifies figurative language, and hence poetry generally, more especially that kind of proverbial poetry which loves the emblematical, and, in fact, any artistic composition that is piquant in its character; so that the idea of what is satirical or defiant may easily be associated with it, as in the passage before us.” Henderson explains, “The Mashal opens with a sudden exclamation of joy on the part of the Jews. The oppressed world and its inhabitants are then introduced as participating in the exultation. The forests of Lebanon join in the song; Hades personified, rouses departed kings and princes to receive the king of Babylon on his entrance into their gloomy abode. These give expression to no words of condolence, but merely to a brief sentence of surprise, not unmingled with satisfaction at his reverse of fortune. The Jews then tauntingly resume the song in which they confirm at some length the sentiment just uttered in Sheol⁵; and introduce the monarch boasting of his power and vastness of his purposes, while they contrast with these, his present state of utter prostration and ignominy; concluding with an execration on his offspring and memory.” Alexander suggests, “The dramatic form of the prediction is repeatedly shifted, so that the words of the triumphant Jews, of the dead, of the Prophet, and of God himself, succeed each other, as it were, insensibly, and without any attempt to make the points of transition prominent.” Regarding this taunt, Lowth considers it “one of the first and most eminent examples extant of the truly great and beautiful in poetic style.” The king of Babylon has become a proverb, and stands for Lucifer, also. ¶ And say: How hath the oppressor ceased! the golden city ceased! Sin and the associated pain and suffering is the tribute we pay Satan. Just as Babylon would no longer be able to extract a tribute from Israel and the nations of the earth, the day will come when Satan will no longer be able to extract anguish from those who follow Messiah and come unto Zion. The taunting tone here as well as in ISAIAH 37 (e.g., “Because thy rage against me, and thy tumult, is come up into mine ears, therefore will I put my hook in thy nose, and my bridle in thy lips, and I will turn thee back by the way by which thou camest.” ISAIAH 37:29), is in part a response to the prideful arrogance of Babylon. Henry has, “Babylon was a golden city, ISAIAH 14:4 (it is a Chaldee word in the original, which intimates that she used to call herself so), so much did she abound in the riches and excel all other cities, as gold does all other metals.” Following the LXX (Ϝ) and Vulgate (ϝ), Barnes suggests, “The word ‘oppressor’ (גִּזְלוֹ) denotes, properly, the extractor of tribute, and refers here to the fact that Babylon had oppressed its dependent provinces, by exacting large revenues from them, and thus cruelly oppressing them.”

5 The LORD hath broken the staff of the wicked, [and] the sceptre of the rulers.

The Targum (ܬ) reads, “The Lord hath broken the strength of the wicked, the government of sinners.” The KJV added a connective and, where there is none in the MT. The MT, LXX (Ϝ), Douay (Vulgate) (ϝ) translation) agree with the Book of Mormon. In ISAIAH 3 we spoke about the stay and the staff upon which someone may lean. The wicked would not have anyone or anything to lean on, but be left desolate. A scepter is an ornamental staff, a symbol of the power held by a monarch. Babylon and Satan would be left powerless.

⁵ See ISAIAH 14:9, below.

6 He who smote the people in wrath with a continual stroke,[✓] he that ruled the nations in anger, is persecuted, [and] none hindereth.

✓ a stroke without removing

The Targum (ܬ) reads, “Of him who was smiting the people in fury (Chaldee, with might), with a perpetual stroke (Chaldee, with a stroke which shall not cease)⁶, of him who was ruling (Chaldee, making servile) the nations in anger (Chaldee, with might), ruling (Chaldee, making servile), and none hindered.” The Syriac (ܣ) reads, “He who smote the peoples in wrath, smiting without instruction, who chastised the peoples in anger and persecuted them without pity.” After acknowledging the great and formal power of Babylon and of Lucifer, we are informed that the tides have changed. Barnes says, regarding “he who smote” that “This may either refer to the king of Babylon, or to the rod or sceptre which he had used, and which was now broken.”

7 The whole earth is at rest, [and] is quiet; they break forth into singing.

As a result of the defeat suffered by Babylon, the surrounding nations could rejoice that the bully was no longer there to exact tribute from them. So also will it be with Satan’s defeat. No wonder all will break forth into singing and praises unto God! Delitzsch tells us, “The omission of the subject in the case of פָּצְחוּ (they break forth) gives the greatest generality to the jubilant utterances: רָנְהוּ פָּצְחוּ (erumpere gaudio⁷) is an expression that is characteristic of Isaiah alone (e.g., ISAIAH 44:23; 49:13)⁸; and it is a distinctive peculiarity of the prophet to bring in the trees of the forest, as living and speaking beings, to share in the universal joy (cf. ISAIAH 55:12).”

⁶ Compare to the margin ¶.

⁷ That is, they break forth into singing.

⁸ Yet another indication of the unity of Isaiah.

8 Yea, the fir trees rejoice at thee, [and] also the cedars of Lebanon, [saying]: Since thou art laid down, no feller is come up against us.

Yea, the fir trees rejoice at thee, and also the cedars of Lebanon, saying: That trees may stand as a type of people is included directly in the Targum (ܬ), “Rulers (Royal Polyglot, מְלָכִין, kings) also rejoiced over thee.” This is not the only time, of course, where even nature will rejoice. In Isaiah we also read: “For ye shall go out with joy, and be led forth with peace: the mountains and the hills shall break forth before you into singing, and all the trees of the field shall clap their hands” (ISAIAH 55:12). We know that if man will not give glory to the Savior, that nature will: “And he answered and said unto them, I tell you that, if these should hold their peace, the stones would immediately cry out” (Luke 19:40). Cheyne explains that the cedars of Lebanon are mentioned “Because they had been cut down (a type of Israel’s ruin) by the Babylonians, see on 37:24.” Delitzsch continues, “Cypresses and cedars rejoice because of the treatment which they received from the Chaldean, who made use of the almost imperishable wood of both of them for ornamental buildings, for his siege apparatus, and for his fleets, and even for ordinary ships,—as Alexander, for example, built himself a fleet of cypress-wood, and the Syrian vessels had masts of cedar. Of the old cedars of Lebanon, there are hardly thirty left in the principal spot where they formerly grew.” ¶ Since thou art laid down, no feller⁹ is come up against us. 1QIsa^a (Q) has it, “come up against us.” These words continue the same thought, that once the evil one is put away, that there will be no one to disturb the peace.

9 Hell[✓] from beneath is moved for thee to meet [thee] at thy coming: it stirreth up the dead for thee, [even] all the chief ones[✓] of the earth; it hath raised up from their thrones all the kings of the nations.

- ✓ or, the grave
- ✓ ✓ learners, or, great goats

Hell from beneath is moved for thee to meet thee at thy coming: it stirreth up the dead for thee. Or rather, sheol שְׁאוֹל as found in the Biblia Hebraica (א) and Targum (ܬ), as well as the Syriac (ܫ) and a number of translations. Once again, the allusion in this verse is to the world of Spirits, and how they will meet the Babylonian king. Luther explains, “Among the Hebrews Sheol very rarely means the place of punishments, but often it means grave, which they also call the pit.” Barnes has: “It is not the residence of the wicked only—the place of punishment—but the place where all the dead are supposed to be congregated before their final doom is pronounced.” ¶ שְׁאוֹל would be our LDS equivalent to the spirit world, which itself is divided into spirit prison and paradise. Young explains, “Isaiah refers not merely to the grave but to Sheol itself, and the expression, ‘the sides of the pit,’ even implies that there are distinctions of position in Sheol, and that this king was to be brought to the lowest part.” Young continues, “We may then note the following contrasts between this verse and ISAIAH 14:13: Sheol – mount of meeting – depths of the pit – extreme parts of Saphon¹⁰.” ¶ Even all the chief ones of the earth; it hath raised up from their thrones all the kings of the nations. Delitzsch and many others prefer a more literal translation, and use all the he-goats or rams, כָּל-עֵתוּדֵי instead of all the chief ones. Those who thought themselves great while they lived will come forth to meet the Babylonian king in the Spirit world. The men of pride may well be the chiefs of the goats, but are among the goats nevertheless.¹¹ Likewise, those who will glance upon Lucifer will be amazed that he is a common man.

10 All they shall speak and say unto thee: Art thou also become weak as we? art thou become like unto us?

The Babylonian king, and Satan, will no longer have power. There will be those who will stare at them and wonder how these at one time preeminent men have lost all strength and have become common. Calvin writes, “Tyrants are blinded by their greatness, and do not think that they are mortal, and even make themselves to be half-gods and adore themselves. On this account it is made known after their death that they shared in the condition of all mortals, to which they did not think that they were liable.”

11 Thy pomp is brought down to the grave, [and] the noise of thy viols is not heard; the worm is spread under thee, and the worms cover thee.

¹⁰ צָפוֹן, the north, v. 13.

¹¹ (Matthew 25:32–34).

⁹ That is, someone who fells or brings down trees—a woodcutter.

Thy pomp is brought down to the grave, the noise of thy viols is not heard. Once again, שָׂאוֹל should rather be translated as spirit world rather than grave. ¶ The Syriac (S) comes close to the JST, in terms of the clause, is dead, which is equivalent of is not heard, “Your pomp is brought down to Sheol, the noise of your harps is dead.” In royal courts of old, music often played an important role in creating pomp and circumstance. This would all be absent now. Calvin suggests, “Under the term musical instruments, he includes all the luxuries and enjoyments in which kings are wont to indulge.” As does Henry, “Death is a farewell to the pleasures, as well as to the pomps, of this world.” ¶ The worm is spread under thee, and the worms cover thee. Men will be eaten by worms when they die, whether rich or poor, and this thought must be especially repugnant to those who think they will never die or face consequences for the use of moral agency. The word worm here represented by two different words, the first being רֶמָּה and of the second תוֹלְעָה. Barnes explains: “And the worm (תוֹלְעָה)—the same word which occurs in ISAIAH 1:18, and there rendered crimson. This word is usually applied to the insect from which the crimson dye was obtained.” The Lord has power over both death and sin.

12 How art thou fallen from heaven, O Lucifer, [✓] son of the morning! [how] art thou cut down to the ground, which didst weaken the nations!

✓ or, O day star

How art thou fallen from heaven, O Lucifer, son of the morning! The Hebrew (מ) uses morning star הַיָּלֵל rather than Lucifer. The Targum (T),¹² “How hast thou been cast down from the height, who wast resplendent among the sons of men as the bright star among the stars!” The LXX (G) also uses morning star, ἑωσφόρος. The Vulgate (V) uses Lucifer, “Quomodo cecidiste de coelo, lucifer, qui mane oriebaris?” Regardless of whether we call him Lucifer, morning star or bright star, this verse is foremost about the fall of Satan. Kay points out a scripture in Luke 10:18: “And he said unto them, I beheld Satan as lightning fall from heaven.” Henry well observes, regarding Lucifer: “Here is the language of his vainglory, borrowed perhaps from that of the angels who fell, who [were] not content with their first estate.” Nägelsbach has, “If, then, the Babylonian reigns in the loftiest heights and everywhere, he has become like the highest God. But thereby he has supplanted the highest God: for two cannot occupy the highest place. And this, as remarked above, is the aim of Satan and of his earthly sphere of power, the world-power, which culminates in Antichrist.” In this respect, pre-mortal life was probably not unlike this earth, and the same principles and warnings against unrighteous dominion (D&C 121:36–40) applied then as they do now. ¶ Art thou cut down to the ground, which didst weaken the nations! In Moses 1:9–18 we read about how Moses was able to contrast between the glory of God and the nothingness of Satan. “Moses looked upon Satan and said: Who art thou? For behold, I am a son of God, in the similitude of his Only Begotten; and where is thy glory, that I should worship thee?” (Moses 1:13b). Brent L. Top wrote extensively on the topic of the war in heaven from an LDS perspective in his book, The Life Before.¹³ Here I quote a brief passage: “President George Q. Cannon said, ‘[Lucifer] was a mighty personage, without doubt. The record that is given to us concerning him clearly shows that he occupied a very high position; that he was thought a great deal of, and that he was mighty in his sphere.’ . . . Mark E. Petersen indicates that despite his strengths, Lucifer’s weaknesses brought about his rebellion and resentment. Foremost among his character defects were his pride, selfishness, and jealousy. Elder Petersen suggests that Lucifer ‘coveted honor, prestige and glory; he wanted the adulation and praise of others; he sought to be lifted up above the rest.’”

13 For thou hast said in thine heart, I will ascend into heaven, I will exalt my throne above the stars of God; I will sit also upon the mount of the congregation, in the sides of the north;

For thou hast said in thine heart, I will ascend into heaven, I will exalt my throne above the stars of God. The expression “said in thine heart” is here an allusion to the wicked intents or imaginations of man, and specifically here of the king of Babylon (compare to ISAIAH 47:10) and Satan. Zechariah also warned us against imagining evil intents regarding our neighbors (Zechariah 8:16). According to the Enchiridion of Epictetus (further elaborated by psychologist Albert Ellis, in The Story of Psychology, and the authors of Crucial Conversations), every negative emotion is preceded by our telling ourselves some story. As we learn to moderate such stories, we will also learn to manage our emotions.¹⁴ Regarding the premortal

¹³ Top, Brent L. The Life Before. Salt Lake City, Utah: Bookcraft, 1988. pp. 102–133.

¹⁴ “At the time, I was the high council speaker assigned to deliver a Sacrament talk to the singles branch in our Modesto, California stake.

¹² Stenning.

The stake was an accurate reflection of the multi-cultural California population. As I was speaking, I noticed a young man sitting by an attractive Asian young woman, whispering something in her ear. I found this quite distracting. Being an educator by profession, I know the importance of only one person speaking at a time. When this happens to me in seminars or in the classroom, I simply stop talking until the guilty parties have done the same. So, true to form, I stopped talking. The young man also stopped conversing. It worked! But as soon as I resumed my talk, the young man once again leaned over to whisper pretty things in his friend's ear. This pattern was repeated several times until I had completely lost all composure. I stopped in the middle of my talk and approached the Branch President and explained that I simply could not concentrate with the young couple flirting back there. The Branch President calmly explained that the young man was interpreting for a visitor from Japan. ¶ I frequently use this embarrassing episode, slightly changed, to illustrate presentations on interpersonal communication skills. I later learned that we cannot experience a negative emotion without it being first preceded by a story or narrative we tell ourselves. Negative emotions such as anger, jealousy, pride, and envy, then, can only take place—or grow into uglier feelings—if preceded by the corresponding negative self-talk. ¶ My frustration during the Sacrament Meeting talk had grown as I told myself that these individuals were being rude, interrupting, and not paying attention while they flirted. Since then, I have had countless opportunities to change the narrative in challenging situations into positive ones. ¶ Self-talk is behind both negative as well as positive attitudes, and furthermore, that all sin—both of omission and commission—requires that we tell ourselves a story. In the language of scripture, negative self-talk is sometimes referred to with such words as the vain imaginations and thoughts of the heart. These are all the excuses we allow ourselves for not doing that which is right—or for being judgmental and unforgiving. ¶ No wonder we read in Mosiah that we will be judged not only by our deeds and by our words, but also by our thoughts (Mosiah 4:30). It is easy to think that our thoughts are somehow disassociated from our words and acts in some way: that perhaps our thoughts are not such a serious problem. That we can entertain impure or unkind feelings, and that this is somehow natural. ¶ It has become clearer than ever that surely, 'For as [man] thinketh in his heart, so is he' (Proverbs 23:7). While we often excuse our unrighteous thoughts, we take these excuses even further when we give ourselves permission, through a story, to say something that is unkind rather than tame our tongue. "I probably shouldn't say this, but...." It is a good thing when we can tame our tongue and when we realize that Mosiah is right. Our thoughts, our words, and our deeds are inseparably connected. ¶ It is a difficult challenge to rule our thoughts. We must master our thoughts if we wish to master our tongues and our deeds—and become more Christ like. We can tell ourselves stories that are full of mercy and kindness, especially as we look for the honorable unmet needs behind the behavior of others. ¶ Joseph of Egypt was in a position of power over his brothers when the famine came. He could have entertained thoughts of revenge and sent his brothers back empty handed—or made sure they suffered retribution for the abuse he experienced at their hands. Instead, Joseph repeatedly consoled his brothers and suggested they forgive themselves, as he had already forgiven them: "Now therefore be not grieved, nor angry with yourselves, that ye sold me hither: for God did send me before you to preserve life ... to preserve you a posterity in the earth, and to save your lives by a great deliverance" (Genesis 45:5, 7). Joseph picked the best, most generous, of the possible stories he could have entertained. ¶ Every day we make countless choices as to the stories we will contemplate. The imaginations and thoughts of our hearts, truly, if they are good, can bring us unbound joy. The right stories can also give us the strength to think what is right and then do what is right." Adapted from my blog posted 8 September 2010, The Imaginations and Thoughts of the Heart. (Additional references include Gregorio Billikopf, Party-Directed Mediation, 2014; Al Switzler, Joseph Grenny, Kerry Patterson, and Ron McMillan, Crucial Conversations: Tools for Talking When Stakes are High, 2002; and Marshall Rosenberg, Non- council, we see the contrast between the Savior's humility and Satan's pride: "And the Lord said: Whom shall I send? And one answered like unto the Son of Man: Here am I, send me. And another answered and said: Here am I, send me. And the Lord said: I will send the first. And the second was angry, and kept not his first estate; and, at that day, many followed after him" (Abraham 3:27–28). Satan was the other who got angry and did not keep his first estate, and thus, was cast down to the earth. We read more about this pivotal event: "AND I, the Lord God, spake unto Moses, saying: That Satan, whom thou hast commanded in the name of mine Only Begotten, is the same which was from the beginning, and he came before me, saying—Behold, here am I, send me, I will be thy son, and I will redeem all mankind, that one soul shall not be lost, and surely I will do it; wherefore give me thine honor. But, behold, my Beloved Son, which was my Beloved and Chosen from the beginning, said unto me—Father, thy will be done, and the glory be thine forever. Wherefore, because that Satan rebelled against me, and sought to destroy the agency of man, which I, the Lord God, had given him, and also, that I should give unto him mine own power; by the power of mine Only Begotten, I caused that he should be cast down. And he became Satan, yea, even the devil, the father of all lies, to deceive and to blind men, and to lead them captive at his will, even as many as would not hearken unto my voice" (Moses 4:1–4). Cheyne says, "The king of Babylon expected to join the ranks of the gods. No, replies the prophet, thou shalt be hurled down to Sheól (v. 15)." ¶ I will sit also upon the mount of the congregation, in the sides of the north. The Targum (Ⲯ) reads, "And I will sit upon the mountain of the solemn assembly upon the ends of the north." We know that the exalted Lord was to sit high and lifted up (ISAIAH 6) on the mount of the congregation, probably an allusion to the temple. Luther suggests, "This is Zion, and Jerusalem is situated on the side of the far north. There God dwelled." We also read in Psalms, "Beautiful for situation, the joy of the whole earth, is mount Zion, on the sides of the north, the city of the great King" (Psalms 48:2). Lowth suggests, "It appears plainly from Exodus 25:22 and 29:42, 43, where God appoints the place of meeting with Moses, and promises to meet with him before the ark, to commune with him, and to speak unto him; and to meet the children of Israel at the door of the tabernacle; that the tabernacle, and afterward the temple and Mount Sion (or Moriah, which is reckoned a part of Sion), whereon it stood, was called the tabernacle, and the mount of convention, or of appointment; not from the people's assembling there to perform the services of their religion (which is what our translation expresses by calling the tabernacle of the congregation), but because God appointed that for the place where he himself would meet with Moses, and commune with him, and would meet with the people. Therefore, הר-מועד,¹⁵ or אהל מועד,¹⁶ means the place appointed by God, where he would present himself; agreeably to which I have rendered it, in this place, the mount of the divine presence.” Cheyne argues that the mount is not intended to represent an earthly one: “Still it is not of that mountain in its phenomenal but in its ideal character that he speaks—not of mount Zion as it appears, but as it is before God, and will be one day before men. Now, a conception of this kind would be unintelligible to a Babylonian, unless he could connect it with some similar beliefs of his own people ... only since the recent advances of Assyriology that we have learned their existence among the Assyrians and Babylonians. Among the titles of the great god Assur is ‘king of all the assembly of the great gods’ (Syce, R. P., iii. 83), and there is a fragment of Berosus (Moses of Khorene, i. 7), which speaks of a mountain of the assembly of the gods.” Barnes and some others also point out, “‘The mount of the congregation, in the sides of the north,’ there is a reference to a belief prevalent in Babylon that the [heathen] gods had their residence on some mountain of the north. This was a common opinion among the ancients.” Calvin writes, “This plainly shows the reason why the Prophet especially accuses the Babylonian tyrant of so great madness, and what the Prophet means by such figures. He desired to sit on the mountain of the testimony. By this effrontery he attempted to make himself equal to God.” Isaiah was speaking not only of the king of Babylon, but also about Lucifer. Satan had wished to take this honor to himself and thus satisfy his vain ambition. Paul speaks with an obvious allusion to Lucifer, the great antichrist, “that the man of sin be revealed, the son of perdition, Who opposeth and exalteth himself above all that is called God, or that is worshipped; so that he as God sitteth in the temple of God, shewing himself that he is God” (2 Thessalonians 2:3b–4).”

violent Communication: A Language of Life, 2003; Morton Hunt, The Story of Psychology, 2007.)

14 I will ascend above the heights of the clouds; I will be like the most High.

Alexander suggests, “As אֶדְמֶה is a reflexive form (Gesenius 53, 2), it means not merely I will be like, but I will make myself like, or as Michaelis supposes, I will act like.” The ASV has, “I will make myself like the Most High.”

¹⁵ Mount of congregation.

¹⁶ Tent of congregation.

15 Yet thou shalt be brought down to hell, to the sides of the pit.

Even though the Hebrew (שְׁאוֹל) has Sheol or spirit world, it is to the spirit prison that the arrogant Babylonian king would be removed. Satan, on the other hand, would be altogether expelled from the presence of God. The word hell is an elliptical addition by the translators of the AV, for it is not in the Hebrew text (שְׁאוֹל) where instead we have, אֶל-יַרְכְּתֵי-בֹר, to the sides/depths of the pit. Leeson renders it: “But into the nether world shalt thou be brought down, into the lowest depth.” LITV, “Yet you shall go down to Sheol, to the sides of the Pit.” Even so, the ellipsis is appropriate to our understanding. ¶ Henderson comments: “In accordance to the Oriental custom of erecting splendid mausoleums for kings and other great men, in the sides of which were subordinate apartments or cells fitted for the reception of the dead bodies, and of depositing them in these apartments, after the previous funeral solemnities had been completed, all the other kings of the earth are represented as occupying in silent state the chambers allotted to them; whereas to the king of Babylon the rites of sepulture are denied; no royal mausoleum receives his dead body; nor is it committed to a common grave, but is left to putrefy on the ground.” Regarding the idea of sides Alexander suggests, “According to its probable etymology the Hebrew word does not mean sides in the ordinary sense, but rather hinder parts and then remote parts or extremities, as explained by the Targum (ט) here and in Isaiah 14:13.” This corresponds well with outer darkness.¹⁷ Cheyne points out the satire here involved, that instead of being sent to the sides of the ‘recesses of the north’ the ‘sides of the pit’ would do.

16 They that see thee shall narrowly look upon thee, [and] shall consider thee, [saying,] and shall say: [Is] this the man that made the earth to tremble, that did shake kingdoms?

¹⁷ Outer darkness is sometimes used as a synonym of hell in the Scriptures. There are two places so called: (1) the place where the spirits of the disobedient who are not sons of perdition abide until they receive a resurrection in the Telestial Kingdom (see Alma 40:13–14); (2) the place reserved for the sons of perdition (D&C 29:37–38). See Hell, LDS Guide to the Scriptures. In Gospel Principles, “The Final Judgment, Ch. 46,” the expression outer darkness is used in conjunction with the sons of perdition. But we also see the expression used of those who will inherit the Telestial Kingdom, as we see above in Alma 40:13–14.

They that see thee shall narrowly look upon thee, and shall consider thee, and shall say: When Moses gazed upon Satan he was not impressed. He lacked all glory, for Moses had just come from the presence of the Lord and could clearly tell the difference between both. So it will be with all who look upon Lucifer. To look narrowly, seems to mean a focused or detained look. ¶ Is this the man that made the earth to tremble, that did shake kingdoms? Satan has surely shook the kingdoms, but his power and strength will have an end. After the chaos and harm that Satan and the Babylonian king have inflicted, people who look upon them will be surprised by their plainness.

17 [That] And made the world as a wilderness, and destroyed the cities thereof; [that] and opened not the house of his prisoners? ✓

✓ or, did not let his prisoners loose homeward?

The result of war is desolation. Scenes of beautiful color disappear and give way to black and white. Babylon did not let her prisoners go on their own accord, but only after she was conquered. Not only did the Babylonian tyrants cause such desolation, but also Satan. Beside desolation, we often think as the grave being a place where Satan has captive spirits. Yet the gospel will be taught among them, and the truth shall make them free. Through the atoning sacrifice of Jesus Christ this is made possible. “I beheld that the faithful elders of this dispensation, when they depart from mortal life, continue their labors in the preaching of the gospel of repentance and redemption, through the sacrifice of the Only Begotten Son of God, among those who are in darkness and under the bondage of sin in the great world of the spirits of the dead. The dead who repent will be redeemed, through obedience to the ordinances of the house of God, And after they have paid the penalty of their transgressions, and are washed clean, shall receive a reward according to their works, for they are heirs of salvation” (D&C 138:57–59). This is why Paul well exclaimed, “O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory?” (1 Corinthians 15:55).

18 All the kings of the nations, [even] yea, all of them, lie in glory, every one of them in his own house.

The kings of the earth, as disobedient as they may have been, obtained a ‘house’ or mortal body, and thus have the hope of the resurrection, even if it is in the lowest degree of glory. Satan gave up his first estate and the possibility for any kingdom of glory. Thus, he will have no burial place. Alexander gives another explanation, one that is interesting to note in terms of royalty who have been denied an honorable burial¹⁸: “The ancient oriental practice of burying above the ground and in solid structures, often reared by those who were to occupy them will account for the use of house here in the sense of sepulchre, without supposing any reference to the burial of kings within their palaces.” It is also interesting to note that many of the nobility are buried inside cathedrals and churches, or in imposing mausoleums.

19 But thou art cast out of thy grave like an abominable branch, [and as] the raiment remnant of those that are slain, thrust through with a sword, that go down to the stones of the pit; as a carcase trodden under feet.

But thou art cast out of thy grave like an abominable branch, and the remnant of those that are slain. Satan will not be able to be buried, as he never received a body. Henderson makes the following comments, “הַשֵּׁלֶחֶת מִקְבְּרָיָהּ¹⁹ does not imply that the king had been buried and afterwards thrown out of his sepulchre, that he might be exposed as here described. The ל is used absolutely, signifying in a state of separation from, at a distance from, without, or destitute of, and is quite independent of the verb. Without thy grave, means, without being deposited in the sepulchre which thou hadst prepared for thyself, or which was destined for thee.” Delitzsch likewise observes “... but the king of Babylon is left lying there, like a carcase that is trampled under foot, and deserves nothing better than to be trampled under foot ... They do not even think him worth throwing into a hole along with the rest of the corpses.” The MT has raiment rather than remnant. Leiser translates it: “But you are thrown from your grave like a despised branch, like the covering of the slain.” Nägelsbach suggests, “For were they thrust through with a sword, then, too, the garment would be cut into holes, and at least spotted with blood, and if they are buried, it is explained how their garment comes into the hands of others. When the dead are buried on the field of battle, their clothes are taken off them, but those that are torn and cut in holes and smeared with blood, are cast away, while those unharmed are retained as valuable booty.” The use of the word remnant, here, changes the meaning of this verse substantially. The branch refers to a group of people, and the remnant, to what is left of that group. It reminds us of what we have already read earlier in Isaiah about the trees leaving but a few to be counted (ISAIAH 10:19), and of those a remnant surviving. Regarding a branch, נֶזֶר, Barnes leans on Jerome for the description of what today we would call a sucker. Suckers are especially destructive when they exist in grafted trees, for the root does not provide good fruit, but only protection from root diseases. The fruit of such suckers is usually worthless. In some trees these suckers take over and drain all the strength from the good branches. They are only good to be cast away. This is the fate of Satan and the sons of perdition who are assigned to outer darkness after the resurrection. ¶ Thrust through with a sword, that go down to the stones of the pit; as a carcase trodden under feet. Henderson likes to think that “While the bodies of the slain courtiers and captains, with which that of the king of Babylon was covered, should be sought out, and after having been embalmed, placed, each in its sarcophagus, in the subterranean chambers, his would be left, no one being able to recognize it, from the mangled state to which it had been reduced, and the disfiguration it had undergone by being trampled upon by the multitude.” Henderson, in carrying out this idea feels that the stones in this verse represent sarcophagi, Mujelibé, made out of stone that contain human remains, as have been found near Babylon and can be found in the British Museum. Moreover, Henderson speaks of the death of the king of Babylon, “On entering the city, the army of Cyrus marched straight to the palace; and meeting the king, who was coming out sword in hand, they slew him, and put all who followed him to the sword; and, though Xenophon specially notices the permission given to bury the dead, he takes no notice whatever of the royal corpse.”

¹⁸ Jehoram, for instance, was not buried in the sepulchers of the kings (2 Chronicles 21:20). The same fate was suffered by Ahaz (2 Chronicles 28:27) and Joash (2 Chronicles 24:25).

¹⁹ Actually, the MT (ל) has הַשֵּׁלֶחֶת מִקְבְּרָיָהּ. This is an easy mistake to make as the פ and ל are pronounced the same.

20 Thou shalt not be joined with them in burial, because thou hast destroyed thy land, [and] slain thy people; the seed of evil-doers shall never be renowned.

Henderson suggests that the place of burial of the Babylonian king would never be named, or known, “implying that no inscription should tell where he lay.” Just as the evil kings of Israel and Judah were not buried with the other kings, likewise an allusion is made to the king of Babylon and to Satan—and to the fact that Satan would never have offspring and the royalty line of the Babylonians would die off. Calvin speaks of the disobedient, such that “... the Lord blots out their name and remembrance, which appeared to be inscribed on lasting records; and the result is, that they are not only despised but even abhorred by all men. This happens to all tyrants, that though, while they live, they are universally applauded and flattered, yet after they are dead, they and their posterity are universally abhorred.” In the Book of Life spoken about in the Book of Revelation, we know that some names will be blotted out and some will be exalted.

21 Prepare slaughter for his children for the iniquity iniquities of their fathers, that they do not rise, nor possess the land, nor fill the face of the world with cities.

Prepare slaughter for his children for the iniquities of their fathers. We read, “For I the LORD thy God am a jealous God, visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children unto the third and fourth generation of them that hate me” (Exodus 20:5b). Delitzsch writes, “After the nocturnal storming of Babylon by the Medes, the new Babylonian kingdom and royal house which had been established by Nabopolassar vanished entirely from history. The last shoot of the royal family of Nabopolassar was slain as a child of conspirators ... Nimrod, the first founder of a Babylonio-Assyrian kingdom, built cities for the Medes, for the purpose of keeping them better in check. And it is to this building of cities, as a support to despotism, that the prophet here refers.” ¶ That they do not rise, nor possess the land, nor fill the face of the world with cities. Rawlinson suggests, “The destruction of their posterity was a part of the punishment of the fathers. That they do not rise; i.e., ‘that they do not recover themselves and become great monarchs once more, and once more build great cities,’ such as those which they were famous for—Babel, Erech, Accad, Calneh, Ur, Sepharvaim, Borsippa, Opis, Teredon, etc. It was as city builders that the Babylonians were especially celebrated (Genesis 10:10; Daniel 4:30; Herodotus 1:178, etc.).”

22 For I will rise up against them, saith the LORD of hosts, and cut off from Babylon the name, and remnant, and son, and nephew, saith the LORD.

The Douay Vulgate (V) translation gives a very poetic rendering here, “And I will rise up against them, saith the Lord of hosts: and I will destroy the name of Babylon, and the remains, and the bud, and the offspring, saith the Lord.” Regarding name and remnant and son and nephew Delitzsch writes, “שֵׁם וְנֶזֶר and בֶּן וְנֶזֶר are two pairs of alliterative proverbial words, and are used to signify ‘the whole, without exception’ (compare the Arabic expression ‘Kiesel und Kies,’ ‘flint and pebble,’ in the sense of ‘altogether:’ Nöldecke, Poesie der alten Araber, p. 1620).” Once again, Babylon would be so wiped out that there would be no remnant or posterity. Satan would never have posterity.

23 I will also make it a possession for the bitter, and pools of water; and I will sweep it with the besom of destruction, saith the LORD of hosts.

The Targum (T) reads, “And I will make it an inheritance for the hedgehog, a place of desolation, pools of water: and I will sweep her as they are sweeping with a besom:²⁰ and I will throw her down to destroy her, saith the Lord of hosts.” The Talmud tradition (Seder Mo’ed, Rosh HaShana 26b) has: “The Rabbis did not know what was meant by we-tetethia bemate²¹ of destruction, till one day they heard the handmaid of the household of Rabbi say to her companion, Take the tatitha²² [broom] and tati²³ [sweep] the house” (Talmud, Soncino). ¶ Rawlinson explains, “The swampy character of the country about the ruins of Babylon is generally noticed by travelers. It arises from neglect of the dams along the course of the Euphrates.” Likewise, Delitzsch comments, “The destructive forces, which Babylon has hitherto been able to control by raising artificial defences, are now let loose; and the Euphrates, left without a dam, lays the whole region under water. Hedgehogs now take the place of men, and marshes the place of palaces.” As Delitzsch says, “Jehovah treats Babylon as rubbish, and sweeps it away, destruction ... serving Him as a broom.”

vv. 24–27. Having spoken against Babylonian rule and predicted her fall in future days, the Prophet Isaiah now turns to matters closer at hand, the invasion of Assyria. In future days when Babylon would take Judah captive, the exiles would be able to remember how the Lord saved them from Assyria and know that His word would come to pass about Babylon as surely as it came to pass about Assyria. The latter would fall, and her fall would be in the very act of attacking Judah. So it is, that the Prophet says, “in my land, and upon my mountains tread him under foot.” It was upon the mountainous land of Judah that Assyria would be defeated, and most specially upon Mount Zion, where the Temple stood.

24 ¶ The LORD of hosts hath sworn, saying: Surely as I have thought, so shall it come to pass; and as I have purposed, [so] shall it stand—

1QIsa^a (Q) has it, “The Lord of hosts has sworn: Surely as I have thought, so will she be; and as I have purposed, so it will stand.” Regarding נִשְׁבַּע, Henderson says, “The verb to swear, in Hebrew, is always used in the passive, in reference to the person who takes an oath, which would seem to intimate his being laid under the obligation which such an act involves.” Furthermore, the word surely, לֵאמֹר, “is a formula for swearing; but instead of a negative, it has a strongly affirmative meaning” (Henderson, also see ISAIAH 5:9). The expression לֵאמֹר is composed of אֵל, that is, if, and לֹא, that is, not, and thus means if not. It is a warning that something will come to pass. Calvin says, “[If it hath not been as I thought.] The elliptical form of an oath which he employs must be well known, for it occurs frequently in Scripture.” The idea is that of a vague threat where each person can fill in the blanks. Alexander writes, “The Prophet suddenly reverts to that of the Assyrian host, either for the purpose of making one of these events accredit the prediction of the other, or for the purpose of assuring true believers, that while God had decreed the deliverance of his people from remoter dangers, he would also protect them from those near at hand.” ¶ Rawlinson says something here that I like, and makes me think of the reassurances that I often ask of God. I may have received a witness of something, such as the propriety of traveling to a certain location, but then find myself asking again for reassurance when fear attempts to creep in. Here is what Rawlinson says: “From the distant prospect of an ultimate deliverance from the power of Babylon, the prophet turns his gaze to a nearer, if not greater, deliverance. The present enemy is Assyria. It is she who has carried Samaria into captivity, and who threatens the independence of Judah. Deliverance from her has already been promised more than once (10:16–19, 25–27, 33–34); but apparently the people are not reassured—they still dread the foe who is so near, and who seems so irresistible. God, therefore, condescends to give them a fresh prophecy, a fresh assurance, and to confirm it to them by an oath (ISAIAH 14:24).” Regarding the oath itself, Rawlinson continues, “God but seldom declares his purposes with an oath—never but in condescension to the weakness of his creatures, who, though they misdoubt his word, can feel ²⁰ Besom means a broom or a sweeping instrument. (Webster, 1960).

²¹ Broom, בְּמַטֵּה.

²² מַטֵּה

²³ לְמַטֵּה, to sweep, or טֹרֵף

the immutability of an oath (Hebrews 6:17), and yield it the credence and the confidence which they refuse to a bare assertion. As I have thought ... as I have purposed. A reference to the prophecies previously given in ISAIAH 10. So shall it come to pass; literally, so it hath been—a striking instance of the ‘preterite of prophetic certainty.’²⁴ So shall it stand; literally, as I have purposed, that shall stand.”

25 That I will break the Assyrian in my land, and upon my mountains tread him under foot; then shall his yoke depart from off them, and his burden depart from off their shoulders.

The LXX (6) has, “Even to destroy the Assyrians upon my land, and upon my mountains: and they shall be for trampling; and their yoke shall be taken away from them, and their glory shall be taken away from their shoulders.” Assyria would crumble, but the beginning of that crumbling would take place in my land, or בְּאַרְצִי, that is, the land of Israel אֶרֶץ יִשְׂרָאֵל, or more precisely, in Judah. For the Lord would allow Assyria to come all the way down to Judah, upon the mountains of Judah, that is my mountain הַרִי, and most especially Jerusalem, before He would blast Assyria and break her burden. Calvin has, “Some think that this relates to Sennacherib’s army, which the hand of God destroyed by means of an angel, when he besieged Jerusalem (2 Kings 19:35; ISAIAH 37:36).” Barnes says, “In my land—That is, in the land of Canaan. This is often called his land; and this expression shows that the passage does not and cannot refer to the king of Babylon, for he was destroyed in his own city (Daniel 5). And upon my mountains—That is, upon the mountains of Palestine. The army of Sennacherib was destroyed on the mountains that were near to Jerusalem.” Regarding mountains, Alexander says: “My mountains] some have understood to be Mount Zion, others more generally the mountains of Jerusalem; but it seems to be rather a description of the whole land of Israel, or at least of Judah, as a mountainous region.” Yet, those who have supposed my mountain to mean Mount Zion have not been far off, as we read the earlier prophecy of the Assyrian attack (ISAIAH 8) that the water would reach to the neck: “And he shall pass through Judah; he shall overflow and go over, he shall reach even to the neck; and the stretching out of his wings shall fill the breadth of thy land, O Immanuel” (ISAIAH 8:8).

²⁴ The prophetic perfect refers to future actions pronounced as if they were past already. Joüon, P., & Muraoka, T. (2006) explain: “This prophetic perfect is not a special grammatical perfect, but a rhetorical device” (A grammar of biblical Hebrew, Roma: Pontificio Istituto Biblico). Gesenius writes of this very verse: “ISAIAH 14:24, where אֶל־אֱמֹנִי occurs first with the perfect in the sense of a prophetic perfect” (Gesenius, F. W., 1910. Gesenius’ Hebrew grammar. (E. Kautzsch & S. A. E. Cowley, Eds.) (2nd English ed., p. 472). Oxford: Clarendon Press.

26 This [is] the purpose that is purposed upon the whole earth; and this [is] the hand that is stretched out upon all the nations.

Note the anthropomorphic figure is removed in the Targum (7) reading, “This is the purpose that is purposed upon all the inhabitants of the earth; and this is the might of the ruler which is lifted up over all the kingdoms.” The Douay version, based on the Vulgate (8), also has all nations as does the Book of Mormon, dropping the in *the nations*²⁵: “This is the counsel that I have purposed upon all the earth: and this is the hand that is stretched out upon all nations.” ¶ Cheyne explains that the words “all the earth” are used, “Partly because this is an act of the great drama of the world-judgment.” In Jeremiah 50:23, we read of Babylon—and the same could be said of Assyria: “How is the hammer of the whole earth cut asunder and broken! how is Babylon become a desolation among the nations!” These nations may have felt mighty but true and enduring might is not of man.

27 For the LORD of hosts hath purposed, and who shall disannul [it]? and his hand [is] stretched out, and who shall turn it back?

For the LORD of hosts hath purposed, and who shall disannul? This idea mentioned in ISAIAH 14:24 takes greater strength with its repetition here. What the Lord decides to do, He can perform even when it seems impossible. ¶ And his hand is stretched out, and who shall turn it back? Even going back to Exodus we read as to how the Lord stretched out His mighty hand in protecting Israel (see Exodus 3:20, Deuteronomy 5:15a). This verse, then, is an allusion to the power of God to take us out of Egypt and out of Babylon if we will but turn to Him and worship Him and none else. The Lord will stretch out His arm to punish, to save, or do as it pleases Him, in order to bless man.

vv. 28–32. The people of Philistia (or Philistines) should not rejoice upon the death of Ahaz (about 726 B.C.), for after him would come one more formidable,

²⁵ MT (9) has אֶל־אֱמֹנִי.

King Hezekiah. Likewise, in a more global way, Philistia, or The World should not rejoice over the apparent despair of Zion, the pure in heart, for Messiah will eventually triumph and all evil will be put away in the Lord's mountain or Zion. Regarding prophecies against the Philistines, we also can see Jeremiah 47; Ezekiel 25:15–16; and Amos 1:8.

28 In the year that king Ahaz died was this burden.

Nägelsbach suggests that these words were written after Ahaz (see notes on ISAIAH 7) had died. This may well be so, based on the taunting words that follow.

29 Rejoice not thou, whole Palestina, because the rod of him that smote thee is broken; for out of the serpent's root shall come forth a cockatrice, and his fruit [shall be] a fiery flying serpent.

Rejoice not thou, whole Palestina, because the rod of him that smote thee is broken. The Targum (T) reads, “Rejoice not, O Philistia, all of ye, because the government that hath made you servile is broken.” The Philistines were known to laugh at the troubles of Israel, and so it was that David mourned when Saul and Jonathan died and said: “The beauty of Israel is slain upon thy high places: how are the mighty fallen! Tell it not in Gath, publish it not in the streets of Askelon; lest the daughters of the Philistines rejoice, lest the daughters of the uncircumcised triumph” (2 Samuel 1:19–20). Henderson suggests, “By the ‘rod which smote’ the Philistines, is meant the Jewish power, which had ... punished them in the days of Uzziah, but was now broken in those of Ahaz, partly by the Syrians and Israelites, partly by the inroads of the Edomites and Philistines, and partly by Tiglathpileser (2 Chronicles 28). To repress their joy at these disastrous events, the prophet tells them, in highly figurative language, that from the royal house of Judah, a prince should arise, who would prove more formidable and destructive to them than his predecessors.” Many commentators rightly see Hezekiah as this prince. Yet on a larger scale, there would yet be another PRINCE to come forth, even the LORD OF HOSTS, even Jesus the Christ. ¶ For out of the serpent's root shall come forth a cockatrice, and his fruit shall be a fiery flying serpent. Note the Messianic application in the Targum (T), “Because from the children of Jesse shall come forth the Messiah (מִשִּׁיחַ), and His works among you shall be as a flying serpent.” In earlier chapters we have spoken about the flying serpent, and its Messianic connotations, too (see ISAIAH 6, also see Numbers 21:9). Kay observes, “It is scarcely possible not to see here an antithesis to ISAIAH 11:1, 10. Out of the root of Jesse should come forth One, who should defend the poor; and make the viper innocuous; and set up a standard, beneath which should be rest.” Henderson says that the fiery serpents get their name “on account of their vivid fiery colour, being somewhat like the copper-coloured snake in appearance; on which account, a serpent of copper or brass was set up, to which the bitten Israelites were to look, in order to be healed ... The most remarkable circumstance connected with those described here ... is that of their flying: no serpents now in existence being known to naturalists to have wings, from which it is inferred that they never did exist. There can, however, be no doubt that some of the most respectable authorities among the ancients speak of winged or flying serpents, on occasions which would lead us to suppose that they are not treating the fabulous, but of facts known to themselves and their contemporaries.” Regarding the flying serpents, one possibility is as described by Henderson of some extinct species, while another is that these snakes were so agile when striking that they gave the appearance of flying through the air to attack their victims. Delitzsch well says, “The power from which Philistia had escaped was a common snake (נָחָשׁ), which had been either cut to pieces, or had died out down to the very roots. But out of this root, i.e., out of the house of David, which had been reduced to the humble condition of its tribal house, there was coming forth a נָחָשׁ, a basilisk (regulus, as Jerome and other translators render it: see at ISAIAH 11:8)); and this basilisk, which is dangerous and even fatal in itself, as soon as it had reached maturity, would bring forth a winged dragon as its fruit. The basilisk is Hezekiah,²⁶ and the flying dragon is the Messiah (this is the explanation given by the Targum); or, what is the same thing, the former is the Davidic government of the immediate future, the latter the Davidic government of the ultimate future.”

30 And the first-born of the poor shall feed, and the needy shall lie down in safety; and I will kill thy root with famine, and he shall slay thy remnant.

And the first-born of the poor shall feed, and the needy shall lie down in safety. Barnes writes, “The phrase ‘the first-born of the poor' is an Hebraism, a strong, emphatic expression, denoting those who are the most poor; the most abject sons of poverty; those who have an eminence or a double portion of need, as the first-born among the Hebrews were entitled to special distinctions and privileges. The idea is, that even the most poor and defenseless would be safe." When the Messiah would come—in the First Advent—he would feed the poor and heal the lame. There is also an allusion to the Millennium and the Second Advent, when there would be peace even among the animals. These would be returned to their paradisiacal state, as formerly found in the Garden of Eden. In the Millennial day, these would include the poor in spirit. ¶ And I will kill thy root with famine, and he shall slay thy remnant. 1QIsa^a (Q) has it, "and I will kill thy root ... and I will slay thy remnant." In ISAIAH 11:11a we read of the remnant that would be preserved. Those who would read this would be well acquainted with the promises made to the remnant of Israel. In Genesis we have: "And I will put enmity between thee and the woman, and between thy seed and her seed; it shall bruise thy head, and thou shalt bruise his heel" (Genesis 3:15). This is as to say that in the long run God will punish the wicked, but will allow the wicked to inflict punishment on His people, that only a remnant shall remain.

²⁶ We read of Hezekiah that he was a righteous king, trusting in the Lord, a man often described as a type of Christ, and as a result: “He smote the Philistines, even unto Gaza, and the borders thereof, from the tower of the watchmen to the fenced city” (2 Kings 18:8).

31 Howl, O gate; cry, O city; thou, whole Palestina, [art] dissolved; for there shall come from the north a smoke, and none [shall be] alone in his appointed times.

The Targum (T) reads, "Howl, on account of thy gate, cry on account of the city, ye, O Philistines, all of you; ye shall be broken: because from the north vengeance is coming, and is not delaying its appointed time." Howl for thy gates seems to mean that a person is homesick to return for the homeland. Some exegetes believe that the smoke is the dirt raised by the armies of the approaching enemy. Others, like Cheyne, prefer the thought of the devastations left behind of burning buildings and towns after the invading armies have passed. The invading armies are those of Babylon. The expression the north is used frequently in Jeremiah to mean Babylon (e.g., Jeremiah 1:13; 47:2–3). Gill likewise suggests that "the utter destruction of Palestine was by the Chaldean army under Nebuchadnezzar; and so the prophecy from the time of Hezekiah, with which it begins, is carried on unto the entire dissolution of this country by the Babylonians."

32 What shall [one] then answer the messengers of the nations? That the LORD hath founded Zion, and the poor of his people shall trust in it.

Outside the Hebrew Bible (M) most ancient texts (C, S, V) use a plural form גוֹיִם, nations, as does the Book of Mormon, instead of nation, גוֹי. The SOT based on the Boothroyd's Biblia Hebraica (Kennicott) also renders it as the Book of Mormon, nations. ¶ President George Q. Cannon had this to say about Zion: "The Lord has shown His people that He is able to take care of His own work, to carry out His own purposes, and to fulfill His promises ... The testimonies of the servants of God have been amply sustained wherein they have said that whatever might occur, and however fiercely the work of God might be warred against, it would stand impregnable and unshaken and would proceed in its onward march unchecked by the attacks that should be made upon it. This ought to be a great source of comfort to all who are connected with the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. God has spoken. He has laid the foundation of His work. He has promised that it shall be built up and that no power shall prevail against it. As one of the Prophets has said, 'What shall one then answer the messengers of the nation? That the Lord hath founded Zion, and the poor of His people shall trust in it' (ISAIAH 14:32). This prediction is literally fulfilled in our case. We do put our trust in Zion, the Lord having founded it (1 January 1893, JI 28:24)."²⁷

FIRST POSTED: 17 October 2003

²⁷ George Q. Cannon, Gospel Truth: Discourses and Writings of President George Q. Cannon, selected, arranged, and edited by Jerreld L. Newquist, p.116–117.

Isaiah 15

In Genesis 19:30–38 we read about Lot’s daughters and how they gave birth to their respective firstborns, Moab (מוֹאָב, ‘water’ or ‘seed’ of the father—Gesenius) and Ben-Ammi (בֶּן-אַמִּי, or son of my people) who in turn became the fathers of the nations to be called Moabites and Ammonites, on the eastern side of the Dead Sea. This oracle is directed to the peoples of Moab. Rawlinson says, “Having threatened Philistia, Israel’s nearest enemy upon the west, he turns to Moab, her nearest foe towards the east.” Most expositors agree that ISAIAH 15 and 16 form one unit or prophecy. ISAIAH 15 and Jeremiah 48 have much in common. The latter is not only a prophecy in the mouth of a second witness, it is also an exegetical review of ISAIAH 15. Cheyne informs us that, “Seven (probably) of the names in this prophecy are mentioned in the Moabitish monument—Dibon, Nebo, Arnon, Jahaz, Medeba, Horonaim, Sibmah (see on ISAIAH 16:8).” The prophecies found in ISAIAH 15 and 16 would begin to be fulfilled within a three year period (see ISAIAH 16:14) but the complete fulfillment would reach into the end of days. Moab, like Babylon, is also a name for the world at large. These words of desolation would pertain to those who turn against Israel in the latter days. Nägelsbach says, “The safest conclusion seems to be, that the prediction is generic, and intended to describe the destruction of Moab, without exclusive reference to any one of the events by which it was occasioned or promoted, but with special allusions possibly to all of them.” Kay observes, “As in the history of David’s conquests the Philistines came first, and then Moab (2 Samuel 8:12); so here, in the prophet’s survey of that ‘shaking’ of nations, which is to prepare for the coming-in of the future of Kingdom of God.” Certainly, in the last days, the nations of the earth shall be shaken, in preparation for the coming of the Savior. Despite the terrible things that would befall Moab, we read in Jeremiah that Moab would someday, like Israel, be restored from captivity: “Yet will I bring again the captivity of Moab in the latter days, saith the LORD. Thus far is the judgment of Moab” (Jeremiah 48:47, also see AMP). This speaks of a turning unto the Lord of the descendants of Moab, rather than Moab as representative of the whole world at large.

vv. 1–9. Isaiah is moved with compassion for the people of Moab, who will be destroyed quickly, in a night. Moab will cry out to her gods with no avail and be filled with lamentation. The destruction will be almost complete. Those who escape destruction will have to face yet others to come. Luther says, “After the Philistines the most hostile enemies of the Jews were the Moabites, who were extraordinarily proud because of the fertility of their country and because it was densely populated.” Of the Moabites and their cousins, the Ammonites, we read, “An Ammonite or Moabite shall not enter into the congregation of the LORD; even to their tenth generation” (Deuteronomy 23:3a). Ruth the Moabite, a direct ancestor of our Savior, was accepted into the covenant. In regards the conflict between Moab and Israel, read about King Balak and his attempt to have Balaam curse Israel (Numbers 24:9) as well as “the unkindness they had ... done to the camp of Israel, notwithstanding the orders God had given not to distress or vex them (Deuteronomy 2:9, 19)” (Henry, also see Delitzsch).

1 ¶ THE burden of Moab. Because in the night Ar of Moab is laid waste, [and] brought[✓] to silence; because in the night

Kir of Moab is laid waste, [and] brought[✓] to silence;

✓ or, cut off [in both instances]

THE burden of Moab. Because in the night Ar of Moab is laid waste, [and] brought to silence. It would be at night that Ar of Moab אֶר מוֹאָב would be destroyed. For some exegetes this is representative of the speed of the attack; for others, the surprise involved. The exact location of the various towns and rivers mentioned are subject to some uncertainty and disagreement. The ISBE has “The city of Ar is named in a snatch of ancient song (Numbers 21:15), literally ‘the site of Ar.’ It is identical with ‘Ar of Moab’ (Numbers 21:28; ISAIAH 15:1). This is probably the place called the City of Moab in Numbers 22:36, where the Hebrew (אֲר) is עִיר מוֹאָב. It is probably also intended by ‘the city that is in the middle of the valley’ (Deuteronomy 2:36; Joshua 13:9, 16; 2 Samuel 24:5). It lay ‘on the border of the Arnon, which is in the utmost part of the border’ (Numbers 22:36). A possible identification might be the ruin noted by Burckhardt, in the floor of the valley, on a piece of pasture-land below the confluence of the Lejjun and the Mōjib. Buhl however thinks that not a city but a Moabite district somewhere in the region south of the Arnon may be intended (GAP, 269).” Luther suggests that the very pride of Moab added to the utter despair of the moment, as they had not expected to be attacked. In Jeremiah 49:29 we have: “We have heard the pride of Moab, (he is exceeding proud) his loftiness, and his arrogancy, and his pride, and the haughtiness of his heart.” ¶ Because in the night Kir of Moab is laid waste, [and] brought to silence. Henderson, speaking of the word כִּי in because in the night בַּלַּיִל says, “There is nothing answering to the כִּי in the LXX (6) and Syriac (5), but this conjunction frequently occurs at the commencement of a prediction, in order to express the certainty of its fulfillment.” Nägelsbach explains, regarding Kir of Moab מוֹאָב קִיר: “Kir-Moab (to distinguish it from the Assyrian Kir, ISAIAH 22:6) is mentioned by Isaiah under this name only here. Yet Kir-Haresh or Kir-Haresheth (ISAIAH 16:7, 11) are identical with it. The place was a strong fortress, on a high, steep mountain, visible from Jerusalem. It lay about three hours south of Rabbat-Moab, and about the same distance from the Dead Sea. In the Chaldee it is called כְּרִכָּא דְּמוֹאָב,² i.e. ‘castle, wall of Moab.’” The Targum (7) reads, “Because in the night Leheyath-Moab is destroyed, and they were asleep. Yea, in the night the fortified city of Moab was subdued, and they were in deep slumber.” The Targum (7), LXX (6), and Syriac (5) prefer to render קִיר, to mean not a place, but a stronghold, enclosure, or wall of defense. Luther has this to say, “Kir, קִיר, sometime means a wall or partition. Here it is a proper noun, like Beth, בֵּית, which otherwise means house. The Moabites named their temple thus because of its outstanding character.” ¶ Calvin has, regarding brought to silence, “That is, destroyed, and hence also Silence sometimes means Death. Others disregard the metaphor, and choose to render it, She is cut off; but I leave the point undecided.” Young compares this concept of brought to silence or destroyed also in ISAIAH 6:5, נִדְּמִיתִי, when Isaiah after seeing the Savior high and lifted up feels he is doomed, and says that he is undone.

2 He is gone up to Bajith, and to Dibon, the high places, to weep: Moab shall howl over Nebo, and over Medeba: on all their heads [shall be] baldness, [and] every beard cut off.

He is gone up to Bajith, and to Dibon, the high places, to weep. Moab shall howl over Nebo, and over Medeba.

Other ancient versions translate תַּבְיִת as house בֵּית or rather, the house, often meaning the temple—or in this case, the Moabite house of idols. So it is that the translation in the Bishop’s 1568 Bible reads: “Moab went vp to the idols house, euen to Dibon to the hygh places to weepe: for Neba and Moab shall mourne for Medba, All their heades were balde, and all their beardes shauen.” After Jeroboam broke off Ephraim (the Northern Tribes) from Judah he built an altar in Beth-el (1 Kings 12:27, 29) to a golden calf and made it into a temple for the people to worship idols. In Jeremiah 48:13 we have, “And Moab shall be ashamed of Chemosh, as the house of Israel was ashamed of Beth-el their confidence.” Beith-El בֵּית אֱלֹהִים, is short for Beith Elohim, and means house of God. So would it be that Moab would be ashamed of her idols. The people of Moab had not leaned on the Lord, but instead, had trusted in idols, the work of their own hands: “For because thou hast trusted in thy works and in thy treasures, thou shalt also be taken: and Chemosh shall go forth into captivity with his priests and his princes together” (Jeremiah 48: 7). Furthermore we read, “Moreover I will cause to cease in Moab, saith the LORD, him that offereth in the high places, and him that burneth incense to his gods” (Jeremiah 48:35). The crying and weeping and howling shall be generalized throughout the land: “Therefore will I howl for Moab, and I will cry out for all Moab; mine heart shall mourn for the men of Kir-heres. O vine of Sibmah, I will weep for thee with the weeping of Jazer: thy plants are gone over the sea, they reach even to the sea of Jazer: the spoiler is fallen upon thy summer fruits and upon thy vintage” (Jeremiah 48:31–32). Cheyne says, regarding תַּבְיִת, “No doubt the prophet means the Beth-bamoth (‘House of High Places’) of the inscription on the

¹ In other parts we have referred to this כִּי as the prophetic ‘for.’ Nägelsbach proposes a different theory: “As in ISAIAH 15 and 16 there is a surprisingly frequent use of the particle כִּי—it occurs nine times in 15, and five times in 16, —so, too, the כִּי of verse 1 is surely to be interpreted according to this usage. Nowhere else is Isaiah wont to multiply this particle in a surprising way. It seems to me that he had here a particular aim. Perhaps he imitates Moabite language. The same is the case with לַיִל. It must occasion surprise that of the five times that Isaiah uses לַיִל (except these he uses לַיִלָּה) three belong to the chapters on Moab (compare 16:3). In 21:11 לַיִל occurs, and probably for the sake of variety in the parallelism, perhaps too, as mimicking the dialect of Edom and as reminiscence of Exodus 12:42. But 30:29, the form לַיִל occurs as st. constr., and also with allusion to Exodus 12:42. On the monument of king Mesa, in line 15, the night is actually called לַיִלָּה (comp. SCHLOTTMAN in Stud. And Krit. 1871, Heft. IV., p. 596) from which it appears that the pronunciation with e is Moabitic ... [So also] — עֵר is without doubt the Moabitic word for עֵיר (comp. SCHLOTTMAN, l. c., p. 607). For it is used only of the capital of Moab and the territory immediately belonging to it ... [And furthermore] — בְּלָהָ, which occurs again in Isaiah only 16:7, seems likewise to be a mimicry of Moabite form of speech.”

² כְּרִכָּא דְּמוֹאָב in CAL, In Stenning’s Targum of Isaiah, כְּרִכָּא דְּמוֹאָב.

Moabite Stone (line 27), which Schlottmann rightly identified with the Bamoth-Baal mentioned in Joshua 13:17, side by side with Dibon. Instead of simply saying ‘Dibon is gone up to Beth-bamoth to weep,’ the prophet breaks the clause into two, for there can be little doubt that ‘the high places’ in the second member of the verse means the same spot as ‘the temple’ in the first ... Nebo is of course not the mountain-range so called, but a town near, deriving its name from the same old Semitic divinity, Medeba, at any rate, is on an eminence³.” Henderson translates this clause as: “Upon Nebo and upon Medeba, Moab howleth” and explains that the weeping is not on account of the destruction, but rather, as part of the idolatrous worship, for “they mingled the most pitiable wailings with their rites.” ¶ On all their heads [shall be] baldness, [and] every beard cut off. The DSSB (Q) shows that in 1QIsa^a that the and 1 is present rather than implied, “on all its head and every beard” In Jeremiah we 48:37 we have, “For every head shall be bald, and every beard clipped: upon all the hands shall be cuttings, and upon the loins sackcloth.” Regarding cuttings, Gill says, “it was usual with the Heathens to make incisions in the several parts of their bodies, particularly in their hands and arms, with their nails, or with knives, in token of mourning; which are forbidden the Israelites.” Baldness and cut off beards are signs of mourning and at times subjection to slavery. Jeremiah wrote, “Thou daughter that dost inhabit Dibon, come down from thy glory” (Jeremiah 48:18), with reference also to mourning and sitting on the ground (cf. ISAIAH 3:26; 47:1; Lamentations 2:10; Ezekiel 26:16). Regarding the shaving of the head, Rawlinson mentions several peoples where this custom has been found, among them the Natives of North America. In Jeremiah 48:7b the idea of captivity is implied: “For because thou hast trusted in thy works and in thy treasures, thou shalt also be taken: and Chemosh shall go forth into captivity with his priests and his princes together” as does Jeremiah 48:46, “Woe be unto thee, O Moab! the people of Chemosh perisheth: for thy sons are taken captives, and thy daughters captives.” The LXX (G) would rather show the impotence of Moab in another way, with her arms being cut off, probably with reference to Moab’s idols: “baldness shall be on every head, and all arms shall be wounded (Greek: cut to pieces).” Having the beard cut off was such a sign of embarrassment, explained Barnes, that men would choose to either hide from the public, or cover their face in a veil, until it had grown back.

3 In their streets they shall gird themselves with sackcloth: on the tops of their houses, and in their streets, every one shall howl, weeping abundantly. ✓

³ Hill, mount, or elevated place.

✓ descending into weeping, or, coming down with weeping

In their streets they shall gird themselves with sackcloth. Sackcloth is the garment of sorrow and affliction. In ISAIAH 22:12 we have, “And in that day did the Lord GOD of hosts call to weeping, and to mourning, and to baldness, and to girding with sackcloth.”⁴ For sackcloth, Easton’s Bible Dictionary has, “Cloth made of black goats’ hair, coarse, rough, and thick, used for sacks, and also worn by mourners (Genesis 37:34; 42:25; 2 Samuel 3:31; Esther 4:1–2; Psalm 30:11, etc.), and as a sign of repentance (Matthew 11:21). It was put upon animals by the people of Nineveh (Jonas 3:8).” ¶ On the tops of their houses, and in their streets, every one shall howl, weeping abundantly. In Jeremiah we have: “There shall be lamentation generally upon all the housetops of Moab, and in the streets thereof: for I have broken Moab like a vessel wherein is no pleasure, saith the LORD” (Jeremiah 48:38). The Targum (C) reads, “On their house-tops, and in their broad-places all of them shall howl, crying and weeping.” Barnes explains, “The roofs of the houses in the East were, and still are, made flat, and were places of resort for prayer, for promenade, etc. The prophet here says, that all the usual places of resort would be filled with weeping and mourning. In the streets, and on the roofs of the houses, they would utter the voice of lamentation.” Cheyne comments on the marginal ¶ translation, coming down with weeping, “So Jeremiah, ‘that our eyes may run down in tears’ (Jeremiah 9:18; compare Jeremiah 13:17; 14:17⁵). By a bold extension of the figure, the whole person is represented as immersed in tears.” When it comes to crying, a literal translation into English, can sometimes be curious, such as “my eyes water,” and so on. Delitzsch says, “In other cases it is the eyes that are said to run down in tears, streams, or water-brooks; but here, by a still bolder metonymy, the whole man is said to flow down to the ground, as if melting in a stream of tears.” Regarding the idea of howling, Barnes tells us, “It is known that, in times of calamity in the East, it is common to raise an unnatural and forced howl, or long-continued shriek. Persons are often hired for this purpose (Jeremiah 9:17).” In Jeremiah 19:17a we read, “Thus saith the LORD of hosts, Consider ye, and call for the mourning women, that they may come.” Such a custom is also known is South America, where the women are called lloronas. The idea here, however, is that they would not need to hire anyone to weep for them. Nägelsbach points out a number of contrasting thoughts: “It has been overlooked that יָרַד בְּבִכָּי, descending with weeping should form an antithesis to עָלָה לְבִכָּי, ‘goeth up to weep,’ ISAIAH 15:2. They went up on the high places at Dibon and Beth-Bamoth to weep; they howled on the high places of Nebo and Medebah; but they came down also from these high places with weeping; they weep because imploring the gods with tears availed nothing.”

⁴ It is interesting that the word sack in English and שַׂק in Hebrew are pronounced the same, and is an example of a word that has been derived from the Hebrew (for instance, see Webster’s New World Dictionary, 1960).

⁵ “Therefore thou shalt say this word unto them; Let mine eyes run down with tears night and day, and let them not cease” (Jeremiah 14:17a).

4 And Heshbon shall cry, and Elealeh: their voice shall be heard [even] unto Jahaz: therefore the armed soldiers of Moab shall cry out; his life shall be grievous unto him.

And Heshbon shall cry, and Elealeh: their voice shall be heard [even] unto Jahaz. Barnes explains: “And Heshbon shall cry] This was a celebrated city of the Amorites, twenty miles east of the Jordan (Joshua 13:17). It was formerly conquered from the Moabites by Sihon, and became his capital, and was taken by the Israelites a little before the death of Moses Num_21:25. After the carrying away of the ten tribes it was recovered by the Moabites. Jeremiah (Jeremiah 48:2) calls it ‘the pride of Moab.’ The town still subsists under the same name, and is described by Burckhardt. He says, it is situated on a hill, southwest from El Aal (Elealeh). ‘Here are the ruins of an ancient town, together with the remains of some edifices built with small stones; a few broken shafts of columns are still standing, a number of deep wells cut in the rock, and a large reservoir of water for the summer supply the inhabitants’ (Travels in Syria, p. 365).” ¶ And Elealeh] Barnes says: “This was a town of Reuben about a mile from Heshbon (Numbers 32:37). Burckhardt visited this place. Its present name is El Aal. ‘It stands on the summit of a hill, and takes its name from its situation - Aal, meaning ‘the high.’ It commands the whole plain, and the view from the top of the hill is very extensive, comprehending the whole of the southern Belka. El Aal was surrounded by a well-built wall, of which some parts yet remain. Among the ruins are a number of large cisterns, fragments of walls, and the foundations of houses, but nothing worthy of notice. The plain around it is alternately chalk and flint’ (Travels in Syria, p. 365).” ¶ Barnes concludes: “Even unto Jahaz] This was a city east of Jordan, near to which Moses defeated Sihon. It was given to Reuben (Deuteronomy 2:32), and was situated a short distance north of Ar, the capital of Moab.” On all these locations also see ISBE and other

Bible encyclopedias and atlases. ¶ Therefore [עַל־כֵּן] the armed soldiers of Moab shall cry out; his life shall be grievous unto him. The KJV seems to indicate a desire to die, rather than the terror of living. The Other translations have: “the soule of euey one shall lament in him selfe” (Geneva Bible) or “and crye for very sorowe of their myndes” (Bishops). The ASV, and some others, translate the last clause as rather: “. . . his soul trembleth within him.” Alexander notes the paronomasia between יִרְעֵו, “shall cry out” and יִרְעָה, “shall be grievous.”

5 My heart shall cry out for Moab; his fugitives [shall flee] unto Zoar, an heifer✓ of three years old: for by the mounting up of Luhith with weeping shall they go it up; for in the way of Horonaim they shall raise up a cry of destruction.✓✓

- ✓ or, to the borders thereof, even to Zoar, as an heifer
- ✓ ✓ breaking

My heart shall cry out for Moab; his fugitives [shall flee] unto Zoar. An heifer of three years old. The Lord weeps for Moab, and as a result so does Isaiah through the pure love of Christ (see ISAIAH 16:13). The Syriac (S) version reads, “My heart shall cry out for Moab; they shall howl as they flee to Zoar; Moab was strong like a three year old heifer.” Gill suggests: “an heifer of three years old] of the cry of the fugitives, that should be very loud and clamorous, like the lowing of an ox, or an heifer in its full strength, which is heard a great way.” ¶ In Jeremiah we read, “Therefore mine heart shall sound for Moab like pipes, and mine heart shall sound like pipes for the men of Kirheres: because the riches that he hath gotten are perished” (Jeremiah 48:36). The Lord commanded, “Thou shalt live together in love, insomuch that thou shalt weep for the loss of them that die, and more especially for those that have not hope of a glorious resurrection” (D&C 42:45). A three year old heifer is thought of as carefree and not subjugated. ¶ For by the mounting up of Luhith with weeping shall they go it up. For in the way of Horonaim they shall raise up a cry of destruction. The equivalent verse in Jeremiah 48:5 reads, “For in the going up of Luhith continual weeping shall go up; for in the going down of Horonaim the enemies have heard a cry of destruction.” The Targum (T) reads, “For the ascent of Luhith they shall ascend it as with weeping; because of the descent of Horonaim they shall declare the cry of the broken in battle (i.e., of the conquered in battle).”

6 For the waters of Nimrim shall be desolate: [✓] for the hay is withered away, the grass faileth, there is no green thing.

✓ desolations

For the waters of Nimrim shall be desolate. The implication is that the waters of Nimrim dried up. Barnes here makes an interesting observation: “It is possible that the waters failed by a common practice in times of war when an enemy destroyed the fountains of a country by diverting their waters, or by casting into them stones, trees, etc. This destructive measure of war occurs, with reference to Moab, in 2 Kings 3:25, when the Israelites, during an incursion into Moab, felled the fruit trees, cast stones into the plowed grounds, and ‘closed the fountains, or wells.’” Some feel that a drought may be responsible for such dryness, instead. ¶ For the hay is withered away, the grass faileth, there is no green thing. This speaks of a terrible draught that would befall Moab. Delitzsch writes, “לא תִּיהְיֶה” ‘it is not in existence’ or ‘it has become not,’ i.e., annihilated.” Alexander, supported by many others including the Targum (ܬ) translation, suggests, “הַצִּיר”⁶ is not hay, as Luther and the English version give it, but mature grass, יֶשֶׁן the springing herbage, יֶרֶק greenness or verdure in general ... the whole is given with great precision in the Vulgate: herba, germen, viror.” The Douay version, based on the Vulgate (V), reads: “... for the grass is withered away: the spring is faded, all the greenness is perished.” The Vulgate (V) translated into Spanish has, “... por cuanto se secó la hierba, marchitáronse las plantas, pereció todo vigor” (VL). The Douay has spring for plants or vegetation. The Latin germen can be translated here as bud or shoot.

7 Therefore the abundance they have gotten, and that which they have laid up, shall they carry away to the brook of the willows. [✓]

✓ or, valley of the Arabians

Therefore the abundance they have gotten. Among their abundance, we read that they cultivated rich vineyards that had given them much joy in the past, but today only silence and sorrow: “And joy and gladness is taken from the plentiful field, and from the land of Moab; and I have caused wine to fail from the winepresses: none shall tread with shouting; their shouting shall be no shouting” Jeremiah 48:33. ¶ And that which they have laid up, shall they carry away to the brook of the willows. There are differences of opinion as to whether the Moabites were carried away or if they carried their own possessions into another land. Also, if they were transported to Babylon or to Edom. ¶ Alexander writes, “It is now commonly agreed that whatever be the meaning of the name, it denotes the Wady el Ahsa of Burckhardt (the Wady el Ahsy of Robinson and Smith), running into the Dead Sea near its southern extremity, and forming the boundary between Kerek and Gebal, corresponding to the ancient Moab and Edom ... The older writers make the enemy the subject of the verb; the moderns the Moabites themselves. On the whole, the most probable meaning of the verse is that the Moabites shall carry what they can save of their possessions into the adjacent land of Edom.” Weeping willows and other trees often line brooks. Some translate as the margin ||, Valley of the Arabians.

8 For the cry is gone round about the borders of Moab; the howling thereof unto Eglaim, and the howling thereof unto Beerelim.

For the cry is gone round about the borders of Moab; the howling thereof unto Eglaim. It has been noted that the Prophet seems to be using a play of words here, with the bellowing of a heifer, עֵגֶלֶת, in ISAIAH 15:5, sounding much like the cry proceeding from Eglaim, אֶגְלַיִם, here. ¶ And the howling thereof unto Beerelim. The LXX (C) has, “And her howling has gone as far as the well of Aelim,” and has Beerelim as a compound of well and Elim, בְּאֵר אֵילִים.

9 For the waters of Dimon shall be full of blood: for I will bring more [✓] upon Dimon, lions upon him that escapeth of Moab, and upon the remnant of the land.

✓ additions

For the waters of Dimon⁷ shall be full of blood. The Targum (ܬ)⁸ reads, “For the waters of Dimon are filled with the blood of the slain.” It seems that its waters were filled with blood from the dead and the wounded. Alexander writes, “It is an ingenious conjecture of Junius that the Dimon in the stream mentioned (2 Kings 3:20, 22), in which case the meaning of the clause would be, this stream shall not be merely red as it then was, but really full of blood.” ISBE has, “The form of the name, Dimon, in ISAIAH 15:9, may have been given to make it resemble the Hebrew *dām*⁹, ‘blood,’ to support the play upon words in the verse.” ¶ For I will bring more upon Dimon, lions upon him that escapeth of Moab, and upon the remnant of the land. The Targum (ⲧ) has, “For I will appoint upon Dimon an assembly of armies. Upon the escaped of Moab, a king with his army shall ascend; yea, to spoil the remainder of their land.” The LXX (Ⲅ) has, “For I will bring Arabians among Dimon, and I will take away the seed of Moab, and Ariel, and the remnant of Adama.” ¶ The idea of “bring more” is similar to that of “my hand is stretched out still” as the Lord had warned the Israelites if they would not obey, their punishment would continue. The thought here with “lions upon him that escaped &c.” is very much of that which is further developed in ISAIAH 24:18, “And it shall come to pass, that he who fleeth from the noise of the fear shall fall into the pit; and he that cometh up out of the midst of the pit shall be taken in the snare: for the windows from on high are open, and the foundations of the earth do shake.” In fact, this very idea would later be used again by Jeremiah in speaking of Moab, “He that fleeth from the fear shall fall into the pit; and he that getteth up out of the pit shall be taken in the snare: for I will bring upon it, even upon Moab, the year of their visitation, saith the LORD” (Jeremiah 48:44). When the Lord pursues, there is no hiding. Some feel this verse refers to wild beasts who shall overtake the Moabites; others suggest that while the original attackers will be the Assyrians, the lions represent the Babylonians. Delitzsch, Green, Gesenius, and BDB, among others, have lion here to coincide with the Masoretic Text (ⲙ) אֲרִיָּה, rather than the plural lions, אֲרִיִּים. Gesenius says of אֲרִיָּה, “used of a powerful and fierce enemy, ISAIAH 15:9; Jeremiah 4:7 &c.”

⁶ Alexander has the word incorrectly typeset as: הַצִּיר.

⁷ 1QIsa^a (Q) has Dibon.

⁸ Stenning.

FIRST POSTED: 16 December 2003

⁹ דָּם

Isaiah 16

A continuation of ISAIAH 15, this is the word of the LORD to Moab. She is encouraged to put her trust in the Lord, or else, within three years she would begin to pay the price for her lack of repentance. Many modern exegetes (e.g., Skinner, Cheyne) have a conversation between Moab and Judah, one in which Moab asks for protection for her fugitives. Others think that the invitation for Moab to send an appeasement offering to Judah was of a sarcastic nature, for no matter what she did, Moab would still be punished. With Kay, Nägelsbach, Alexander, Govett, Jenour, and Rawlinson, I believe that Moab was given a chance for mercy if she would reestablish her tribute to Judah (ISAIAH 16:1), and turn to the Lord (ISAIAH 16:4–5). Because punishment is assured to Moab (ISAIAH 16:6), we can assume that she refused the offer of mercy. A number of important allusions to the Messiah are found in this chapter.

vv. 1–5. Moab is told that her way of escape is to send a tribute of lambs (לָמַד can actually mean lambs or goats) to Jerusalem. King David defeated Moab and required tribute of her (2 Samuel 8:2). Sometime after the civil war that divided Israel at Solomon’s death, Moab paid a tribute to Israel (2 Kings 3:4) but then broke off from doing so at the death of Ahab (2 Kings 3:5). Now, it seems that Judah is asking for the tribute, with a warning of the evils that will overcome Moab if she refuses. Among these, the women will be found running in despair and arrive at the waters of Arnon (Ammonite territory), where they would not be able to ford the river. The waters will not part before them, however, as they did for the children of Israel before the Red Sea and subsequently, the Jordan. Isaiah pleads with the people of Moab that they should think through this proposal of protection carefully. That they should meet, consider and take counsel together, and not decide too hastily to reject the offer. Moab is then also counseled to protect the fugitive of Judah and possibly of Israel, and hide them from—or at the very least not give their presence away to—the enemy. Multiple suggestions have been tendered as to who the enemy is. By doing what is kind and what is right Moab, in turn, will find kind judgment from Messiah.

1 ¶ SEND ye the lamb to the ruler of the land from Sela to the wilderness, unto the mount of the daughter of Zion.

✓ or, Petra, Heb. A rock

SEND ye the lamb to the ruler of the land from Sela to the wilderness. We know from the Moabite stone as well as from 2 Kings that Moab had paid tribute to the Northern Kingdom: “And Mesha king of Moab was a sheepmaster, and rendered unto the king of Israel an hundred thousand lambs, and an hundred thousand rams, with the wool. But it came to pass, when Ahab was dead, that the king of Moab rebelled against the king of Israel” (2 Kings 3:4–5). Ahab, was the seventh King of Israel after the civil war. Nothing is known about Moab also paying a tribute to Judah. Rawlinson writes, “The prophet recommends that this [i.e., one such as in 2 Kings 3:4], or some similar, tribute should now be paid to the King of Judah instead, Israel having been absorbed into Assyria¹.” Even before the civil war we read about the subjugation of Moab: “And he smote Moab, and measured them with a line, casting them down to the ground; even with two lines measured he to put to death, and with one full line to keep alive. And so the Moabites became David’s servants, and brought gifts” (2 Samuel 8:2). Barnes tries to connect the scripture in Samuel and the one in Kings: “It is probable that as this tribute was laid by ‘David’ before the separation of the kingdoms of Judah and Israel, and as the kings of Judah claimed to be the true successors of David and Solomon, they demanded that the tribute should be rendered to ‘them,’ and not to the kings of Israel, and this is the claim which Isaiah enforces in the passage before us. The command of the prophet is to regain the lost favor of Israel by the payment of the tribute that was due.” ¶ Rawlinson makes an invaluable contribution here, towards the understanding of this verse: regarding Sela, סֵלָע and its relationship to this verse: “The enemy being regarded as in possession of the northern end of the Dead Sea, Moab is recommended to send her tribute round the southern end, and so by way of ‘the wilderness of Judah,’ to Jerusalem.” Delitzsch believes that סֵלָע corresponds to what is known as “Petra² (Wady Musa), near Mount Hor in Arabia Petraea.” Henderson explains that the site of Petra was completely unknown until it was “discovered by Burckhardt, on his route from Damascus to Egypt, in 1812.” ¶ Unto the mount of the daughter of Zion. The Targum (Ⲯ) reads, “Unto the mountain of the congregation of Zion.” The mount of the daughter of Zion represents Jerusalem, or it could also imply the temple or House of the Lord situated in Mount Zion.

¹ Israel, or the Northern tribes, was taken captive into the north by Sargon, סַרְגִּין, King of Assyria, after Samaria could no longer withstand the three year siege to which she was subjected. She would subsequently be known as the Lost Tribes. Israel had been repeatedly warned by the Lord through His prophetic servants to no avail: “Until the LORD removed Israel out of his sight, as he had said by all his servants the prophets. So was Israel carried away out of their own land to Assyria unto this day” (2 Kings 17:23). Depending on the chronologist, this took place anywhere from 130 to 175 years after the death of Ahab.

¶ MESSIANIC ALLUSIONS. The Targum (Ⲯ) paraphrase has a Messianic message that well corresponds with the mention of David (which here and in many instances stands for Messiah) in ISAIAH 16:5, “They shall bring tribute to the Anointed One (משיח)³ of Israel, who has prevailed over him who was as a wilderness . . .” Lowth also has instead of שְׁלַחְךָ, send ye the lamb, the idea of שְׁלַחְךָ, where בֵּר could be translated son, chosen one, the chosen one, or Messiah (see Gesenius, under בֵּר). With further changes, Lowth rather translates, “I will send forth the son” leaning on the LXX (Ⲯ) and the Syriac (Ⲫ), for the first person singular, I will send, אֲשַׁלַּח. The Syriac (Ⲫ) version reads, “The prophecy concerning the rest of the land. I will send the son of the ruler of the land from the rock [Petra] city of the wilderness.” The Vulgate (ⲫ) also preserves the idea of the lamb, “Emitte agnum⁴ Domine, dominatorem terrae, de Petra deserti.” Calvin writes—although not believing it himself—“Jerome explains it as referring to Christ, because he drew his birth from the Moabites (Ruth 1:4; Matthew 1:5), from whom Ruth was descended; and that opinion has been adopted by almost all Christians; as if the Prophet had said, ‘O Lord, though a judgment so severe as this awaits the Moabites, still thou wilt not utterly destroy them; for they will send thee a Lamb, the ruler of the world.’”

2 For it shall be, [that], as a wandering bird cast out of the nest, ✓ [so] the ² Linda & I had the opportunity to visit the beautiful wonders of Petra as part of our trip to the Holy Land in 2012. At the time I wrote in part, “Beside seeing all the beautiful sandstone, we also rode in a horse chariot and camel (I also rode a horse and a donkey in Petra) and had more fun watching the Bedouin and the donkeys, horses and camels than anything else.” I took lots of photos there as it is one of the most spectacular places I have ever visited.

³ Barnes, quoting the Targum (Ⲯ), suggests that if one thinks of משיח as messiah, or anointed one, then it could fit the king of Judah (the kings were also anointed), to whom Moab needed to send the sheep and the goats.

⁴ Agnus means lamb in Latin. The Douay, which translates the Vulgate (ⲫ) into English, has, “Send forth, O Lord, the lamb, the ruler of the earth, from Petra of the desert.” Or the VL into Spanish has, “Envía, Señor, el Cordero dominador de la tierra, de la Piedra del desierto.”

daughters of Moab shall be at the fords of Arnon.

✓ or, a nest forsaken

For it shall be, [that], as a wandering bird cast out of the nest. Those who suggest the futility of Moab’s repentance are quite mistaken. There is no instance in Scripture where the Lord—through His prophets—has invited people to humble themselves, or repent, if the existence for a pardon had been eliminated. If He gives a warning, it is always because He also gives a way for the escape. It needs to be understood, then, that ‘for it shall be’ here is a warning, “For it shall be that if they do not comply, it will come to pass that as a wandering bird &c.” A more correct translation is to take the 1 as else, lest, or otherwise. Gesenius provides several examples, including Psalm 143:7: “Hear me speedily, O LORD: my spirit faileth: hide not thy face from me, lest I be like unto them that go down into the pit” (emphasis added). ¶ Calvin has, “By the metaphor of birds he describes the terror with which they shall be struck, so that they will flee at the rustling of a leaf.⁵ He threatens that the Moabites, who had abused their tranquility, shall have a trembling and wearisome flight.” ¶ [So] the daughters of Moab shall be at the fords of Arnon. The Syriac (Ⲫ) has, “So that the daughters of Moab shall be deserted at the fords of Arnon.” Henry has, “The daughters of Moab (the country villages, or the women of your country) shall flutter about the fords of Arnon, attempting that way to make their escape to some other land, like a wandering bird thrown out of the nest half-fledged.” Henry, with his wonderful one-liners adds, “Those that will not yield to the fear of God shall be made to yield to the fear of everything else.”

3 Take ✓ counsel, execute judgment; make thy shadow as the night in the midst of the noonday; hide the outcasts; bewray not him that wandereth.

✓ Bring

Take counsel, execute judgment; make thy shadow as the night in the midst of the noonday. Here we have a temporary change of topic. The Targum (Ⲯ) reads, “Take counsel, execute counsel. Make thy shadow as the night in the day, in the midst of the noonday.” The LXX (Ⲯ) has, “Take farther counsel, and continually make thou a shelter from grief: they flee in darkness at mid-day.” The Douay translation, “Take counsel, gather a council: make thy shadow as the night in the midday.” Why make full daylight like the shadow of the night?

⁵ Reference to Leviticus 26:36, Rain in Due Season.

To hide the outcasts in the dark shade and not flash a light upon them—not betray them. It is the same idea as what follows below, “... hide the outcasts, bewray [ASV, betray] not &c.” The prophet Isaiah sees in vision when Moab will have the opportunity to lend a hand to the people of Judah. Moab is admonished to do everything in her power to protect the people of Judah who would be outcasts in the upcoming wars, and by so doing, Moab would be eventually blessed. Barnes has “as if he had said, ‘Take counsel; seek advice in your circumstances; be not hasty, rash, impetuous, unwise; do not cast off the friendship of the Jews; do not deal unkindly with those who may seek a refuge in your land, and thus provoke the nation to enmity; but let your land be an asylum, and thus conciliate and secure the friendship of the Jewish nation, and thus mercy shall be reciprocated and shown to you by him who shall occupy the throne of David’ (ISAIAH 16:5). The ‘design’ is, to induce the Moabites to show kindness to the fugitive Jews who might seek a refuge there, that thus, in turn, the Jews might show them kindness.” ¶ Hide the outcasts; bewray⁶ not him that wandereth. The Douay (Vulgate, V) translation, “Hide them that flee; and betray not them that wander about.” Some exegetes feel that the outcasts refer to Moab (see note on ISAIAH 16:4), but this is unlikely. Nägelsbach well points out that Judah would one day be scattered to the land of Moab: “This was fulfilled by Nebuchadnezzar, and in Jeremiah 40:11 Moab is expressly named among the lands into which scattered Judah (נִדְּרָה⁷), out of all the places they were driven, Jeremiah 40:12) had fled.”

4 Let mine outcasts dwell with thee, Moab; be thou a covert to them from the face of the spoiler: for the extortioner[✓] is at an end, the spoiler ceaseth, the oppressors^{✓✓} are consumed out of the land.

✓ wringer

✓ ✓ the treaders down

Let mine outcasts dwell with thee, Moab; be thou a covert to them from the face of the spoiler. The Targum (Ƨ)⁸ reads, “Let the outcasts dwell with thee, O kingdom of Moab; be a covert unto them from before the spoilers.” This verse, again, seems to plead with Moab to show tender mercies to the outcasts of Judah who would likely travel to Moab and seek refuge. The Douay translation, “My fugitives shall dwell with thee: O Moab, be thou a covert to them from the face of the destroyer.” The Syriac (ܣ) version, along with most moderns, completely changes the meaning, by making the outcasts those of Moab rather than those of Judah, “Let the outcasts of Moab dwell with you; be a shelter to them from the face of the spoiler.” I prefer to think of Judah as being the outcasts here, for the Lord using the possessive says, my outcasts, נִדְּרָהּ, much as He would say, my people. And who are the Lord’s people, but Israel? Calvin has: “This passage ought to be carefully observed; for God shows how great is the care which he takes of his people, since the injuries done to them affect him in the same manner as if they had been done to himself; as he declares by Zechariah, that whenever they are touched, the apple of his eye is touched (Zechariah 2:8) ... Let us therefore learn from this passage to be kind and dutiful to fugitives and exiles, and especially to believers, who are banished for their confession of the word ... If we wish to obtain any alleviation of our calamities, let us be kind and compassionate, and not refuse assistance to the needy ... When calls them his banished ... he likewise means, that they continue to be under his defence and protection, because, though they are banished and driven out of their native country, still he acknowledges them to be his people. That calamity which the Jews endured might be regarded as an evidence that they were cast off; but the Lord acknowledges them to be his children, though he chastises them severely.” ISAIAH 16:3–4, then, seems to be a warning to Moab not to lack compassion for the terrible afflictions of a suffering Judah (and not again repeat what happened when Israel came up out of Egypt). ¶ For the extortioner is at an end, the spoiler ceaseth, the oppressors are consumed out of the land. The Targum (Ƨ) has, “For the extortioner is at an end, the spoiler ceaseth, all that trampled underfoot have come to an end.” Why should Moab hide the outcasts and do that which was right? Because the extortioner is at an end, those who do wickedly will be pushed away, and the throne will be given to its rightful heir, even Messiah who will triumph. Some here translate נִדְּרָהּ as when (LHI) or until (Calvin). Calvin suggests: “Let my banished dwell with thee, Moab, be thou a place of concealment from the face of the destroyer, until the extortioner shall have ceased.” Calvin is not so far off, the idea being that the world, represented here by Moab, needs to protect the people of God until Messiah comes triumphantly, at which point He will protect them Himself (ISAIAH 16:5). As Balaam said of Israel before they entered into the land of Canaan: “Blessed is he that blesseth thee, and cursed is he that curseth thee” (Numbers 24:9b). Nägelsbach feels that instead of נִדְּרָהּ, translated here as the land, we should have the earth for, “according to the context, signifies the whole earth. For the world-power that is characterized in the preceding words dominates not a single land, but the whole earth.”

⁶ Divulge, reveal, betray (Webster).

⁷ From נִדְּרָהּ, to scatter, drive, banish.

⁸ Stenning.

5 And in mercy shall the throne be established: [✓] and he shall sit upon it in truth in the tabernacle of David, judging, and seeking judgment, and hasting righteousness.

✓ or, prepared

And in mercy shall the throne be established: and he shall sit upon it in truth in the tabernacle of David. The Targum (ܬ) reads, “Then the throne of the Messiah (ܡܫܝܚܐ) of Israel shall be established in goodness, and He shall sit upon it in truth in the city of David.” Cheyne has, “We hardly need to ask, Whose throne? ‘Kindness and faithfulness,’ ‘justice and righteousness’ are it is true, the pillars of every divinely prospered king (Proverbs 20:28; 29:14), but here we are manifestly in the Messianic region of thought.” ¶ Judging, and seeking judgment, and hasting righteousness. This righteous Davidic King will be no other than Messiah Himself. Isaiah seems in this verse to dwell on the beautiful day when Messiah shall reign, and thus speaks of righteous judgment, and other descriptions of His throne. But now, as suddenly as we gazed together on the refreshing waters of Messiah, we return together to the draught of the desert, even to the pride of Moab, or of the world.

vv. 6–8. But will Moab listen? There is a huge difference between predestination and foreknowledge.⁹ The Lord knows the end from the beginning and knows that Moab will be too proud to listen. Consequences will come forth as a result of Moab’s prideful disobedience. All that she prized in terms of buildings and agriculture will be devastated.

6 ¶ We have heard of the pride of Moab; ~~[he is]~~ very proud: ~~[even]~~ of his haughtiness and his pride, for he is very proud; and his wrath, ~~[but]~~ his lies, ~~[shall]~~ ~~not [be]~~ so and all his evil works.

⁹ Some have incorrectly suggested that if God knows the future, that this, in effect, determines the future. As a result, they argue, the principle of agency and free will are limited by God’s foreknowledge. The same individuals freely admit that a person’s knowledge of history—or of the past—does not affect history. This is truly putting an artificial limit on God, based on human constraints. In reality, God can see the future as well as the past. That is why God sends Prophets to warn us, that we may make the needed corrections now, while we can. The blessings in a Patriarchal Blessing, likewise, are contingent to the recipient living the principles of the Gospel of Jesus Christ. The sacred principle of moral agency is never violated.

We have heard of the pride of Moab; of his haughtiness and his pride, for he is very proud. Delitzsch speaks of a contrast between a Moab who will have to humble herself and the present arrogance of Moab, “the prophecy enters here upon a new stage, commencing with Moab’s sin, and depicting the fate of Moab in still more elegiac strains. ‘We have heard of the pride of Moab, the very haughty (pride), his haughtiness, and his pride, and his wrath, the falsehood of his speech.’ The future self-humiliation of Moab, which would be the fruit of its sufferings, is here contrasted with the previous self-exaltation, of which these sufferings were the fruit. ‘We have heard,’ says the prophet, identifying himself with his people. Boasting pompousness has hitherto been the distinguishing characteristic of Moab in relation to the latter (see ISAIAH 25:11). The heaping up of words of the same verbal stem (cf., ISAIAH 3:1) is here intended to indicate how thoroughly haughty was their haughtiness (cf., Romans 7:13, ‘that sin might become exceeding sinful’), and how completely it had taken possession of Moab.” Regarding these words based on the same root, Henderson explains: “Four different forms of the same word are here employed, the more emphatically to express the overbearing pride of the Moabites.” These are, respectively, “pride of / ܡܝܬܝܢ, pride / ܡܝܬܝܢ, his haughtiness / ܡܝܬܝܢ, and finally, and his pride / ܡܝܬܝܢ.” ¶ And his wrath, his lies, and all his evil works. The Masoretic text (מ) (in contrast to the Inspired Version) has לֹא-כֵן. Delitzsch has, “[Moab] boasted and was full of rage towards Israel, to which, so far as it retained its consciousness of the truth of Jehovah, the talk of Moab . . . must necessarily appear as לֹא-כֵן, not-right, i.e., at variance with fact.” Henderson has for לֹא-כֵן, unstable, untrue, false, and yields, “to speak falsely, feignedly, &c.). Calvin takes כֵן to mean so, therefore לֹא-כֵן as not so. YLT speaks of the devices of Moab, much like saying the evil works or designs. “We have heard of the pride of Moab—very proud, His pride, and his arrogance, and his wrath, Not right are his devices.”

7 Therefore shall Moab howl for Moab, every one shall howl: for the foundations of Kirhateseth shall ye mourn; [✓] surely ~~[they are]~~ stricken.

✓ or, mutter

Therefore (לִּכְנֹחַ) shall Moab howl for Moab (לְמוֹאָב), every one shall howl. This points to the pain or anguish to be experienced by Moab. ¶ For the foundations of Kirhareth shall ye mourn; surely [they are] stricken. To mourn for the foundations means that the rest of the structure is gone. Cheyne has, “Kir-Hareth or Kir-Heres (ISAIAH 16:11); usually explained as ‘brick-fortress,’ and identified with Kir-Moab. Prof. E. H. Palmer, however, suggests another meaning. ‘Asking one of the Arabs where the Moabite Stone was found, the latter replied that it was “between the hárithin,” i.e., between the two háriths . . . On Mr. Palmer’s demanding a further explanation, the Arab pointed out the two hillocks upon which the ruined village of Dhibán stands. . . . Nearly all the towns in Moab are built upon similar eminences, and Mr. Palmer found that they are invariably called Háriths by the Arabs’ (Athenaeum, August 19, 1871).”

8 For the fields of Heshbon languish, [and] the vine of Sibmah: the lords of the heathen have broken down the principal plants thereof, they are come [even] unto Jazer, they wandered [through] the wilderness: her branches are stretched out, [✓] they are gone over the sea.

✓ or, plucked up

For the fields of Heshbon languish, [and] the vine of Sibmah. Henderson, leaning on Jerome, says, “Sibmah was only half a Roman mile distant from Heshbon, and is mentioned on account of the superior excellence of its grapes.” Barnes has, “The ‘fields’ here evidently mean ‘vineyards,’ for so the parallelism demands. So in Deuteronomy 32:32: ‘Their vine is of the vine of Sodom, / And of the fields of Gomorrah.’” ¶ The lords of the heathen have broken down the principal plants thereof, they are come [even] unto Jazer. Delitzsch says, “This Sibmah wine was cultivated, as the prophet says, far and wide in Moab - northwards as far as Ja’zer (between Ramoth, i.e., Salt, and Heshbon, now a heap of ruins), eastwards into the desert, and southwards across the Dead Sea—a hyperbolical expression for close up to its shores.” While the destruction of these valued vineyards and fields seem to be meant, some moderns suggest that it was the wine itself that was so strong as to cause intoxication to those who imbibed. ¶ They wandered [through] the wilderness: her branches are stretched out, they are gone over the sea. Going over the sea seems to be an expression of how widely known the vines had become, being cultivated beyond the present borders into other nations even beyond the Euphrates. Delitzsch asks, “But what sea can the sea of Jazer be? Probably some celebrated large pool, like the pools of Heshbon, in which the waters of the Wady (Nahr) Sir, which takes its rise close by, were collected. Seetzen found some pools still there.”

Henderson says, “The יַם, sea, spoken of, is by some interpreted of a lake or sea in the vicinity of Jazer; but as there is no appearance of any in the region, it seems preferable to refer it to the Dead Sea, the only water which, in such connexion, deserves the name.”

Rawlinson explains, “The young shoots or slips are taken by the cultivators and spread further and further. They are even carried across the Dead Sea, and planted on its western shore.” Grapevines were best propagated, in a pre-phylloxera era, through cuttings of the young woody canes.

vv. 9–14. The LORD (see ISAIAH 16:13) will join Moab in weeping for Moab, He will feel pain for her. Where at one time there had been shouts of joy for the harvest, there would be silence. Moab will take her petitions to her gods in the high places, but the no-gods will not listen; she will then take her petition to her temple, but her no-gods at the temple will not hear. This prophecy against Moab had been known from before, but now it would begin to come to pass.

9 ¶ Therefore I will bewail with the weeping of Jazer the vine of Sibmah: I will water thee with my tears, O Heshbon, and Elealeh: for the shouting for thy summer fruits and for thy harvest is fallen. [✓]

✓ or, the alarm is fallen upon &c.

Therefore I will bewail with the weeping of Jazer the vine of Sibmah. The people of Jazer would mourn for the loss of the fruit of the vine of Sibmah, and with great tears. I will speak a few words here about my own tears, those for a tangerine tree. Sometime after 1991, Linda gave me a tangerine tree which I planted in the front of our California home. Oh, how I loved this tree. I loved it so much, that I asked a friend to help me graft it lest some harm would befall this tree whose fruit reminded me of Chilean tangerines. The graft did not take. Over the next few years the tree grew in strength and beauty and fruitfulness, but the last crop it would give would be in the winter of 2000–2001. By the next winter the tree was completely dead. I was filled with so much comfort when I wept over my tangerine tree. I was sure the tree would be healed and live. The comfort I felt, however, was the love of God, through the Spirit of the Holy Ghost. I wish I knew what variety it was. Linda has bought for me several tangerine trees, since then, which I planted in the back garden. This experience has taught me what it is to weep for a vine or for a tree.¹⁰ I have quite a bit of empathy for Moab, here. Henry points out, regarding Moab, that while in former days shouts of joy had been heard, “Nothing is said of their praising God for their abundance, and giving him the glory of it.” ¶ I will water thee with my tears, O Heshbon, and Elealeh. Delitzsch has, “The beauties of nature and fruitfulness of the land, which come into the possession of any nation, are gifts from the riches of divine goodness, remnants of the paradisiacal commencement of the history of man, and types of its paradisiacal close; and for this very reason they are not matters of indifference to the spirit of prophecy. And for the same reason, it is not unworthy of a prophet, who predicts the renovation of nature and the perfecting of it into the beauty of paradise, to weep over such a devastation as that of the Moabitish vineyards which was now passing before his mind (cf., ISAIAH 32:12–13).” ¶ For the shouting for thy summer fruits and for thy harvest is fallen. Delitzsch has, “the word הִתְהַלְלִי, which was the shout raised by the pressers of the grapes, to give the time for moving their feet when treading out the wine (ISAIAH 16:10; Jeremiah 25:30). A הִתְהַלְלִי of this kind had fallen upon the rich floors of Heshbon-Elealeh, inasmuch as they had been trodden down by enemies—a Hedad, and yet no Hedad, as Jeremiah gives it in a beautiful oxymoron (Jeremiah 48:33), i.e., no joyous shout of actual grape-treaders.” Most of the ancient versions have the הִתְהַלְלִי rather, to be the shouting of the conquering peoples rather than to the joyful one emanating from the treaders of the grapes.

10 And gladness is taken away, and joy out of the plentiful field; and in the vineyards there shall be no singing, neither shall there be shouting: the treaders shall tread out no wine in [their] presses; I have made [their vintage] shouting to cease.

Harvest time bring joy. But the time would come when the noises of harvest and treading would cease to be heard. The Syriac (S) version reads, “Nor shall they tread out wine in the press; nor shall men tread out wine with their feet; for I have made the vine treaders to cease.” This translation reminds us of a completely different type of treading—the atoning sacrifice of our Lord: “Who is this that cometh from Edom, with dyed garments from Bozrah? this that is glorious in his apparel, travelling in the greatness of his strength? I that speak in righteousness, mighty to save. Wherefore art thou red in thine apparel, and thy garments like him that treadeth in the winefat? I have trodden the winepress alone; and of the people there was none with me: for I will tread them in mine anger, and trample them in my fury; and their blood shall be sprinkled upon my garments, and I will stain all my raiment” (ISAIAH 63:1–3).

11 Wherefore my bowels shall sound like an harp for Moab, and mine inward parts for Kirharesh.

Wherefore my bowels shall sound like an harp for Moab. Kay suggests that it is Immanuel Himself who weeps, for Moab has not accepted the mercies He has invited them to partake. Young explains that Isaiah assigns a body to God, in his excitement—but we know that God indeed has a body, “Did God also have such tenderness toward Moab, that ancient enemy of His chosen ones? At a later time Isaiah becomes emboldened sufficiently to ascribe bowels to God. ‘Where,’ he asks, ‘is thy zeal and thy strength, the wounding of thy bowels and of thy mercies toward me? Are they restrained?’ (ISAIAH 63:15b).” ¶ And mine inward parts for Kirharesh. The Syriac (S) version reads, “And my soul for the fortified walls which will be destroyed.” The Douay translation, “And my inward parts for the brick wall.”

12 And it shall come to pass, when it is seen that Moab is weary on the high place, that he shall come to his sanctuary to pray; but he shall not prevail.

And it shall come to pass, when it is seen that Moab is weary on the high place. Henry explains, “Men are generally so stupid that they will not believe, till they are made to see, the vanity of idols and of all creature-confidences, nor will come off from them till they are made weary of them. But, when he is weary of his high places, he will not go, as he should, to God’s sanctuary, but to his sanctuary, to the temple of Chemosh, the principal idol of Moab (so it is generally understood); and he shall pray there to as little purpose, and as little to his own case and satisfaction, as he did in his high places; for, whatever honours idolaters give to their idols, they do not thereby make them at all the better able to help them.” ¶ That he shall come to his sanctuary to pray; but he shall not prevail. The Targum (T) reads, “He shall enter his idol-temple to pray, yet he shall not prevail.” Cheyne says, “The tender compassion of the prophetic writer for Moab leads us to expect that some happier prospect will be opened than a useless religious ceremony. Lastly, the idea of conversion as resulting from a terrible judgment lies at the very foundation of Old Testament prophecy ... Ewald has with great sagacity restored what in all probability embodies the sense of the lost apodosis:— ‘Then shall Moab be ashamed of Kemosh his confidence, and turn unto Jehovah.’” While such creative interpretation is doubtful for the time of Moab, it is true that the day will come when all the world will be ashamed, who have leaned on any false gods, no-gods who cannot save. Jeremiah has, “And Moab shall be ashamed of Chemosh, as the house of Israel was ashamed of Bethel their confidence” (Jeremiah 48:13).

¹⁰ These other tangerine, lemon and orange trees were extremely productive, and were yielding fruit even after we moved back to Chile in 2014.

13 This [is] the word that the LORD hath spoken concerning Moab since that time.

Up to here we read about a vision that Isaiah had received regarding Moab in the past, but now we read that the time will quickly come for its fulfillment.

Delitzsch says, “The massa [מַשָּׂא, i.e., burden, that commenced in ISAIAH 15] is now brought to a close, and there follows an epilogue which fixes the term of the fulfilment of what is not predicted now for the first time.”

14 But now the LORD hath spoken, saying, Within three years, as the years of an hireling, and the glory of Moab shall be contemned, with all that great multitude; and the remnant [shall be] very small [and] feeble. ✓

✓ or, not many

But now the LORD hath spoken, saying, Within three years, as the years of an hireling, and the glory of Moab shall be contemned. To contemn means to despise, to treat with contempt or scorn (see Webster). Rawlinson, leaning on Kay, gives the idea of a hireling as someone who is working under a contract that stipulates a given amount of pay for a specific period of time: “A hireling would not consent to serve a day longer than his contract bound him, nor would his master consent that he should serve a day short of it.” While the beginning of the fulfillment may have begun at the time of Isaiah, from Jeremiah 48:16 it is clear that the prophecy against Moab had still not fully taken place—but would soon be: “The calamity of Moab is near to come, and his affliction hasteth fast.” Delitzsch explains, “Unfortunately, we know nothing certain as to the time at which the three years commence. The question whether it was Shalmanassar, Sargon, or Sennacherib who treated the Moabites so harshly, is one that we cannot answer. In Herodotus (2:141), Sennacherib is called ‘king of the Arabians and Assyrians;’ and Moab might be included in the Arabians. In any case, after the fulfilment of Isaiah’s prophecy in the Assyrian times, there was still a portion left, the fulfilment of which, according to Jeremiah 48, was reserved for the Chaldeans.” And since so many of these prophecies have a latter-day component, we can expect this to be the case with this burden, also. ¶ With all that great multitude; and the remnant [shall be] very small [and] feeble. This is a curious phrase when referring to a nation other than Israel, the remnant. Delitzsch suggests that the “...history of the nations is but the shadow of the history of Israel.” Rawlinson, leaning on Reverend George Adam Smith, has: “Moab seems to have offered a very slight resistance to Asshur-bani-pal” (History of Asshur-bani-pal, p. 259). Barnes speaks of Moab at the time he wrote his commentary back in 1838, “All travelers concur in the general desolation of that country which was once so thickly studded with towns, and that abounded so richly in flocks, and produced so luxuriantly the grape. It is now strewn with ruins. All the cities of Moab have disappeared.”

FIRST POSTED: 28 January 2004

Isaiah 17

Syria and Ephraim—to their hurt—had banded together to fight against Judah (see ISAIAH 7). Judah was saved, but not because of the righteousness of King Ahaz. The Lord would leave a remnant of Judah and Israel who in the latter days would stay on the LORD—not on idols or on man. The most beautiful part of this verse is the center of the chiasmus focusing on the turnabout of the children of Jacob (both portions of divided Israel) in the last days: “At that day shall a man look to his Maker, and his eyes shall have respect to the Holy One of Israel. And he shall not look to the altars, the work of his hands, neither shall respect that which his fingers have made, either the groves, or the images” (ISAIAH 17:8). Most of this chapter is about Judah and Israel, rather than about Damascus (the capital of Syria). If we recall from ISAIAH 7, Ahaz, king of Israel, had preferred to form an alliance with Assyria when threatened by the Syro-Ephraimite coalition. The end of the chapter (ISAIAH 17:12–14) seems to reference the defeat of Assyria, as well as a latter-day allusion the nations gathering against Jerusalem for no avail, as the Holy One of Israel would step in to save her.

vv. 1–5. Syria is to be destroyed. Only flocks shall be left in her land and graze undisturbed. Syria had been a fortress for Ephraim (Northern Kingdom) but this would no longer be the case. Like Syria, the glory of Israel would cease.

1 ¶ THE burden of Damascus. Behold, Damascus is taken away from [being] a city, and it shall be a ruinous heap.

THE burden of Damascus. The Targum (Ⲯ) paraphrase has a bolder figure here, “The burden of the cup of cursing to give Damascus¹ to drink.” From the ISBE narrative, we note that “In 773 Assyria again invaded the territory of Damascus. Tiglath-pileser III (745–727 BC) pushed vigorously westward, and in 738 Rezin of Damascus paid tribute. A year or two later he revolted, and attempted in concert with Pekah of Israel, to coerce Judah into joining an anti-Assyrian league (2 Kings 15:37; 16:5; ISAIAH 7). His punishment was swift and decisive. In 734 the Assyrians advanced and laid siege to Damascus, which fell in 732. Rezin was executed, his kingdom was overthrown.” In 2 Kings 16 we read how Ahaz, king of Judah, sought the help of Assyria when threatened by a coalition of Syria and Ephraim: “So Ahaz sent messengers to Tiglathpileser king of Assyria, saying, I am thy servant and thy son: come up, and save me out of the hand of the king of Syria, and out of the hand of the king of Israel, which rise up against me. And Ahaz took the silver and gold that was found in the house of the LORD, and in the treasures of the king’s house, and sent it for a present to the king of Assyria. And the king of Assyria hearkened unto him: for the king of Assyria went up against Damascus, and took it, and carried the people of it captive to Kir, and slew Rezin” (2 Kings 16:7–9, see ISAIAH 7). In Jeremiah we read, “Concerning Damascus. Hamath is confounded, and Arpad: for they have heard evil tidings: they are fainthearted; there is sorrow on the sea; it cannot be quiet. Damascus is waxed feeble, and turneth herself to flee, and fear hath seized on her: anguish and sorrows have taken her, as a woman in travail. How is the city of praise not left, the city of my joy! Therefore her young men shall fall in her streets, and all the men of war shall be cut off in that day, saith the LORD of hosts. And I will kindle a fire in the wall of Damascus, and it shall consume the palaces of Benhadad” (Jeremiah 49:23–27). ¶ Behold, Damascus is taken away from [being] a city, and it shall be a ruinous heap. The Douay translation from the Vulgate (ⲱ) has, “Behold, Damascus shall cease to be a city, and shall be as a ruinous heap of stones.” Rawlinson has, “According to Vitranga, Damascus has been destroyed oftener than any other town; but it has a wonderful power of rising again from the ashes. Probably a destruction by Sargon is here intended.” Luther speaks about Damascus standing in for the whole nation: “It was customary with the prophets to take a part for the whole, so as to include under the destruction of the metropolis the fate of the whole nation; for what must ordinary towns expect when the citadel of the kingdom has been stormed?” Furthermore, the metropolis of the nations are often their pride. So it was, for instance, in the hideous attacks against the USA that took place on 11 September 2001, that the pride of the USA was wounded.

2 The cities of Aroer [are] forsaken: they shall be for flocks, which shall lie down, and none shall make [them] afraid.

The cities of Aroer [are] forsaken. The LXX (Ⲅ) does away with the reference to either a city or Aroer here,

¹ In Chile, damascos is the word used for apricots.

“Abandoned forever.” Delitzsch explains: “There were two Aroers: an old Amoritish city allotted to the tribe of Reuben, viz., ‘Aroer on the Arnon’ (Deuteronomy 2:36; 3:12, etc.); and an old Ammonitish one, allotted to the tribe of Gad, viz., ‘Aroer before Rabbah’ (Rabbath, Ammon, Joshua 13:25). The ruins of the former are Arair, on the lofty northern bank of the Mugib; but the situation of the latter has not yet been determined with certainty ... The name of Aroer was ominous, and what its name indicated would happen to the cities in its circuit. ערער means ‘to lay bare,’ to pull down (Jeremiah 51:58); and עריעי, ערער signifies a stark-naked condition, a state of desolation and solitude.

After ISAIAH 17:1 has threatened Damascus in particular, and ISAIAH 17:2 has done the same to Israel, ISAIAH 17:3 comprehends them both. Ephraim loses the fortified cities which once served it as defences, and Damascus loses its rank as a kingdom. Those that are left of Aram, who do not fall in the war, become like the proud citizens of the kingdom of Israel, i.e., they are carried away into captivity. All this was fulfilled under Tiglath-pileser.” Barnes has, “Gesenius supposes (‘Commentary in loc.’) that the phrase ‘the cities of Aroer’ means the cities round about Aroer, and that were connected with it, similar to the phrase ‘daughters of a city.’ This city he supposes was near the river Arnon, within the limits of Moab, and that the prediction here was fulfilled by Tiglath-pileser, when he carried away the inhabitants of Galilee, Gilead, and other places mentioned in 2 Kings 15:29. There can be no doubt that it was under the jurisdiction of Damascus.” Naegelsbach offers yet another explanation regarding Aroer: “The Prophet makes the Syrian capital his starting point, announcing to it first that it will be reduced to a place of ruin (ISAIAH 17:1). From there he turns to the territory of Israel, and traverses first east Jordan Israel to its extremest point (ISAIAH 17:2), then passes over to west Jordan, and then returns back to Damascus (ISAIAH 17:3). Thus he describes a circuit, carries the destruction over Gilead to Ephraim and thence back to Damascus, so that thus Ephraim becomes as Damascus and Damascus as Ephraim; thus both, as they are politically closely united, appear joined in a common ruin ... Three cities of Old Testament mentioned are called by the name Aroer: (1) a city of Judah (1 Samuel 30:28) which cannot by any sense be meant here; (2) a city in the tribe of Gad, which according to Joshua 13:25 (compare Judges 11:13) lay ‘before Rabbah’; (3) a city in the tribe of Reuben, situated on the north bank of the Arnon (Deuteronomy 2:36; Joshua 12:2; 13:9, 16; Judges 11:26; 2 Kings 10:33, and often). But if the Prophet meant only one of the two Aroers, then we miss an element that is of importance in the connection of thought of our passage. Are both Aroers meant, then the Southern one, on the bank of Arnon, must be one of them. But in that case the words ‘cities of Arnon’ involve the sense: the entire east Jordan territory. But also the etymological primary sense (ערער = nudus, ‘bare,’ עריי inops, ‘poor’) recommended the mention of the name of these cities. So that it thus seems to have been chosen for a threefold reason. From Damascus the judgment of God moves southward like a tempest or a hail cloud though Gilead to rebound from the mountain chain of Abarim and be deflected thereby westward across the Jordan into the territory of Ephraim. Thus Gilead becomes unfit for human habitation. Only herds of animals stop there, that can repose without fear of disturbance.” ¶ They shall be for flocks, which shall lie down, and none shall make [them] afraid. The Targum (ܬ) has a clear explanation here, “They shall be for dwelling-places for flocks of sheep; they shall lie down, and none shall make them to move away.” Such shall be the nature of the desolation, that Gill writes, “the flocks of sheep, timorous creatures, easily frightened; but so great should be the depopulation now, there would be no man upon the spot, or any pass by, to give them any disturbance.”

3 The fortress also shall cease from Ephraim, and the kingdom from Damascus, and the remnant of Syria: they shall be as the glory of the children of Israel, saith the LORD of hosts.

The fortress also shall cease from Ephraim, and the kingdom from Damascus, and the remnant of Syria: The sense I got from the AV, is that Damascus had been there, to the north of Ephraim, to be the first in line of attack, and in this fashion, had been a wall of protection or a fortress for Ephraim. With the destruction of Damascus, Ephraim would have no such protection in the future, and the invading forces from the north, in this case Assyria, would be able to come all the way down to Ephraim unimpaired. Barnes well writes, “Shall come to an end; shall cease to be, for so the word שבת² is often used, Genesis 8:22; ISAIAH 24:8; Lamentations 5:15.” The remnant of Syria, explains Barnes, is “That which is left of the kingdom of Syria after the capital Damascus shall be destroyed.” ¶ They shall be as the glory of the children of Israel, saith the LORD of hosts. The LXX (Ϟ) reads, “For thou art no better than the children of Israel, even than their glory; thus saith the Lord of Hosts.” In other words, as the children of Israel (Northern Kingdom) had lost their glory, so would the people of Damascus.

² Sabbath, and thus also, “to cease, to desist, leave off” (Gesenius).

4 And in that day it shall come to pass, [that] the glory of Jacob shall be made thin, and the fatness of his flesh shall wax lean.

And in that day it shall come to pass, [that] the glory of Jacob shall be made thin. The Syriac (S) version has, “And in that day it shall come to pass that the glory of Jacob shall wane.” There is an allusion to the punishment that would come upon all of the tribes of Israel so only a small remnant would remain. ¶ And the fatness of his flesh shall wax lean. The Targum (T) has, “And the riches of his glory shall be carried away.” Calvin here explains, “When he next threatens them with leanness, his object is to reprove their indolence, as the Prophets frequently reprove them for their fatness (Jeremiah 5:28; 1:11). On account of their prosperity and of the fertility of the country, they became proud, as horses that are fat and excessively pampered grow restive. Hence also they are elsewhere called ‘fat cows’ (Amos 4:1). But however fierce and stubborn they might be, God threatens that he will take away their fatness with which they were puffed up.”

5 And it shall be as when the harvestman gathereth the corn, and reapeth the ears with his arm; and it shall be as he that gathereth ears in the valley of Rephaim.

And it shall be as when the harvestman gathereth the corn,³ and reapeth the ears with his arm. Most exegetes suggest that with the ease that those who harvest twist and remove the ears of standing grains and gather them for the harvest, with that same ease would the children of Jacob be harvested and removed, despite their great numbers. Gill gives life to the metaphor: “That is, with one hand he gathers the standing corn into his fist, and then reaps it with his other arm . . . just as a harvestman cuts down the corn, and with as much ease and quick dispatch; they being no more able to stand before him than a field of corn before the reaper!” Alexander prefers to think of חֲסִידֵי to “the whole act of reaping.” חֲסִידֵי stands for any standing grain (Gesenius, HAL).

³ Not maize, but rather grains such as wheat, oats, etc. In the AV the word corn always means grains. This is something that I learned from Rabbi Shaye J.D. Cohen. For instance, to note two examples, where in Wycliffe the term wheat is used in Genesis 27:28 and 27:32, in the KJV we have the word corn, instead. Geneva also uses wheat. The AV followed after the Bishops’ Bible in using the word corn instead of wheat. Most Bibles today use the word wheat or grain (e.g., ABP {LXX (Θ)}, AMP, ASV, BBE, CEV, ESV, GNB, GW, HCSB, ISV, JUB, LEB, LITV, MKJV, NASB, as well as most Spanish editions).

¶ And it shall be as he that gathereth ears in the valley of Rephaim. Perhaps this is equivalent to saying the San Joaquín Valley in California in the twentieth century, with all its vineyards, fruit trees, agronomic and vegetable crops, as well as grains. Rephaim has also been called the valley of the giants by some. It was supposed to be close to Jerusalem (DBL). Gill says that “[Rephaim] was a valley not far from Jerusalem, as Josephus says; who also calls it the valley of the giants: it is thought to have been a very fruitful place, where the ears of corn were very large and heavy, and so great care was taken in gathering and gleaning that none be lost . . .” Henry writes, “The corn is the glory of the fields (Psalms 65:13); but, when it is reaped and gone, where is the glory? . . . And the victorious army, like the careful husbandmen in the valley of Rephaim, where the corn was extraordinary, would not, if they could help it, leave an ear behind, would lose nothing that they could lay their hands on.” Young has, “Through the field of standing corn the reapers go to pluck the harvest grain, and with their arms reach out to take the ears. Once the ears are taken, only the stalks remain. So will the glory of Jacob be at the time when the Lord visits it in judgment.” One may then wonder if Isaiah meant that it would go from producing rich abundance to giving a shadow of what it used to in former days.

vv. 6–9. A remnant would remain, which represents a remnant of Ephraim as well as of Judah. In the last days the children of Jacob would look to God and have faith in Him, and not in the idols they had built.

6 ¶ Yet gleaning grapes shall be left in it, as the shaking of an olive tree, two [or] three berries in the top of the uppermost bough, four [or] five in the outmost fruitful branches thereof, saith the LORD God of Israel.

Yet gleaning grapes shall be left in it, The Targum (T) has: “Yet a gleaning shall be left in it.” As Rawlinson and several versions of the Bible point out, the Hebrew (אֵל) simply has, “Yet gleanings shall be left in it” and there is no mention of grapes. The ellipsis could be filled with the word fruit, rather than grapes: “Yet gleaning fruit shall be left in it.” A small remnant would remain of both Ephraim and Judah. ¶ As the shaking of an olive tree, two [or] three berries in the top of the uppermost bough, four [or] five in the outmost fruitful branches thereof, saith the LORD God of Israel. The Targum (T)⁴ has an interpretative paraphrase here, “Two or three berries at the top of the uppermost bough, four or five in the straggling (literally, rebellious) branch; so shall the righteous be left solitary in the midst of the world among the kingdoms, saith the Lord God of Israel.” ¶ The Talmud tradition (Seder Zera’im, Mishna, Hallah Chapter 3) suggests that there is a regular harvest after which a few (probably hard to reach) olive berries are left to be gleaned by the poor by striking off (probably with a rod). Thus the remnant shall be few, and interestingly, the remnant will be positioned in a place difficult for man to get to. Because of the chiasm, it seems as if ISAIAH 17:6 is tied to ISAIAH 17:9, and the allusion is to the remnant of Ephraim and Judah, rather than that of Damascus. In this case, the idea of the LORD preserving some of Ephraim in a difficult place to get, could well represent the children of Lehi, as well as the Lost Tribes: one of them in the far branches, and the latter on the topmost boughs. ¶ Gills, following Kimhi, rather explains that Jerusalem is out of reach for Assyria, “Kimhi applies this to Jerusalem, which was the highest part of the land of Israel; and what was in it the hand of the king of Assyria could not reach.”

⁴ Stenning.

7 At that day shall a man look to his Maker, and his eyes shall have respect to the Holy One of Israel.

At that day shall a man look to his Maker. Some exegetes have not understood this verse, because they have failed to see that it stands as the center of a chiasm, along with verse ISAIAH 17:8, as an allusion to latter-day hope. In the latter days the children of Israel would turn to their Maker, and acknowledge that He, even He, Jesus is the promised Messiah. The expression to look to his Maker has reference to man’s turning toward the Lord and putting his trust in Him. ¶ And his eyes shall have respect to the Holy One of Israel. And man will love Christ, and know that He is the Holy One of Israel. The testimony of Jesus will be in their bosoms and will rejoice in the Savoir of mankind, to follow Him and do His will. This is in contrast to what follows.

8 And he shall not look to the altars, the work of his hands, neither shall respect [that] which his fingers have made, either the groves, or the images. ✓

✓ or, sun images

And he shall not look to the altars, the work of his hands. This refers to altars built up to idols, rather than to the Holy One of Israel. ¶ Neither shall respect [that] which his fingers have made, either the groves, or the images. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “Or stay himself upon that which his fingers have prepared, neither upon the groves⁵ nor upon the sun-images.” In terms of groves, most think of these as trees planted in hills, but Faussett has, “A symbolical tree is often found in Assyrian inscriptions, representing the hosts of heaven (‘Saba’), answering to Ashteroth or Astarte, the queen of heaven, as Baal or Bel is the king. Hence the expression, ‘image of the grove,’ is explained (2 Kings 21:7).” Whether they be sun-images or any other type of idol, there is false security when we look to—or putting out faith in—anything other than God, whether the strength of man, nature, idols or intellectual idolatry is meant.

vv. 9–11. The strong cities would be devastated as the people had not trusted in God. There would prepare for a great harvest but would be disappointed. The focus is on the children of Jacob in general. In ISAIAH 17:11 the Targum Ⲯ has, “After that ye were sanctified to be a people, there ye made your works despicable.” It was the children of Jacob who were sanctified to be a people.

9 ¶ In that day shall his strong cities be as a forsaken bough, and an uppermost branch, which they left because of the children of Israel: and there shall be desolation.

In that day shall his strong cities be as a forsaken bough. While keeping an allusion to the previous figure, the scene changes here. As the olive fruit that is left in the tree might feel forsaken, so will the desolation of the strong cities be in that day. Just as those who inhabited Canaan melted in fear and were conquered by the children of Jacob as they returned from Egypt, so now Ephraim and Judah would be overcome by Assyria and Babylonia, except for a remnant. Lowth is a strong proponent of the LXX (Ⲯ)⁶ version, “The translation of the LXX has happily preserved what seems to be the true reading of the text, as it stood in the copies of their time; though the words are now transposed, either in the text, or in their version.” The Tanakh has, “In that day, their fortress cities shall be like the deserted sites which the Horesh and the Amir [note: Septuagint reads ‘the Amorites and the Hivites’] abandoned because of the Israelites; and there shall be desolation.” ¶ And an uppermost branch, which they left because of the children of Israel: and there shall be desolation. In a footnote, the Douay (Ⲫ) suggests, that this would be equivalent to the desolation left by the children of Israel, when they came into the land of Canaan. The Syriac (S) has, “Which was left destitute before the children of Israel; so you will become a desolation.” Calvin insightfully comments as follows, referring to the contrast between Leviticus 26:8 (Israel obedient, Rain in Due Season) and Deuteronomy 32:30 (Israel disobedient), “Here the particle אֲשֶׁר, I have no doubt, denotes comparison; and therefore I have rendered it in like manner as, which makes the statement of the Prophet to be, in connection with what had been already said, that the people would tremble and flee and be scattered, in the same manner as God had formerly driven out the ancient inhabitants.”

⁵ אֲשֵׁרָה, “neither upon the Asherah,” or tree for idolatrous worship.

⁶ The LXX (Ⲯ) has Ἀπορραῖοι καὶ οἱ Εὐαῖοι: “In that day thy cities shall be deserted, as the Amorites and the Evaeans (Hivites) deserted theirs.”

10 Because thou hast forgotten the God of thy salvation, and hast not been mindful of the rock of thy strength, therefore shalt thou plant pleasant plants, and shalt set it with strange slips:

Because thou hast forgotten the God of thy salvation, and hast not been mindful of the rock of thy strength. Israel had often turned to idolatry and the Lord reminds her that He is the only God capable of saving, as the dumb idols would not be able to do so. Apostasy is the act of forgetting God, the very Rock of our Strength; the God of our Salvation. ¶ Therefore shalt thou plant pleasant plants, and shalt set it with strange slips. When the Lord brought Israel into the land of Canaan, He warned His people not to marry outside of the covenant, nor to take upon themselves strange or foreign wives (e.g., Exodus 34:11–16). Israel was unable to keep this commandment (e.g., Judges 3:5–6). Grapevines and many fruit trees are grafted. Roots have a number of functions, such as reduce or increase plant vigor, or fight soil borne diseases. These root materials, however, often do not produce the best fruit, so they are grafted with a fruit producing material. The expression strange slips means plants grafted with exotic materials that are not necessarily good for fruit production: the marriage of Israel with alien peoples not of the covenant as well as unholy alliances with other nations. Several expositors focus on the expense of bringing in these special grafts from far away. Barnes opines: “Though they should be at great pains and expense in cultivating their land, yet the enemy would come in and make it desolate.” No expenses were spared in the cultivation of these, but the growth would be for naught.

11 In the day shalt thou make thy plant to grow, and in the morning shalt thou make thy seed to flourish: [but] the harvest [shall be] a heap in the day of grief and of desperate sorrow. ✓

✓ or, removed in the day of inheritance, and there shall be deadly sorrow

In the day shalt thou make thy plant to grow, and in the morning shalt thou make thy seed to flourish: The Syriac (S) renders it, “On the day that you plant them, they shall put forth blossoms, and in the morning your seed shall flourish.” Despite how vigorously the plant would grow thanks to her unholy alliances, little good would come out of it. ¶ [But] the harvest [shall be] a heap in the day of grief and of desperate sorrow. Despite what appears to be a promising harvest, it will instead be a time of grief and sorrow. Deuteronomy 28:39 warns disobedient Israel: “Thou shalt plant vineyards, and dress them, but shalt neither drink of the wine, nor gather the grapes; for the worms shall eat them” (see also Deuteronomy 28:30, Rain in Due Season). Calvin has, “A similar punishment is also threatened against the wicked in general terms, that ‘in vain do they rise early, and vex themselves with unremitted toil;’ for they gain nothing from it (Psalm 127:2).”

vv. 12–14. Although Assyria, perhaps representative of the nations, would rush against Jerusalem in violence, they would not prevail against her, but should be blown away by the wind as tumbleweed. Likewise, in the latter days, when all the nations come upon Jerusalem, the LORD will come to her protection once again. Many exegetes feel that these verses have come out of nowhere. However, if one understands the chiasmic pattern of this chapter, it becomes clear that these three verses bring us back to the first three or four verses of the chapter, and have to do with the punishment Assyria would receive, the same Assyria that had attacked the Syro-Ephraimite coalition.

12 ¶ Woe to the multitude ✓ of many people, [which] make a noise like the noise of the seas; and to the rushing of nations, [that] make a rushing like the rushing of mighty ✓ waters!

✓ or, noise

✓ ✓ or, many

Woe to the multitude of many people, [which] make a noise like the noise of the seas. The Targum (T) has, along with the margin ¶, “Woe to the multitude of many people, which make a noise like the noise of the sea.” Luther explains that the multitudes are the Assyrians, “This is the comfort for the king and the people of the Jews, that Assyria, about to lay waste the plantings and about to attempt to destroy the kingdom of Judah, will not achieve it but will itself perish. Yet it will come with an incalculable number of people, just like the sea, which cannot be contained at all when it breaks through, and will come with great turbulence and noise, as of rampaging waters.” In ISAIAH 7 we hear that the waters would come to the neck of Jerusalem. ¶ And to the rushing of nations, [that] make a rushing like the rushing of mighty waters! The Douay (V) has, “And the tumult of crowds, like the noise of many waters.” Henry writes, “The Assyrian army was made up out of divers nations: it was the multitude of many people, by which weight they hoped to carry the cause. They were very noisy, like the roaring of the seas; they talked big, hectoring, and threatened, to frighten God’s people from resisting them, and all their allies from sending in to their aid. Sennacherib and Rabshakeh, in their speeches and letters, made a mighty noise to strike a terror upon Hezekiah and his people; the nations that followed them made a rushing like the rushing of many waters, and those mighty ones, that threaten to bear down all before them and carry away everything that stands in their way.” In the last days it will be many nations who will pour into Israel, but the LORD of lords and King of kings will step in to rescue His people Israel.

13 The nations shall rush like the rushing of many waters: but [God] shall rebuke them, and they shall flee far off, and shall be chased as the chaff of the mountains before the wind, and like a rolling thing⁷ before the whirlwind.

✓ or, thistle-down⁷

The nations shall rush like the rushing of many waters: but [God] shall rebuke them, and they shall flee far off. The word God is supplied to fill the ellipsis. The Syriac (S) version deletes the repeated allusion to the rushing waters: “He shall rebuke them, and they shall flee far off.” Henderson would translate as: “As for the nations, like the roaring of many waters they may roar, But he shall rebuke them, and they shall flee away.” ¶ And shall be chased as the chaff of the mountains before the wind. The Douay (V) has, “And he shall be carried away as the dust of the mountains before the wind.” ¶ And like a rolling thing before the whirlwind.

גִּלְגָּל, and as a rolling thing, refers to the tumbleweed גִּלְגָּל. For the LORD will expel the invading forces as easily as the wind will blow the tumbleweed.

14 And behold at eveningtide trouble; [and] before the morning he [is] not. This [is] the portion of them that spoil us, and the lot of them that rob us.

And behold at eveningtide trouble; [and] before the morning he [is] not. The LXX (G) reads, “Towards evening, and there shall be grief; before the morning, and he shall not be.” The Dead Sea Scrolls (Q) has an and before he is not: “... before the morning and he is not.” ¶ This is an allusion to the approaching Assyrian armies that encamped round about Jerusalem and were a terror to the inhabitants of the citadel; yet by dawn, they were destroyed by the angel of the LORD. Thus, at eventide trouble and fear, and by morning the armies are not: “Then the angel of the LORD went forth, and smote in the camp of the Assyrians a hundred and fourscore and five thousand: and when they arose early in the morning, behold, they were all dead corpses” (ISAIAH 37:36). ¶ This [is] the portion of them that spoil us, and the lot of them that rob us. Henry writes, “And this is written for the encouragement of the people of God in all ages, when they find themselves an unequal match for their enemies; for this is the portion of those that spoil us, they shall themselves be spoiled.”

Delitzsch argues against ISAIAH 17:12–14 from this prophecy: “If the substance of the massâ Dammeseek (the oracle concerning Damascus) had been restricted to the prophecy contained in the name Mahershalal, the element of promise so characteristic of the prophecies against the nations of the world would be entirely wanting. But the shout of triumph, ‘This is the portion,’ etc., supplied a terminal point, beyond which the massa could not go without the sacrifice of its unity. We are therefore warranted in regarding ISAIAH 18:1–7 as an independent prophecy, notwithstanding its commencement, which apparently forms a continuation of the fourth strophe of ISAIAH 17:1–14.” Cheyne LAO has, “Though most recent critics connect these three verses (vv. 12–14) with chapter 18 the concluding words of ISAIAH 17:14 are decidedly against this; besides which there are no phraseological affinities in vv. 12–14 to chapter 18, and the former passage describes the ruin of the enemy under an image which is clearly inconsistent with those in chapter 18.”

FIRST POSTED: 8 March 2004

⁷ Tumbleweed (Tanakh)

Isaiah 18

Some students of the Scriptures are honest enough to say they are lost when it comes to ISAIAH 18. Perhaps no one states it better than Lowth: “This is one of the most obscure prophecies in the whole book of Isaiah. The subject of it, the end and design of it, the people to whom it is addressed, the history to which it belongs, the person who sends the messengers, and the nation to whom the messengers are sent; are all obscure and doubtful.” Delitzsch quotes Böttcher as saying that ISAIAH 18 is “perhaps the most difficult chapter in the whole of the Old Testament.” Calvin, being lost says, “We must resort to probable conjectures.” In other words, the world is lost on the subject of this chapter. ¶ The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints provides the much needed clarity. Elder Joseph Fielding Smith stated: “No one understands this chapter, but the Latter-day Saints.” Gratefully, the Brethren have had much to say about it. ¶ One man who wrote shortly before the restoration of the Gospel and who was undoubtedly inspired in regards to ISAIAH 18, was Samuel Horsley, from Great Britain: “[ISAIAH 58] Is a description of some people, or another, destined to be principal instruments in the hand of Providence, in the great work of the re-settlement of the Jews in the Holy Land; a description of that people, by characters by which they will be evidently known, when the time arrives ... the time of the completion of the prophecy was very remote, when it was delivered, and is yet future [these words were written in 1799], being indeed the season of the Second Advent of our Lord.” ¶ This chapter is about the assistance that would come from a faraway nation who would help restore the Jews to the Holy Land. ISAIAH 18 forms a chiasmus, with news about the rescue of Israel at the ends of the chapter, and its scattering in the middle. Some Jewish Rabbis also correctly understand this chapter as being a restoration of the Jewish people to the land of Israel. These words are intimately related to ISAIAH 27, where some of the very same allusions about the restoration are utilized.

vv. 1–7. Samuel Horsley understood this prophecy was about a faraway nation that would help restore the Jews¹ (and obviously the rest of Israel should be included). Modern-day prophets have spoken of ISAIAH 18 with much power, especially Apostle Hyrum Smith and his grandson, President Joseph Fielding Smith. The latter asserted: “This chapter is clearly a reference to the sending forth of the missionaries to the nations of the earth to gather again this people who are scattered and peeled. The ensign has been lifted upon the mountains, and the work of gathering has been going on for over one hundred years.”² Elder Bruce R. McConkie had this to say: “And who shall carry the message to the world? Those to whom it is first revealed and those who first believe its doctrines and obey its ordinances. To them Isaiah’s word is: ‘Go, ye swift messengers,’ go ye elders of Israel, go ye messengers of the kingdom, ‘to a nation scattered and peeled, to a people terrible from their beginning hitherto; a nation meted out and trodden down, whose land the rivers have spoiled!’ Let the word go forth! And what counsel hath Isaiah for those who hear the word? ‘All ye inhabitants of the world, and dwellers on the earth, see ye, when he [Israel’s God] lifteth an ensign on the mountains; and when he bloweth a trumpet, hear ye.’ (ISAIAH 18:2–3.) That ensign, the fulness of the everlasting gospel, has now been raised; and that trumpet, the gospel trumpet, is now sounding its clarion call.”³

1 ¶ WOE to the land shadowing with wings, which [is] beyond the rivers of Ethiopia:

WOE to the land shadowing with wings. Not woe, but rather, hail, greetings, take heed, or pay attention, from the Hebrew הוֹי. The other chapters to the distant nations begin with the word בְּשָׁא, or burden. A complete misunderstanding of this chapter has led not a few to assume that הוֹי is also a burden, prophecy of doom, lament, or warning as it is in ISAIAH 1:4; 5:8 and many others. In this verse הוֹי is rather a greeting, or a call to pay careful heed or attention. President Joseph ¹ Horsley, Samuel (1733–1806). Critical Disquisitions on the Eighteenth Chapter of Isaiah. In a Letter to Edward King, Esq. F.R.S. A.S. by Samuel Lord Bishop of Rochester, F.R.S. A.S. Published by London: Printed by J. Nichols for J. Robson, 1799, 108 pages. I now own an electronic copy of this book, based on the 1800 copy made in Philadelphia. In the first 22 pages, Horsley politely sets out the purpose for his treatise, and begins his exposition on p. 22.

² Smith, Joseph Fielding. The Signs of the Times. “Restoration of Israel and Judah.” Salt Lake City, Utah: Deseret News Press, 1952. Talk delivered October 28, 1942, Barratt Hall, pp. 50–57. The first part of the talk is included here and the second in the notes on ISAIAH 49.

³ McConkie, Bruce R. A New Witness for the Articles of Faith. Salt Lake City, Utah: Deseret Book Company, 1985. p. 536.

Fielding Smith⁴ explained: “The chapter shows clearly that no woe was intended, but rather a greeting ... A correct translation would be, ‘Hail to the land in the shape of wings.’” Henderson says: “One of the grand sources of the misinterpretation of this chapter has been the false idea which many have attached to the interjection הוֹי. Instead of rendering it ho! as a call, summoning attention, which the context requires, most translators have improperly [translated it as a threatening term]. Gesenius gives this verse along with two others (Zechariah 2:10; ISAIAH 55:1) as an example of an admonition rather than a lamentation or a woe. Barnes suggests that הוֹי “may be a mere interjection or salutation, and would be appropriately rendered by ‘Ho!’” (emphasis added). Skinner, likewise says, “The word rendered *Ah*⁵ is here neither a ‘cry of pity’ nor (as usually in Isaiah) of indignation. It is simply a particle of salutation.” Horsley has, “הוֹי אֶרֶץ (Ho [to the Land]), Sometimes it is an exclamation of surprise; and very often it is simply compellative⁶ of persons at a distance.” Young also has, regarding הוֹי, “... it may simply be designed to point out the great distance of the people of whom he is about to speak. At any rate, the language is arresting, and prepares the hearer for a description of the nation to be addressed” (emphasis added). And indeed, this is what we are speaking off: a people at a great distance, even in the American continent, that are being prepared to assist the nation referred to in this prophecy. Ironside has: “The word here translated ‘woe’ is the same as that rendered ‘Ho’ in ISAIAH 55:1. It is a call to attention. Jehovah is summoning this great power lying beyond the rivers of Ethiopia to come to the aid of His people [Israel]. Elder Hyrum Smith, the Prophet’s brother, explained that North and South America where the symbols of the wings (HC, 6:322–323). Continuing with Joseph Fielding Smith’s explanation we have: “Now, do you know of any land in the shape of wings? Think of your map. About twenty-five years ago one of the current magazines printed on the cover the American continents in the shape of wings, with the body of the bird between. I have always regretted that I did not preserve this magazine. Does not this hemisphere take the shape of wings; the spread out wings of a bird?” ¶ In the shape of wings has also been variously translated.⁷ For instance, the Targum (ע)⁸ has, “... to the land wither they come in ships from a far country.” Or, to quote the translation used by Gill and many others, “... to the land to which they come in ships from a far country, whose sails are stretched out, as an eagle that flies with its wings.” ¶ Which [is] beyond the rivers of Ethiopia.

The key word here is beyond (עֵבֶר). Henderson explains that such Hebrew expression “always signifies what lies beyond some sea, river &c. which is supposed to be between it and the person speaking ... Hence עֵבֶר הַיַּרְדֵּן,⁹ and עֵבֶר הַנָּהָר,¹⁰ uniformly signify the opposite, i.e., the east side of the Jordan and the Euphrates,¹¹ when used by a writer or speaker living to the west of these rivers. The instances in which it marks the countries to the west of them, either contain some qualifying term, or place the speaker on the east side.” As we shall see, the body of water spoken off here is the Atlantic Ocean, and the land is the American Continent on the other side of it. Calvin says, “These voyages, there is reason to believe, were not made to any place near at hand, but to a distant country.” The Hebrew (מ) uses beyond Cush, כוּשׁ, that is, beyond the rivers or waters of Cush. Gill says, “It is very difficult to determine what land is here meant.” Henry says: “Interpreters are very much at a loss where to find this land that lies beyond the rivers of Cush.” Henry further explains that one idea is that of a nation that attempts to protect the Jews ‘under the shadow of his wings.’” Horsley provides for several possibilities of a land or lands that are beyond Cush, but does not settle upon one of them: “Not more to any part of Europe, or Africa, than to the whole eastern coast of North and South America ... Yet the people of the country are marked, as will appear, by characters, by which they will be distinguished from all other people of the earth, when the time comes.” ¶ In Conference, President Joseph Fielding Smith said, “[America] is the land ‘shadowing

⁴ Smith, Joseph Fielding. The Signs of the Times. “Restoration of Israel and Judah.” Salt Lake City, Utah: Deseret News Press, 1952. Talk delivered October 28, 1942, Barratt Hall, pp. 50–57. The first part of the talk is included here and the second in the notes on ISAIAH 49.

⁵ Quoting from the Revised Version.

⁶ Compellative perhaps means, “to draw attention of,” from the word compel.

⁷ “Horsley suggests that צִלְצֵל may well stand for shelter rather than shadows, and that would certainly fit well, also. The land that provides shelter or refuge. Horsley feels that by the repetition of the root צִל that the word takes upon itself a stronger meaning. And certainly it can be said that the American continent has been a land of shelter to the oppressed as “the shadow of wings is a very usual image in the prophetic language, for protection afforded by the stronger to the weak. God’s protection to his servants is described by their being safe under the shadow of his wings. And in this passage, the broad shadowing wings may be intended to characterize some great people, who should be famous for the protection they should give to those whom they received into their alliance; and I cannot but think this the most simple and natural exposition of the expression” (Horsley).

⁸ Stenning.

⁹ Beyond the Jordan.

¹⁰ Beyond the river.

¹¹ Once again, for Euphrates הַנָּהָר, here, the river הַנָּהָר.

with wings' spoken of by Isaiah that today is sending ambassadors by the sea to a nation scattered and peeled, which at one time was terrible in the beginning (ISAIAH 18:1–2). Now that nation is being gathered, and once again they shall be in favor with the Lord.”¹² A very interesting comment comes from Ironside, especially in reference to the land shadowing with wings: “Many have taken it for granted that the land shadowing with wings is Egypt, because of the winged solar disk which appears upon so many of its monuments and was really a symbol of its power and greatness. But it could be hardly be of Egypt that it lay beyond the rivers of Ethiopia when the Nile descended from Ethiopia, passed through the midst of Egypt, and emptied itself into the Mediterranean Sea in the north. Since the revival of interest in prophetic study during the last century and a half,¹³ some have thought that the symbol refers to the United States, because of the fact that on our Great Seal an eagle is represented with outstretched wings. Other nations have used the eagle upon their ensigns and coats-of-arms, but not with overshadowing wings, as it is officially used in America. Many others have assumed that, inasmuch as the reference is undoubtedly to some great maritime power, it was a prophecy of Great Britain who of old gloried in ruling the waves ... Perhaps, indeed, it might include both, and with them other nations linked together in the last great confederacy.”

2 That sendeth ambassadors by the sea, even in vessels of bulrushes upon the waters, [saying], Go, ye swift messengers, to a nation scattered and peeled, ✓ to a people terrible from their beginning hitherto; a nation meted out and trodden down, ✓ ✓ whose land the rivers have spoiled! ✓ ✓ ✓

✓ or, outspread and polished

✓ ✓ or, that meteth out, and treadeth down

✓ ✓ ✓ or, despise

That sendeth ambassadors by the sea, even in vessels of bulrushes upon the waters [saying]. Instead of bulrushes, President Joseph Fielding Smith taught: “The meaning is vessels of speed.” In Hebrew the word is נָמָא, and we must remember that the word can be pointed more than one way. The Masoretic text (מסורה), pointed centuries after the Holy Scriptures were written, points the word נָמָא, and is translated as papyrus (used to make paper and floating objects) because it absorbs water (Gesenius). But there is another word, upon which this is based, and it is נָמָא. Gesenius explains that it means “to absorb, to drink up, to swallow” as it is “poetically applied to a horse as it were swallowing the ground in his rapid course. Job 39:24, נָמָא-אָרָץ ‘he swallows the ground,’ i.e., he runs away with it.” BDB say, “Figurative of a horse in swift gallop.” May I suggest, then, that the Hebrew text (מסורה) fully supports Joseph Fielding Smith’s translation, a vessel of speed—either seagoing or airplane. So fast that it seems to swallowing the ocean יָם with its magnificent speed.

¶ These fast vessels, then, would come from North and South America with ambassadors of truth. Faussett suggests these ambassadors would be sent to Jerusalem.

¶ Upon the waters, literally, upon the face of the waters עַל-פְּנֵי-מַיִם, that is, on the waters’ surface.

¶ Go, ye swift [קָדִיִּים] messengers. The word saying is not in the Hebrew text (מסורה), but rather, it is an exhortation or command. The Vulgate (V) calls the messengers swift angels: “Ite, angeli veloces ... &c.” Horsley has, “First, the prophet calls upon these people [referred to in the first verse]; he summons them to attend to him; then he declares, for what immediate purpose they are summoned; viz. to be the carriers of a message.” Horsley goes on to explain that these are very particular people, not just any people, for God has commissioned them with this mighty message. One might well add that they were sent with “authority and commission” (Acts 26:12). Henderson correctly says, “The prophet calls upon these to go with all celerity ... to announce the wonderful interposition of Jehovah for the deliverance of the Jews.” Who can these be save those ordained and commissioned and entrusted to preach the Gospel of Jesus Christ throughout the world? All of these thoughts remind us of the words of John: “And I saw another angel fly in the midst of heaven, having the everlasting gospel to preach unto them that dwell on the earth, and to every nation, and kindred, and tongue, and people, Saying with a loud voice, Fear God, and give glory to him; for the hour of his judgment is come: and worship him that made heaven, and earth, and the sea, and the fountains of waters” (Revelation 14:6–7). ¶ To a nation scattered and peeled. Kay has, “‘To a nation scattered’ Literally, dragged; dragged away in the net of many conqueror (Psalm 28:3).” Calvin has, “By ‘a plundered nation’ he means the Jews who were to be grievously harassed and scattered, so that no part of them escaped injury.” Ibn Ezra has, “The Israelites are meant, that have been dragged from their homes like sheep, until they were flayed from the dragging.” Rosenberg, also leaning on the Rabbis, explains: “They are instructed to go to Israel, which is heretofore a nation pulled by the gentile nations from all sides, and torn.” Horsley likewise explains that this refers “to a people forcibly torn from their country, and carried into captivity ... a people plundered of their wealth, and stripped of their power ... Thus both of these participles may more naturally be applied to the Jews, in their present condition, than to any other nation of any other time.” ¶ Brigham Young uses these Isaianic words “scattered and peeled” as a warning to Latter-day Saints: “You inquire if we shall stay in these [Rocky] mountains. I answer yes, as long as we please to do the will of God our Father in Heaven. If we are pleased to turn away from the holy commandments of the Lord Jesus Christ, as ancient Israel did, every man turning to his own way, we shall be scattered and peeled, driven before our enemies and persecuted, until we learn to remember the Lord our God and are willing to walk in his ways (JD 11:274).”¹⁴ ¶ To a people terrible from their beginning hitherto. The word terrible in the Hebrew (אָרָא) is: נִרְאָה, from the root יָרָא.

¹² President Joseph Fielding Smith. General Conference Reports. 1 April 1966, p. 14.

¹³ H. A. Ironside published his book on Isaiah in 1952, based on a series of lectures he gave just before his death.

According to Gesenius, נִרְאָה rather means to be feared. Other related words include terrible, dreadful, venerable, and admirable, to name a few. It implies, then, that the people of Israel in the beginning were admired and feared. Or, as in the Targum (ܬ), “Unto a people that was mighty in times past, and shall be so in time to come.” The scriptures speak of Israel, as a chosen people, becoming a terror, fear and a dread upon the surrounding nations: Exodus 15:16; 23:27; Deuteronomy 2:25; 11:25; Moses 7:17; Joshua 2:9; ISAIAH 19:17; Jeremiah 32:21; and Zechariah 12:2–3. All of these promises were—and will continue to be contingent—on obedience and understanding of the very source of this power: “Sanctify the LORD of hosts himself; and let him be your fear, and let him be your dread” (ISAIAH 8:13). For a better understanding, see Rain in Due Season. Regarding terror, Horsley clarifies, “The word, if I mistake not, is applicable to whatever excites admiration, or awe, with or without any mixture of terror. There is no word in the English language which will render it universally. It must be rendered differently in different places, according to its connection. Majestic, sublime, grand, awful, and sometimes terrible ... And the sense it gives, applies more aptly to the Jews, than to any other people. They have been a people awfully remarkable, not only in the part of the world where they were settled, but, since their dispersion particularly, to the uttermost corners of the earth.” So also Ironside, who has: “They have been ‘terrible,’ or ‘dreadful,’ from their very beginning, for when they went forth as directed by the Lord, the fear of them fell upon all nations that confronted them and their power seemed unlimited, but when they became disobedient, then disaster followed.” ¶ A nation meted out and trodden down, whose land the rivers have spoiled! The Targum (ܬ) renders it, “A people oppressed and robbed, whose land the nations have spoiled.” The Rabbis, explain, regarding this mighty or awesome nation, that קָוֶה can mean, among other significations, “a line for a line” or progressively punished, rather than castigated all at once (Rosenberg, leaning on Kimhi). Many translators think it should read, “whose land the rivers divide.” Certainly Israel is divided by the Jordan. Horsley has, for meted out, the idea of waiting expectantly for the Messiah: “It is probable, that the true reading of the Vulgate may be ad gentem expectantem, expectactem, et conculcatem.¹⁵ For we find the word expectante thus doubled, in strict conformity to the original, in the repetition of this description of the people intended, in the 7th verse.” Regarding rivers, however, most exegetes are of the agreement that some invading force is meant (see ISAIAH 8:7–8). So it is that Horsley has, “‘Rivers,’ i.e., the armies of conquerors, which long since have spoiled the land of the Jews ... The inundation of rivers is a frequent image in the prophetic stile, for the ravages of armies of foreign invaders.” President Joseph Fielding Smith spoke at length of the deforestation that affected the Holy Land, “Do you know of any land like that? Terrible in the beginning and later meted out and scattered, peeled and a curse upon the land? That land is Palestine ... Palestine became denuded of its forests... We read in the Scriptures of the great cedars of Lebanon, and the trees upon the mountains. These were swept off when the curse came upon the land, and the rains have washed down the soil into the valleys where the rivers have spoiled the land as Isaiah predicted.”¹⁶

3 All ye inhabitants of the world, and dwellers on the earth, see ye, when he lifteth up an ensign on the mountains; and when he bloweth a trumpet, hear ye.

The Targum (ܬ) has, “All ye inhabitants of the world, and ye dwellers on the earth, when the standard is lifted up on the mountains, ye shall see the standard, and the trumpet (שׁוֹפָרָא)¹⁷ shall sound, ye shall hear of ¹⁴ Young, Brigham. Discourses of Brigham Young. Compiled by John A. Widtsoe. Salt Lake City: Deseret Book, 1978, p. 483.

¹⁵ Douay translation of Vulgate (V): “To a nation expecting and trodden underfoot.”

¹⁶ Smith, Joseph Fielding. The Signs of the Times. “Restoration of Israel and Judah.” Salt Lake City, Utah: Deseret News Press, 1952. Talk given October 28, 1942.

¹⁷ Targum (ܬ) in Mikraoth Gedoloth.

redemption.”¹⁸ Alexander also feels the verse has a future tense: “All ye inhabitants of the world, and dwellers on the earth, shall see as it were the raising of a standard on the mountains, and shall hear as it were the blowing of a trumpet.” The horn that shall sound is the shofar, שופר. Kimhi explains: “So will the Israelites be gathered from all countries at the time of the salvation, and the nations will bring them and gather them as though the standard was raised and the shofar sounded.” Barnes has, “These are to be regarded as the words of the prophet summoning all nations to attend to that which was about to occur.” Gill writes in part, “All the men of the world are here called upon, either by the Lord, or rather by the prophet, to be eye and ear witnesses ... the news of it should ring through the earth, and be as plainly heard as when a trumpet is blown.” Horsley correctly has, “We have now heard messengers summoned. We have heard a command given to them, to go swiftly with the message. We have heard the people described to whom the message was to be carried. It might be expected, we should next hear the message given to the messengers in precise terms ... An ensign, or standard, is lifted up on the mountains—a trumpet is blown on the hills—... the trumpet of the Gospel. ... the effect of the summons, in the end, will be universal.” Elder Orson Pratt said, “The Lord, then, was to lift the ensign on a land that was far off from where the Prophet lived; and that ensign, we are told, should be set up on the mountains, and that, too, on a land shadowing with wings.”¹⁹ And also these beautiful words from Elder Orson Pratt: “... we have cause to rejoice that the Lord has lifted up His hand, and set up His standard, and raised His ensign, and called upon us to bear this ensign—this standard, to the nations of the earth, and to proclaim it in the ears of the Gentiles first; what for? That the times of the Gentiles may be fulfilled, that the fulness may come in, and then all Israel are to be saved, as it is written, ‘There shall come out of Zion the deliverer, and shall turn away ungodliness from Jacob.’ Therefore, we are the people identified with the Gentiles, to whom this standard has been raised; and it has been raised too on the mountains, for the Prophet Isaiah has told us that it should be accomplished on the mountains. We refer you to the 18th chapter of his prophecy. In it is a proclamation to all the world. They are commanded in that day to both see and hear—‘All ye inhabitants of the world, and dwellers on the earth, see ye, when he lifteth up an ensign on the mountains; and when he bloweth a trumpet, hear ye.’”²⁰ Horsley adds, “The prophecy announces the display of God’s power and providence, which should be notorious to the whole world; and particularly, I think, alludes to a renewed preaching of the Gospel, with great power and effect in the latter ages.” That is, the good news or gospel of Jesus Christ, and the restoration of His Church upon the earth.

4 For so the LORD said unto me, I will take my rest, and I will consider in my dwelling place ✓ like a clear heat upon herbs, ✓ [and] like a cloud of dew in the heat of harvest.

✓ or, regard my set dwelling

✓ ✓ or, after rain

For so the LORD said unto me, I will take my rest, and I will consider in my dwelling place like a clear heat upon herbs. The Targum (ܬ) has, “For thus hath the Lord said unto me: I will give rest to my people²¹, yea, I will make them to rest, and I will delight in my holy habitation to do them good.” It is nice that the Targum Jonathan (ܬ) is so specific about the fact that these verses are about Israel. It is an allusion to the fact that Israel and Judah were about to be harvested and her branches scattered to every corner of the globe and her fruit destroyed. The Lord was about to begin the pruning process: “And I will forsake the remnant of mine inheritance, and deliver them into the hand of their enemies; and they shall become a prey and a spoil to all their enemies” (2 Kings 21:14). All of this has reference to the suffering that the house of Israel would be subjected to before her glorious redemption. At this place Horsley well observes, “This verse seems to describe a long suspension of the visible interpositions of Providence in the affairs of this world, and in favour of this people, under the image of that stillness and stagnation of the atmosphere, which takes place in the extreme heats of the latter end of summer ... The sentiment is that, notwithstanding the long cessation of extraordinary manifestations of God’s power, his providence is not asleep—he is all the while regarding the conduct, and the fortunes of his people; he is not ¹⁸ Stenning, salvation. See also, CAL Targum Lexicon.

¹⁹ Journal of Discourses. April 7, 1872, Elder Orson Pratt. Delivered in the New Tabernacle, Salt Lake City. (Reported by David W. Evans.) The Latter-Day Kingdom—The Present Fulfillment of Ancient Prophecy, pp. 49–51. Also see, Journal of Discourses. Orson Pratt, June 15, 1873, Delivered in the New Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, Sunday afternoon. The rise of Zion in the last days, p. 85. Elder Orson Pratt, on another occasion, added: “Before Judah and the ten tribes of Israel could ever be gathered an ensign has to be lifted up for the nations. Not for Judah and Israel alone, but for the nations afar off, for the Gospel has been restored for the benefit of the Gentiles—every nations, kindred, tongue and people—as well as for the benefit of the dispersed tribes of Israel.” Journal of Discourses. Elder Orson Pratt, February 28, 1875, p. 322.

²⁰ Journal of Discourses, Orson Pratt, The Ancient Prophecies. A Discourse by Elder Orson Pratt, delivered in the Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, January 7, 1855. Volume 2, p. 296.

²¹ לְעַמִּי יִשְׂרָאֵל, to my people Israel (CAL and Stenning).

forgetful of his promises to his chosen people, but, though often by a silent and secret operation, is at all times directing everything to their ultimate prosperity, and to the universal establishment of the true religion.” ¶ [And] like a cloud of dew in the heat of harvest. Cowles has, “Seems tacitly to imply that the Lord was even willing that his permissive agencies should for the time favor the progress of the Assyrian’s plans, even as the warm sun and the dew-clouds push forward the ripening of the grapes.” To the Assyrians we may well add the Babylonians and all those who would come after, through the centuries of the dispersion of the house of Israel.

5 For afore the harvest, when the bud is perfect, and the sour grape is ripening in the flower, he shall both cut off the sprigs with pruning hooks, and take away [and] cut down the branches.

For afore the harvest, when the bud is perfect, and the sour grape is ripening in the flower. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “Before the time of harvest cometh the tree is ready to bud, and the unripe grape (i.e., the very first appearance of the grape, before it blossoms) bursts forth into a flower.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Before the reaping time, when the flower has been completely formed, and the unripe grape has put forth its flower and blossomed.” The Douay, from the Vulgate (ⲱ), has, “For before the harvest it was all flourishing, and it shall bud without perfect ripeness.” Once again, the idea here is that all the signs of an impending harvest are beginning to show. The unripe grape (and that is why it may be called sour, with the low sugar or degrees Brix in the unripe grape) is beginning to ripen in the branches of the vine. Judah and Israel are almost ready to be harvested and scattered. Calvin has the people ripening in iniquity such that God “permits them to grow to a vast height, to swell and blossom, that they may afterwards fall by their own weight.” Kay writes, “The recurrence in ISAIAH 18:5 of the words ‘bud’ and ‘harvest,’ which have just been used in ISAIAH 17:11, where Israel was spoken of, is very noticeable.” ¶ He shall both cut off the sprigs with pruning hooks, and take away [and] cut down the branches. The Syriac (Ⲥ) has, “He shall both cut off the lean shoots with pruning hooks and take away and shake off the branches.” Horsley explains, “These words express, not simply sprigs and branches, but ‘useless shoots,’ ‘luxuriant branches,’ which bear no fruit, and weaken the plant; and properly such shoots and branches of a vine.” Judah and Israel are now ripened in iniquity and the pruning has begun in earnest, and the branches have been scattered throughout the world, as threatened in Rain in Due Season. Note especially the language about cutting and casting in the Lord’s acceptance of the temple built by Solomon. “But if ye shall at all turn from following me, ye or your children, and will not keep my commandments and my statutes which I have set before you, but go and serve other gods, and worship them: Then will I cut off Israel out of the land which I have given them; and this house, which I have hallowed for my name, will I cast out of my sight” (1 Kings 9:6–7a). So we have the reason for the impending scattering of Israel, and the scattering to the four corners of the world, and a long, long time being represented in the scattered condition, even all of summer and all of winter (representing the millennia involved since the scattering began, ISAIAH 18:6) to the day when the restoration of the gospel and subsequent gathering would begin.

6 They shall be left together unto the fowls of the mountains, and to the beasts of the earth: and the fowls shall summer upon them, and all the beasts of the earth shall winter upon them.

They shall be left together unto the fowls of the mountains, and to the beasts of the earth. The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “And he shall leave them together to the birds of the sky, and to the wild beasts of the earth.” Here we have an allusion to the horrible sufferings that the house of Israel would be subjected to, trampled by the “beasts of the earth” or the wicked who pretend to love Christ yet hate His people Israel. ¶ And the fowls shall summer upon them, and all the beasts of the earth shall winter upon them. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “All the fowls of the heavens shall dwell upon them in the summer, and all the beasts of the earth shall winter upon them.” The LXX (Ⲅ) has, “And the fowls of the sky shall be gathered upon them, and all the beasts of the land shall come upon him.” The Syriac (Ⲥ), “And the birds shall gather upon them, and all the wild beasts of the earth, shall devour them.” The suffering of the house of Israel would last a long time, with the summer and winter being an expression of time that would seem to never end. Yet after, the gathering would begin through missionaries—or ambassadors of truth.

7 In that time shall the present be brought unto the LORD of hosts of a people scattered and peeled, and from a people terrible from their beginning hitherto; a nation meted out and trodden under foot, whose land the rivers have spoiled, to the place of the name of the LORD of hosts, the mount Zion.

✓ or, outspread and polished

In that time shall the present be brought unto the LORD of hosts of a people scattered and peeled. Gill explains: “This explains what the present is, that shall be brought to the Lord; it is a people.” Ibn Ezra writes: “Israel, who has been dragged and flayed during the period of his captivity, will now be brought, to the honour of God, to His abode on Mount Zion.” Rabbi Rosenberg correctly explains: “The nations of the world will bring the Jewish people to God as a gift,” and then quotes ISAIAH 66:20: “And they shall bring all your brethren for an offering unto the LORD out of all nations upon horses, and in chariots, and in litters, and upon mules, and upon swift beasts, to my holy mountain Jerusalem, saith the LORD, as the children of Israel bring an offering in a clean vessel into the house of the LORD.” Kimhi believes that this chapter has reference to eschatological times, or the times of the Messiah (in Rosenberg). Ironside has, “God’s heart is ever toward Israel and while He has permitted them to pass through such terrible sufferings throughout the long centuries of their dispersion ... [yet] the day will surely come when, their transgressions forgiven and their hearts renewed, they will be restored to Himself and planted again in their own land—that land which so often the rivers have spoiled! This refers to a well-known symbol of the prophetic Scriptures [i.e., that of the invading armies].” Calvin suggests that the people who would be brought would make a sacrifice of themselves by becoming “wholly dedicated to God.” Horsley explains: “They [the Jews] shall be converted to the acknowledgment of the truth, and they shall be brought to the place of the name of Jehovah, to mount Zion: they shall be settled, in peace and prosperity, in the land of their original inheritance. This then is the sum of this prophecy, and the substance of the message, sent to the people dragged about and plucked ... The Jews, converted to the faith of Christ, will be unexpectedly restored to their ancient possessions. The swift messengers will certainly have a considerable share, as instruments in the hand of God, in the restoration of the chosen people. Otherwise, to what purpose are they called upon to receive their commission from the prophet? ... This character seems to describe some Christian country, where the prophecies relating to the latter ages will meet with particular attention; where the literal sense of those, which promise the restoration of the Jewish people, will be strenuously upheld; and where there will be so successfully expounded, as to be the principal means, by God’s blessing, of removing the veil from the hearts of the Israelites ... The full importance of this circumstance will not appear, till the completion of the prophecy shall discover it.” These last words remind us of the words of Nephi concerning Isaiah: “Nevertheless, in the days that the prophecies of Isaiah shall be fulfilled men shall know of a surety, at the times when they shall come to pass” (2 Nephi 25:7b). Horsley brings our attention to an interesting scripture, “From beyond the rivers of Cush my suppliants, even the daughter of my dispersed, shall bring mine offering” (Zephaniah 3:10, emphasis added). And who is the daughter of my dispersed? Or, who, among the dispersed, would help gather the dispersed? Ephraim and Manasseh, the horns of the bullock (Deuteronomy 33:17), would have the principal responsibility in this gathering. These are the peoples dispersed to the American continent who are themselves descendants of Israel. ¶ And from a people terrible from their beginning hitherto. The Targum (Ⲯ), “To a people that was mighty in times past, and shall be so in time to come.” ¶ A nation meted out and trodden under foot. The Vulgate (V), as already mentioned by Horsley in ISAIAH 18:2, has: “A gente expectante, expectante et conculcata,” or in the Douay, “From a nation expecting, expecting, and trodden under foot.” Gill writes, “These descriptive characters, with those in the preceding clauses, are retained, to show that the same people are here meant as in ISAIAH 18:2.” At one time Israel was set up as the light of the world. Today, members of the Lord’s Church must be bold in declaring in great love the restoration of the gospel: “For they were set to be a light unto the world, and to be the saviors of men; And inasmuch as they are not the saviors of men, they are as salt that has lost its savor, and is thenceforth good for nothing but to be cast out and trodden under foot of men” (D&C 103: 9–10). ¶ Whose land the rivers have spoiled. The Targum (Ⲯ), “Whose land the nations spoiled.” Isaiah speaks as Israel as the land that is spoiled. “But this is a people robbed and spoiled” (ISAIAH 42:22). And why did this happen? “Who gave Jacob for a spoil, and Israel to the robbers? did not the LORD, he against whom we have sinned? for they would not walk in his ways, neither were they obedient unto his law” (ISAIAH 42:24). ¶ To the place of the name of the LORD of hosts, the mount Zion. The Targum (Ⲯ) clarifies this passage with, “Unto the place which is called by the name of the Lord of hosts, whose Shekinah (שְׁכִינָה) is in the mountain of Zion.” And so it is, these missionaries and ambassadors of truth will bring back Israel unto the Lord of Hosts—to the House of the Lord. The Mount Zion, מֶלֶךְ-צִיּוֹן, or in other words, the Holy Temple (ISAIAH 66:20).

25 March 2004

Isaiah 19

Egypt, upon whom Israel had placed her trust, would fall. Eventually, Egypt would discover the true Gospel and worship the Lord, along with Assyria and other nations who would join Israel in worshipping the one and true Living God. There are a number of different explanations given by one or another of the exegetes of exactly how Egypt was brought down to her knees: outside forces, inside civil wars, despots who will lead the nation, and even the Lord Himself.

vv. 1–17. Egypt would become a broken reed upon which Judah could lean upon only to her hurt (ISAIAH 36:6). Isaiah and Jeremiah often accused Judah of yielding to her desire to trust on the arm of Egypt rather than upon the Lord. The day would come when the children of Jacob would stay on the Lord (ISAIAH 10:20).

1 ¶ THE burden of Egypt. Behold, the LORD rideth upon a swift cloud, and shall come into Egypt: and the idols of Egypt shall be moved at his presence, and the heart of Egypt shall melt in the midst of it.

THE burden of Egypt מִשָּׂא מִצְרַיִם. The Targum (ת) reads, “The burden of the cup of cursing to make the Egyptians to drink.” The Syriac (ס) renders it, “The prophecy concerning the fall of Egypt.” Calvin well observes, “The Prophet here prophesies against Egypt, because it was a kind of refuge to the Jews, whenever they saw any danger approaching them; for when they had forsaken God, to whom they ought to have had recourse, they thought that they had no help left to them but in the Egyptians . . . because when they ought to have relied on God alone, they were puffed up with that vain confidence in Egypt.” Regarding Egypt we read in Barnes, “The word ‘Egypt’ in the original is מִצְרַיִם; and it was so called after Mizraim the second son of Ham, and grandson of Noah. Sometimes it is called Mazar (2 Kings 19:24; ISAIAH 19:6; ISAIAH 37:25; Micah 7:12).” ¶ Behold, the LORD rideth upon a swift cloud, and shall come into Egypt. This is a metaphoric expression of God’s power, that while men might have ridden upon swift horses, the Lord, in contrast, could ride the swift or speedy clouds. Delitzsch has, “Jehovah rides upon clouds when He is about to reveal Himself in His judicial majesty (Psalm 18:11); and in this instance He rides upon a light cloud, because it will take place rapidly. The word kal [קל] signifies both light and swift, because what is light moves swiftly; and even a light cloud, which is light because it is thin, is comparatively עב, i.e., literally dense, opaque, or obscure.” ¶ And the idols of Egypt shall be moved at his presence, and the heart of Egypt shall melt in the midst of it. The Targum (ת) reads, “And the idols of the Egyptians shall be broken before His face, and the heart of the Egyptians shall be melted within them (Chaldee, his bowels)” This is an ironic comment about *idols*¹ that cannot move on their own power, and have no hearts, yet it is implied that the idols will fear and tremble. Or rather, that the people who lean on idols shall be the ones who shall move with fear and their hearts will tremble.

2 And I will set^v the Egyptians against the Egyptians: and they shall fight every one against his brother, and every one against his neighbour; city against city, [and] kingdom against kingdom.

✓ mingle

And I will set the Egyptians against the Egyptians. The horrors of civil war are announced. ¶ And they shall fight every one against his brother, and every one against his neighbour; city against city, [and] kingdom against kingdom. There are many examples in scripture that show that the enemy became so fearful and confused, that they began to kill each other rather than defend themselves against the people of God (e.g., see Judges 7:22a). Regarding the civil wars affecting Egypt, Gill shares: “For though Egypt was but originally one kingdom, yet upon the death of Sethon, one of its kings, who had been a priest of Vulcan, there being no successor, twelve of the nobility started up, and set up themselves as kings, and divided the kingdom into twelve parts, and reigned in confederacy, for the space of fifteen years; when, falling out among themselves, they excluded Psammiticus, one of the twelve, from any share of government; who gathering an army together, fought with and conquered the other eleven, and seized the whole kingdom to himself, and who seems afterwards regarded in this prophecy; all this happened in the times of Manasseh king of Judah, and so in or quickly after Isaiah's time: though some understand this of the civil wars between Apries and Amasis, in the times of Nebuchadnezzar. The Septuagint version renders the phrase here, 'nome against nome'; for the whole land of Egypt, by Sesostris, one of its kings, was divided into thirty six nomes, districts, or provinces, whose names are given by Herodotus, Pliny, and others."

¹ Cheyne explains that the term for idols, אֱלִילִי, is that of “no-gods.” In 2 Kings 19:18, the concept of no-gods is spelled out: לֹא אֱלֹהִים. The word אֱלִילִי means that which is empty, vain, nothing and used in the plural to signify idols (Gesenius).

3 And the spirit of Egypt shall fail[✓] in the midst thereof; and I will destroy^{✓✓} the counsel thereof: and they shall seek to the idols, and to the charmers, and to them that have familiar spirits, and to the wizards.

- ✓ be emptied
- ✓ ✓ swallow up

And the spirit of Egypt shall fail in the midst thereof; and I will destroy the counsel thereof. The LXX (Ⲅ) has, "And the spirit of the Egyptians shall be troubled within them; and I will frustrate their counsel." In ancient times, as is the case today, rulers surrounded themselves with the brightest minds from whom they could seek counsel (e.g., see the matter of Ahithophel and of Hushai in 2 Samuel 17). Calvin explains, "Now, the Egyptians had so high an opinion of their own wisdom, that they reckoned themselves superior to other nations ... they boasted that they were the inventors of learning." So, Calvin explains that רִנָּה here stands for "understanding and sagacity" rather than simply spirit. In ISAIAH 29:24, רִנָּה is used in the same sense (Gesenius, 3–d). And are there not new nations and philosophers that today have taken the place of Egypt in such boastfulness? The idea of intellect that fails, נִבְקָה, is well represented in the margin ||, as something being emptied. Likewise, אֶבְלַע is used for destroy, and also means, as mentioned in the margin ||, to *swallow up*² (Gesenius, HAL, BDB). Kay continues with this idea: "The word used of the rod of Aaron 'swallowing up' the rods of the Egyptian magicians (Exodus 7:12). With infinitely greater reason would the divine counsel 'swallow up' the cunningly devised policy of Egypt." ¶ And they shall seek to the idols, and to the charmers, and to them that have familiar spirits, and to the wizards. When Saul could no longer lean on the Lord for counsel, he turned to the dark side. Regarding the word charmers, Delitzsch has, "Then (and this is also part of the judgment) they turn for help, in counsel and action, where no help is to be found, viz., to their 'nothings' of gods, and the manifold demoniacal arts, of which Egypt could boast of being the primary seat. On the names of the practisers of the black art, see ISAIAH 8:19; 'ittim, the mutterers, is from 'âtat, to squeak (used of a camel-saddle, especially when new), or to rumble (used of an empty stomach): see Lane's Lexicon."

² Regarding this expression, Gesenius points to the "onomatopoetic from the sound of a bottle when emptied, like the Persian غلغله gulghul."

4 And the Egyptians will I give over[✓] into the hand of a cruel lord; and a fierce king shall rule over them, saith the Lord, the LORD of hosts.

- ✓ or, shut up

And the Egyptians will I give over into the hand of a cruel lord. Or rather, cruel lords, as the Hebrew (מֶלֶךְ) indicates the plural מְלָכִים. The LXX (Ⲅ) has, "And I will deliver Egypt into the hands of men, of cruel lords." The Syriac (ܣ) has Medes for lord. Barnes prefers to follow the KJV, and calls the plural "pluralis excellentiae—denoting majesty and dignity, and applicable to a 'single' monarch." Delitzsch and Gill suggest that Isaiah is not referring to a foreign force, but rather to the civil war mentioned in verse two that led to twelve smaller nations. ¶ And a fierce king shall rule over them, saith the Lord, the LORD of hosts. Barnes has, for a fierce king, "'A king of strength'—a description particularly applicable to one who, like Psammetichus, had subdued eleven rivals, and who had obtained the kingdom by conquest."

5 And the waters shall fail from the sea, and the river shall be wasted and dried up.

And the waters shall fail from the sea. Barnes explains, "The parallelism here, as well as the whole scope of the passage, requires us to understand this of the Nile. The word יָם yâm is sometimes used to denote a large river The Nile is often called a sea. Thus Pliny ('Nat. Hist.' ii. 35) says, 'The water of the Nile resembles the sea.' Thus, Seneca ('Quaest. Nat.' v. 2) says, 'By continued accessions of water, it stagnates (stagnat) into the appearance of a broad and turbid sea.' Compare Herodot. ii. 97; Diod. i. 12, 96; 'To this day in Egypt, the Nile is el-Bahr, 'the sea,' as its most common appellation.’ ‘Our Egyptian servant,’ says Dr. Robinson, ‘who spoke English, always called it ‘the sea.’ (Bib. Researches, 1:542).” Victor Ludlow suggests³ that the drying up and issues related to the problems with the Nile are explained by the building of the Aswan Dam, “an engineering wonder but ecological and social nightmare.” Despite what has happened in relation to the Aswan Dam, it would not be surprising if the future brings yet further fulfillment of this prophecy: changes so profound that will help the people of Egypt turn to the true Lord and God. ¶ And the river shall be wasted and dried up. Cowles says, “The life of Egypt is the river Nile.” Govett writes, “Almost the existence of Egypt depends upon its annual overflow, as it never rains there; hence the extent of the calamity may well be imagined, should such an event occur.”

6 And they shall turn the rivers far away; [and] the brooks of defence shall be emptied and dried up: the reeds and flags shall wither.

And they shall turn the rivers far away; [and] the brooks of defence shall be emptied and dried up. The RV, as do several other translations, has the idea of stagnant rivers or channels of water, “And the rivers shall stink,” for וְהַנְּחָלִים יִתְּחַלְּוּ from the root נָחַ.⁴ Gill has, “as the river of Nile and its streams were the defence of the land of Egypt, as well as made for the fruitfulness of it, for these must make it less accessible to a foreign enemy; and besides, here lay their shipping, which were their protection; and moreover, from hence brooks and courses of water might be derived and carried about their fortified cities, which added to the strength of them.” ¶ The reeds and flags shall wither. The Targum (T) reads, “The reeds and flags⁵ shall not grow.” For flags in the KJV, סוּף, translators and the lexicons often suggest either rushes or sea weeds. Gill comments, that if the reeds and flags, which grew right on or near the river would wither, how much more the crops that grew far away.

7 The paper reeds by the brooks, by the mouth of the brooks, and every thing sown by the brooks, shall wither, be driven away, and be no [more]. ✓

✓ and shall not be

³ For more details see Ludlow (pp. 214–216) and the very interesting notes on this topic.

⁴ To stink or be rancid (Gesenius).

⁵ CAL, וְהַנְּחָלִים, and papyrus reed.

The paper reeds by the brooks, by the mouth of the brooks, and every thing sown by the brooks, shall wither. The Syriac (S) renders it, “The rushes by the river, and by the mouth of the river, and everything sown by the river shall wither.” The mouth of the river is where the Nile ends, in Egypt. Not, as some suggest, its origin or fountain, which rather corresponds to Uganda. Gill explains: “Not at the fountain or origin of the Nile and its streams, but by the sides thereof; on the banks of which grew a reed or rush, called by the Greeks ‘papyrus’⁶ and ‘biblus’; from whence come the words ‘paper’ and ‘bible’, or book, of which paper was anciently made; even as early as the times of Isaiah.” ¶ Be driven away, and be no [more]. The LXX (G) has, “Shall be blasted with the wind and dried up.” At any rate, the papyrus and crops would fail.

8 The fishers also shall mourn, and all they that cast angle into the brooks shall lament, and they that spread nets upon the waters shall languish.

The fishers also shall mourn, and all they that cast angle into the brooks shall lament. Not only would the disruptions in normal water flow affect the flora, but also the fish in the river, which would perish, causing a devastating famine. ¶ And they that spread nets upon the waters shall languish. That is, not only those who fish with hooks would be affected, but also those who fish with nets.

9 Moreover they that work in fine flax, and they that weave networks, ✓ shall be confounded.

✓ or, white works

The LXX (G) has, “And shame shall come upon them that work fine flax, and them that make [i.e., work at] fine linen.” For a man not to be able to work brings the shame of not being able to provide for the family.

Regarding the word חֹרֵי white works (margin || for networks, or fine or white⁷ linen), it seems to mean some other type of fine linen compared to פְּשָׁתִּים שְׂרִיקוֹת, fine flax or combed flax. Calvin says, “If we are to understand שְׂרִיקוֹת to mean certain very fine linens, it is probable that the latter clause [חֹרֵי]

⁶ See Pliny on papyrus, in Gill.

⁷ Gesenius explains that the singular חֹרֵי stands for white linen, based on the root for the word white חָנָה (Gesenius, HALOT).

relates to other productions of the loom, manufactured out of small fine thread, and of the most elegant workmanship.”

10 And they shall be broken in the purposes[✓] thereof, all that make sluices [and] ponds for fish.^{✓ ✓}

- ✓ foundations
- ✓ ✓ of living things

One possible interpretation is that we here have the conclusion of the list of destroyed livelihoods from the cessation of the strength of the Nile. Regarding the word שְׁתִּיתִיהָ pointed as שְׁתִּיתִיהָ in the Masoretic (מ) text (purposes or foundations), Gill has in part, “Kimhi observes, that the word in the Talmudic language signifies ‘nets’, as it does; and this seems to be most agreeable to the context; and then the words may be rendered, ‘and its nets shall be broken’; shall lie and rot for want of use.” Some other suggestions that have been tendered include weavers, pillars (nobles in contrast to the common people), something that is drunk (including beer, strong drink or other alcoholic beverage), or even some type of enclosure for holding water which is now broken.

11 Surely the princes of Zoan [are] fools, the counsel of the wise counsellors of Pharaoh is become brutish: how say ye unto Pharaoh, I [am] the son of the wise, the son of ancient kings?

Surely the princes of Zoan [are] fools, the counsel of the wise counsellors of Pharaoh is become brutish. For the Hebrew (מ) Tzoan זִעֵן, the Targum (ܬ) has טַאֲנִים, so also the Vulgate (V) Taneos, and the LXX (Ϛ) Τάνεως. According to Faussett, this was “a city of Lower Egypt, east of the Tanitic arms of the Nile, now San.” Several exegetes mention that this was the place where the Lord, through Moses, performed the miracles before Pharaoh (see Psalm 78:12, 43), also a town built after Hebron (Numbers 13:22). Gill has, “The princes of this place, the lords of this nome, though they had princely education, acted a foolish part, in flattering their sovereign, as afterwards mentioned, and in putting him upon doing things destructive to his kingdom and subjects.” ¶ How say ye unto Pharaoh, I [am] the son of the wise, the son of ancient kings? The Targum (ܬ) suggests that the ‘wise counselors’ say they are the son of the wise, but are speaking of Pharaoh as being the son of ancient Pharaohs—and thus even wiser. The LXX (Ϛ) and Syriac (ܣ), instead, have the ‘wise counselors’ attributing to themselves both wisdom and descent from ancient kings. Ibn Ezra, likewise, has: “Each of [the wise counselors of Pharaoh] will praise himself: ‘my father was wise, my forefathers in days of old were also kings.’” Luther has, “Now there follows a mockery against the Egyptians’ boast of wisdom and antiquity.”

12 Where [are] they? where [are] thy wise [men]? and let them tell thee now, and let them know what the LORD of hosts hath purposed upon Egypt.

Where [are] they? where [are] thy wise [men]? and let them tell thee now. Now that things are going wrong, and all the prophesied evil has come to pass, where are the wise counselors who assured all was well? ¶ And let them know what the LORD of hosts hath purposed upon Egypt. The Syriac (ܣ) renders it, “And let them know what the Lord of hosts has purposed against Egypt.” The Lord has permitted men to speak, but now He will speak.

13 The princes of Zoan are become fools, the princes of Noph are deceived; they have also seduced Egypt, [even they that are] the stay[✓] of the tribes thereof.

- ✓ or, governors

The princes of Zoan are become fools, the princes of Noph are deceived. Gill has, regarding נֹפִי, “called Moph, in Hosea 9:6 where our translation renders it Memphis; and so do the Septuagint and Vulgate Latin versions here; the Arabic version has it Menphis; the Syriac version Mophis; and the Targum Mephes; the city of Memphis is no doubt intended, which was the chief of the first of the nomes or provinces of Egypt, from whence it was called Memphites: it was the metropolis of upper Egypt, and the seat of their kings and princes; it was built by their first king Menes, or Mizraim,⁸ and had in it the famous temple of Vulcan; it continues to this day, and goes by the name of Alkair, or Grand Cairo.” It is often from the great metropolis that the philosophies of men are promulgated. ¶ They have also seduced Egypt, [even they that are] the stay of the tribes thereof. Gill has, “[The nomes] are called tribes by the prophet, in the language of the Jews, which land were divided into tribes, as the land of Egypt was divided into nomes; and about this time it was divided into twelve kingdoms, as Israel was into twelve tribes.”

⁸ Egypt, מִצְרַיִם.

Those who leaned upon the great men of Μέμφεως now have found they have leaned on nothingness.

14 The LORD hath mingled a perverse spirit[✓] in the midst thereof: and they have caused Egypt to err in every work thereof, as a drunken [man] staggereth in his vomit.

✓ a spirit of perversities

The LORD hath mingled a perverse spirit in the midst thereof. Calvin has, “The expression is metaphorical, as if one were to mix wine in a cup, that the Lord thus intoxicates the wise men of this world so that they are stunned and amazed, and can neither think nor act aright.” Of course we understand that the Lord does not Himself bring an evil spirit upon men. The Prophet Joseph Smith, in the Inspired Version, corrected the Bible translation in numerous places to indicate this point.⁹ ¶ And they have caused Egypt to err in every work thereof, as a drunken [man] staggereth in his vomit. The Targum (ⲉ) reads, “And they have caused the Egyptians to err in all their works, as a drunkard staggereth, and tramples in his own vomit.” So we similarly read in Jeremiah, “Therefore thou shalt speak unto them this word; Thus saith the LORD God of Israel, Every bottle shall be filled with wine: and they shall say unto thee, Do we not certainly know that every bottle shall be filled with wine? Then shalt thou say unto them, Thus saith the LORD, Behold, I will fill all the inhabitants of this land, even the kings that sit upon David’s throne, and the priests, and the prophets, and all the inhabitants of Jerusalem, with drunkenness ... Give glory to the LORD your God, before he cause darkness, and before your feet stumble upon the dark mountains, and, while ye look for light, he turn it into the shadow of death, and make it gross darkness” (Jeremiah 13:12–13, 16).

15 Neither shall there be [any] work for Egypt, which the head or tail, branch or rush, may do.

As happened to Israel (ISAIAH 9:14–15), Egypt would be left without prince or common person who can stand against the impending disaster. Gill has “Jarchi [i.e., Rashi] explains it of the magicians, astrologers, and stargazers of Egypt, who, with all their boasted knowledge and wisdom, should not be able either to foresee or prevent the evil coming upon them.”

16 In that day shall Egypt be like unto women: and it shall be afraid and fear because of the shaking of the hand of the LORD of hosts, which he shaketh over it.

In that day shall Egypt be like unto women. Or, as women (ⲙⲓⲛⲓⲙⲉⲛ). The Targum (ⲉ) reads, “At that time the Egyptians shall be weak (Royal Polyglot, like women).” We see it elsewhere, “they became as women” (Jeremiah 51:30), and “Behold, thy people in the midst of thee are women” (Nahum 3:13). ¶ And it shall be afraid and fear because of the shaking of the hand of the LORD of hosts, which he shaketh over it. Gill observes, “Some think there is an allusion to Moses’s shaking his rod over the Red sea when the Egyptians were drowned, in which the hand or power of the Lord was so visibly seen, and which now might be called to mind.”

17 And the land of Judah shall be a terror unto Egypt, every one that maketh mention thereof shall be afraid in himself, because of the counsel of the LORD of hosts, which he hath determined against it.

And the land of Judah shall be a terror unto Egypt. Ludlow writes, “The low point of Egyptian military power in comparison to that of Israel was the Six Day War of June 1967. Dozens of books have been written and countless stories told of how, within hours of June 5, the Israeli air force devastated all Egyptian air bases and two-thirds of her air force. In four days of fighting, Israel destroyed the bulk of the Egyptian army and overran an area of Egyptian territory six times the area of the entire country of Israel.” ¶ Every one that maketh mention thereof shall be afraid in himself, because of the counsel of the LORD of hosts, which he hath determined against it. Most likely, against Egypt.

vv. 18–25. Here the conversation turns away from one of punishment, or consequences for sin, to that of latter-day Egypt turning her heart towards the Lord and being healed.

18 ¶ In that day shall five cities in the land of Egypt speak the language[✓] of Canaan,

⁹ For instance, we incorrectly read, “But the Spirit of the LORD departed from Saul, and an evil spirit from the LORD troubled him” (1 Samuel 16:14) which the Prophet corrected to read: “But the Spirit of the LORD departed from Saul, and an evil spirit which was not of the LORD troubled him.”

and swear to the LORD of hosts; one shall be called, The city of destruction. ✓ ✓

✓ the lip

✓ ✓ or, of Heres, or, of the sun

In that day shall five cities in the land of Egypt speak the language of Canaan, and swear to the LORD of hosts. Luther explains that by the language of Canaan, Hebrew and Syriac is meant. Barnes suggests that this probably signifies conversion: “A similar expression, to denote conversion to the true God, occurs in Zephaniah 3:9: ‘For there I will turn to the people a pure language, that they may call upon the name of the Lord, to serve him with one consent.’” Calvin has, “To vow and to swear are Hebrew ways of speaking and mean to bind oneself to God and have Him as one’s God and worship Him. This pertains properly to swearing. One who confesses God is called one who swears by God. The psalm says (Psalm 63:11): ‘All who swear by Him shall glory,’ that is, all who confess Him ... To ‘swear by the Lord’ often means to testify that he is the true God (Deuteronomy 6:13).” Cheyne observes, “Not ‘swearing by’ (as ISAIAH 65:16), but ‘swearing (fidelity to)’ (ISAIAH 45:23).” Besides the above mentioned Psalm, we have numerous admonitions to confess the Living God, and not to rely upon man or man-made idols (see, Deuteronomy 10:20; ISAIAH 45:23; 48:1; 65:16; Jeremiah 4:2; 12:16; Hosea 4:15). But also see Matthew 5:33–34. The number five may be put for part—either small or substantial. ¶ One shall be called, The city of destruction. The Targum (ⲓ) here seems to provide additional information: “The city of Beth-Shemesh (Heliopolis, Stenning, the house of the Sun), which is to be destroyed, shall be called one of them.” The Talmud tradition (Seder Kodoshim, Menachoth 110a), referring to the Targum, has: “What is meant by The city of Heres? — As Rabbi Joseph rendered it in Aramaic: The city of Beth Shemesh [the sun], which is destined to destruction” (Talmud, Soncino). The LXX (Ⲙ) has, “One city shall be called the city of Asedec Ἀσεδεκ [city of destruction].” The Syriac (Ⲥ) renders it, “One of them shall be called Haris, the city of destruction.” The Douay renders it, “One shall be called the city of the sun.” Exegetes explain that there seems to be a play of word, then, replacing “House of the son” for “House of destruction.” Kay also has noticed the LXX (Ⲙ) use of the words city of righteousness, πολις ἀσεδεκ (compare with Melchizedek, King of Righteousness). Kay says, “Implying that the effectual overthrow of paganism could only be attained through the establishment of the kingdom of God, which is righteousness.” Delitzsch explains that out of the ruins “something new” would come forth: “Jehovah had proved Himself, to Egypt’s salvation, to be the God of the gods of Egypt. And now, if they who erected this place of worship and this monument cried to Jehovah, He would show Himself ready to help them; and they would no longer cry in vain, as they had formerly done to their own idols (ISAIAH 19:3). Consequently it is the approaching conversion of the native Egyptians that is here spoken of.”

19 In that day shall there be an altar to the LORD in the midst of the land of Egypt, and a pillar at the border thereof to the LORD.

In that day shall there be an altar to the LORD in the midst of the land of Egypt. There are those who incorrectly believe there can be only one Temple, and that in Jerusalem, and do not understand that the earth will be dotted with Temples built to our Lord. Temples were constructed in the Americas before the coming of our Savior to the earth in the meridian of times. No man, however, has the right to build a Temple to Our Lord without the express authority to do so.¹⁰ Ludlow adds these interesting comments, “Most historians believed that ‘true’ Jews would build a temple only in Jerusalem. After all, they did not build one in Babylon during their captivity, so why should they build one anywhere else ... Following the discovery of the Elephantine Papyri in 1893 and recent Israeli archeological findings in the Holy Land, however, many scholars now acknowledge the legitimate existence of many other Israelite temples. (For example, see ‘Hebrew sanctuaries and temples—those beside Jerusalem,’ IDB 4:566–68.) Now, some Israeli archeologists will assert that if a group of ancient religious, practicing Jews were to be isolated from Jerusalem, one would expect them to build their own temple.” ¶ Young writes, “The language reflects the period of the patriarchs. As Abraham had gone through the land erecting altars to the Lord, so in Egypt there will be such an altar. This altar will not be memorial in nature, like that which the two and a half tribes built by the Jordan (Joshua 22:9ff.), although it does remind of that altar. Nevertheless, it will have religious significance, and upon it legitimate sacrifices to God will be offered. The prophecy does not conflict with Exodus 20:24, which permitted the building of altars in all places in which the Lord would record His Name. The altar upon which the sacrifices are offered simply stands as a representative for the entire cult as such. It is a case of pars pro toto.¹¹ An altar dedicated to the Lord means that sacrifices offered to the Lord will be offered thereupon. In other words, the true religion will be found in Egypt; the true God will be worshipped there

¹⁰ Onias built an unsanctioned temple in Egypt (see Josephus, Ant. 13:3:1).

¹¹ Pars pro toto is Latin to mean the part standing for the whole.

... To say that there will be an altar to the true God in the midst of the land simply means that the revealed religion will be found in the land.” ¶ And a pillar at the border thereof to the LORD. Gill writes, “The phrase denotes a public profession of Christ, and a setting up of his worship; it is used in allusion to the patriarchs, who, wherever they came, set up an altar to the Lord, and worshipped him.”

20 And it shall be for a sign and for a witness unto the LORD of hosts in the land of Egypt: for they shall cry unto the LORD because of the oppressors, and he shall send them a saviour, and a great one, and he shall deliver them.

And it shall be for a sign and for a witness unto the LORD of hosts in the land of Egypt. Gill writes, “This refers either to what goes before, that the altar and pillar were signs and witnesses that the Lord was believed in, professed, and worshipped there; or to what follows after, that the Lord’s hearing the cries of men, and answering them, by sending a great Saviour to them, is a token and testimony for him of his great love unto them.” ¶ For they shall cry unto the LORD because of the oppressors. The Targum (Ⓣ) reads, “When they shall pray before the Lord because of their oppressors.” At some point, Egypt will turn to the Lord God for help. Young writes, “The Egyptians had been the oppressors of God’s helpless people. Now, however, the Egyptians have turned to the Lord; and hence they themselves will know what all God’s people know, that in this world they will have tribulation. The Egyptians will be no exception; they, too, will face oppression. Whenever there is a true conversion, there will in the nature of the case be oppressors, and from these God will send deliverance.” ¶ And he shall send them a saviour, and a great one, and he shall deliver them. The Targum (Ⓣ) has, “And He shall send unto them a Saviour, and a Judge, and He shall deliver them.” The LXX (Ⓛ) has, “And he shall send them a man who shall save them; he shall judge and save them.” The Syriac (Ⓢ) renders it, “And he shall send them a saviour and a judge, and he shall deliver them.” The Douay reads, “And he shall send them a Saviour and a defender, to deliver them.” The Dead Sea Scrolls (Ⓢ), “He will send them a savior and he will go down and will rescue them.” It is through our intercessor with the Father, even Messiah—Jesus the Christ—that we may be saved. Kay says, “The prophet himself supplies a commentary on this expression in ISAIAH 63:1; where Messiah is introduced saying of Himself, ‘I speak in righteousness, mighty to save.’”

21 And the LORD shall be known to Egypt, and the Egyptians shall know the LORD in that day, and shall do sacrifice and oblation; yea, they shall vow a vow unto the LORD, and perform [it].

And the LORD shall be known to Egypt, and the Egyptians shall know the LORD in that day, and shall do sacrifice and oblation. Naegelsbach makes this astute observation, “The expression ‘shall be known,’ etc., recalls the celebrated passage Exodus 6:3. ‘But by my name Jehovah, was I not known to them.’¹² There the Lord reveals Himself to those that were held in bondage by the Egyptians; here is seen the remarkable advance that the Lord reveals Himself to the Egyptians themselves as Jehovah, that they, too, really know Him as such” ¶ Yea, they shall vow a vow unto the LORD, and perform [it]. This shows the sincerity of the conversion.

22 And the LORD shall smite Egypt: he shall smite and heal [it]: and they shall return [even] to the LORD, and he shall be intreated of them, and shall heal them.

And the LORD shall smite Egypt: he shall smite and heal [it]. The LXX (Ⓛ) has, “And the Lord shall smite the Egyptians with a stroke, and shall completely heal them.” The Syriac (Ⓢ) renders it, “And the Lord shall smite the Egyptians; he shall smite and heal them.” The book of Proverbs speaks very much to this topic, that is, that the man of God will accept correction and when smitten will repent and become healed. The word smite here represents the loving correction of the LORD. It is an invitation to return unto God. Thus we read: “The way of a fool is right in his own eyes: but he that hearkeneth unto counsel is wise” (Proverbs 12:15). Delitzsch has, “In the act of smiting the intention of healing prevails; and healing follows the smiting, since the chastisement of Jehovah leads it to repentance. Thus Egypt is now under the same plan of salvation as Israel (e.g., Leviticus 26:44; Deuteronomy 32:36).” ¶ And they shall return [even] to the LORD, and he shall be intreated of them, and shall heal them. The Syriac (Ⓢ) renders it, “And they shall return to the Lord, and he shall answer them and shall heal them.” Calvin would translate: “For they shall &c.,” and explains, “The copulative ו signifies for.” They shall turn or return שׁוּבוּ to the Lord, then. When it says that the Lord will hear them, it is this signification which Zechariah 1:3 has for me, that when we turn or return (שׁוּבוּ, repent) to the Lord, the Savior will turn (not repent, but turn the ear to hear and turn the arm to bless) to us: “Therefore say thou unto them, Thus saith the LORD of hosts; Turn ye unto me, saith the LORD of hosts, and I will turn unto you, saith the LORD of hosts.”

¹² “And was not my name known unto them?” Inspired Version.

23 In that day shall there be a highway out of Egypt to Assyria, and the Assyrian shall come into Egypt, and the Egyptian into Assyria, and the Egyptians shall serve with the Assyrians.

In that day shall there be a highway out of Egypt to Assyria. Calvin has, “Now, when he says, in consequence of a highway having been opened up, there will be mutual access that they may visit each other, he describes brotherly intercourse. We know that the Egyptians carried on almost incessant wars with the Assyrians, and cherished an inveterate hatred towards each other. He now foretells that the Lord will change their dispositions, and will reconcile them to each other, so that they will have mutual communications, mutual coming in and going out, in consequence of laying open the highways which were formerly shut.” The Geneva footnote has, “By these two nations, which were then chief enemies of the Church, he shows that the Gentiles and the Jews would be joined together in one faith and religion, and would all be one fold under Christ their shepherd.” ¶ And the Assyrian shall come into Egypt, and the Egyptian into Assyria. Barnes, regarding a former fulfillment, has, “There shall be an alliance between Egypt and Assyria, as constituting parts of one empire, and as united in the service of the true God. The same figure of a ‘highway’ is found in ISAIAH 11:16. The truth was, that Alexander, by his conquests, subjected Assyria and Egypt, and they constituted parts of his empire, and were united under him. It was true, also, that there were large numbers of Jews in both these countries, and that they were united in the service of the true God. They worshipped him in those countries; and they met at Jerusalem at the great feasts, and thus Judah, Assyria, and Egypt, were united in his worship.” Most likely, once again, these refer to a latter-day fulfillment of the scriptures. ¶ And the Egyptians shall serve with the Assyrians. That is, the Egyptians and Assyrians, together, shall serve the Lord. Here is yet another example of where the KJV was produced with inspiration—despite the reading of the ancient versions (𐤀, 𐤅, 𐤆). The predecessors of the KJV, such as the Bishops Bible correctly has: “so that the Egyptians and the Assyrians shall serve the Lord together,” as do many of the modern versions (e.g., ASV, Amplified, ESV, HCSB, JPS, LITV, NASB, RV, WEB, Webster, and YLT). To give the English speaker an idea of how this verse is rendered, it may read as follows: “וְעָבְדוּ (And shall serve) מִצְרַיִם (Egypt) אֶת-אַשּׁוּר (Asshur).” It is therefore easy to see why so many would make the mistake of thinking that it reads that Egypt shall serve Assyria. But the words LORD and with are implied in the ellipsis, so that it should read, “And the Egyptians with the Assyrians shall serve the LORD,” or “And the Egyptians shall serve the LORD with the Assyrians,” along the lines of the Bishops Bible.¹³ Gill writes, “that is, the Lord, as Kimhi and Ben Melech interpret it; they shall both serve the Lord with one shoulder and consent, unite in prayer to the Lord, in hearing the word, and attending on other ordinances.” Cheyne explains, “The Egyptians shall serve with the Assyrians: The sense of the word rendered ‘serve’ is clear from ISAIAH 19:21. No Israelite could misunderstand the phrase any more than the term ‘knowledge’ for ‘knowledge of Jehovah’ in Hosea 4:6.¹⁴” Rawlinson has, “The more complete fulfillment was doubtless after Pentecost, when Christianity was preached and established in Egypt and Libya on the one hand, in Parthia, and Media, and Elam and Mesopotamia on the other (Acts 2:9–10).” We will also see a latter-day fulfillment of this prophecy, as the Gospel shall be preached in every continent and every tongue.

24 In that day shall Israel be the third with Egypt and with Assyria, [even] a blessing in the midst of the land:

Or rather, Israel shall be a third, along with Egypt and Assyria which shall each constitute a third, all united to worship the Lord. Delitzsch correctly says, “Israel has now reached the great end of its calling—to be a blessing in “the midst of the earth” (בְּקֶרֶב הָאֲדָמָה, in the whole circuit of the earth), all nations being here represented by Egypt and Assyria.” Israel was placed in the center of the known world to be an influence for good.

¹³ Alexander has, “The last clause admits two constructions, one of which regards אֶת as the objective particle, and understands the clause to mean that the Egyptians shall serve the Assyrians: the other makes אֶת a preposition, and explains the clause to mean that the Egyptians shall serve (God) with the Assyrians. In favour of the first is the constant usage of עָבַד with אֶת (Genesis 14:4; 27:40; 31:6; Exodus 14:12, &c.), and the unanimous agreement of the ancient versions. But the sense thus yielded is at variance with the context, what precedes and follows being clearly expressive of a union so complete and equal as to exclude the idea of subjection or superiority.

¹⁴ “My people are destroyed for lack of knowledge: because thou hast rejected knowledge, I will also reject thee, that thou shalt be no priest to me: seeing thou hast forgotten the law of thy God, I will also forget thy children” (Hosea 4:6).

25 Whom the LORD of hosts shall bless, saying, Blessed [be] Egypt my people, and Assyria the work of my hands, and Israel mine inheritance.

Calvin has, “Though these titles belonged exclusively to Israel, they shall likewise be conferred on other nations, which the Lord hath adopted to be his own ... By calling the Egyptians ‘the people of God,’ he means that they will share in the honour which God deigned to bestow in a peculiar manner on the Jews alone. When he calls [the] Assyrians the work of his hands, he distinguishes them by the title peculiar to his Church ... When he comes to Israel, he invests him with his prerogative, which is, that he is the inheritance of God, so that among the new brethren he still holds the rank and honour of the first-born.” Delitzsch correctly speaks of the eschatological basis of the prophecy, “The culminating point in ISAIAH 19:25 answers to the lowest point in ISAIAH 19:15. Every step in the ascending half is indicated by the expression ‘in that day.’ Six times do we find this sign-post to the future within the limits of ISAIAH 19:16–25. This expression is almost as characteristic of Isaiah as the corresponding expression, ‘Behold, the days come’ (הִנֵּה יָמַי), is of Jeremiah (compare, for example, ISAIAH 7:18–25). And it is more particularly in the promising or Messianic portions of the prophecy that it is so favourite an introduction (ISAIAH 11:10–11; 12:1; compare Zechariah) ... For ISAIAH chapter 19 predicts the saving effect that will be produced upon Egypt by the destruction of Assyria. And ISAIAH 19:23. announces what will become of Assyria. Assyria will also pass through judgment to salvation. This eschatological conclusion to ISAIAH 19, in which Egypt and Assyria are raised above themselves into representatives of the two halves of the heathen world, is the golden clasp which connects ISAIAH 19 and ISAIAH 20:1–6.” Naegelsbach writes, “Egypt is called עַמִּי ‘my people,’ Assyria מַעֲשֵׂה יָדַי ‘work of my hands,’ but Israel retains the name of honor נַחֲלָתִי, ‘mine inheritance,’ for thereby it is characterized as the actual son of the house and head of the family.” Alexander opines, “In order to express once more and in the most emphatic manner the admission of Egypt and Assyria to the privileges of the chosen people, he selects three titles commonly bestowed upon the latter exclusively, to wit, God’s people, the work of his hands, and his inheritance, and these three he distributes to the three united powers without discrimination or invidious distinction.”

1 June 2004

Isaiah 20

The inhabitants of Ashdod had rebelled against Assyria and the latter sieged the place and recovered it. The people had thought to obtain protection against Assyria from Egypt and Cush. Instead, they ought to have leaned upon the Lord. To show the useless idea of leaning on Egypt and Cush, the Prophet Isaiah is asked to go barefoot and in his undergarments for three years, as a sign that Egypt would soon be devastated by Assyria and be reduced to complete humiliation. Even that Egypt upon whom Judah was so apt to lean on despite the Lord's warnings. Nägelsbach summarizes: "In the year when the Tartan, i.e. commander-in-chief of king Sargon of Assyria, came against Ashdod to besiege the city ... Isaiah received commandment from the Lord to take off his garment made of bad sack linen and his sandals, and to go about naked and barefoot. For the incredible thing shall happen that the Egyptians and Ethiopians, shall be compelled to go into captivity naked and barefoot, like Isaiah goes about. Thereupon all inhabitants of the sea-board of Palestine [AMP explains, "the inhabitants of this coastland {the Israelites and their neighbors}"], will, with terror and shame, be sensible how wrong they were to confide in the power and glory of Ethiopia and Egypt. They will say: Thus it has gone with the power from whom we expected protection; how now shall it go with us?"

vv. 1–6. The people ask, if Egypt will be so punished, what will happen to us who have leaned on her for support? Only when we lean on the Lord can we be safe.

1 ¶ In the year that Tartan came unto Ashdod, (when Sargon the king of Assyria sent him,) and fought against Ashdod, and took it;

In the year that Tartan came unto Ashdod. Of Ashdod, we know it was one of the five principal cities governed by the Philistines, and at one time assigned to Judah (ISBE). Tartan [תַּרְתָּן] was a high military office, such as commander or general. ¶ (When Sargon the king of Assyria sent him, and fought against Ashdod, and took it. Barnes has, "Ashdod, called by the Greeks Azotus, was a seaport on the Mediterranean, between Askelon and Ekron, and not far from Gaza (Reland's Palestine, iii.) It was one of the five cities of the Philistines, assigned to the tribe of Judah, but never conquered by them (Joshua 13:8; Joshua 15:46–47). The temple of Dagon stood here; and here the ark of God was brought after the fatal battle of Eben-ezer (1 Samuel 5:1 ff.) It sustained many sieges, and was regarded as an important place in respect to Palestine,¹ and also to Egypt." ¶ Rawlinson explains: "Egypt and Ethiopia were at the time united under one head, Shabak, or Shabatak; and the inhabitants of Ashdod looked to this quarter for deliverance from the Assyrian power. Shortly after the first capture, they revolted, deposed the king whom Sargon had set over them, appointed another, and then proceeded, in conjunction with Philistia, Judah, Edom, and Moab, to call in the aid of the Egyptians and Ethiopians. Isaiah's mission on this occasion was to discourage Judaea from joining Ashdod and her allies in this appeal. He was instructed to prophesy that Assyria would shortly inflict a severe defeat on the two African powers, and carry into captivity large numbers of both nations. The prophecy seems to have had its accomplishment about twelve years later, when Sennacherib defeated the combined forces of Egypt and Ethiopia at Eltekeh, near Ekron (G. Smith, Eponym Canon, p. 133)."

2 At the same time spake the LORD by ¶ Isaiah the son of Amoz, saying, Go and loose the sackcloth from off thy loins, and put off thy shoe from thy foot. And he did so, walking naked and barefoot.

✓ by the hand of

At the same time spake the LORD by Isaiah the son of Amoz, saying, Go and loose the sackcloth from off thy loins, and put off thy shoe from thy foot. The LXX (6) translates it as, "Loose thy sandals from off thy feet."

¶ The Lord frequently used this teaching method of giving a "sign and a wonder," by asking His prophets to dress or appear, or act or behave in certain ways, as an object lesson. For instance, Jeremiah was commanded to take off his belt or girdle, and to place it in a hole wherein he had to dig, only to find it completely decomposed when he came back for it, "Thus saith the LORD, After this manner will I mar the pride of Judah, and the great pride of Jerusalem. This evil people, which refuse to hear my words, which walk in the imagination of their heart, and walk after other gods, to serve them, and to worship them, shall even be as this girdle, which is good for nothing” (Jeremiah 13:9–10, see ISAIAH 13:1–15). Young says, “Isaiah recounts the revelation by saying that ‘The Lord spake through the hand of Isaiah.’ As in the seventh chapter so here the prophet objectifies himself. The expression ‘hand of Isaiah’ simply indicates the person, or instrumentality, or power of Isaiah. God had once spoken to Pharaoh through the hand of Moses (Exodus 9:35b) ... The word ‘hand’ thus designates the revelation of God as it is delivered by the prophet.” ¶ And he did so, walking naked and barefoot. The LXX (6) has, “And do thus, going naked and barefoot,” and adds, “having the shame of Egypt exposed.” The Talmud tradition (Seder Mo’ed, Shabbath 114a) explains it: “‘Naked’ means in worn-out garments; ‘barefoot’ in patched shoes” (Talmud, Soncino). Rotherham, pointing to the word naked as a state of not being fully dressed rather than having absolutely no clothes on, has, “And he did so, walking disrobed and barefoot.” SOT reads, “And he did so, walking dismantled and barefoot.” AMP explains, “And he had done so, walking around stripped [to his loincloth] and barefoot.” ¶ Thus it is that we may say to someone, “I am not dressed,” but not necessarily mean we have nothing on, but rather, that we do not feel we can be seen in public. Young writes, “Isaiah need not be thought of as having gone about completely naked. This is shown by the addition of the word ‘barefoot.’ Had he been completely naked, there would be no need for this additional description.” Delitzsch explains, “What Isaiah was directed to do, therefore, was simply opposed to common custom, and not to moral decency. He was to lay aside the dress of a mourner and preacher of repentance, and to have nothing on but his tunic (cetoneh); and in this, as well as barefooted, he was to show himself in public. This was the costume of a man who had been robbed and disgraced, or else of a beggar or prisoner of war.”

¹ Speaking of the region between the Mediterranean and the Jordan, which I prefer to call the Holy Land.

3 And the LORD said, Like as my servant Isaiah hath walked naked and barefoot three years [for] a sign and wonder upon Egypt and upon Ethiopia;

And the LORD said, Like as my servant Isaiah hath walked naked and barefoot three years. Isaiah has been honored, here, with the title, עֶבְדִּי יֵשַׁעְיָהוּ, “my servant Yeshayahu.” ¶ [For] a sign and wonder upon Egypt and upon Ethiopia. The LXX (6) has, “There shall be three years for signs and wonders to the Egyptians and Ethiopians.” The Syriac (5) has: “So shall there be signs and wonders for three years upon Egypt and upon Ethiopia.” Or more properly, as the NAS (and NIV, SOT) has it, “Three years as a sign and token against Egypt and Cush.” Henry writes, “It was intended to signify that the Egyptians and the Ethiopians should be led away captive by the king of Assyria, thus stripped, or in rags, and very shabby clothing, as Isaiah was.” Delitzsch has, “The strange and unseemly dress of the prophet, whenever he appeared in his official capacity for three whole years, was a prediction of the fall of the Egypto-Ethiopian kingdom, which was to take place at the end of these three years... Egypt and Ethiopia are as closely connected here as Israel [Ephraim] and Judah in ISAIAH 11:12. They were at that time one kingdom, so that the shame of Egypt was the shame of Ethiopia.” A number of scholars have alternatively argued that perhaps Isaiah walked for three days, or time periods, symbolic of three years, and that the three years represent the period of captivity that Egypt and Ethiopia would be submitted to. The one thing that is certain is that this event must have really been imprinted in the minds of all who saw it. ¶ עַל-מִצְרַיִם וְעַל-כּוּשׁ, upon Egypt and upon Ethiopia. Just as in English we know Mitzraim as Egypt, so Cush is known as Ethiopia.

4 So shall the king of Assyria lead away the Egyptians prisoners, and the Ethiopians captives, young and old, naked and barefoot, even with [their] buttocks uncovered, to the shame of Egypt.

✓ the captivity of Egypt

✓ ✓ nakedness

So shall the king of Assyria lead away the Egyptians prisoners, and the Ethiopians captives. Both of these sister nations would be carried away captives by Assyria. ¶ Young and old, naked and barefoot, even with [their] buttocks uncovered, to the shame of Egypt. Henderson writes, “On the royal tombs at Thebes are representations of captives led away in triumph, either in a state of complete nudity, or with a small scarf suspended round their loins, and hanging down in front.” This was one of the ways prisoners were often humiliated by their captors.

5 And they shall be afraid and ashamed of Ethiopia their expectation, and of Egypt their glory.

The LXX (6) explains this verse thus, “And the Egyptians being defeated shall be ashamed of the Ethiopians, in whom they had trusted; for they were their glory.” The Syriac (5) has, “And they shall be defeated and ashamed of Ethiopia their trust, and of Egypt their glory.” I rather think, as it further developed in ISAIAH 20:6, that Israel shall be ashamed for having once put her trust on Egypt and on Cush. When it says they shall be afraid we have an elliptical expression missing, they day will come when Israel will be afraid because their expectation of safety to be provided by Egypt and Ethiopia will fail. They will be afraid with no one to turn to, with no human arm to turn to. Rotherham translates both adjectives as those of fear: “Thus shall they be confounded and turn pale,—For Ethiopia, their expectation, and For Egypt their boast.”

6 And the inhabitant of this isle[✓] shall say in that day, Behold, such [is] our expectation, whither we flee for help to be delivered from the king of Assyria: and how shall we escape?

✓ or, country

And the inhabitant of this isle shall say in that day. Many versions use the word coastland for isle giving the idea of Israel. Delitzsch has, “~~N~~”, which signifies both an island and a coast-land, is used as the name of Philistia (Zephaniah 2:5), and as the name of Phoenicia in ISAIAH 23:2, 6; and for this reason Knobel and others understand it here as denoting the former with the inclusion of the latter. But as the Assyrians had already attacked both Phoenicians and Philistines at the time when they marched against Egypt, there can be no doubt that Isaiah had chiefly the Judaeans in his mind. This was the interpretation given by Jerome (‘Judah trusted in the Egyptians, and Egypt will be destroyed’), and it has been adopted by Ewald, Drechsler, Luzzatto, and Meier. The expressions are the same as those in which a little further on we find Isaiah reproving the Egyptian tendencies of Judah’s policy. At the same time, by ‘the inhabitant of this coast-land’ we are not to understand Judah exclusively, but the inhabitants of Palestine generally, with whom Judah was mixed up to its shame, because it had denied its character as the nation of Jehovah in a manner so thoroughly opposed to its theocratic standing.” ¶ Behold, such [is] our expectation, whither we flee for help to be delivered from the king of Assyria: and how shall we escape? The Targum (Ⲛ) reads, “To which we were hoping to flee for help to be delivered from before the king of Assyria, if hitherto they could not deliver themselves, how shall we be delivered?” The LXX (ϸ) has, “Behold, we trusted to flee to them for help, who could not save themselves from the king of the Assyrians: and how shall we be saved?” The Syriac (ܣ) renders it, “Behold, here is our trust, to whom we fled for help to be delivered from the king of Assyria; and how shall we escape?” The Douay version has, “Lo, this was our hope, to whom we fled for help, to deliver us from the face of the king of the Assyrians. And how shall we be able to escape?” Fausset explains the question: “If Egypt, in which we trusted, was overcome, how shall we, a small weak state, escape?” Gladly, there is always an escape. We must pray the Father in the name of the Holy One of Israel, even Jesus the Christ.

FIRST POSTED: 16 August 2004

Isaiah 21

We turn to prophecies against Babylon, Edom and Arabia. There are spiritual and temporal elements implied in these revelations. We have been commanded to leave spiritual Babylon and turn to the Lord. Likewise, for LDS, Idumea, or Edom, has similar connotations. Some of the prophecies began their fulfillment during the time of the Assyrian invasion, others during the Babylonian period. We must be ever vigilant as we live in a period of increasing spiritual darkness.

v. 1–10. Isaiah is permitted to see the fall of Babylon.

1 ¶ THE burden of the desert of the sea.
As whirlwinds in the south pass through;
[so] it cometh from the desert, from a the terrible land.

THE burden of the desert of the sea. The LXX (6) has, “The vision of the desert.” Most exegetes feel the מִדְבָּרָא (midbar) refers to Babylon. It has been suggested that sea is an appropriate term because Babylon was in the middle of the Euphrates and its frequent overflows. Nägelsbach explains that “Babylonia is on the Assyrian monuments often designated simply as ‘sea, sea-country.’” Lowth explains that these overflowing were a serious matter, that for some time dams were built (by the Assyrian queen, Semiramis) to protect against these overflows, but that at the end the dams were destroyed and flooding became normal one more time.

Nägelsbach suggests a similarity with Revelation 17: “Babylon, the great whore, sits on many waters (ver. 1) and at the same time is the desert (ver. 3). The waters, however, are (ver. 15) interpreted ‘peoples, and multitudes, and nations, and tongues.’” Delitzsch points us to Jeremiah, who uses the expression “O thou that dwellest upon many waters” (Jeremiah 51:13) in speaking of Babylon. ¶ As whirlwinds in the south pass through; so it cometh from the desert, from the terrible land. The Targum (7) has, “As the waters of the sea, rushing along as the tempests: yea, they are coming by the way of the south, hurrying along; yea, they are coming from the wilderness, from the land, in which terrible things are done.” The LXX (6) has, “As though a whirlwind should pass through the desert, coming from the desert, even from such a land.” The Syriac (5) reads, “As a whirlwind from the south, sweeping through from the wilderness; so it comes from a far off land.” The Dead Sea Scrolls (8) has “from a distant land.” The key word here is as, אֲשֶׁר, comparing the forces of the Persians and the Medes to the devastating whirlwinds from the south. The destructive force of the whirlwinds from the south are well known to Judah (Job 37:9; Zechariah 9:14). Whirlwinds are also an expression of military might (Jeremiah 4:13; Daniel 11:40) and often of the Lord’s punishment (Jeremiah 30:23; Amos 1:14; Zechariah 7:14). The word south or Negev, נֶגֶב, is used. ¶ Terrible land. Calvin here suggests that Babylon’s punishment would come through the terrible land, meaning Judea (see ISAIAH 18). “Although therefore Babylon was taken and plundered by the Persians and Medes, Isaiah declares that its destruction will come from Judea; because in this manner God will revenge the injuries done to that nation of which he had promised to be the guardian.”

2 A grievous vision is declared unto me;
the treacherous dealer dealeth treacherously, and the spoiler spoileth. Go up, O Elam: besiege, O Media; all the sighing thereof have I made to cease.

✓ hard

A grievous vision is declared unto me; the treacherous dealer dealeth treacherously, and the spoiler spoileth. The Targum (7) has, “The prophet said: A dreadful grievous &c.” giving us the distinct ideas that it is Isaiah who is speaking here. The word בִּגְדָן, can mean treacherous, or unfaithful (BDB, TWOT). The idea is here similar to the warning of Jesus that “all they that take the sword shall perish with the sword” (Matthew 26:52). So, as Babylon had been unrighteous, treacherous, and unfaithful, she would fall from the hands of a neighboring power, being made to feel what she had made others feel. ¶ Go up, O Elam: besiege, O Media; all the sighing thereof have I made to cease. Rawlinson explains: “The discovery that Cyrus, at the time of his conquest of Babylon, bore the title of ‘King of Ansan,’ not ‘King of Persia,’ coupled with the probability that ‘Ansan’ was a part of Elam, lends a peculiar interest to these words. Isaiah could not describe Cyrus as ‘King of Persia,’ and at the same time be intelligible to his contemporaries, since Persia was a country utterly unknown to them. In using the term ‘Elam’ instead, he uses that of a country known to the Hebrews (Genesis 14:1), adjoining Persia, and, at the time of his expedition against Babylon, subject to Cyrus.” Rawlinson continues: “Having given ‘Elam’ the first place, the prophet assigns to Media the second. Eleven years before he attacked Babylon, Cyrus had made war upon Astyages (Istuvegu), King of the Medes, had captured him, and become king of the nation, with scarcely any opposition (see the ‘Cylinder of Nabonidus’). Hence the Medes would naturally form an important portion of the force which he led against Babylon.”

3 Therefore are my loins filled with pain: pangs have taken hold upon me, as the pangs of a woman that travaileth: I was bowed down at the hearing [of it]; I was dismayed at the seeing [of it].

Therefore are my loins filled with pain: pangs have taken hold upon me, as the pangs of a woman that travaileth. The Targum (ⲧ), instead, has the Prophet speaking about the fear to be experienced by Babylon: “Therefore their loins shall be full of terror: behold, fear shall seize them, like the pangs of a woman that travaileth.” ¶ I was bowed down at the hearing [of it]; I was dismayed at the seeing [of it]. The Targum (ⲧ), once again transferring the sentiments to Babylon, has: “They are become foolish, so that they cannot hear; they have erred, so that they cannot see (Chaldee, not to see).” A woman in travail is one in the process of giving birth.

4 My heart panted, ~ fearfulness affrighted me: the night of my pleasure hath he turned ~ ~ into fear unto me.

- ✓ or, mind wandered
- ✓ ✓ put

My heart panted, fearfulness affrighted me. The Targum (ⲧ) reads, “Their heart is bewildered; distress and terrors have seized them.” The LXX (Ⲅ) has, “My heart wanders, and transgression overwhelms (literally, *baptizes*¹) me.” The Syriac (Ⲫ) reads, “My heart failed, pangs made me quake.” The Douay has “My heart failed, darkness amazed me.” With Gill and a few others, I think these words represent the sentiments of the Babylonians. My reasoning is that the following expression, “the night of my pleasure” most likely refers to the sentiments of Babylon. ¶ The night of my pleasure hath he turned into fear unto me. The Targum

¹ That is, envelopes or surrounds. This is what happened the first time the Spirit testified to me of the truthfulness of the Book of Mormon. I was completely enveloped or baptized by the Spirit.

(ⲧ) reads, “Because the place of their confidence hath become destruction unto them.” The LXX (Ⲅ) has, “My soul is occupied with fear.” The Syriac (Ⲫ) has, “The beauty of my pleasures has been turned into terror to me.” The Douay has “Babylon, my beloved, is become a wonder to me.” If the Targum (ⲧ) is correct in its rendering of these last few verses, then “the night of my pleasure” in ISAIAH 21:4 probably represents the vain confidence felt by Babylon.

5 Prepare the table, watch in the watchtower, eat, drink: arise, ye princes, [and] anoint the shield.

Prepare the table, watch in the watchtower, eat, drink. The Targum (ⲧ) reads, “Set in order the tables, set the watchmen, eat and drink.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Prepare the table (literally, set in order), place the watchmen, eat ye, drink ye” The Syriac (Ⲫ) has plural for tables and watchtowers. The Douay has “behold in the watch-tower them that eat and drink.” The Dead Sea Scrolls (Ⲛ) has “They set the tables, they prepare the rugs, they eat, they drink!” ¶ Daniel 5 opens with a banquet in which King Belshazzar and his courtiers defamed the sacred vessels that his father, King Nebuchadnezzar, had removed from the temple in Jerusalem, by drinking wine from them while idolizing their false gods. Ibn Ezra suggests that Daniel 5 is the fulfillment of this Isaianic prophecy. Indeed, “In that night was Belshazzar the king of the Chaldeans slain” (Daniel 5:30). We read in *Cyropaed*² (quoted in Henderson), that Gobrias, one of Belshazzar’s generals, said of the occasion, “the city seems tonight to be in general revel...” Kay well says that if the Lord was willing to chastise the arrogance of Babylon, how much more would He punish Jerusalem, too: “Jerusalem has become assimilated to Babel. Must not, then, the decree soon go forth, ‘Fallen, fallen, is Jerusalem’? Indeed, it had already been published in ISAIAH 3:8.” Depressing indeed, but for the wonderful promises made to the children of Israel in Deuteronomy 30 and elsewhere. ¶ Arise, ye princes, [and] anoint the shield. The Targum (ⲧ) reads, “Rise, ye princes, polish, and make bright the arms!” The LXX (Ⲅ) has, “Arise, ye princes, and prepare your shields.” The Douay has “take up the shield.” Continuing from Daniel 5, it is clear that among those invited to the great feast were the princes (Daniel 5:3). Henderson suggests that rather than those inside rising up to defend themselves, this was once again, a command uttered to the attacking forces to “calling upon them to seize the favorable moment of attack.” The idea of anointing the shields, was to make them oily and slippery to the weapons of the enemy (Henderson leaning on Wilkinson's Ancient Egyptians I, p. 298; also Gill, leaning on Rashi). Barnes explains that many shields were made with an outer frame of metal or wood, covered with a thick hide of such animals as elephants, rhinoceros, hippopotamus, or some other animal. These needed to be kept supple with oil, lest they become brittle and tear easily in war.

² Cyropaedia, by Xenophon.

6 For thus hath the Lord said unto me, Go, set a watchman, let him declare what he seeth.

The LXX (6) has, "For thus said the Lord to me, Go and station a watchman for thyself, and declare whatever thou shalt see." The watchman here mentioned is probably Isaiah himself, who is permitted to see of the impending fall of Babylon in some detail, or rather the Lord who reveals all things to Isaiah. The Syriac (5) implies the latter: "I the Lord stand continually in the daytime, and I stand upon my watchtower every night" (v. 8). Habakkuk was another Prophet of God who stood as a watchman on a tower (Habakkuk 2:1).

7 And he saw a chariot [with] a couple of horsemen, a chariot of asses, [and] a chariot of camels; and he hearkened diligently with much heed:

And he saw a chariot [with] a couple of horsemen, a chariot of asses, [and] a chariot of camels. The Targum (7) reads, "And he saw a chariot, a man, and with him a couple of horsemen: a rider on an ass, a rider on a camel." The LXX (6) has, "And I saw two mounted horsemen, and a rider on an ass, and a rider on a camel." The Syriac (5) and Douay (based on Vulgate) also makes it riders on an ass and on a camel. The Dead Sea Scrolls (8) has "When he sees chariots, each man with a pair of horses, riders on donkeys or riders on camels." Skinner explains that both asses and camels were used by the Persians in combat. Rawlinson, has this: "...rather a troop of horsemen riding two and two. This is exactly how a cavalry force was ordinarily represented by the Assyrians. Chariots are not intended either here or in ISAIAH 21:9. They were not employed by the Persians until a late period of their history (see Ancient Monarchies 4:113, 122)." Similarly, Rawlinson explains that it was "men mounted on asses and on camels." The Hebrew word, רֶכֶב, presents some confusion, as it can stand for either riders or drivers of chariots, or chariots (Gesenius, BDB, HAL). TWOT makes an interesting observation, that רֶכֶב was particularly used for the riding of other animals—not just horses—such as asses and mules, which fits well with our context here. The ASV thus reads, "And when he seeth a troop, horsemen in pairs, a troop of asses, a troop of camels, he shall hearken diligently with much heed." NASB has: "When he sees riders, horsemen in pairs, A train of donkeys, a train of camels, Let him pay close attention, very close attention." ¶ And he hearkened diligently with much heed. The Targum (7) puts the Prophet in the watchtower, "The prophet said, I listened diligently, and, behold, I saw mighty armies (Royal Polyglot, great armies are coming)!" The LXX (6) seems to mix parts of this verse with the next, "Hearken with great attention, and call thou Urias to the watch-tower."

8 And he cried, A lion: My lord, I stand continually upon the watchtower in the daytime, and I am set in my ward whole nights:

- ✓ or, cried as a lion
- ✓ ✓ or, every night

And he cried, A lion. The Targum (7) has, "The prophet said, the voice or armies, coming with coats of mail, is as a lion." Note the margin ||, "As a lion." The Douay has "And a lion cried out." The Dead Sea Scrolls (8) has "The lookout shouted." Ibn Ezra, as with the margin ||, suggests that the watchman cried out with the voice and strength of a lion. This fits in well with ISAIAH 31:4, "For thus hath the LORD spoken unto me, Like as the lion and the young lion roaring..." Barnes well points out that other instances exist of the prefix as, אֲשֶׁר, being left out, and gives ISAIAH 62:5 as an example: "For as a young man marryeth a virgin, so shall thy sons marry thee: and as the bridegroom rejoiceth over the bride, so shall thy God rejoice over thee." A few other examples include ISAIAH 22:23; 47:8; and 66:3. Faussett, leaning on Horsley, suggests that it was not so much the roaring voice of a lion that was involved here, but rather, his watchfulness. Gill suggests that Cyrus, a type of Christ in the destruction of Babylon, was meant here as the lion: "the Lion of the tribe of Judah, by whom antichrist, or mystical Babylon, will be destroyed." ¶ My lord, I stand continually upon the watchtower in the daytime, and I am set in my ward whole nights. The Targum (7) reads, "And I stand continually upon the watchtower before the Lord in the day, and as a guard I stand all night." The LXX (6) has, "The Lord has spoken. I stood continually during the day, and I stood in the camp all the night." The Syriac (5), as we have already noted in verse six, has: "Then the watchman cried into my ears, saying, I the LORD stand continually in the daytime, and I stand upon my watchtower every night.” The Douay has “I am upon the watch-tower of the Lord, standing continually by day: and I am upon my ward, standing whole nights.” Calvin explains that the expression refers to the certainty with which these things will come to pass: “...for they whom God has appointed to keep watch are neither drowsy nor dim-sighted.” Alexander suggests that the Masoretic pointing is important and explains that instead of אֲדֹנָי, often used to denote “my lord” or “sir,” we have אֲדֹנִי, “one of the divine names.”

9 And, behold, here cometh a chariot of men, [with] a couple of horsemen. And he answered and said, Babylon is fallen, is fallen; and all the graven images of her gods he hath broken unto the ground.

And, behold, here cometh a chariot of men, [with] a couple of horsemen. The Targum (Ⲯ)³ reads, “And behold this came, a cavalcade of men and with them a pair of horsemen.” Henderson points to the unexpectedness of the attack, and quotes Herodotus (lib. 1:191). Alexander explains that רָכַב אִישׁ means “mounted men.” ¶ And he answered and said, Babylon is fallen, is fallen. The LXX (Ⲅ) has, “And he answered and said, Babylon is fallen, is fallen.” The same expression is found in the book of Revelations, “Babylon the great is fallen, is fallen” (18:2). Most exegetes point out that the expression אָמַן, and he answered, is used in the Hebrew to mean that the interlocutor has resumed speaking. Gesenius rather explains that אָמַן “...is applied to anyone who pronounces anything solemnly and with a loud voice” and is also used when “uttering an oracle.” So a better translation might be: “And he declared &c.” CEV uses the word shouted. ¶ And all the graven images of her gods he hath broken unto the ground. The Targum (Ⲯ) renders it, “And all the images of her idols shall be dashed to pieces to the ground.” The LXX (Ⲅ) has, “And all her images and her idols have been crushed to the ground.” The Dead Sea Scrolls (Ⲕ) has “They have shattered all the images of her gods.” Henderson quotes Josephus and the low regard that the Persians had for images of gods (lib. 1:131), and thus Henderson concludes, “They would, therefore, naturally break them in pieces, whenever they fell in their way.” Rawlinson has, “No doubt there was also, in the sack of the city, much damage done to many of the idols by a greedy soldiery, who may have carried off many images of gold or silver, and broken up others that were not portable, and stripped off the plates of precious metal from the idols of ‘brass, and iron, and wood, and stone’ (Daniel 5:6).” Rawlinson and a number of the exegetes contend, however, that to a great degree the Persians tolerated the false idols of the Babylonians even though they were given no importance, so that the idols had no respect from the conquering forces. Either way, the idols were impotent and shattered. Young points to several scriptures that show the fall of Babylon and the impotence of her idols to stop it: “Therefore, behold, the days come, that I will do judgment upon the graven images of Babylon: and her whole land shall be confounded, and all her slain shall fall in the midst of her” (Jeremiah 51:47, see also Jeremiah 51:52).

10 O my threshing, and the corn of my floor: that which I have heard of the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, have I declared unto you.

✓ son

O my threshing, and the corn of my floor. The Douay has “O the threshing, and the children of my floor.” Skinner explains: “The application of Israel, addressed as my threshing (i.e., threshed one) and my child of the threshing-floor—forcible figurative epithets of Israel as a nation crushed and down-trodden by the brutal tyranny of Babylon.” Nägelsbach well says, regarding the expression וְכִנְיָן-וְזֵרֵי, “and son of my threshing floor⁴,” that this is a forceful way to say “A son of the threshing-floor is one who lies on it, and is threshed, and that not merely briefly and accidentally, but for a long time, as it were habitually.” Indeed, Babylon had threshed Israel and the people of the Lord, but now it was her turn to be threshed: “The daughter of Babylon is like a threshing-floor, it is time to thresh her” (Jeremiah 51:33). Rawlinson provides this beautiful image: “Her chastisements have long been ‘threshing’ Israel, separating the grain from the chaff, and will do so still more as time goes on. The prophet’s message is for the comfort of those who shall have gone through the process and become the true ‘children of the threshing-floor’—pure wheat, fit to be gathered into the garner of God (Matthew 3:12).” ¶ That which I have heard of the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, have I declared unto you. The Targum (Ⲯ) puts these words as coming from the prophet, אֲמַר נְבִיא, “The Prophet said.” The LXX (Ⲅ) has, “Hear what things I have heard of the Lord of hosts which the God of Israel has declared to us.” The Syriac (Ⲫ) reads, “That which I have heard of the LORD God of Israel, I have declared to you.” Indeed, this is the job of a prophet, to declare the words of life, as received from the Lord, to the people.

³ Stenning.

⁴ Not maize, but rather grains (see ISAIAH 17:5).

⁵ Often translated as “corn of my floor” as in the AV.

vv. 11–12. Henderson explains that exegetes are in disagreement as to whether Syrian Dumah is meant, “so called from being situated on the confines of Arabia Petrea and the Syrian desert” or whether it is meant as “merely an abbreviation of דְּמוּם, Edom.” Most all of the exegetical works I consulted strongly prefer to follow the LXX (6), and the view that Edom is meant. Most exegetes also feel that the night is an allusion to the end of the Babylonian captivity, with a new night referring to future troubles that would affect Edom while for Judah there would be a morning of deliverance. Just as Babylon had both physical and spiritual representations, here also Dumah has both. According to the ISBE, the word דְּמוּם, among its various significations, may be understood as “the land of silence or death, the grave (Psalm 94:17; 115:17).” In scripture, death has a number of interesting allusions that fit well with these verses. Ludlow does well in turning our attention to D&C: “For I am no respecter of persons, and will that all men shall know that the day speedily cometh; the hour is not yet, but is nigh at hand, when peace shall be taken from the earth, and the devil shall have power over his own dominion. And also the Lord shall have power over his saints, and shall reign in their midst, and shall come down in judgment upon Idumea, or the world” (D&C 1:35–36, emphasis added). Then Elder Harold B. Lee warned that the dangers from the unseen world, here represented by the night, were even greater than those from the world we do perceive. There also are allusions to the Second Coming. As there are possible representations of the states of apostasy and restoration.

11 ¶ The burden of Dumah. He calleth to me out of Seir, Watchman, what of the night? Watchman, what of the night?

The burden of Dumah. The Targum (7) has, “The burden of the cup of cursing to give Dumah (דְּמוּם) to drink.” The Dead Sea Scrolls (8) also has Dumah. The LXX (6), on the other hand, has The Vision of Idumea (Edom), Τὸ ὄραμα τῆς Ἰδουμαίας. Indeed, in Genesis 32:3, we read “...the land of Seir, the country of Edom.” Calvin has, “Mount Seir, as we learn from the book of Genesis, was a mountain of the Edomites.” D&C, once again, represents Edom as the world, very similarly as the term Babylon. ¶ He calleth to me out of Seir, Watchman, what of the night? Watchman, what of the night? The Targum (7) has, “He thundered unto me from the heavens, Prophet! explain unto them what shall hereafter come to pass.” The LXX (6) has for the complete verse only these words, “Call to me out of Seir; guard ye the bulwarks.” The Syriac (S) reads as the Masoretic text (M), “He called me from Seir, Watchman, what of the night? Watchman, what of the night?” Exegetes suggest that the question is being asked of the prophet, along the lines of how much time is left of the night. When will the morning come? ¶ In Rain in Due Season we have: “And among these nations shalt thou find no ease, neither shall the sole of thy foot have rest: but the LORD shall give thee there a trembling heart, and failing of eyes, and sorrow of mind: And thy life shall hang in doubt before thee; and thou shalt fear day and night, and shalt have none assurance of thy life: In the morning thou shalt say, Would God it were even! and at even thou shalt say, Would God it were morning! for the fear of thine heart wherewith thou shalt fear, and for the sight of thine eyes which thou shalt see” (Deuteronomy 28:65–67). ¶ The idea of the night is interpreted by a time of stress. Then Elder Harold B. Lee of the Quorum of the Twelve explained in General Conference, “In a revelation to the Prophet Joseph Smith the Lord said that Satan drew after him a third part of the spirits whom God created, and that they with Satan became the force in the world to try to destroy the work of righteousness.” Here, Elder Lee compares this Isaianic verse with the role of the watchman on the tower at Mount Seir: “‘Watchman, what of the night,’ suggesting that, more to be feared than the enemies that could be perceived with the physical senses or could be seen by physical eyes were the powers of darkness that came unseen by physical eyes. That same thought was in the mind of the Master, no doubt, when he said: ‘And fear not them which kill the body, but are not able to kill the soul; but rather fear him which is able to destroy both soul and body in hell’ (Matthew 10:28). The Apostle Paul seemed to understand very clearly this same power when he declared: ‘For we wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places’ (Ephesians 6: 12).”⁶ President Ezra Taft Benson also quoted this scripture, and explaining it as not all being right with Zion and the tactics of the adversary: “Watchmen—what of the night? We must respond by saying that all is not well in Zion. As Moroni counseled, we must cleanse the inner vessel beginning first with ourselves, then with our families, and finally with the ⁶ General Conference, October 1949, Elder Harold B. Lee, of the Council of the Twelve Apostles, pp. 55–58. Suggested reading, also, is Chapter 34, ‘Your Coat of Armor’ in Stand Ye In Holy Places: Selected Sermons and Writings of President Harold B. Lee. Salt Lake City, Utah: Deseret Book, 1988, pp. 327–339.

Church . . . the Book of Mormon warns us of the tactics of the adversary in the last days: ‘And others will he pacify, and lull them away into carnal security, that they will say: All is well in Zion; yea, Zion prospereth, all is well—and thus the devil cheateth their souls, and leadeth them away carefully down to hell’ (2 Nephi 28:21). There are many ‘awake’ passages in the Book of Mormon, such as: ‘O that ye would awake; awake from a deep sleep, yea, even from the sleep of hell . . . awake . . . [and] put on the armor of righteousness. Shake off the chains with which ye are bound, and come forth out of obscurity, and arise from the dust’ (2 Nephi 1:13, 23). As a people, it seems we can survive persecution easier and better than we can peace and prosperity. The plaguing sin of this generation is sexual immorality. This, the Prophet Joseph said, would be the source of more temptations, more buffetings, and more difficulties for the elders of Israel than any other (see Journal of Discourses 8:55). President Joseph F. Smith said that sexual impurity would be one of the three dangers that would threaten the Church within—and so it does (see Gospel Doctrine, pp. 312–13). It permeates our society.”⁷ Elder Vaughn J. Featherstone alluded to this verse in Isaiah twice—once in terms of defending the youth from darkness and the other of defending the Constitution of the United States: “My testimony to all of you wonderful brethren who preside over and lead the Aaronic Priesthood is that you are more important to the Church than you would ever dare to suppose. In Isaiah, the prophet asks, ‘Watchman, what of the night?’ This generation of youth will be the torchbearers in the future, possibly in the darkest period of the world”⁸; and “We are the nation’s watchmen—no other people collectively love the Constitution and honor it and hold it as a divinely inspired document as do the Latter-day Saints. The duty of the watchman is to watch over and safeguard his people. And remember the thought-provoking question by President Harold B. Lee, ‘But watchman, what of the night?’ As a generation of those who love this glorious country, we must ask ourselves, ‘But watchman, what of the night?’ Have our youth enough of the fires of freedom kindled in them to withstand the darkness? We must teach them in our homes, churches, and schools. The sound must go across this land from one end to the other.”⁹

12 The watchman said, The morning cometh, and also the night: if ye will enquire, enquire ye: return, come.

The watchman said, The morning cometh, and also the night. This is the other half of the Scripture we have already cited above, from Rain in Due Season (Deuteronomy 28:65–67). The Targum (ⲧ) here is, once again, drastically different: “The prophet said, there is a reward to the righteous, and there is punishment to the wicked.” In other words, for Edom or the world, there is a time of comfort coming after one of stress and anxiety, but this will be fleeting. Barnes well points out how Edom would be glad to see the overthrow of Jerusalem: “Remember, O LORD, the children of Edom in the day of Jerusalem; who said, Rase it, rase it, even to the foundation thereof” (Psalm 137:7). To Judah—or to the righteous—there would come a more enduring period of comfort. It is pointed out, for instance, that Edom may have for a while lived periods of day and night. Delitzsch writes: “...even if the morning dawns, it will be swallowed up again directly by night. And the history was quite in accordance with such an answer. The Assyrian period of judgment was followed by the Chaldean, and the Chaldean by the Persian, and the Persian by the Grecian, and the Grecian by the Roman. Again and again there was a glimmer of morning dawn for Edom (and what a glimmer in the Herodian age!¹⁰), but it was swallowed up directly by another night, until Edom became an utter דומה,¹¹ and disappeared from the history of the nations. ” The exegetes explain that in contrast Judah would find relief. With Victor Ludlow, I feel that the morning represents the Second Coming and the Millennial Reign of the Lord, as this will truly mark a period of relief and salvation. There is much yet that Israel and Judah will suffer before that day. The night well represents the rule of Satan over the world, and the allusion fits well for the Millennial period as the righteous will come forth in the morning of the resurrection while the unrighteous will suffer in the Spirit World until they are ready for the resurrection.¹²

¹⁰ The Herodian family was Idumean.

¹¹ Recall the meaning, silence or death.

¹² This is not the place for an extensive treatise of the suffering of the unrighteous in the Spirit World, but I wish to say a few things about my understanding of this suffering. “Therefore I command you to repent—” the Savior said. “Repent, lest I smite you by the rod of my mouth, and by my wrath, and by my anger, and your sufferings be sore—how sore you know not, how exquisite you know not, yea, how hard to bear you know not. For behold, I, God, have suffered these things for all, that they might not suffer if they would repent; But if they would not repent they must suffer even as I; Which suffering caused myself, even God, the greatest of all, to tremble because of pain, and to bleed at every pore, and to suffer both body and spirit—

⁷ Benson, President Ezra Taft. Cleansing the Inner Vessel. April 1986 General Conference.

⁸ Featherstone, Elder Vaughn J. “Called As If He Heard a Voice from Heaven.” October 1983 General Conference.

⁹ Featherstone, Elder Vaughn J. But Watchman, What of the Night? October 1975 General Conference.

¶ When Isaiah says that “the morning cometh, and also the night,” yet another glorious interpretation comes to mind. Isaiah may well be referring to the First Coming of the Lord, when the long night of darkness of apostasy would be shaken, such that “The people that walked in darkness [would come to see] a great light” (ISAIAH 9:2). But another night is spoken off, that is an even longer night of apostasy that would envelope the world until that glorious morning in the Sacred Grove, when the Father and the Son would appear to Joseph Smith, the boy prophet, and dispel the darkness of ignorance and prejudice. Notice carefully John 9:5, when the Savior says, “As long as I am in the world, I am the light of the world.” When we remember that latter-day revelation has put Edom for the world, or worldly things, we then see clearly that the world is full of darkness without Jesus Christ. When the Savior makes himself manifest, He brings us light and truth. This issue of apostasy and restoration or turning unto Christ also fits well with the next expression, “return, come” שָׁבוּ אֵתָּי. The invitation “turn ye” שָׁבוּ, or שָׁבוּ, is found throughout the Old Testament, as a tender invitation to follow the Lord. ¶ If ye will enquire, enquire ye: return, come. Nägelsbach suggests: “The words for ‘come’ and ‘inquire’ belong rather to the Aramean than to the Hebrew dialect, the word for ‘inquire’ occurs farther in this sense, only in Daniel, and in the prophecy of Obadiah, of which Edom is the subject. Further, the singular verbal ending, which Isaiah here multiplies, making a sort of rhyme out of it, was probably current in the Idumean idiom. He mocks the inquirers, therefore, with Idumean sounds, ‘Return, come,’ is a pleonasm employed for the sake of the rhyme in Hebrew.” One alternative, then, is that the Edomites were being taunted. Another that has been offered is that the Edomites were taunting the Prophet by their question and suggestion that he should prophecy. C. J. Vaughan (in Butler Bible Work) writes regarding this verse: “How often, in these times, do we and would that I might not drink the bitter cup, and shrink— Nevertheless, glory be to the Father, and I partook and finished my preparations unto the children of men” (D&C 19:15–19). These are sobering words indeed. It is my understanding that in the Spirit World we will come to know how our actions, if we have not done right, pained and affected others. I saw a wonderful movie that has given me much to reflect upon, “The Last Emperor” (1987), directed by Bernardo Bertolucci. We see the difficult transformation through which the last Emperor of China, Pu Yi (1906–1967), had to evolve and mature. As a youth Pu Yi had so many servants and was so spoiled he did not even have to get up to go to the bathroom. Pu Yi’s life of comfort and luxury came to an abrupt end as he had to begin a normal, unpampered existence. It was excruciatingly difficult for him to adjust. The movie takes us through the long and painful process that it took for Yi to finally find joy and peace through service to others and tending the Peking Botanical Gardens. It is my feeling that we will, in the Spirit World, likewise have to face our weaknesses. We have been taught that making these changes here on earth is easier than doing so in the Spirit World.

find persons utterly irreligious and worldly, entering into questions concerning God and His truth, concerning revelation, inspiration, miracle and prophecy, as though they had a right to all the enlightenment and comfort and assurance which the saints of God have for their guidance and upholding... To the careless questioner all truth is an enigma.”

President Kimball¹³ wrote with much strength to those who might enter into day and leave darkness behind: “If men are really humble, they will realize that they discover, but do not create, truth. ... [Man] may acquire knowledge in any field, though it requires much thought and effort ... Why, oh, why do people think they can fathom the most complex spiritual depths without the necessary experimental and laboratory work accompanied by compliance with the laws that govern it? ... With preconceived religious notions stubbornly held, one is not teachable. The Lord has promised repeatedly that he will give you a knowledge of spiritual things when you have placed yourself in a proper frame of mind. He has counseled us to seek, ask, and search diligently. These innumerable promises are epitomized by Moroni in the following: ‘And by the power of the Holy Ghost ye may know the truth of all things’ (Moroni 10:5). What a promise! How extravagant! How wonderful!... The time will come when there will be a surrender of every person who has ever lived on this earth ... it will be an unforced surrender, an unconditional surrender. When will it be for you? ... I send to you a solemn warning; and when you stand before the judgment bar in the not-too-distant future, you will know then that I spoke the truth with your eternal welfare in mind. Please remember that I have tried to bring this matter to your attention with such force that it would impress you... I promise you faithfully that if you will study and pray, keeping your mind open, you will receive the light, and it will be to you as the dawning of a new day after having gone through the night of darkness.” ¶ Alexander suggests that rather than a taunt, this expression from Isaiah is “an expression of anxiety arising from a personal concern for the result.” In summary, let us look at this expression “return, come” שָׁבוּ אֵתָּי as an invitation.

We find full support for this interpretation in the Targum (T). “If ye will repent, repent ye, whilst ye are able to repent.” This reminds us of Alma 34:33, “And now, as I said unto you before, as ye have had so many witnesses, therefore, I beseech of you that ye do not procrastinate the day of your repentance until the end; for after this day of life, which is given us to prepare for eternity, behold, if we do not improve our time while in this life, then cometh the night of darkness wherein there can be no labor performed.” This, indeed, is the mission of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, to invite all to come unto Christ.

¹³ President Spencer W. Kimball, “Absolute Truth,” Ensign, September 1978, p. 3

vv. 13–17. Even Arabia would be caught up in the powerful southern incursions beginning with Assyrian forces and continuing with those of Babylonia.

13 ¶ The burden upon Arabia. In the forest in Arabia shall ye lodge, O ye travelling companies of Dedanim.

The burden upon Arabia. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “The burden of the cup of cursing to give the Arabians to drink.” Henderson suggests that it probably refers to “Arabia Deserta, or the northern, being that which the Hebrews were most familiar. It is peopled by Bedouins, i.e., inhabitants of the desert, who have no fixed habitation, but live in tents, and move from place to place [in caravans, אֲרָחוֹת or travelling companies], according as they require pasturage for their flocks.” Cheyne explains regarding the word forest, “The caravans had had to leave the beaten track, and take refuge in a less exposed part of the desert, where shrubs and thorn-bushes secured them to some extent from observation.” Barnes suggest that the word forest, יַעַר, means something different in Hebrew than “a tract of land covered with trees” and instead may well mean a place that is inaccessible, with few roads. ¶ In the forest in Arabia shall ye lodge, O ye travelling companies of Dedanim. Delitzsch suggests: “Just as אֲדוֹם [Edom, Idumea] becomes דִּימָה [Dumah, silence, death], inasmuch as a night without morning dawn falls upon the mountain of Seir, so will בִּיעָרָב (in Arabia) soon be בִּיעָרָב (in the evening), inasmuch as the sun of Arabia is setting.” Evening is also used in the LXX (Θ) (ἑσπέρας), Targum (Ⲯ), Syriac (Ⲫ) and Vulgate (V). Rawlinson says, “The Dedanim, or Dedanites, were among the chief traders of the Arabian peninsula. They had commercial dealings with Tyre, which they supplied with ivory, ebony, and ‘precious clothes for chariots’ (Ezekiel 27:15, 20).” Dedan was the grandson of Abraham and Keturah (see Genesis 25:1–3).

14 The inhabitants of the land of Tema brought water to him that was thirsty, they prevented with their bread him that fled.

The inhabitants of the land of Tema brought water to him that was thirsty. The Targum (Ⲯ), LXX (Θ), and Syriac (Ⲫ) (as well as numerous moderns) put this forth as a command to the people of Tema to go out and bring water to the thirsty fugitives. The Syriac (Ⲫ) reads, “Meet the thirsty, bring water, O you inhabitants of the land of the south!” Ibn Ezra writes, “The prophet tells them to be kind to the caravans, and to give them water, for Moab was rebuked for not having done so (Deuteronomy 23:5).” Alexander, almost alone, argues that the KJV descriptive approach is correct here, “The context makes it far more natural to understand the Prophet as describing an act than as exhorting to it.” Tema is mentioned as one of the descendants of Ishmael, in Genesis 25:15. There is some disagreement between the exegetes as to whether the Tema spoken off is located in “the Hauran, on the caravan route between Palmyra and Petra (Rawlinson) or “the Tema on the pilgrim road from Damascus to Mecca, between Tebuk and Wadi el-Kora” (Delitzsch). Young, who also leans on the latter, that is on the northwestern Arabian Peninsula suggests: “The mention of Teima shows how far into the desert the scourge of Assyria had reached... Teima is in the northern Hedjaz, a large oasis, with abundant water supply. Tiglath-Pileser III also mentions it. (Cf. ANTET, pp. 283f., 306, 313).” We are unsure, however, if the devastation meant was to come from the Assyrian or Babylonian invasions—or both. ¶ They prevented with their bread him that fled. קָדְמוֹ, for the somewhat archaic ‘prevented,’ from the root קָדַם, means to anticipate the needs or to go before (“to be in readiness for; to meet or satisfy in advance; to act ahead of; to go or arrive before” Merriam-Webster, I., 2003), in this case, of the hungry fugitives. So the ASV has, “the inhabitants of the land of Tema did meet the fugitives with their bread.” Many moderns follow the Targum (Ⲯ), LXX (Θ) and Syriac (Ⲫ) to make this an order to go out and be ready to assist the fugitives. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “Bring bottles (or, rivers, abundance) of water before (literally, to the face) the thirsty, who dwell in the land of the south; prepare for the fugitives the daily food (Royal Polyglot, bread) which ye eat.” Ye that dwell in the land of the south, prepare ye of that which ye are eating for the fugitives.” The LXX (Θ) has, “Meet the fugitives with bread, because of the multitude of the slain, and because of the multitude of them that lose their way.” The Syriac (Ⲫ) reads, “Meet those who are fleeing with your bread.” The Douay has “meet with bread him that fleeth.” The Dead Sea Scrolls (Q) has “meet the fugitive with bread.”

15 For they fled from the swords, from the drawn sword, and from the bent bow, and from the grievousness of war.

For they fled from the swords, from the drawn sword. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “Because, on account of the slaughter they have fled: from the face of the drawn sword.” For they have fled from before the slaughter, from before the drawn sword.” The LXX (⚡) has, “And because of the multitude of swords.” The Dead Sea Scrolls (⚡) has “For he has fled from the swords.” ¶ And from the bent bow, and from the grievousness of war. The Targum (⚡) has, “And from the face of the bent bow; and from the face of the strength of the battle.” The LXX (⚡) has, “And because of the multitude of bent bows, and because of the multitude of them that have fallen in war.” Fausset suggests that these things are said of: “the fugitive Dedanites and other Arabs.”

16 For thus hath the Lord said unto me, Within a year, according to the years of an hireling, and all the glory of Kedar shall fail:

For thus hath the Lord said unto me, Within a year, according to the years of an hireling. The Dead Sea Scrolls (⚡) has “Within three years.” A hireling counts the days of his bondage and freedom. So the implication, is that it is an exact time. ¶ And all the glory of Kedar shall fail. The Targum (⚡) has Arabians instead of Kedar. The LXX (⚡) has “sons of Kedar.” The Dead Sea Scrolls (⚡) has “The pomp of Kedar will come to an end.” Nägelsbach explains: “Kedar is, first of all, according to Genesis 25:13, a son of Ishmael. But the name stands here, as very frequently in the later rabbinical usage, for the Arabs, i.e., for the inhabitants of Western Arabia, who alone were known to the Jews.” Delitzsch agrees: “The name Kedar is here the collective name of the Arabic tribes generally.” Gill considers Kedar as being just a specific tribe: “these were another sort of Arabians, as the Targum calls them: they descended from Kedar, a son of Ishmael, Genesis 25:13 their ‘glory’ were their multitude, their riches and substance, and which chiefly lay in their flocks; for the sake of which they moved from place to place for pasture, and dwelled in tents, which they carried with them, and pitched where it was most convenient for them.”

17 And the residue of the number of archers, the mighty men of the children of Kedar, shall be diminished: for the LORD God of Israel hath spoken [it].

✓ bows

And the residue of the number of archers. The Targum (⚡) has, “And the strength of the warriors (literally, servants of war).” Delitzsch writes: “They are numbered here by their bows (in distinction from the numbering by heads), showing that the fighting men are referred to,—a mode of numbering which is customary among the Indian tribes of America, for example (see the work of v. Marius on the Indians of Brazil, i. 395, 411, etc.).” Once again, we have possible fulfillments in both the Assyrian epoch and Babylonian. ¶ The mighty men of the children of Kedar, shall be diminished: for the LORD God of Israel hath spoken [it]. The Targum (⚡) has, “The mighty, the sons of the Arabians, shall be lessened, because by the Word of the Lord (בְּמִקְרָא), the God of Israel, it is thus decreed.” The LXX (⚡) has, “And the remnant of the strong bows of the sons of Kedar shall be small: for the Lord God of Israel has spoken it.” These words בְּיָהוָה אֱלֹהֵי-יִשְׂרָאֵל דִּבֶּר, for the Lord God of Israel hath spoken give much power to the prophecy and it assures us that it will certainly come to pass. Whenever the Lord God speaks, we can take comfort in His words. I wish to testify that no matter how dark the situation seems at the moment, when the Lord speaks reassurance, it is because He will certainly deliver us. Let us then put our trust in Him who is able to save (see Hebrews 7:25).

FIRST POSITED: 17 December 2009

Isaiah 22

This prophecy contains two main sections: verses 1 through 14, and 15 through 25. In the first, the Prophet Isaiah laments the state of Jerusalem and Judah during a siege—perhaps the Babylonian siege during the time of Zedekiah. The second half of the prophecy deals with two of King Hezekiah’s high powered servants, and has important Messianic allusions. Eliakim is given as a type of Christ.

vv. 1–7. A number of exegetes feel that it was the siege that took place during the time of Hezekiah. Delitzsch subscribes to this view as opposed to the failed Assyrian siege: “So far as the prophecy threatened the destruction of Jerusalem by Assyria, it was never actually fulfilled; but the very opposite occurred. Asshur itself met with destruction in front of Jerusalem.” Wordsworth suggests the telescoping of multiple sieges, leaning on Jerome and Lapidé, including the Roman siege, in 70 AD. Skinner says: “In a time of universal mirth and festivity [Isaiah] alone is overwhelmed with grief and refuses to be comforted. In the rejoicings of the populace he reads the evidence of their hopeless impenitence and insensibility... The circumstances recall our Lord’s lamentation over Jerusalem on the day of His triumphal entry (Luke 19:41 ff.).” Instead of being moved to repentance, the inhabitants of Jerusalem seem to take the impending troubles as a reason to indulge in earthly pleasures. The people had put their trust in their walls and defenses, rather than in the Lord.

1 ¶ THE burden of the valley of vision.
What aileth thee now, that thou art wholly gone up to the housetops?

THE burden of the valley of vision. The LXX (6) has, “The word of the valley of Sion.” The Targum (7) has, “The burden of the prophecy concerning the city that dwelleth in the valley, of which the prophets prophesied.” Ibn Ezra explains this is “Jerusalem, the center of all prophecies.” Lowth explains that Jerusalem “was the seat of divine revelation, the place where chiefly prophetic vision was given, and where God manifested himself visibly in the holy place.” Wade writes, “The designation of it as the valley of vision perhaps comes from the traditional association of a site in it with a vision of God: cf. the local name Jehovah-jireh (יהוה יראה) or Jehovah jeraeh (Genesis 22:14 and margin ||) and 2 Chronicles 3:1 (mount Moriah where the Lord appeared unto David).” These locations are believed to be one and the same, the very place where the Temple in Jerusalem would be built. יראה has been variously translated as holy fear or reverence (Gesenius), to see (KJV), or to provide (NAS).

Gesenius translates a similar word יראה, “whom Jehovah looks on.” Regarding the expression valley of vision, יראה, a number of exegetes question the use of the word valley, נחל, as a description of Jerusalem. Luther feels the word valley is an antiphrasis, or an expression meaning the very opposite. From an exalted hill, it would now be brought low to a valley. Cheyne, Henderson and Barnes, however, point to others instances in Holy Writ where Jerusalem is likewise called a valley (Psalm 21:13; 125:2; and Jeremiah 21:13). Barnes writes: “Phocas says, ‘The holy city is placed in the midst of various valleys and hills, and this is wonderful (Θαυμαστόν) in it, that at the same time the city seems to be elevated and depressed, for it is elevated in respect to the region of Judea, and depressed in respect to the hills around it.’ —(Reland’s Palestine, iii. 802, in Ugolini’s Thesaurus, vi.)” Wordsworth suggests, “Jerusalem is also here described as a valley, because she is to be laid low by afflictions consequent on her sins ... and so this prophecy is contrasted with those other predictions where she is displayed as glorified in Christ, by whom the mountain of the Lord’s house will be established on the top of the mountains.” ¶ What aileth thee now, that thou art wholly gone up to the housetops? The LXX (6) adds after housetops, “which help you not.” The Syriac (5) has, “What do you see here, that &c.” Lowth has an interesting explanation: “The houses in the East were in ancient times, as they are still generally, built in one and the same uniform manner. The roof or top of the house is always flat, covered with broad stones, or a strong plaster of terrace, and guarded on every side with a low parapet wall (see Deuteronomy 22:8). The terrace is frequented as much as any part of the house. On this, as the season favours, they walk, they eat, they sleep, they transact business (1 Samuel 9:25, see also the LXX in that place), they perform their devotions (Acts 10: 9). The house is built with a court within, into which chiefly the windows open; those that open to the street are so obstructed with lattice-work, that no one either without or within can see through them. Whenever therefore any thing is to be seen or heard in the streets, any public spectacle, any alarm of a public nature, every one immediately goes up to the house top to satisfy his curiosity. In the same manner, when any one had occasion to make anything public, the readiest and most effectual way of doing it was to proclaim it from the house-tops to the people in the streets: ‘What ye hear in the ear, that publish ye on the house-top,’ saith our Saviour, Matthew 10:27. The people s running all to the tops of their houses gives a lively image of a sudden general alarm.” By wholly gone up, as Young explains, the idea is that all of the people are moved to the housetops in masse. Why did they do so? Ibn Ezra suggests that it was to get a better view of the besieged city. Cheyne feels that the clue is given in ISAIAH 22:13, as the flat housetops are “places of concourse at festivals (Judges 16:27; Nehemiah 8:16).” Although the situation is far from clear, I lean toward Delitzsch, who writes: “From the flat house-tops they all look out together at the approaching army of the foe, longing for battle, and sure of victory.” I have seen the bravado of men before war.¹ I have never understood it. It is ugly. And often it turns into embarrassment.² Yet another possibility is that the people momentarily rejoiced when they thought the Egyptian armies, at the time of Zedekiah, had come to their rescue. Wordsworth gives us this tender sentiment, that the people went to the housetops “instead of going, as Hezekiah did, to the Temple to pray, when Jerusalem was in danger.” The Talmud tradition rather has this verse as an allusion to the fact that the priests were unfaithful to the keys they had been entrusted to.³

2 Thou that art full of stirs, a tumultuous city, a joyous city: thy slain [men are] not slain with the sword, nor dead in battle.

Thou that art full of stirs, a tumultuous city, a joyous city: The LXX (Θ) has, “The city is filled with shouting men.” The Syriac (ܣ) has, “The city is full of tumult, the mighty city is full of noise.” As noted in Strong, TWOT, and by Delitzsch, the word עֲלִיָּזָה, often translated as rejoice, is sometimes used to describe unrighteous elation (compare also with Psalm 94:3; Jeremiah 50:11; Zephaniah 2:15). Young, along the same lines, says, “Zephaniah, in describing Nineveh, uses the same term [הֶעֱלִיזָה]; and his usage is enlightening. ‘This is the rejoicing city that dwelt carelessly, that said in her heart, I am, and there is none beside me.’” ¶ Thy slain [men are] not slain with the sword, nor dead in battle. In ISAIAH 22: 3, we see that they either tried to escape or went into captivity. Skinner, Barnes and others explain that rather than the honorable death in battle, the mighty face death by being taken as prisoners. Kimhi suggests that they have died through famine as a result of the siege (Rosenberg). Such a famine was predicted in Rain in Due Season (Leviticus 26:26–29, 33; Deuteronomy 28:48–50, 52–57).

¹ Henderson, regarding ISAIAH 22:13 says, “Nothing more strikingly evinces the strength of human depravity than trifling and reckless bravery when men are on the brink of destruction.”

² I love the reproaching words King Ahab of Israel—despite his own wickedness—spoke against prideful King Benhadad of Syria: “Tell him, Let not him that girdeth on his harness boast himself as he that putteth it off” (1 Kings 20:11b).

³ “Our Rabbis have taught: When the First Temple was about to be destroyed bands upon bands of young priests with the keys of the Temple in their hands assembled and mounted the roof of the Temple and exclaimed, ‘Master of the Universe, as we did not have the merit to be faithful treasurers these keys are handed back into Thy keeping’. They then threw the keys up towards heaven. And there emerged the figure of a hand and received the keys from them. Whereupon they jumped and fell into the fire. It is in allusion to them that the prophet Isaiah laments: The burden concerning the Valley of Vision. What aileth thee now, that thou art wholly gone up to the house tops &c” (Seder Mo’ed, Ta’anith 29a, Talmud, Soncino).

3 All thy rulers are fled together, they are bound by the archers: ~ all that are found in thee are bound together, [which] have fled from far.

✓ of the bow

All thy rulers are fled together, they are bound by the archers: The Targum (ܬ) has “All thy rulers have been led forth; from before the bent bow, they are gone into captivity together.” The Targum (ܬ) translations by both Stenning and Chilton have exile for captivity. The Dead Sea Scrolls (Q) has these rulers captured without the archers having to use their bows. Henderson correctly explains that the expression “they are bound” (אֲסָרָה),⁴ can also be used “to denote one who is in a state of captivity.” ¶ All that are found in thee are bound together, [which] have fled from far. The Targum (ܬ), “All that were found in thee have been slain, together they have fled afar.” Stenning and Chilton’s ܬ translations both imply that despite the fact these individuals had fled far away, they were nevertheless captured and slain. The Syriac (ܣ) has, “all that were found in you are bound together; they have fled to far off places.” How can they flee if they are dead (ܬ) or bound as in the ܣ and Douay (after the Vulgate, ܕ)? The LXX (Θ) has “the mighty men in thee have fled far away,” and contrast these to princes and captives who suffered other fates. My mind is immediately transported to the time of King Zedekiah, when Jerusalem suffered one of the most devastating sieges of its history under the forces of King Nebuchadnezzar of Babylon. Judah's king and mighty ones had fled only to be brought back and severely punished. Zedekiah and many men of war who surrounded him fled from Jerusalem into the plains where they were captured and either killed or taken into exile. Zedekiah was captured in the plains of Jericho and brought before Nebuchadnezzar. He was subjected to the unspeakable pain of having to witness the brutal murder of his children. Zedekiah was then deprived of his eyes and carried away into the Babylonian exile with his feet bound in brass chains. The defeated king remained in prison until he died (2 Kings 25⁵; Jeremiah 52:11). Had he hearkened to Jeremiah, his fate would have been quite different. Rashi also believes this to be of Zedekiah (Rosenberg, Slotki-Rosenberg). Young has: "The verb⁶ that Isaiah here applies to the princes was later used of the 'binding' of King Zedekiah (2 Kings 25:7)."

⁴ Based on the root אֲסָרָה, see also Gesenius, BDB, HAL.

4 Therefore said I, Look away from me; I will weep bitterly, [✓] labour not to comfort me, because of the spoiling of the daughter of my people.

✓ be bitter in weeping

Therefore said I, Look away from me; I will weep bitterly. Ibn Ezra suggests that person referred to here by the expression, "said I" (אֶמְרָתִי) is Isaiah. Rashi rather thinks it of the Lord. The one does not rule out the other. ¶ Labour not to comfort me, because of the spoiling of the daughter of my people. The LXX (6) has the prophet lamenting "for the breach of the daughter of my people." The English word breach is an interesting one, such as "failure to keep faith; breaking of a promise" (Webster's New World Dictionary). A breach may also refer to a break in the wall of defense, through ⁵ Note that specific mention is also made of the two walls in this scripture, as is in ISAIAH 22:11. "And it came to pass in the ninth year of his reign, in the tenth month, in the tenth day of the month, that Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon came, he, and all his host, against Jerusalem, and pitched against it; and they built forts against it round about. And the city was besieged unto the eleventh year of king Zedekiah. And on the ninth day of the fourth month the famine prevailed in the city, and there was no bread for the people of the land. And the city was broken up, and all the men of war fled by night by the way of the gate between two walls, which is by the king's garden: (now the Chaldees were against the city round about:) and the king went the way toward the plain. And the army of the Chaldees pursued after the king, and overtook him in the plains of Jericho: and all his army were scattered from him. So they took the king, and brought him up to the king of Babylon to Riblah; and they gave judgment upon him. And they slew the sons of Zedekiah before his eyes, and put out the eyes of Zedekiah, and bound him with fetters of brass, and carried him to Babylon" (2 Kings 25:1–7, emphasis added).

⁶ אֶמְרָתִי / אֶמְרָתִי

which the enemy can come in. In looking at the Greek text (6) directly, it is clear that the meaning of σύντριμμα⁷ is rather to be in ruins or destroyed, "or being broken" (an alternate definition, Webster's New World Dictionary). The NETS LXX (6) translation uses ruin (but I could certainly imagine the Prophet weeping bitterly because the daughter of Zion had abandoned the faith). Calvin is reminded by Jeremiah's lamentation: "Oh that my head were waters, and mine eyes a fountain of tears, that I might weep day and night for the slain of the daughter of my people!" (Jeremiah 9:1). "שָׁעוּ מִנִּי". Leave me alone. So says the Holy One, blessed be He, to the ministering angels" (Rashi in Rosenberg). The expression שָׁעוּ מִנִּי, literally means look away from me, as in the KJV.

5 For [it is] a day of trouble, and of treading down, and of perplexity by the Lord GOD of hosts in the valley of vision, breaking down the walls, and of crying to the mountains.

For [it is] a day of trouble, and of treading down, and of perplexity by the Lord GOD of hosts in the valley of vision. The LXX (6) has, "they wander in the valley of Sion." The Douay, after the 9, has "day of slaughter and treading down." As Henderson points out, the words that follow "For [it is a] day" כִּי יוֹם, that is "of trouble, and of treading down, and of perplexity"

מְהוֹמָה וּמְבוֹסָה וּמְבוֹכָה, "form at once a paronomasia and a climax." Each of these respectively ends with the sounds uma, usa, uja (Spanish sounding j, or German sounding ch, ucha). Barnes says, "When our enemies trample on everything sacred and dear to us ... (see Psalm 44:6; Luke 21:24)." Indeed, the temple would be desecrated completely, and much of the people trampled and removed to Babylon. ¶ Breaking down the walls, and of crying to the mountains. The Targum (7), "[They] search the houses, they encompass the towers which are on the tops of the mountains." Ibn Ezra offers two alternatives: (1) that people cry but there is no one to save; and (2) that the cry will be loud enough to reach the mountains. The LXX (6) has, "they wander from the least to the greatest on the mountains." Alexander thinks, "The meaning is not that the people are heard crying on the way to the mountain, but rather that their cries are reverberated from it. The whole verse is a vivid poetical description of the confusion of a siege." Jenour, instead, suggests that as "the enemy hourly expected to storm the city, there would be a general cry among the inhabitants; ‘Let us flee to the mountains.’” Kimhi has: “Here the prophet predicts the destruction of the wall of Jerusalem by the armies of Nebuchadnezzar” (in Rosenberg, who also gives 2 Kings 25:4 as a suggested reference). Nägelsbach says, “It seems to me to suit the context better, if we (with Ewald, Drechsler) under  understand not the neighboring mountain sides, but the mountain on which the Lord dwells, whence He, according to Joel 3:16 sq., roars and utters His judgment, and to which the prayers of the suppliants are directed (Psalm 2:6; 3:5; 99:9; 121:1; ISAIAH 2:3; 8:18; 10:12, 32; 11:9, etc.).” Wordsworth has an interesting thought here: “This phrase is taken up by our Blessed Lord in the Gospel, where He exhorts His disciples to flee betimes from Jerusalem (Matthew 24:16; Luke 21:21); but they who despised His warnings cry in vain to the mountains to cover them (Luke 23:30); and in the Apocalypse the phrase is extended to describe the awful circumstances of the Last Day (Revelation 6:16).”

⁷ σύντριμμα, according to the various Lexicons, seems to mean destruction, ruin, fracture (BDAG, DBL, Liddell-Scott, Newman).

6 And Elam bare the quiver with chariots of men [and] horsemen, and Kir uncovered ✓ the shield.

✓ made naked

And Elam bare the quiver with chariots of men [and] horsemen. The Targum (ⲧ) has “a couple of horsemen.” Ibn Ezra explains that even Elam and Kir would take advantage of the coming weakness that Jerusalem would suffer to attack her. Smith’s Bible Dictionary has, for Elam, “The Elam of Scripture appears to be the province lying south of Assyria and east of Persia.” Alexander writes, “Elam was a province of Persia, often put for the whole country.” Whitehouse has, “Elam, we know, was celebrated for its bowmen in the days of Jeremiah (49:35) ... In Assyrian chariots there were as a rule two occupants, the driver, and, on his right, the Bowman. We find, however, in nearly every instance that the quiver was not carried on the back of the archer, but the arrows (accompanied often by a battle-axe) were conveyed in a receptacle on the outer edge of the chariot, which stood conveniently on the right side of the archer (see article ‘Chariot’ in Encyclopedia Bibl.). Occasionally, however, we have a single-horse chariot carrying two archers with quiver on the back (British Museum, Nimrud gallery, No. 45) ... [and] ‘from the close of the eighth century onwards the archers became dissociated from the chariots’ (Encyclopedia Bibl., ibid., col. 729).” Regarding Elam and Kir, Wordsworth writes: “The southern and northern constituent forces of the Chaldean army against Jerusalem are represented by the southern Elam (Susiana) ... and by the northern Kir, the river Cyrus which rises to the north of Armenia, and flows into the Caspian. Cp. 2 Kings 16:9; Jeremiah 1:15; Amos 1:5; 9:7. Nebuchadnezzar planted colonies of captives in Armenia (see Euseb. Praep. Evang. 9:41. Euseb. Chron. Can. 1:10). Sargon had penetrated into Armenia and subdued it (Inscr. Assy. p. 26). We need not be surprised that Nebuchadnezzar should have allies from it. Indeed, it is distinctly said by Jeremiah 25:9–11, that Nebuchadnezzar would be brought by God with all the families of the north, against Jerusalem. Cp. Jeremiah 1:15. Elam is here represented as subject to Babylon: afterwards it was used by God as an instrument against it (see ISAIAH 21:2).” ¶ And Kir uncovered the shield. The Targum (ⲧ) has “And on the wall they hang the shields.” Ibn Ezra explains that Kir was quite far from Jerusalem but would be among those to attack her. The LXX (Ⲅ) says nothing about Kir, but rather has, “and there was a gathering for battle.” Gill explains, that Kir “was a city in Media, and signifies the Medes, who were in subjection to the Assyrians.” Alexander says, “[Kir] may here be put for Media, as Elam is for Persia.” ¶ Slotki (leaning on Rashi and Ibn Ezra) explains that “shields were kept in leather coverings when not in use.” Thus Cowles writes: “‘Uncovering the shield,’ is taking it out from its case or covering, to have it in readiness for use.”

7 And it shall come to pass, [that] thy choicest valleys ✓ shall be full of chariots, and the horsemen shall set themselves in array at ✓ the gate.

✓ the choice of thy valleys

✓ ✓ or, toward

And it shall come to pass, [that] thy choicest valleys shall be full of chariots. Ibn Ezra suggests that the attack whose description begins in this verse came from Nebuchadnezzar and once again, the valleys point to Jerusalem. Cheyne explains that Jerusalem was surrounded by such choice valleys as Kidron, Gihon, Rephaim, and Hinnom. The common Book of Mormon expression, , and it came to pass, here stands for a future event (see Delitzsch). ¶ And the horsemen shall set themselves in array at the gate. The Targum (ⲧ) ends with “and the horsemen shall be set against the gates.” The LXX (Ⲅ) has, “and horsemen shall block up thy gates.” Rashi explains that “They laid siege to the gates. There is a similar expression in Kings (2 Kings 20:12) in the war with Benhadad, ‘Lay on!’ And they laid siege to the city” (Rashi in Rosenberg).

vv. 8–14. Once again, these verses continue speaking about the Chaldean siege. In this latter siege, just as in the former Assyrian one, the people of Jerusalem attempted to make use of the waterworks and walls originally built and fortified by Hezekiah. While Hezekiah had worked hard to do what he could to protect Jerusalem from Sennacherib, yet Hezekiah leaned on the Lord for protection. Zedekiah—in contrast—feared men more than God and would not listen to Jeremiah, with predictable disastrous results. The Lord makes it clear that this time Jerusalem would not be saved by a miracle—as what happened when Assyria invaded—but instead would be utterly destroyed along with her people.

8 ¶ And he discovered the covering of Judah, and thou didst look in that day to the armour of the house of the forest.

And he discovered the covering of Judah. The LXX (Ⓢ) has, “And they shall uncover the gates of Judah.” Whitehouse would render the expression: “Then did he withdraw the covering of Judah.” The covering (מָסְכָּה) of Judah is an allusion to the LORD, and to the veil that separated the Holy of Holies in the Tabernacle. By her apostasy, Judah had permitted this protection to be removed, and she was left exposed to her enemies. Kimhi explains that they lost the Temple to the enemy, and thus were left without protection (in Rosenberg). Wordsworth writes: “The Chaldean army took away the covering of Judah; they exposed it to shame, as a woman is exposed to insult when her veil is taken from her.” Also, scripture often uses immodesty to depict apostasy and the subsequent embarrassment: “Lest I strip her naked, and set her as in the day that she was born” (Hosea 2:3a). The word discovered or uncovered, from נָלָה, is rendered in Ezekiel 16:37, “and will discover thy nakedness” (וְגִלִּיתִי עֲרֹתָהּ). Gesenius explains: “Judah shall be exposed to shame; an image taken from a virgin, whose veil has been taken away by outrageous and violent men.” The Syriac (Ⓢ) has, “And the defenses of Judah shall be laid bare.” The Vulgate (Ⓥ), Et revelabitur operimentum Judæ, “And revealed the covering of Judah.” Or, as the Douay, “And the covering of Judah shall be discovered.” Indeed, her pride and strength was brought down. ¶ And thou didst look in that day to the armour of the house of the forest. The Targum (Ⓣ) reads: “And he shall look at that time upon the arms of the house of the treasury of the sanctuary.” The Syriac (Ⓢ) renders it, “And you shall see on that day the armour of the house of the forest.” The house of the forest is a reference to one of Solomon’s construction projects: “the house of the forest of Lebanon” (1 Kings 7:2 ff.; 1 Kings 10:17 ff.). It was so named because it was constructed out of cedars (1 Kings 7:3). Gill suggests that the building may have been situated in the midst of a grove of trees. My grandmother’s farmstead in San Javier, Chile, was so surrounded, and people would call the complex, el bosque, “the forest.” In 1 Kings 10:17 we also see that it was used, among other things, to store weaponry. Delitzsch explains that the edifice “is called in the Arabic the ‘house of his arms.’”

9 Ye have seen also the breaches of the city of David, that they are many: and ye gathered together the waters of the lower pool.

Ye have seen also the breaches of the city of David, that they are many: Both Chilton and Stenning’s Targum (Ⓣ) translations speak of the breach as being great. The Syriac (Ⓢ) reads as the KJV, “that they are many.” The LXX (Ⓢ) has a different exposition, “And they shall uncover the secret places of the houses of the citadel of David: and they saw that they were many.” Regarding the city of David, Calvin explains that this was a more fortified section including the spot where the Temple was located: “Isaiah means that the Jews had nearly despaired as to the safety of the whole city, when they withdrew to the inmost and best fortified part of it.” Alexander suggests, “The breaches meant are not those made by the enemy in the siege here described, but those caused by previous neglect and decay.” A breach, once again, is a break in a wall of defense. ¶ And ye gathered together the waters of the lower pool. The Targum (Ⓣ)⁸ has, “And ye gathered my people to the waters of the lower pool.” The LXX (Ⓢ) has, “and that one had turned the water of the old pool into the city.” Lowth explains: “There were two pools in or near Jerusalem, supplied by springs: the upper pool, or the old pool, supplied by the spring called Gihon (2 Chronicles 32:3), towards the higher part of the city, near Sion or the city of David; and the lower pool, probably supplied by Siloam, towards the lower part. When Hezekiah was threatened with a siege by Sennacherib, he stopped up all the waters of the fountains without the city, and brought them into the city by a conduit, or subterraneous passage⁹ cut through the rock; those of the old pool, to the place where he made a double wall, so that the pool was between the two walls. This he did in order to distress the enemy, and to supply the city during the siege.” Rawlinson explains in detail, regarding the original construction: “[Hezekiah] found on the north of the city, where the Assyrian attack was certain to be delivered, in the vicinity of the Damascus gate, a pool or reservoir (ISAIAH 7:3), fed by a conduit from some natural source, which lay open and patent to view. The superfluous [i.e., running on the surface, visibly] water ran off from it by a ‘brook’ (2 Chronicles 32:4), which passed down the Tyropoeon valley, and joined the Kedron to the south-east of Ophel. His first step was to cover over and conceal the open reservoir, and also the ‘brook’ which ran from it, at least as far as the northern city wall, to prevent their use by the Assyrians. He further made a conduit underground (2 Chronicles 32:30) within the city, along the Tyropoeon depression, to a second reservoir, or ‘pool,’ also within the city, which could be freely used by the inhabitants (see ISAIAH 22:11; and compare Ecclesiasticus 48:17¹⁰. Further, it is probable that he carried a conduit from this second pool, under the temple area, to the ‘fount of the Virgin’ on the eastern side of Ophel, and thence further conveyed the water by a tunnel through Ophel to the ‘pool of Siloam.’ (This last may be the work here alluded to.) The inscription¹¹ recently discovered at this pool is probably of Hezekiah’s time (see ‘Quarterly Statement’ of Palestinian Expedition Fund for April, 1881, p. 70.).”

⁸ Stenning. Not “the people” as Pauli, but rather, “my people,” עַמִּי. See Stenning and Sperber for the Aramaic text of the Targum (Ⓣ). Chilton also, correctly translates Ⓣ as “my people.”

⁹ In our trip to the Holy Land, Linda & I had the opportunity to walk into one end of Hezekiah’s Tunnel and come out at the other end after about 20 minutes. We needed head lamps to do so. I used to think the tunnel was straight, but it makes numerous turns, making its construction all the more amazing. Especially when we understand that the excavators began at opposite ends and met in the middle, and did so without modern technology to guide them. Waters still runs in the tunnel and comes up to different heights along the trail.

10 And ye have numbered the houses of Jerusalem, and the houses have ye broken down to fortify the wall.

¹⁰ Ecclesiasticus, or commonly known as Sirach: “Ezekias fortified his city, and brought in water into the midst thereof: he digged the hard rock with iron, and made wells for waters” (Sirach 48:17, Authorized Version with Apocrypha).

¹¹ The inscription reads: “Here is the mouth of the conduit and this is the history of the digging: when the pickaxes were against each other and when there were only three cubits more to cut through, the men were heard cutting from one side to the other, for there was zedah in the rock, on the right and on the left and on the day of the piercing the workmen struck each to meet the other, pickax against pickax, and there flowed the waters from the spring [of Gihon] to the pool [of Siloam] for the space of 2,100 [rather, 1,200] cubits and 100 cubits was the highest over the heads of the workmen” (The Pittsburg Press, Sunday, June 25, 1911, p. 4). Regarding the cubits: “According to W. F. Albright, 1200 cubits, ‘The Siloam Inscription,’ in James B. Pritchard (editor), Ancient Near Eastern Texts Relating to the Old Testament (Princeton, 1950), p. 321. Also, according to King, Philip J. and Lawrence E. Stager, Life in Biblical Israel, p. 220. According to Nicholas Van Cleve], the length, 1,200 cubits translates to 1,750 feet. Not only did they meet each other, but they maintained a steady 7% slope throughout (An Ancient Architectural Feat & Biblical Verification), p. 1. For yet another interesting source and translation, see pp. 69, 141, and 282 ff. of the July 1881 Palestine Exploration Fund Quarterly.

And ye have numbered the houses of Jerusalem. The Syriac (S) has, “And you have supplied the houses of Jerusalem with water.” ¶ And the houses have ye broken down to fortify the wall. The LXX (G) has the same idea for this verse, “and that they had pulled down the houses of Jerusalem, to fortify the wall of the city. Cheyne has: “To withstand the shocks of the battering-rams. So 2 Chronicles 32:5, ‘and he built up all the wall that was broken, and raised thereupon towers,’ and Jeremiah 33:4, ‘the houses... which are thrown because of (i.e., to resist) the mounds and because of the engines of war.’” Barnes explains: “The houses in Jerusalem were built of stone, and therefore they would furnish appropriate materials for repairing the walls of the city.”

11 Ye made also a ditch between the two walls for the water of the old pool: but ye have not looked unto the maker thereof, neither had respect unto him that fashioned it long ago.

Ye made also a ditch between the two walls¹² for the water of the old pool: At the time of Hezekiah, water was stored under the Temple in the city of Jerusalem. Regarding this clause, Cheyne has, “Between the walls, i.e., between that of Ophel on the east, and that of the High Tower on the west, where the Tyropaeon valley is particularly narrow. The old pool, i.e. probably the ‘Pool of Siloam’ (called ‘The Pool’ par excellence in the Hebrew inscription in the rock-tunnel leading to Siloam.” Perhaps the expression old pool is in reference to the work carried out by Hezekiah to bring the water into the city. ¶ But ye have not looked unto the maker thereof, neither had respect unto him that fashioned it long ago. This is a stinging accusation. The people had done much to defend themselves, but had not leaned on the Lord. They forgot that it was the Holy One of Israel who commanded Hezekiah to take this precaution and are now putting their trust in the fountain of water rather than in the Lord. Rashi does well in contrasting the faith of Hezekiah—a contemporary of Isaiah—with that of future rulers of Judah (such as Jehoiakim and Zedekiah) who would live in the time of Jeremiah (in Rosenberg). How many times did Israel fail to put her trust in the Lord and how many times do we, likewise, neglect to do the same?¹³

¹² See verse ISAIAH 22:3.

¹³ A couple of months after my daughter Andrea was born, I recorded one such experience in my journal: “A few days later Andrea had a choking accident and turned purple. Linda moved her around and she recovered color. Meanwhile, I ran out to the corridor and screamed for a nurse or a doctor—My baby is not breathing! Andrea was kept in intensive care for monitoring for a few more days. There was nothing wrong with her. As I drove home that night of the choking, feeling

We must ever keep present to: “Fear not: for they that be with us are more than they that be with them” (2 Kings 6:16b).

12 And in that day did the Lord GOD of hosts call to weeping, and to mourning, and to baldness, and to girding with sackcloth:

And in that day did the Lord GOD of hosts call to weeping, and to mourning. The Targum (Ⓣ)¹⁴ has “the prophet of the LORD God.” Ibn Ezra has this referring to both the Lord, as well as to the Prophet. I like the LXX (Ⓛ) here, that indeed the Lord had called the people to repent. The people did not show the usual tokens of turning to God for help by mourning and the wearing of sackcloth. Although not explicitly mentioned, such tokens of repentance and of seeking heavenly favor also included fasting. For instance, “there was great mourning among the Jews, and fasting, and weeping, and wailing; and many lay in sackcloth and ashes” (Esther 4:3b); and “And I set my face unto the Lord God, to seek by prayer and supplications, with fasting, and sackcloth, and ashes: And I prayed unto the LORD my God, and made my confession, and said, O Lord, the great and dreadful God, keeping the covenant and mercy to them that love him, and to them that keep his commandments; We have sinned, and have committed iniquity, and have done wickedly, and have rebelled, even by departing from thy precepts and from thy judgments: Neither have we hearkened unto thy servants the prophets, which spake in thy name to our kings, our princes, and our fathers, and to all the people of the land.” (Daniel 9:3–6). Of course, the Lord desired true repentance, not outer show: “And rend your heart, and not your garments, and turn unto the LORD your God: for he is gracious and merciful, slow to anger, and of great kindness, and *repenteth*¹⁵ him of the evil” (Joel 2:13). ¶ And to baldness, and to girding with sackcloth. Each of these are the tokens of captivity and slavery (ISAIAH 3:24), but they are also the tokens of repentance, as we have seen. Cheyne points out, however, that baldness is prohibited in the Mosaic Law (Leviticus 21:5; and Deuteronomy 14:1). If we do not humble ourselves, we become enslaved to our passions.

good about all the monitors that would keep my precious daughter safe, I was chastised by the Spirit of the Holy Ghost: ‘Do not put your trust in the arm of flesh, but rather, in God. Your child will live.’”

¹⁴ Chilton.

¹⁵ In the KJV the word repent [נָחַם] is only used for the Lord, and it means tender, benevolent, and compassionate, for He is ever ready to forgive when we turn and follow Him.

13 And behold joy and gladness, slaying oxen, and killing sheep, eating flesh, and drinking wine: let us eat and drink; for to morrow we shall die.

And behold joy and gladness, slaying oxen, and killing sheep, eating flesh, and drinking wine: The LXX (Ⓛ) seems to give the clearest explanation. While the Lord had called for mourning, the people instead had decided to feast and get drunk: “But they engaged in joy and gladness slaying calves, and killing sheep, so as to eat flesh, and drink wine” (Ⓛ). Skinner’s comments: “Instead [of repenting] the people rush to down reflexion in riotous festivities. The immediate occasion of the revelry was not doubt a great sacrifice of thanksgiving to Jehovah for their unexpected deliverance, but this only rendered their irreligious spirit more detestable to Him.” This momentary joy is exactly what happened during the Babylonian siege, when the people of Jerusalem thought they had triumphed over the Babylonian forces thanks to the Egyptians. “Then Pharaoh’s army was come forth out of Egypt: and when the Chaldeans that besieged Jerusalem heard tidings of them, they departed from Jerusalem” (Jeremiah 37:5, also see ISAIAH 37:9–10, 17, 19; 39:1–7). ¶ Let us eat and drink; for to morrow we shall die. Ibn Ezra says: “The prophet foretells what people will say in the days of the siege.” Instead of repenting, the people feasted in drunken revelry with the excuse that life was short and surely there was no hereafter (see also, 1 Corinthians 15:32). Barnes has: “The same sentiments prevailed among the [ungodly]¹⁶ Jews in the time of the author of the Book of Wisdom (Wisdom 2:1–9): ‘Our life is short and tedious, and in the death of a man there is no remedy: neither was there any man known to have returned from the grave. For we are born at all adventure; and we shall be hereafter as though we had never been, for the breath in our nostrils is as smoke, and a little spark in the moving of our heart. Come on, therefore, let us enjoy the good things that are present; let us fill ourselves with costly wine and ointments, and let no flower of the spring pass by us; let us crown ourselves with rose buds before they be withered; let none of us go without his part of our voluptuousness; let us leave tokens of our joyfulness in every place.’”

14 And it was revealed in mine ears by the LORD of hosts, Surely this iniquity shall not be purged from you till ye die, saith the Lord GOD of hosts.

¹⁶ The quote begins with “For the ungodly said, reasoning with themselves, but not aright, our life is short &c.” The reference continues past verse 9. See King James Apocrypha.

*And it was revealed in mine ears*¹⁷ by the LORD of hosts. Actually, the Masoretic text (מ) might well be mistranslated here, in an attempt to remove what many would consider an offensive anthropomorphic mention of the ear of the Lord of Hosts, וְנִגְלָה בְּאָזְנֵי יְהוָה צְבָאוֹת. Originally, in the 1500s, this verse was translated in both the Bishops¹⁸ (the predecessor of the KJV) and Geneva¹⁹ Bibles as: “And it was revealed [came, declared] in the ears of the Lord of hosts.” So also the LXX (Θ) has, “And these things are revealed in the ears of the Lord of hosts.” In the Targum (ܬ), where the scribes went to untold lengths to remove any possibilities of anthropomorphic interpretation, the text was changed to: “The prophet said, with mine ears I was hearing when this was decreed from before the LORD of hosts, namely, that this your iniquity shall not be forgiven you till you die the second death, said the Lord, the God, the God of hosts.” Rabbi Ibn Ezra also explains that indeed it was the ears of the Lord: “In mine ears, the ears of the Lord.” Jenour also defends (see also his critical note) the translation wherein it is the Lord who is listening: “And it was heard in the ears of Jehovah God of Hosts.”

Furthermore, we have another instance in Isaiah where exactly the same expression is used by the Lord,

בְּאָזְנֵי יְהוָה צְבָאוֹת (in my ears the Lord of Hosts, ISAIAH 5:9). Henderson explains that אָזַן literally means to uncover the ear. The Peshitta (ܣ) and the Vulgate (V) follow the Authorized Version. I prefer the earlier rendition—those of the Bishops’ and Geneva

¹⁷ Randy Homrig was my friend who gave me a copy of the Book of Mormon while I attended the University of California. He had taught the gospel to someone else, who had not remained active. Randy himself had audibly heard an angel testify of the divinity of the work. So it was that Randy wanted to know if my testimony was based on hearing an audible voice. The Lord, however, imparts to each individual a testimony according to his or her need. The Spirit of the Holy Ghost had spoken into my bosom and covered my whole body from the crown of my head to my feet, and I did not need to hear an audible voice to know that The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints was the Lord’s restored and true Church upon the earth. As someone once said, on occasion the strength of the still, small voice is neither still, nor small. The Lord has spoken to his servants in a number of ways, audibly, in dreams, through the voice of another person who delivers a message, through angels, and even face to face—as He did on occasion with Moses, Joseph Smith, Lorenzo Snow, and Isaiah.

¹⁸ “And it came to the eares of the Lorde of hoastes, This iniquitie shall not be purged from you tyll ye dye, saith the Lorde God of hoastes” (Bishops’ Bible, 1568).

¹⁹ “And it was declared in ye eares of the Lorde of hostes. Surely this iniquitie shall not be purged from you, til ye die, saith the Lord God of hostes” (Geneva Bible, 1587).

Bibles. The verse seems to say that the Lord of Hosts is aware, that He is well acquainted with the iniquity of the people. Nothing is hidden from the Lord. ¶ Surely this iniquity shall not be purged from you till ye die, saith the Lord GOD of hosts. The Masoretic text (מ) rather reads, the Lord LORD of Hosts, that is, the Lord Jehovah of Hosts (אֲדֹנֵי יְהוָה צְבָאוֹת). The Targum (ܬ) reads LORD God of Hosts, that is, Jehovah Elohim of Hosts (יהוה אלהים צבאות). ¶ The expression אִם-יִכָּפֵר, is surely not purged. Alexander and Henderson see an oath formula in the expression אִם, surely or surely not. אִם can stand for the full oath formula (Gesenius²⁰, also see ISAIAH 5:9, if not) God do so to thee, and more also (1 Samuel 3:17):

כֹּה יַעֲשֶׂה-לְךָ אֱלֹהִים וְכֹה יוֹסִיף יִכָּפֵר. The word יִכָּפֵר comes from the root כָּפַר (kipper) or כִּפּוּר (kipur, as in Yom Kipurim, יוֹם כִּפּוּרִים). Whitehouse with the margin || prefers, “expiated by you.” Delitzsch, here explains that this covering over or expiation takes place “either by the justice of God, as in the present instance [i.e., ISAIAH 22:14], or by the mercy of God (ISAIAH 6:7), or by both justice and mercy combined (as in ISAIAH 27:9). In all three cases the expiation is demanded by the divine holiness, which requires a covering between itself and sin, by which sin becomes as though it were not. In this instance the expunging act consists in punishment. The sin of Jerusalem is expiated by the giving up of the sinners themselves to death.” This notion—of the need to cover for sins through mercy or justice—is exquisitely explained by the Savior Himself in D&C 19:4, 15–20. Thompson says, “Their catchword of a sensual materialism, ‘tomorrow we die,’ evokes the stern and final response, ‘For this sin ye shall surely die.’” Keith well says: “So deep-rooted is this defiance of the Divine judgments, that it is said, that nothing but the destruction of the nation would overcome it. This cannot, however, imply the extinction of the nation. Its perpetuity is guaranteed by the covenant of God: ‘As the new heavens and the new earth shall remain before me, so shall your seed and your name remain,’ ISAIAH 66:22.”

vv. 15–25. We are here transported back to the time of Hezekiah, probably at some time before the Assyrian siege, as Shebna and Eliakim seemed to be holding different positions at that time, than what they held when this prophecy was uttered. Shebna had not completely disgraced himself yet, but soon would do just that. Some exegetes suggest that Isaiah's prophecy helped Shebna repent.

²⁰ For more on such oath formulas, see Gesenius, אִם. Also see notes in ISAIAH 5:9.

15 ¶ Thus saith the Lord GOD of hosts, Go, get thee unto this treasurer, [even] unto Shebna, which [is] over the house, [and say],

Thus saith the Lord GOD of hosts, Go, get thee unto this treasurer, [even] unto Shebna. Once again, the Masoretic text (מ) rather has אֶדְנִי יְהוָה צְבָאוֹת while the Targum (ܬ) has יְהוָה אֱלֹהִים צְבָאוֹת. The LXX (Θ) has, "Thus saith the Lord of hosts, Go into the chamber, to Somnas the treasurer." NETS LXX (Θ) suggests it is the priestly chamber. The Vulgate (V) is interesting in that it suggests the tabernacle in the temple, "qui habitat in tabernaculo ad Sobnam praepositum temple."²¹ Many of the Rabbis would agree, as they think Shebna was the High Priest (see Rosenberg, note on v. 18). Most exegetes feel Shebna was a vizier or majordomo over the affairs of the King. It is quite likely that this Shebna is the same as the one mentioned in ISAIAH 37:2. Barnes explains that "Go, get thee," required Isaiah to deliver the prophecy in person, possibly at the risk of his life. Rawlinson and Henderson explain that the word this, הַזֶּה, was uttered with disdain toward Shebna. Jenour tells us that the name Shebna means "Depart now, recede from thy place." Delitzsch has, "We feel at once, as we read this introduction to the divine address, that insatiable ambition was one of the leading traits in Shebna's character." Kay feels that even the word treasurer may here be meant "contemptuously, the meaning would appear to be 'profit seeker.'" Regarding Shebna, the Talmud tradition (Seder Nezikin, Sanhedrin 26a) has Shebna firing a traitorous arrow toward Sennacherib's enemy camp during the siege—with a note enclosed—suggesting that he, Shebna, alongside his followers, was ready to surrender and sue for peace while King Hezekiah was not (Talmud, Soncino). It is possible that Isaiah has first spoken of the whole nation as being rejected and now specifically focuses on Shebna, her unfaithful High Priest. This indeed would make much sense, as the keys to open and close are those of the sealing power of the Priesthood. This would particularly explain the wrath that Shebna was exposed to in these verses. Also, it makes sense that Shebna, the false High Priest, would be replaced by the true High Priest, even our Lord and Savior, of whom Eliakim was simply a type and a shadow. The Keys of the Priesthood are indeed the power of God delegated to man. Indeed, these keys²² are given to the Prophet and the Apostles by the Savior. Keith writes: "but [the government] will be one of 'righteousness and faithfulness.' The government of the new kingdom, the kingdom of righteousness, 'will be upon his shoulders.' Eliakim might be the father of his country for a little, but he shall be called 'the Everlasting Father.'" All of these things will Christ do for the glory of His Father's house. ¶ Which [is] over the house, [and say]. The Syriac (ܣ) has, "Who is over the household, and say to him." The ellipsis "and say to him אֶלְיוֹ אָמַרְתָּ" is supplied, according to a couple of manuscripts compiled by Kennicott (see Henderson).

²¹ The Douay translation of the Vulgate is "... to him that dwelleth in the tabernacle, to Sobna who is over the temple."

16 What hast thou here? and whom hast thou here, that thou hast hewed thee out a sepulchre here, [as] he[✓] that heweth him out a sepulchre on high, [and] that graveth an habitation for himself in a rock?

✓ or, O he

What hast thou here? and whom hast thou here, that thou hast hewed thee out a sepulchre here. This is equivalent to "What do you think you are up to, here?" The Douay based on V has, "What dost thou here, or as if thou wert somebody here?" Exegetes variously accuse Shebna of conspiring with one or another of the major foreign powers of the time—but this is mere conjecture. Likewise, some assume Shebna is a foreigner (e.g., Ewald, Young and most exegetes) but this is not proven (Nägelsbach, Gray)²³. Cheyne tells us that "the brother of the famous Rabbi Hillel was also called Shebna." Barnes has: "It is probable that Isaiah met him when he was at the sepulchre which he had made, and addressed this language to him there: ‘What hast thou here? What right to expect that thou wilt be buried here, or why do you erect this splendid sepulchre, as if you were a holy man, and God would allow you to lie here?’” Most exegetes suggest that Sheba had no relation buried in this place, and thus the idea was presumptuous. ¶ [As] he that heweth him out a sepulchre on high, [and] that graveth an habitation for himself in a rock? Regarding dwelling place or habitation (מִשְׁכָּן), Alexander has, “The מִשְׁכָּן is supposed by some to have allusion to the oriental practice of making tombs in shape (frequently in size) like houses, by others more poetically to the idea of the grave, as a long home,²⁴ (בֵּית עוֹלָם), the very name applied to it by Solomon (Ecclesiastes 12:5).” Henderson has, “The Phoenicians also called the sepulchre, חדר בית עולם the chamber of the eternal house.” Barnes suggests that many men wished to make their sepulcher grandiose in order to assure their immortality, such as the ones found on the side of the rocks at Petra.

²² Elder Whiting, a visiting authority, explained that in his present assignment as a Seventy, while he does not hold keys, he may 'carry' these keys temporarily as he fulfills an assignment from the Twelve. As soon as these assignments are fulfilled these keys return to the Twelve. Stake Conference, Modesto California Stake, January 30–31, 2010. An example of this type of delegation may be the calling and setting apart of a new Stake President, for instance.

²³ George Buchanan Gray (A critical and exegetical commentary on the book of Isaiah) explains, contrary to other exegetes, "The ending 𐤑—(so also ISAIAH 36:3, 11, but 𐤑—, 2 Kings 18:18, 26) does not prove that Shebna was a Syrian (or North Arabian: Cheyne EBi.). Hebrew hypocoristica [i.e., diminutive of a name as a term of endearment—Webster] also end in 𐤑." Gray shows how Uzzah's name in 2 Samuel 6:6, is given as 𐤏𐤕, and yet in 2 Samuel 6:8 it is spelled 𐤏𐤕𐤔. For additional examples, consult Gray, p. 382. Gray goes on to assume Shebna is a parvenu [i.e., a nouveau riche] just because his parents are not mentioned. This assumption seems unwarranted. Nägelsbach for his part, among several arguments, suggests that had Shebna been a foreigner and that Isaiah would surely had played on this theme as part of his comments against this prideful man.

17 Behold, the LORD will carry thee away with a mighty captivity, ✓ and will surely cover thee. ✓

- ✓ or, the captivity of a man
- ✓ ✓ or, who covered thee with an excellent covering, and clothed thee gorgeously (v. 18) shall surely &c.

Behold, the LORD will carry thee away with a mighty captivity. The Targum (ܬ) has, “The Lord will cast thee out with a mighty casting out (or, removing of a man).” The LXX (Θ) has, “Behold now, the Lord of hosts casts forth and will utterly destroy such a man.” The Syriac (ܣ) has, “Behold, o man, the Lord will surely cast you away.” Kay explains, “The verb [מִטְּלֵהָ] is used of the ejection of Israel in Jeremiah 16:13²⁶ (cp. Jeremiah 22:26, 28).” The deportation to Babylon was threatened repeatedly by the prophets of God. ¶ And will surely cover thee. The Targum (ܬ) has, “And confusion²⁷ shall cover thee.” The Syriac (ܣ) has, “And will surely forsake you.” As in the margin||, the LXX (Θ) has, “and will take away thy robe and thy glorious crown.” The Syriac (ܣ) has, “and will surely forsake you.”

²⁴ Literally, eternal abode or everlasting home, בֵּית עוֹלָמוֹ.

²⁵ Root טוּל, hurl, cast (BDB).

²⁶ “Therefore will I cast you out [וְהִטְלֵהָ] of this land into a land that ye know not...” (emphasis added).

²⁷ Chilton and Stenning translate as shame.

18 He will surely violently turn and toss thee [like] a ball into a large country: ✓ there shalt thou die, and there the chariots of thy glory [shall be] the shame of thy lord's house.

- ✓ large of spaces

He will surely violently turn and toss thee [like] a ball into a large country: The Targum (ܬ) paraphrase is altogether different here: “He shall take away from thee thy tiara,²⁸ and the enemies shall enclose thee, like a surrounding wall, and they shall lead thee into captivity into a spacious country (or, broad of lands).” The Syriac (ܣ) renders it, “And he shall afflict you like the affliction of a company of soldiers besieged in a fortress from which there is no escape.” The LXX (Θ) has, “and will cast thee into a great and unmeasured land.” The Syriac (ܣ) has, “And he shall afflict you like the affliction of a company of soldiers besieged in a fortress from which there is no escape.” Henderson says: “The original is here peculiarly impassioned, and possesses a graphic power, to which no translation can pretend. Not only are there two instances of the repetition of the same word, to which the Hebrew writers are extremely partial, but immediately following these, we have the three different forms צָנַף, יִצְנֹף, יִצְנֹף.” LITV renders it: “Whirling, He will whirl you like a ball.” The first two words in the expression come from the root צָנַף which means to wind, throw or kick.²⁹ The third expression יִצְנֹף, from the same root צָנַף, means to bundle or crush.³⁰ The next word, ball, כִּדְוֶה, completes the expression. So in this illustration we have the force of Shebna crushed into a ball and tossed with might. Lowth translates this verse as: “He will whirl thee round and round, and cast thee away, like a ball [from a sling] &c.” Cheyne suggests that this broad country might well be “the plains of Mesopotamia,” and other locations such as Syria and Assyria have been suggested by other exegetes. Gray does well in here pointing us to Jeremiah 22:26: “And I will cast thee out, and thy mother that bare thee, into another country, where ye were not born; and there shall ye die.” The Prophet Jeremiah has used a similar expression than the one we find here in Isaiah against one of the ²⁸ In Zechariah 3:5, the headdress of the high priest, but also mentioned as part of the dress of priests (also see Exodus 28:4).

²⁹ See Gesenius, BDB, HAL.

³⁰ See DBL, HAL.

grandsons³¹ of King Josiah. The Lord is always willing to forgive the truly repentant who loves Him and comes to realize that joy comes through doing good (Alma 41). ¶ There shalt thou die, and there the chariots of thy glory [shall be] the shame of thy lord's house. The Targum (T), “there thou shalt die, and thither the chariots of thy glory shall return in disgrace, because thou hast not preserved the honour (or, glory) of thy master's house.” The LXX (G) has, “and he will bring thy fair chariot to shame, and the house of thy prince to be trodden down.” The Talmud tradition (Seder Nezikin, Sanhedrin 26a–26b) has: “He will violently roll and toss thee like a ball into a large country. It has been taught: He [Shebna] sought the shame of his master's house: therefore his own glory was turned to shame. [For] when he went out [on his way to surrender to Sennacherib], Gabriel came and shut the city gate in the face of his servants [who were following him].’ On being asked, ‘Where are your followers’ he answered, ‘They have deserted me.’ ‘Then you were merely ridiculing us’ they (the Assyrians) exclaimed. So they bored holes through his heels, tied him to the tails of their horses, and dragged him over thorns and thistles” (Talmud, Soncino). According to Rosenberg: “The Midrash explains that, according to the Sages who hold that Shebna was the High Priest, we are to explain these words as: the shame of the House of your Lord, meaning the Temple, the house of God, which he disgraced by using the sacrificial flesh for his own benefit.” Young says, regarding the chariots, “It is also possible, however, to translate, thither will be thy chariots. All that in which Shebna gloried would go with him into banishment.”

19 And I will drive thee from thy station, and from thy state shall he pull thee down.

The LXX (G) renders it, “And thou shalt be removed from thy stewardship, and from thy place.” The Syriac (S) has, “And I will take away your glory, and will cast you down from your position.” Cheyne has, “We have only evidence of a partial fulfillment of Isaiah's authoritative word. Eliakim was house-steward, and Shebna merely secretary, when the Rab-shakeh came to Jerusalem (ISAIAH 36:3).” Rashi (in Rosenberg) continues with the rabbinic view, suggesting that ³¹ Goes by various names including Jehoiachin, but here in Jeremiah is called יְהוֹיָכִן. His very name implied that Jehovah would establish him, but the principle of agency always exists. At the beginning of Jeremiah 22, the Lord explains what it would take to become truly repentant: “Thus saith the LORD; Execute ye judgment and righteousness, and deliver the spoiled out of the hand of the oppressor: and do no wrong, do no violence to the stranger, the fatherless, nor the widow, neither shed innocent blood in this place” (v. 3).

Shebna would be pulled down from his station or where he would stand when carrying out the Temple services. Birks, with some others, believes that Shebna repents: “The only mention of Shebna in the history is fourteen years later, when he was the royal scribe, and was sent in sackcloth by Hezekiah, along with Eliakim, to ask the prayers of Isaiah himself. Their united message had then a signal and gracious answer. It is very natural to conclude that the sentence here pronounced against him had been already fulfilled, and that one clause was repealed through his repentance; rather than that all was unfulfilled, and impending over him, when he took part in that message of earnest faith and piety.” While this repentance is possible and encouraging, and indeed other examples of similar repentance exist in the Scriptures, it is also possible that Shebna fell after the scenes described at the time of the Assyrian siege. Birks makes this astute observation: “The fall of Shebna is a picture of the judgment on those Jewish rulers and builders, who rejected the true Cornerstone, and received a sentence of degradation and lasting exile ... [yet] after long and sore affliction, Judah, so long outcast, shall be restored to the favour of God.”

20 And it shall come to pass in that day, that I will call my servant Eliakim the son of Hilkiah:

The Syriac (S) adds “says the Lord,” after in that day, to make sure it is understood that it is the Lord that is still speaking. The epithet my servant is a great honor bestowed on Eliakim. Kay also speaks of the compelling Messianic tones: “1 Samuel 2:35 is the key to the interpretation of ... ISAIAH 22:15–25: — ‘And I will raise Me up a faithful priest ... and I will build him a sure house.’ For (1) Eliakim means ‘God will raise up’; (2) the garments mentioned in ISAIAH 22:21 are those of the high-priest; and (3) the promise to Eliakim is that he shall be fixed ‘in a sure place.’” Kay continues: “This is the first appearance of ‘the Servant of the Lord,’ who occupies so prominent a place in Part II.” Keith well says, “While, therefore, on this occasion, Isaiah may be regarded as predicting the succession of a good to an unfaithful ruler, he does so in language which is also calculated to lead their thoughts to the Mightier One who was to come. In this view of it, the passage is the parallel of many others. Thus, in ISAIAH 9:5, referring to the final destruction of Israel's enemies, there is predicted first the removal of the Shebna of Israel, ‘Thou hast broken the yoke of his burden, and the staff of his shoulder, the rod of his oppressor;’ and then the reign of her Eliakim, ‘Unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given.’” Cheyne also admits of the Messianic tone, “Isaiah evidently predicts a complete change of system, which would consist in the total abstinence from a policy of expediency and worldly alliances. Hence the strong language, almost Messianic in its tone, with which Isaiah hails in spirit the elevation of his disciple Eliakim.”

21 And I will clothe him with thy robe, and strengthen him with thy girdle, and I will commit thy government into his hand: and he shall be a father to the inhabitants of Jerusalem, and to the house of Judah.

And I will clothe him with thy robe, and strengthen him with thy girdle, and I will commit thy government into his hand: The LXX (Θ) has, “and I will put on him thy robe, and I will grant him thy crown with power, and I will give thy stewardship into his hands.” The Syriac (Ⲥ) has, “And I will clothe him with your robe and will gird him with your girdle, &c.” The Douay, based on the Vulgate (V) has “And I will clothe him with thy robe, and will strengthen him with thy girdle, and will give thy power into his hand.” Skinner suggests: “The palace officials seem to have worn distinctive liveries (1 Kings 10:5); the uniform of the vizier was apparently a tunic and a girdle of special pattern.” Several exegetes have pointed to the similarity of these items of clothing to those of the officiating High Priest (e.g., Kay). I found the following, from Whitehouse, of particular interest: “The word in Hebrew [for robe, כְּתֹנֶת] is properly used of a linen undergarment ... and also used of priestly attire.” Indeed, the former כְּתֹנֶת was an “an inner garment next the skin” worn by both men and women (Gesenius, also see BDB and HALOT). ¶ And he shall be a father to the inhabitants of Jerusalem, and to the house of Judah. The LXX (Θ) has ὡς πατήρ, “as a father,” as does the Vulgate (V), quasi pater. Kay has, “After its long course of discipline Judah will confess; ‘Thou, O Lord, art our Father (ISAIAH 63:16; 64:8).” Young writes, “Implied in the word [father] is all that tenderness and love that a father shows to his own children. ‘I was a father to the poor’ (Job 29:16a).”

22 And the key of the house of David will I lay upon his shoulder; so he shall open, and none shall shut; and he shall shut, and none shall open.

And the key of the house of David will I lay upon his shoulder. The Targum (ⲡ) has, “And I will place the key of the house of the sanctuary, and the government of the house of David, in his hand.” The LXX (Θ) similarly has, “and I will give him the key of the house of David upon his shoulder.” The Syriac (Ⲥ) also retains the word keys. Eliakim is indeed given as a type of Christ. In Revelation 3:7b Christ applies these words to Himself: “These things saith he that is holy, he that is true, he that hath the key of David, he that openeth, and no man shutteth; and shutteth, and no man openeth.” Nägelsbach reminds us of ISAIAH 9:6, “and the government shall be upon his shoulder.” Lowth explains that there was a time when keys were actually carried on the shoulder: “To comprehend how the key could be borne on the shoulder, it will be necessary to say somewhat of the form of it: but without entering into a long disquisition, and a great deal of obscure learning, concerning the locks and keys of the ancients, it will be sufficient to observe, that one sort of keys, and that probably the most ancient, was of considerable magnitude, and as to the shape very much bent and crooked.” Whether literally, or figuratively, the power given to Eliakim was extensive. Kimhi (in Rosenberg) thinks it possible that Eliakim was a Priest (possibly the same individual called Azariah in 2 Chronicles 31:13) and that he carried much weight of responsibility in Hezekiah’s court. Nägelsbach also argues that Eliakim “was in in all probability of the priestly race. For Hilkiah, as his father was called, was a common name of priests. At all events, all persons called Hilkiah mentioned in the O. T. are, with a single doubtful exception (Jeremiah 29:3) of priestly, or at least of Levitical origin, Jeremiah 1:1; 2 Kings 22:4 sqq.; 1 Chronicles 5:39; 6:30; 26:11; Ezra 7:1; Nehemiah 8:4; 11:11; 12:7. It seems to follow from ISAIAH 22:21, that the steward of the house had an official dress, with the putting on of which his installation was connected. The כְּתֹנֶת, tunic was one of the principal parts of the dress of the priests. (Exodus 28:40; 29:5, 8, etc.) The girdle (אַבְנֵט) also belonged to the dress of the priests (Exodus 28:29; Leviticus 8³²).” Kay explains, “The ‘house of David’ after the flesh was about to fall. But in Eliakim (‘God will raise up’) it should be built again,—and in such a way as at last to fulfill the promise, that it should be established for ever (2 Samuel 7:25–26).” So much of the high priest’s dress was similar to that of the priest, that it would not be totally surprising if Eliakim had been made the new high priest. Peterson and Tate state, “Given the importance of the keys of the priesthood to the functioning of the kingdom of God, it is a matter of some interest how sparingly they are referred to in ancient scripture. There are no references to ‘keys’ in the Book of Mormon and only a single verse in the Old Testament. Isaiah spoke of the ‘key of the house of David’ being placed upon the shoulder of the Messiah and of his having the power to open that which no one else could open and to shut that which no one else could shut (ISAIAH 22:22). In the New ³² For example Leviticus 8:7, 13.

Testament, we have record of Christ giving that same authority to Peter and the Twelve (Matthew 16:19; John 20:22–23).³³ ¶ So he shall open, and none shall shut; and he shall shut, and none shall open. Interestingly, the word key מפתח, in Hebrew has the same root as the word open, פתח. Fausset reflects: “It rests with Christ to open or shut the heavenly palace, deciding who is, and who is not, to be admitted: as He also opens, or shuts, the prison, having the keys of hell (the grave) and death (Revelations 1:18).”

23 And I will fasten him [as] a nail in a sure place; and he shall be for a glorious throne to his father's house.

And I will fasten him [as] a nail in a sure place. The Syriac (ܣ) follows the Masoretic text (מ) in this verse. The Targum (ܬ) has, “And I will appoint him a faithful chief-governor, an officer in a firm place.” The word nail is used twice as a Messianic figure: In Ezra 9:8 we read: “to leave us a remnant to escape, and to give us a nail in his holy place.” And Zechariah 10:4, “Out of him came forth the corner, out of him the nail.” The Targum (ܬ) is explicit about the Messianic meaning: “משיחיה,” or “their anointed one.” Many exegetes speak about houses in the east built with pre-formed protrusions—or nails—as the hardness or softness of the building materials would not permit the adding of nails after its completion. These nails were thus made sure. Lowth has, “We see, therefore, that these nails were of necessary and common use, and of no small importance, in all their apartments; conspicuous, and much exposed to observation: and if they seem to us mean³⁴ and insignificant, it is because we are not acquainted with the thing itself, and have no name to express it by, but what conveys to us a low and contemptible idea. ‘Grace hath been shewed from the Lord our God, (saith Ezra 9:8), to leave us a remnant to escape, and to give us a nail in his holy place :’ that is, as the margin || of our Bible explains it, ‘a constant and sure abode.’” While all of these certainly make for additional and valid allusions to their Messianic nature, Elder Bruce R. McConkie³⁵ explains: “Old Testament prophecies about the crucifixion, as that volume of Holy Writ now stands, do not use the word crucify, but notwithstanding this, in some respects they are even more pointed and express than their Book of Mormon counterparts ... Ezra even speaks of ‘a nail in his holy place’ (Ezra 9:8), and Isaiah of ‘the nail that is fastened in the sure place,’ having reference to the nails driven in the Crucified One ... As to these prophecies, whoso readeth let him understand.” ¶ And he shall be for a glorious throne to his father's house. Regarding the word throne, Fausset has, “in the strict sense, as applied to Messiah, the antitype.” Gill well says, “Christ is the brightness of his Father’s glory; and, to them that believe, he is an honour; he is on a glorious throne himself, and he will bring all his Father’s family to sit with him on the same throne (see 1 Samuel 2:8).” Rawlinson, making this a type of the Messiah has, “So shall all members of the family of God, made sons of God by adoption in Christ, participate in the final glory of Christ in his eternal kingdom.” Simeon has, “Was Eliakim ‘a glorious throne to his father’s house?’ Jesus also, by his righteous administration, advances the glory of his heavenly Father.”

24 And they shall hang upon him all the glory of his father's house, the offspring and the issue, all vessels of small quantity, √ from the vessels of cups, even to all the vessels of flagons.

✓ or, instruments of viols

And they shall hang upon him all the glory of his father's house. The Targum (ܬ) has “And all the nobles of his father’s house shall rest themselves upon him.” The LXX (Ϟ) renders it, “And every one that is glorious in the house of his father shall trust in him.” Kay explains: “The glorious promises made to David ... shall be suspended upon him. Men, indeed, have turned the glory of the Davidic covenant into shame (cp. Psalm 4:2); and the house of David has fallen. But He whom ‘God will raise up’ shall ‘build the temple of the Lord, and He shall bear the glory (Zechariah 6:13); having first born ‘the shame’ (Hebrews 12:2) ... for He would ‘bear the iniquities of all’ (ISAIAH 53:6, 11).” David, here, is in reference to the Savior. ¶ The offspring and the issue. The Targum (ܬ) has, “children, and children’s children.” The LXX (Ϟ) has, “from the least to the greatest.” The Syriac (ܣ) has, “Both the honorable men and the glorious men.” Henderson explains: “Both מִצְאָצָאִים and זִפְעוֹת are botanical terms,—the former descriptive of what comes out of the earth generally, and applied figuratively to children, Job 5:25; 21:8; ISAIAH 48:19; 61:9; the latter, of the worthless shoots of trees.” ¶ All vessels of small quantity, from the vessels of cups, even to all the vessels of flagons. The Targum (ܬ) has, “From young men to little ones, from the priests clothed with the ephod to the Levites that are holding lyres³⁶.” Rashi (in Rosenberg) explains: “Accordingly, it is an expression of the ministration vessels with which the priests perform the service in the Temple.” The LXX (Ⲭ) adds, “And they shall depend upon him in that day.” The Syriac (Ⲫ) has, “And all small vessels, from instrument of music to the harp.” Calvin well says, regarding כָּל כֵּלֵי הַקֶּטָן, all vessels of small quantity, “When he speaks of musical vessels, he follows out what he had said in a single word; for it serves to explain the word קֶטָן, little; as if he had said that that there would be nothing so small, or minute, or insignificant, that he would not take charge of it.” Simeon beautifully has, “Jesus is indeed ‘a nail fastened in a sure place;’ and able to bear the weight of the whole universe. He is exalted by the hand of God himself on purpose that He may ‘be a Prince and a Saviour’ unto us. And, if we rely on him, he is ‘able to save us to the uttermost.’ Only let our trust in him be entire (exactly like that of a vessel on a nail), and we may rest assured, that all, who so hang on him, shall be ‘the glory of his Father’s house.’ As there is no other support for sinful man, so neither is there any fear of disappointment to those who trust in him. Let none then imagine themselves so great as not to need his support; or deem themselves so insignificant, that they shall not obtain it; or think themselves in such perilous circumstances, that He cannot uphold them. ‘Every vessel, from the largest flagon to the smallest cup,’ must owe its preservation to him alone; and by him shall all be saved, if they do but ‘cleave to him with full purpose of heart.’”

³³ Peterson, H. Donl, and Charles D. Tate, Jr., eds. The Pearl of Great Price: Revelations from God. Provo, Utah: Religious Studies Center, 1989. pp. 77–78.

³⁴ Ordinary, of little importance, small.

³⁵ Bruce R. McConkie, The Promised Messiah: The First Coming of Christ, p.529

25 In that day, saith the LORD of hosts, shall the nail that is fastened in the sure place be removed, and be cut down, and fall; and the burden that [was] upon it shall be cut off: for the LORD hath spoken [it].

In that day, saith the LORD of hosts, shall the nail that is fastened in the sure place be removed, and be cut down, and fall. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “At that time, saith the Lord of hosts, there shall be removed the faithful chief governor, who ministered in a firm place, and he shall be cut off, and he shall fall.” The Syriac (Ⲫ) follows the Masoretic text (ⲙ) in this verse. The LXX (Ⲭ) has, “Thus saith the Lord of hosts, The man that is fastened in the sure place shall be removed and be taken away, and shall fall.” The Syriac (Ⲫ) replaces the words cut down with “overthrown.” ¶ Eliakim is put for a type of Christ, as well as a righteous man, contrasted to Shebna. So the idea of Eliakim being cut down is troublesome until we understand in what sense this happened. A number of suggestions have been made respecting this difficult verse. ¶ Ibn Ezra, and many others here, suggests that Isaiah has returned to speak about Shebna, “who thought himself a nail fixed in a strong place.” Calvin, who agrees with Ibn Ezra, adds, “Hence it ought to be inferred how foolishly men boast, and rely on their greatness, when they have been exalted to a high rank of honour; for in a very short time they may be cast down and deprived of all honour.” ¶ Skinner and Delitzsch argue that this verse still refers to Eliakim and accuse him of nepotism (ISAIAH 22:24). Skinner forcefully contends that nowhere is Shebna labeled a “nail in a sure place.” Delitzsch has, “[Eliakim’s] family makes a wrong use of him; and he is more yielding than he ought to be, and makes a wrong use of his office to favour them! He therefore falls, and brings down with him all that hung upon the peg, i.e., all his relations, who have brought him to ruin through the rapacity with which they have grasped at prosperity.” With the exception of the Prophets of God, I see few cases of types of Christ with happy endings. ¶ The third approach, maintained by Rawlinson and Kay, is strictly Messianic and the most satisfactory and beautiful. Rawlinson explains, “Is it not possible that the prophet, seeing in Eliakim a type of the Messiah, and becoming more and more Messianic in his utterances, has ended by forgetting the type altogether, and being absorbed in the thought of the antitype? He, the nail so surely fixed in his eternal place, would nevertheless be ‘removed’ for a time, and then ‘be cut down and fall’ (compare ISAIAH 52:14; 53:8). At the same time would be ‘cut off’ the burden which Messiah bore (ISAIAH 53:12, ‘He bare the sin of many’).” Regarding the expression in that day, Rawlinson continues: “Is not the day that of Christ’s earthly mission, when it seemed as if his people were about to acknowledge him (Matthew 21:1–11; Mark 11:1–10; Luke 19:29–40), and his throne to be established, but suddenly Messiah was ‘cut off’ (Daniel 9:26)—stricken for the transgression of his people (ISAIAH 53:8)?” Kay writes, “ISAIAH 22:25 contains, in germ, what was revealed to Daniel;—that the ‘holy of holies should be anointed,’ and ‘Messiah the prince’ come; but that He should be ‘cut off,’ and ‘the city and the sanctuary be destroyed’ (Daniel 9:24, 26) ... When Christ expired, the Temple veil was rent. Then the whole dispensation came virtually to an end. Then ‘the burden that was’ upon Him ‘was cut off,’—all that heavy burden of ignominy, which He endured, when they crucified the Lord of glory (1 Corinthians 2:8); and the name, Eliakim, had its fulfillment in His resurrection and glorification. Then were ‘the sure mercies of David’ established (ISAIAH 55:3; Acts 13:34).” Kay explains that these things were spoken of the great High Priest, even Jesus Christ (Revelation 1:17–18). And further states: “The word for ‘be removed³⁷ is the same that is used in ISAIAH 54:10; Jeremiah 31:36; where the new, immoveable, covenant is spoken of. The ‘cutting off’ of Messiah was in order to bring in ‘everlasting righteousness.’ The departure of the risen Saviour was in order to establish ‘a kingdom that cannot be moved.’” ¶ And the burden that [was] upon it shall be cut off: for the LORD hath spoken [it]. The Targum (T), “And there shall be accomplished the burden of prophecy, which was concerning him; because the Word³⁸ of the Lord hath so decreed it.”

³⁶ Stenning and Chilton have harpes.

Several exegetes explain that the burden could well represent the sins of the world, when Christ triumphed through the expiatory sacrifice. Rawlinson continues with the Messianic line of thought: “For the Lord hath spoken it. The double attestation, at the beginning and at the end of the verse, is a mark of the vast importance of the announcement contained in it, which is, in fact, the germ of the great doctrine of the atonement” (emphasis added).

19 February 2010

³⁷ תמוש

³⁸ Chilton and Stenning have Memra.

Isaiah 23

Nebuchadrezzar would bring down the prideful nation of Tyre to the dust. Most commentators feel that this chapter mainly deals with the Babylonian invasion. Ezekiel makes this clear, also “For thus saith the Lord GOD; Behold, I will bring upon Tyre Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon, a king of kings, from the north, with horses, and with chariots, and with horsemen, and companies, and much people” (Ezekiel 26:7 (also see 1–21)). In the last days Tyre would turn to the Lord and the clothing she manufactures shall be used to attire those who serve the Lord in the temple. The ancient manuscripts make this a particularly interesting chapter. Calvin says, “Isaiah threatens [Tyre’s] destruction, because it has been hostile to the people of God, as we may infer from what is said by Ezekiel.” Some of the 19th Century exegetes speak of Tyre’s total destruction. Alexander says, “It entirely decayed, and has now disappeared, its site being marked by the insulated rock, by the causeway between it and the mainland still existing as a bar of sand, and by columns and other architectural remains mostly lying under water.” צור, Tzur or Tyre, means rock in Hebrew. Yet it would become a bare rock: “With the hoofs of his [Nebuchadrezzar, king of Babylon] horses shall he tread down all thy streets: he shall slay thy people by the sword, and thy strong garrisons shall go down to the ground. And they shall make a spoil of thy riches, and make a prey of thy merchandise: and they shall break down thy walls, and destroy thy pleasant houses: and they shall lay thy stones and thy timber and thy dust in the midst of the water. And I will cause the noise of thy songs to cease; and the sound of thy harps shall be no more heard. And I will make thee like the top of a rock” (Ezekiel 26:11–14a). And further, “and thou shalt be no more: though thou be sought for, yet shalt thou never be found again, saith the Lord God” (Ezekiel 26:21b). Tyre is once again a vibrant, populated place. Much of Tyre turned to Christianity, for a while, after the first advent of the Savior, and certainly it will turn to the Lord once again, in the end of days, as is clear from the last verses of this prophecy. Every knee shall bow and every tongue confess that Jesus is the very Christ. So, there are a number of possibilities that may be offered here regarding Tyre’s final outcome. One is that even though Tyre would be inhabited again, the peoples to do so would not be related to those who had been wiped out. An intriguing possibility is offered by Jennings, and that is that Tyre stands as a type for Mammon (מַמְּוֹן). This is certainly the most elegant solution as to how Tyre would once again be called a harlot and commit fornication with the world (ISAIAH 23:16–17) after a period of seventy years of desolation, and yet in ISAIAH 23:18 have the riches of the world consecrated to the work of the Lord. Also compare ISAIAH 21 with Ezekiel 26–28.

vv. 1–14. Prideful Tyre would be destroyed, supposedly by the nations who were here enemies. But this only could take place because the Lord permitted it. Tyre would be humbled. Instead of harvesting the sea and being involved in commerce, she might have to harvest the land. Babylon would be an instrument in the hands of God to humble Tyre and the nations.

1 ¶ THE burden of Tyre. Howl, ye ships of Tarshish; for it is laid waste, so that there is no house, no entering in: from the land of Chittim it is revealed to them.

THE burden of Tyre. צור (Tyre, also צור, meaning rock) was a Phoenician island in the Mediterranean, quite close to land, and almost equidistant between Sidon on the north, and Acco on the south. It was about 50 kilometers north of Mt. Carmel. Much of the timber as well as masons for the construction of Solomon’s Temple came from Tyre and the surrounding areas in Lebanon. Tyre is an ancient place, first mentioned in Joshua 19:29, where it was called a defended or fortified city. Alexander explains that part of Tyre was in the mainland¹ itself. Gill has: “This was a famous city in Phoenicia, which exceeded in renown and grandeur all the cities of Syria and Phoenicia, and was much known for its trade and navigation, for which it was well situated by the sea.” Hengstenberg feels that the main portion of Tyre was built on a peninsula, which was attached to the mainland by a narrow neck of land (in Alexander). Of the broader region, Fleming² says, “It was about two hundred miles long and from two to fifteen miles wide. Headlands projecting to the sea cut this coastland into a number of small plains that had their names from their chief cities, as the Plain of Tyre, the Plain of Sidon, the Plain of Acco, etc. Thus the topography of the land was unfavorable to a strongly centralized government.” Fleming explains that

¹ The mainland portion also referred to as Old Tyre (see Fleming, p. 4)

² Fleming, Wallace B. (1966), The History of Tyre (New York, NY: AMS Press).

Tyre was a commercial power as early as 1200 BC—preferring peace over war—or political force.³ They were renowned architects, masons (2 Chronicles 2:14), and seamen—they ventured past the Mediterranean ocean into the Atlantic and onto Africa as early as 1100 BC.⁴ Why is the Lord upset at Tyre? A number of reasons include Tyre's: (1) enmity towards God's chosen people (Ezekiel 26:2); (2) pride in her wisdom (Zechariah 9:2) such that she considered herself as God (Ezekiel 28:2–5); (3) conceit in her riches, beauty and strength⁵ (Ezekiel 27:3–11; 28:5, 12); (4) removal of silver and gold from Jerusalem (Joel 3:5, some have suggested from the Temple there); (5) idolatry and refusal to worship the Living God (Ezekiel 28:18); (6) aiding in the scattering of Israel (Joel 3:6); and (7) traitorous act against Judah by taking Edom's side (Amos 1:9). ¶ In Luke 10:13, the Lord explains that Tyre did not sin against the light, as did Israel (represented by Chorazin and Bethsaida, types for the entire nation, who witnessed the presence and miracles of our Savior in the meridian of time (see Luke 10:13). Barnes explains: "The sense of this passage is, that the fleets coming from Tarshish (Tartessus) to Tyre, would, on their way, learn from the inhabitants of Cyprus the news of the downfall of Tyre." ¶ Howl, ye ships of Tarshish; for it is laid waste, so that there is no house, no entering in: from the land of Chittim it is revealed to them. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, "Howl, O ye that are embarking (or, going down) in ships of the sea, because their havens are spoiled, so that none can enter in. From the land of Chittim it is coming upon them (the Royal Polyglot reads, ⲁⲩⲏ, 'they shall come')." The Vulgate (ⵅ) also has "naves maris" (ships of the sea—Douay) rather than Tarshish (ⲧⲁⲣⲱⲱⲥ). The LXX (Ⲭ) has, "Howl, ye ships of Carthage; for she has perished, and men no longer arrive from the land of the Citians: she is led captive." Thompson's Ⲭ translation has, "Raise the mournful cry, ships of Carthage, for Tyre is destroyed and there are no arrivals from the land of the Kitians." The NETS Ⲭ ⲡⲣⲁⲛⲱⲥⲗⲁⲧⲱⲛ has Kitieans; the Greek Ⲭ has ⲕⲓⲧⲓⲁⲓⲱⲛ. The Syriac (Ⲥ) Peshitta en Español, has, as the bad news revealed from Quitim. Gill reminds us that both Chittim and Tarshish were sons of Javan (Genesis 10:4). Regarding Chittim or ⲕⲓⲧⲓⲁⲓⲱⲛ, Easton has: "while the name originally designated the Phoenicians only, it came latterly to be used of all the islands and various settlements on the sea-coasts which they had occupied, and then of the people who succeeded them when the Phoenician power decayed.

³ Fleming, pp. xi, 14.

⁴ Fleming, pp. 15, 17–19, 28, 42–43.

⁵ Pride in wisdom, might and riches are precisely those abhorred by the Lord (Jeremiah 9:23–24). And when it comes to beauty, Fleming tells us that Tyre was renowned for her splendor (pp. 5–6).

Hence it designates generally the islands and coasts of the Mediterranean and the races that inhabit them."

Others believe it was more particularly meant of the island of Cyprus.⁶ Henderson points out that in Ezekiel 27:6 we have the plural ⲙⲁⲓⲓ, islands, and that it "satisfactorily shews that more than one island or maritime region are intended." In Ezekiel, the plural is actually spelled without the final ⲙ, ⲙⲁⲓ, (ⲙⲁⲓⲓ ⲙⲁⲓⲓ ⲙⲁⲓⲓ, from islands of Chittim.

¶ Regarding "so that there is no house, no entering in," Alexander explains: "The meaning strictly is, away from house, away from entrance. It may be less concisely rendered, so there is no house, &c. Some make the two expressions strictly parallel and correlative, so there is neither house nor entrance, in which case the latter may have reference to the entering of ships into the harbor.⁷ Others make the second dependent on the first, so that there is no house left to enter. This may refer particularly to the mariners returning from their long voyage and finding their homes destroyed." It may well be an encompassing phrase, indicating that there is practically nothing left standing: from house to port. The Masoretic text (ⲙ), uses the word ⲡⲁⲗⲁ (to be revealed), as part of the expression ⲡⲁⲗⲁ-ⲕⲓⲧⲓⲙ (to be revealed to them). While most translate it as the KJV, as news revealed from Chittim, the word ⲡⲁⲗⲁ is quite expansive, and could mean exiled as well as revealed. So the alternate signification is that they were exiled to Chittim (Ⲭ) or the news was revealed from Chittim (Ⲥ). In Ezekiel 27:12 we read, "Tarshish was thy merchant by reason of the multitude of all kind of riches; with silver, iron, tin, and lead, they traded in thy fairs." And further, "The ships of Tarshish did sing of thee in thy market: and thou wast replenished, and made very glorious in the midst of the seas" (Ezekiel 27:25). It is thought that Tarshish was a "Phoenician port in Spain, between the two mouths of the Guadalquivir" (Easton). Often mentioned in the Scriptures, the ships of Tarshish came to represent “a general designation for large sea-going vessels to any quarter” (ISBE). These ships loved to trade with Tyre, but her destruction would give rise to the bitterest lamentations. In the last days these ships of Tarshish (תַּרְשִׁישׁ) would play a major role in bringing scattered Israel back, “Surely the isles shall wait for me, and the ships of Tarshish first, to bring thy sons from far, their silver and their gold with them, unto the name of the LORD thy God, and to the Holy One of Israel, because he hath glorified thee” (ISAIAH 60:9). For now, the bad news regarding the devastation of Tyre would be picked up by the ships of Tarshish in Cyprus or other Mediterranean ports. In Ezekiel we read: “And all that handle the oar, the mariners, and all the pilots of the sea, shall come down from their ships, they shall stand upon the land; And shall cause their voice to be heard against thee, and shall cry bitterly, and shall cast up dust upon their heads, they shall wallow themselves in the ashes: And they shall make themselves utterly bald for thee, and gird them with sackcloth, and they shall weep for thee with bitterness of heart and bitter wailing. And in their wailing they shall take up a lamentation for thee, and lament over thee, saying, What city is like Tyrus, like the destroyed in the midst of the sea? When thy wares went forth out of the seas, thou filledst many people; thou didst enrich the kings of the earth with the multitude of thy riches and of thy merchandise. In the time when thou shalt be broken by the seas in the depths of the waters thy merchandise and all thy company in the midst of thee shall fall. All the inhabitants of the isles shall be astonished at thee, and their kings shall be sore afraid, they shall be troubled in their countenance” (Ezekiel 27:29–36).

⁶ ISBE has, in part: "In its narrower sense Kittim appears simply to have stood for the island of Cyprus—it is mentioned between Bashan (= Pal) and the isles of Elisha in Ezekiel 27:6–7, and with this ISAIAH 23:1, 12 agree, Kittim occurring in these passages between Tarshish, Tyre and Sidon. The statement of Josephus, that 'all islands, and the greatest part of the sea-coast, are called Chethim (= Kittim) by the Hebrews,' on the other hand, must be taken as the testimony of one well acquainted with the opinions of the learned world in his time."

⁷ Fleming explains that around the time of King David and Solomon, Hiram connected the main island of Tyre with a smaller one close to it. By means of piers, two harbors were constructed. The one facing the north was called Sidonian; the one to the South, Egyptian. These, were joined by a canal (p.4). Alexander would later join these islands to the mainland (p.5).

2 Be still, ye inhabitants of the isle; thou whom the merchants of Zidon, that pass over the sea, have replenished.

✓ silent

Be still, ye inhabitants of the isle. The Stenning Targum (ⲧ) translation, has “be dismayed.” There are differences among the Dead Sea Scrolls (Ⲭ) here. The 4QIsa^a—in contrast to the 1QIsa^a—has the expression, “To whom are they like?” (DSSB). The 1QIsa^a follows the Masoretic text (ⲙ), “be silent.” The LXX (Ⲟ) also begins with “To whom,” leading the authors of the DSSB to wonder if the 4QIsa^a (Ⲭ) was adjusted to match the LXX (Ⲟ). The Syriac (Ⲫ) uses the plural, islands. Some exegetes, indeed, think that islands (plural) is meant. This would include the islands and coasts of the Mediterranean. But the word is also associated with America and the islands of the sea. Wesley explains: “The title of islands is often given by the Hebrews to places bordering upon the sea.” Some exegetes, indeed, think that islands (plural) is meant. Wesley explains: “The title of islands is often given by the Hebrews to places bordering upon the sea.” The idea is that those who traded heavily with Tyre, then, would be much affected by her destruction. And there is no question that Tyre’s fall would, to be sure, affect the islands. It is likely, however, that here the singular (ⲙ) is meant—island (ⲙ). It is the inhabitants of Tyre who are addressed in this particular verse. The message to Tyre, according to Gill (leaning on Pliny) is that Tyre should resign herself to what was coming and not think of defending herself. Another possible message is that Tyre should not mourn nor would she complain. And respecting Zidon, who was so close to Tyre, Calvin has, “The Sidonians, therefore, were unquestionably greater gainers than others by imports and exports, and also by sales and merchandise, in consequence of being so near, and trading with it continually; for the wealth of Tyre overflowed on them, and, as the saying is, they flew under its wings ... and suffered more severely than others by the destruction of Tyre.” Sidon is first mentioned in Genesis 10:15, as being the firstborn child of Canaan. ¶ Thou whom the merchants of Zidon, that pass over the sea, have replenished. The Targum (ⲧ) has, “The merchants that pass over the sea they used to replenish thee.” The LXX (Ⲟ) has, “Who could be compared with the dwellers in this island—these merchants of Phoenicia, who traversed the ocean—.” The Syriac (Ⲫ) also makes mention of Zidon, as does the Dead Sea Scrolls (Ⲭ), and the Vulgate (ⲱ). The ⲱ has the merchants of Zidon who have benefited Tyre: “negotatio Sidonis transfretantes mare repleverunt te” (the merchants of Sidon passing over the sea, have filled thee—Douay). Barnes and Gill explain that Tyre was a colony of Zidon. This city, *Zidon*⁸ (צִידוֹן), is about 71 kilometers up the coast from Tyre. ISBE has: “One of the oldest Phoenician cities, situated on a narrow plain between the range of Lebanon and the sea, in latitude 33 degrees 34 minutes nearly. The plain is well watered and fertile, about 10 miles long, extending from a little North of Sarepta to the Bostrenus (Nahr el-Auly). The ancient city was situated near the northern end of the plain, surrounded with a strong wall. It possessed two harbors.” In other words, Tyre would supply trade goods for all the surrounding nations in what seemed a never ending harvest of land, ocean and river products. In Ezekiel we see some of the merchandize that Tyre peddled: “Tarshish was thy merchant by reason of the multitude of all kind of riches; with silver, iron, tin, and lead, they traded in thy fairs. Javan, Tubal, and Meshech, they were thy merchants: they traded the persons of men and vessels of brass in thy market. They of the house of Togarmah traded in thy fairs with horses and horsemen and mules. The men of Dedan were thy merchants; many isles were the merchandise of thine hand: they brought thee for a present horns of ivory and ebony. Syria was thy merchant by reason of the multitude of the wares of thy making: they occupied in thy fairs with emeralds, purple, and brodered work, and fine linen, and coral, and agate. Judah, and the land of Israel, they were thy merchants: they traded in thy market wheat of Minnith, and Pannag, and honey, and oil, and balm. Damascus was thy merchant in the multitude of the wares of thy making, for the multitude of all riches; in the wine of Helbon, and white wool. Dan also and Javan going to and fro occupied in thy fairs: bright iron, cassia, and calamus, were in thy market. Dedan was thy merchant in precious clothes for chariots. Arabia, and all the princes of Kedar, they occupied with thee in lambs, and rams, and goats: in these were they thy merchants. The merchants of Sheba and Raamah, they were thy merchants: they occupied in thy fairs with chief of all spices, and with all precious stones, and gold. Haran, and Canneh, and Eden, the merchants of Sheba, Asshur, and Chilmad, were thy merchants. These were thy merchants in all sorts of things, in blue clothes, and brodered work, and in chests of rich apparel, bound with cords, and made of cedar, among thy merchandize” (Ezekiel 27:12–24). And thus we read: “The ships of Tarshish did sing of thee in thy market: and thou wast replenished, and made very glorious in the midst of the seas” (Ezekiel 27:25).

⁸ ISBE has, “Sidon submitted to the Assyrian kings as did the Phoenician cities generally, but revolted against Sennacherib and again under Esar-haddon. The latter destroyed a large part of the city and carried off most of the inhabitants, replacing them by captives from Babylon and Elam, and renamed it Ir-Esar-had-don (“City of Esar-haddon”). The settlers readily mingled with the Phoenicians, and Sidon rose to power again when Assyria fell, was besieged by Nebuchadnezzar at the time of his siege of Jerusalem and Tyre, and was taken, having lost about half of its inhabitants by plague. The fall of Babylon gave another short period of independence, but the Persians gained control without difficulty, and Sidon was prominent in the Persian period as the leading naval power among the Phoenicians who aided their suzerain in his attacks upon Greece.”

3 And by great waters the seed of Sihor, the harvest of the river, [is] her revenue; and she is a mart of nations.

And by great waters the seed of *Sihor*⁹, the harvest of the river, [is] her revenue. The Targum (T) has, “The harvest of the increase (or, the gathering) of the river was her revenue.” The LXX (G), “—this offspring of merchants on many a water.” The Syriac (S) adds the expression “descendant of merchants” when speaking of Tyre in this verse. The Vulgate (V) speaks of the “in aquis multis semen Nili” (The seed of the Nile in many waters—Douay). Regarding the expression the seed of Sihor, the harvest of the river, שִׁיחֹר יָאֹר, it is commonly understood to refer to the Nile. Lowth explains: “The Nile is called here Shichor, as it is [found in] Jeremiah 2:18 and 1 Chronicles 13:5. It has this name from the blackness of its waters charged with the mud which it brings down from Ethiopia, when it overflows.” Indeed, the word שִׁיחֹר means black in Hebrew. Gesenius, showing the plene and other forms of the word writes: “שִׁיחֹר, שִׁיחֹר, שִׁיחֹר [Shihor, Sihor], properly ‘black,’ ‘turbid’ (root שָׁחַר), hence pr.n. (in Heb. just as יֵאֵר is Egyptian), of the river Nile, so called from its muddy and turbid waters.” HAL explains, “Egyptian records never use שִׁיחֹר to indicate the whole extent of the Nile but only a specified area of water.” The harvest of the most productive areas of the Nile was transported in sea vessels for commerce throughout the area of the Mediterranean and beyond, into Africa. Henderson explains: “The seed and harvest are said to be those of that river, because they were produced by its inundation.” That is, the yearly inundations brought fertility to these regions. ¶ *And she is a mart*¹⁰ of nations. The LXX (G) has, “who made a traffick of nations as of an ingathered harvest?” Luther explains: “Here the prophet reproves the greed and pride in good times, which are often followed by many other kinds of vices.”

⁹ Regarding שִׁיחֹר, ISBE has: “A stream of water mentioned in connection with Egypt. Joshua (Joshua 13:3) speaks of the “Shihor, which is before Egypt.” In the north easternmost province of ancient Egypt, Khentab (“Fronting on the East”), was a canal, a fresh-water stream drawn off from the Nile, called in the Egyptian language Shi-t-Hor, i.e. “the Horus Canal” (the -t- is an Egyptian feminine ending). There have been many changes in the branches and canals from the Nile in the Delta, and this one with many others has been lost

4 Be thou ashamed, O Zidon: for the sea hath spoken, [even] the strength of the sea, saying, I travail not, nor bring forth children, neither do I nourish up young men, [nor] bring up virgins.

altogether; but there is a tradition among the Bedouin of Wādy el-'Arish to this day that once a branch of the Nile came over to that point. This Shi-t-Hor, ‘Stream of Horus,’ makes perfectly clear and harmonious the different references of Scripture to South. It was ‘before Egypt,’ as Joshua describes it, and it was the first sweet water of Egypt which the traveler from Palestine in those days was able to obtain, as the words of Jeremiah indicate. ‘To drink the waters of South’ meant to reach the supply of the fresh water of the Nile at the border of the desert. The two other references to South (1 Chronicles 13:5; ISAIAH 23:3) are perfectly satisfied by this identification. The ‘seed of South’ (ISAIAH 23:3 the King James Version) would be grain from Egypt by way of the Shihor.”

¹⁰ Marketplace.

Be thou [shamed, O Zidon: for the seah spoken, [even] the strength of the sea saying. The Targum (T) reads: “The Sidonians are confounded, because the west (i.e., Tyre) hath spoken, which dwells in the strength of the sea, saying.” Henderson explains that מְעוֹד הַיָּם, or fortress of the sea, “describes the maritime situation and strength of Tyre.” ¶ I travail not, nor bring forth children, neither do I nourish up young men, [nor] bring up virgins. The Targum (T) has, “O that I had never travailed, never conceived, and never nourished up young men, never brought up virgins delicately!” The LXX (G), “I did not travail nor did I bring her forth; nor did I nourish her youths, nor educate her virgins.” The term בְּתוּלוֹת (virgins) is often used in place of a city or place. Here, in contraposition to “young men” (בְּחֹרִים), the term can also mean young women. Ibn Ezra suggests that this is a description of Tyre’s desolation. The *Concordia*¹¹ by Roehrs/Franzmann suggests: “The sea, personified mother of Sidon, laments the disappearance of ships as if she had never given birth to them.”

5 As at the report concerning Egypt, [so] shall they be sorely pained at the report of Tyre.

The LXX (G) along with the Peshitta (S), Vulgate (V) and almost every single translation into English and Spanish¹² since the Bishops Bible in 1568, has Egypt distressed at Tyre’s sad fortune. For instance, we have: “When the report cometh to Egypt, they shall be sorely pained at the report of Tyre” (ASV). Calvin writes: “The alliance which existed between the inhabitants of Tyre and those of Egypt could not have been more appropriately described; and therefore he shews that this ruin extends also to the Egyptians, because they prompted the Jews to rebellion, and turned them aside from confidence in God.” The Peshitta en Español (S), has: “Cuando se enteren en Egipto, los sobrecogerán dolores de parto como lo que oyeron de Tiro.” That is, “When they find out in Egypt, they will be overcome by birth pains, as that which they heard of Tyre.” The Targum (T) has the men of Tyre trembling when they heard what had become of Egypt. Rotherham has: “<Like the report of Egypt> They shall be in pangs at the like report of Tyre.” Henderson, believes that the mention of Egypt is an allusion to the “destruction of the Egyptians at the Red Sea,—so beautifully described in the ode of Moses, Exodus 15:14. שָׁמַע [report] corresponds to שָׁמַעַי [shall hear], and יְהִי לוֹ [shall they be sorely pained] to הֵיל אָחֻז [sorrow shall take hold] in that passage.” Along with Judah, Egypt, Philistia, Edom, Moab, Ammon, Elam, Arabia and a multitude of others (Jeremiah 25:18–26), Tyre is included among the nations that Babylon would crush, because of “the wine cup of this fury at my hand” (Jeremiah 25:15b) and “because of the sword that I will send among them” (Jeremiah 25:16b).

6 Pass ye over to Tarshish; howl, ye inhabitants of the isle.

One explanation is that the people of Tyre would have to escape to Tarshish—the Targum (T) has them being exiled to some province of the sea. Gill, leaning on Kimhi, has: “Kimhi thinks this is spoken, not to the Tyrians, but to the merchants that traded with them, to go elsewhere with their merchandise, since their goods could no more be disposed of in that city as usual.” These explanations are certainly not mutually exclusive. The LXX (G) has Carthage (Καρχηδόνα) rather than Tyre. The Vulgate (V) has “transite maria” (Pass over the seas—Douay) rather than תַּרְשִׁישׁ (Tarshish) in the Masoretic text (M).

7 [Is] this your joyous [city], whose antiquity [is] of ancient days? her own feet shall carry her afar off to sojourn.

✓ from afar off

[Is] this your joyous [city], whose antiquity [is] of ancient days? The Targum (T) has, “Is this your strong city, Tyre, of ancient days? In olden time they were bringing her גִּיְפוֹת¹³ (note: the Royal Polyglot reads the plural, קָרְבָּנִין, which agrees better with the context) from a distant land.” Likewise, the Syriac (S) uses the word mighty in the stead of the joyous (עֲלִיָּזָה) in the Masoretic text (M). The LXX (G) renders it, “Was not she your boast of old, before she was delivered up?” The Vulgate (V) has Tyre glorying “quae gloriabatur” in her antiquity. Fleming—leaning on the writings of the priests of Melkart spoken about in Herodotus—supposes Tyre to have first established herself on the shores of the Mediterranean as early as 2,800 B.C.¹⁴ Henderson agrees with the KJV translators, that he ¹¹ Roehrs, Walter and Franzmann, Martin H. (1979). Concordia Self-Study Commentary.

¹² Including the LDS Reina Valera 2009 translation.

¹³ “But ye say, If a man shall say to his father or mother, It is Corban, that is to say, a gift, by whatsoever thou mightest be profited by me; he shall be free” (Mark 7:11).

¹⁴ Fleming, 3.

word city (either עִיר or קִרְיָה) is implied. ¶ Her own feet shall carry her afar off to sojourn. The Targum (Ⲯ), “Behold, now she is removed to sojourn afar off!” This suggests an escape by foot. Or possible being carried off as an exile. Barnes has, “Grotius supposes that by feet here, the ‘feet of ships’ are intended, that is, their sails and oars. But the expression is designed evidently to stand in contrast with ISAIAH 23:6, and to denote that a part of the inhabitants would go by land into captivity. Probably many of them were taken prisoners by Nebuchadnezzar; and perhaps many of them, when the city was besieged, found opportunity to escape and flee by land to a distant place of safety.”

8 Who hath taken this counsel against Tyre, the crowning [city], whose merchants [are] princes, whose traffickers [are] the honourable of the earth?

Who hath taken this counsel against Tyre, the crowning [city]. This verse asks the question, who (מִי) will bring the above mentioned destruction against Tyre that culminates in ISAIAH 23:7? We read the answer in ISAIAH 23:9. The Targum (Ⲯ) replaces crowning city with “against her that was giving advice.” The Syriac (Ⲥ) in Español also has Tyre giving out crowns, “la que entregaba coronas.” The Douay (based on the Vulgate Ⲟ) speaks of Tyre as having been “formerly crowned.”

The expression תַּמְעִטִּירָה (the crowning) comes from the root עָטַר, to surround (such as surround with a crown), and can mean that Tyre distributes crowns, or other forms of dignity (Gesenius) or glory

(Friedländer¹⁵) on others. Henderson has: “תַּמְעִטִּירָה, coronatrix, coronam impotens, refers to the power which she exercised in the Phoenician colonies, bestowing the regal dignity at her pleasure. That Arad, Arke, Carthage, Citium, Tartessus, &c. were governed by kings under the supremacy of the mother-state, clearly appears from the statements of the ancients.”

¶ Whose merchants [are] princes, whose traffickers [are] the honourable of the earth? The LXX (Ⲭ) renders it, “Is she inferior? Or hath she not power? Her merchants are glorious chiefs of the earth.” In other words, who would bring down such a powerful nation? Of her trading power around 630 BC, Fleming says that “Her commerce extended to the ends of the earth.”¹⁶ In Ezekiel 26:16 we read: “Then all the princes of the sea shall come down from their thrones, and lay away their robes, and put off their brodered garments: they shall clothe themselves with trembling; they shall sit upon the ground, and shall tremble at every moment, and be astonished at thee.” These references to princes (שָׂרִים) and the honorable of the earth (יְכַבְּדֵי-אֲרֶץ) is probably a allusion to the difficulty faced by the opulent and powerful when their fortunes change.

9 The LORD of hosts hath purposed it, to stain[✓] the pride of all glory, [and] to bring into contempt all the honourable of the earth.

✓ to pollute

The LORD of hosts hath purposed it, to stain the pride of all glory. The Targum (Ⲯ) reads, “The Lord of hosts is the counsellor against her (note: the Royal Polyglot has מְלִכָּה, ‘his counsel’) to defile the glory of all the objects of rejoicing.” Instead of to stain, to pollute, to profane or *to wound*¹⁷ (לְחַלֵּל) in the Masoretic text (Ⲛ), the Syriac (Ⲥ) has to invalidate or bring to an end. It is common to speak of wounded pride.¹⁸ The Lord permitted these consequences to come upon Tyre. ¶ [And] to bring into contempt all the honourable of the earth. All who exalt themselves will be brought low and humbled.

10 Pass through thy land as a river, O daughter of Tarshish; [there is] no more strength[✓] in thee.

✓ girdle

Pass through thy land as a river, O daughter of Tarshish. Pauli’s translation of the Targum (Ⲯ) has: “Remove from thy land, as the waters of a river; flee to a province of the sea.” In the Stenning translation, the Ⲯ makes the allusion that as the waters of a river are exiled—or removed far away from the place they pass through—so will the inhabitants of the land be removed far away from it. The LXX (Ⲭ), “Work thy land: for ships no more arrive from Carthage.” In other words, turn to agricultural pursuits rather than to sea commerce. The DSSB (Ⲟ) has “Cultivate” thy land &c. 1QIsa^a has worship and 4QIsa^c, pass through, as the Masoretic text (Ⲛ). Ibn Ezra believes that כְּנָהַר “as a river,” either implies the speed of a river, or the overflow carried caused by a river. Kimhi, according to Gill, suggests that the people of Tyre will need to make ¹⁵ The Commentary of Ibn Ezra on Isaiah was edited, translated, and annotated by M. Friedländer.

¹⁶ Fleming, 40.

¹⁷ Gesenius. BDB, and Wörterbuch zum Alten Testament.

¹⁸ In Spanish, amor propio herido.

their escape to Tarshish. ¶ There is no more strength in thee. The LXX (Ⲯ) has, “Nor is thy hand which vexed kings, any more powerful by sea.” The Syriac (Ⲥ) instead has, “there is no one to drive you way.” The Douay (based on the Vulgate ⲱ) uses the marginal || translation, girdle (מִנְיָה)¹⁹: “thou hast a girdle no more.” ¶ Joseph Smith’s Inspired Version helps give clarity to this verse, with the addition of the words “in thee.” This is supported by Gill, who says there is no more strength in Tyre. Ibn Ezra believes that the figure of a girdle (מִנְיָה) stands for strength: “It is a figure for strength, because a girdle supports the loins (see Psalm 109:19).” BDB explain, that in Job 12:21 the word מִנְיָה is used in the expression loosen the strength of the mighty to mean, “weaken them, make them defenceless, by ungirding.”

11 He stretched out his hand over the sea, he shook the kingdoms: the LORD hath given a commandment against the merchant [city], to destroy the strong holds thereof.

- ✓ or, concerning a merchantman ✓ ✓ Canaan
✓ ✓ ✓ or, strengths

He stretched out his hand over the sea, he shook the kingdoms: The Targum (Ⲯ) reads, “His power is lifted up against the sea, to make the kingdom²⁰ to tremble.” This is an allusion to the power of the God of Israel, who stopped the Red Sea so Israel could cross over. ¶ The LORD hath given a commandment against the merchant [city], to destroy the strong holds thereof. The LXX (Ⲯ) makes it clear that through the Lord’s command, these things have come to pass. However, just as in the margin ||, it uses the word Canaan (כְּנָעַן / χανανα). The Syriac (Ⲥ) and the Vulgate (ⲱ) also follow the margin || in using Canaan (כְּנָעַן). In Hebrew, כְּנָעַן means merchant (Gesenius, HAL). By strongholds here, Ibn Ezra suggests that “the fortress of Tyre” is meant. In Ezekiel we read: “Behold, therefore I will bring strangers upon thee, the terrible of the nations: and they shall draw their swords against the beauty of thy wisdom, and they shall defile thy brightness. They shall bring thee down to the pit, and thou shalt die the deaths of them that are slain in the midst of the seas” (Ezekiel 28:7–8). And also, “Thy riches, and thy fairs, thy merchandise, thy mariners, and thy pilots, thy calkers, and the occupiers of thy merchandise, and all thy men of war, that are in thee, and in all thy company which is in the midst of thee, shall fall into the midst of the seas in the day of thy ruin” (Ezekiel 27:27).

¹⁹ BDB explains מִנְיָה as removing all restraint; Gesenius “of bonds, or of a yoke put on the people.” DBL has מִנְיָה meaning: “harbor, formally, girdle, i.e., a relatively protected cove or area where the land and sea meet, apparently as an extension of a place where wind and wave are restrained (Isa 23:10+).” So also LHI and Wörterbuch zum Alten Testament.

²⁰ Plural, kingdoms, מְלָכוּתָא, Targum Jonathan to the Prophets (Logos) as well as Sperber. Stenning translates, “shake the kingdoms.”

12 And he said, Thou shalt no more rejoice, O thou oppressed virgin, daughter of Zidon: arise, pass over to Chittim; there also shalt thou have no rest.

And he said, Thou shalt no more rejoice, O thou oppressed virgin, daughter of Zidon: Calvin well says, “He continues to speak of Tyre, but gives it this name, because it was built by the Sidonians.” The Brenton LXX (Ⲯ) translation has, “And men shall say, Ye shall no longer at all continue to insult and injure the daughter of Sidon.” ¶ And he said, (וַיֹּאמֶר). Ibn Ezra has, “And God said.” Gill has: “Kimhi interprets it; when her calamity should come upon her, her jovial time, her time of mirth, jollity, and revelling, would be over for a time; for, at the end of seventy years, she should take her harp, and sing again (ISAIAH 23:15) for the words seem to be spoken of Tyre, concerning whom the whole prophecy is; though some think Zidon is here meant, which, being near, suffered at the same time with Tyre, or quickly after.” Gill continues: “Tyre is called the daughter of Zidon, because it was a colony of the Zidonians,” and goes on to show how in Ezekiel 16:46, the word daughter is used of such colonies. ¶ Arise, pass over to Chittim; there also shalt thou have no rest. The LXX (Ⲯ) renders it, “Nay though thou shouldst go to the Kitians; yet even there thou shalt not have rest.” The Syriac (Ⲥ) and the Vulgate (ⲱ) also make it clear that although Tyre might remove to Chittim²¹, even there she would have no rest.

13 Behold the land of the Chaldeans; this people was not, [till] the Assyrian founded it for them that dwell in the wilderness: they set up the towers thereof, they raised up the palaces thereof; [and] he brought it to ruin.

²¹ Peshitta en Español has Quitim, while Lamsa uses China again.

Behold the land of the Chaldeans; this people was not, [till] the Assyrian founded it for them that dwell in the wilderness. Instead of wilderness, the Targum (ⲧ) has islands. The LXX (Ⲭ) translations by Brenton and NETS suggest that if Tyre were to seek refuge with the Chaldeans, there also she would not find it, because the Assyrians would pull down her walls and lay the place waste. The moderns suggest that it would be the Chaldeans (i.e., Babylonia) who would destroy Tyre, and not Assyria. The Good News Bible renders it as a parenthetical: “(It was the Babylonians, not the Assyrians, who let the wild animals overrun Tyre &c.)” This says to me that while most people were worried about Assyria as the offending force, as the great world power, that Isaiah was explaining—many years before the fact—that it would be Babylon who would be the invading power (also see NRSV, REB and NAB). The matter seems to be a difference in the translation of הָאֲשֻׁרִים.²² That is, “Behold-land-Chaldea-this-the-people-not-are (or be/become)-Asshur.” Possibly, “Look at the land of Chaldea—it was not Assyria—etc.” ¶ They set up the towers thereof, they raised up the palaces thereof; [and] he brought it to ruin. The Targum (ⲧ) has, “They raised up her beacons, they destroyed her palaces, they have made her a ruinous heap.” The Syriac (Ⲫ) has, “They appointed spies who spied on her palaces, and they brought it to ruin.” The Vulgate (ⲱ) has the Chaldeans removing the strong into captivity: “in captivitatem traduxerunt robustos ejus” (they have led away the strong ones thereof into captivity—Douay). The Vulgate (ⲱ), furthermore, has the houses (domos) brought to ruin, rather than the palaces.

14 Howl, ye ships of Tarshish: for your strength is laid waste.

The Targum (ⲧ) reads, “Howl, ye that are embarking in ships of the sea, for the seacoast of your strength is spoiled.” The Vulgate (ⲱ) again speaks of the “naves maris” or ships of the sea, rather than ships of Tarshish. The LXX (Ⲭ) has, “Raise the mournful cry, ships of Carthage, because your strong hold is destroyed.” The Syriac (Ⲫ) has plundered instead of laid waste. The ²² This is a perfect example of how easy it is to make a mistake and assume there are differences between ancient records, when indeed they may reflect translator preferences. For instance, the DSSB sometimes seems different than the KJV, but many of these differences are because it follows the NRSV. In this verse, the Lamsa Syriac (Ⲫ) translation seems to follow the NRSV, too, “Behold the land of the Chaldeans; this is the people, and not the Assyrians, who destroyed it &c.” The Peshitta en Español (Ⲫ), however, renders it, “Behold the land of the Chaldeans. These people were not; the Assyrian, servant of the wind.” It is impossible to translate without interpreting.

Hebrew (שָׁרָף) permits either of these significations.²³

Why the howling? Once again, let us return to Ezekiel 27:29–33, we read: “And all that handle the oar, the mariners, and all the pilots of the sea, shall come down from their ships, they shall stand upon the land; And shall cause their voice to be heard against thee, and shall cry bitterly, and shall cast up dust upon their heads, they shall wallow themselves in the ashes: And they shall make themselves utterly bald for thee, and gird them with sackcloth, and they shall weep for thee with bitterness of heart and bitter wailing. And in their wailing they shall take up a lamentation for thee, and lament over thee, saying, What city is like Tyrus, like the destroyed in the midst of the sea?”

vv. 15–18. Tyre would be forgotten for seventy years but in time the Lord would visit her in kindness.

15 ¶ And it shall come to pass in that day, that Tyre shall be forgotten seventy years, according to the days of one king: after the end of seventy years shall Tyre sing as an harlot. ✓

✓ it shall be unto Tyre as the song of an harlot

And it shall come to pass in that day, that Tyre shall be forgotten seventy years, according to the days of one king: The LXX (Ⲭ) renders it, “And it shall come to pass in that day, that Tyre shall be forsaken seventy years, according to the days of a king, according to the time of a man.” Calvin explains: “‘the days of a king’ are put for the age of a man, in the same manner as the age of a man is shewn by the Psalmist to be generally limited to seventy years (Psalm 90:10). But why did he mention ‘a king’ rather than any other man? It was because Tyre had a king, and reckoned time by the life of a king.” Ibn Ezra explains that the reign of the three Babylonian kings (father, son and grandson),

נְבוּכַדְרֶזָר, Nebuchadrezzar, אֵילֵן מֶרְדַּךְ, Evil-

Merodach, and בֶּלְשַׁאֲצַר, Belshazzar, lasted 70 years, or the days of one man, after which ‘the world’ was liberated by the King of Persia. In Jeremiah we read that Babylon would have sway over the nations for seventy years, but would then be crushed herself: “And this whole land shall be a desolation, and an astonishment; and these nations shall serve the king of Babylon seventy years. And it shall come to pass, when seventy years are accomplished, that I will punish the king of Babylon, and that nation, saith the LORD, for their iniquity, and the land of the Chaldeans, and will make it perpetual desolations (Jeremiah 25:11–12, also see vv.

²³ Gesenius, HAL.

8–29). Fleming writes that “The city [of Jerusalem] fell in 586 B.C. Nebuchadrezzar now turned to the task of taking Tyre.”²⁴ ¶ After the end of seventy years shall Tyre sing as an harlot. The Targum (Ⲯ) instead has, “... it shall be unto Tyre as the song of an harlot.” The LXX (Ⲯ) reads: “And it shall come to pass after seventy years, that Tyre shall be as the song of a harlot.” The Syriac (Ⲫ) has a prostitute’s song sung to Tyre, instead. So also the Vulgate (ⲱ): “post septuaginta autem annos erit Tyro quasi canticum meretricis” (but after seventy years, there shall be unto Tyre as the song of a harlot—Douay). So also the Dead Sea Scrolls (Ⲙ). Fleming tells us that following the siege of Tyre by Babylon, a great period of depression ensued.²⁵ Leaning on Josephus, Fleming tells us that “In the fourteenth year of the reign of Hiram, Cyrus captured Babylon (538 B.C.) and the monarchy passed under the control of the Persians ... In the period following Nebuchadrezzar’s thirteen-year siege, supremacy among the Phoenician cities passed from Tyre to her ancient rival, Sidon. Tyre’s commerce was ruined during the siege”²⁶

16 Take an harp, go about the city, thou harlot that hast been forgotten; make sweet melody, sing many songs, that thou mayest be remembered.

Take an harp, go about the city, thou harlot that hast been forgotten. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “Thy glory is changed: wonder to another country, O city, who has been (note: the Royal Polyglot puts in מְהִימָנָה, ‘who has been faithful as an harlot,’ expressing irony) as an harlot, thou art doomed to oblivion.” The LXX (Ⲯ) renders it: “Take a kithara²⁸, stroll about, city, O harlot long forgotten!” Some translators suggest that ISAIAH 23:16 was the song that was sung. CNTUOT has, “The ‘harlot’ metaphor has the essential idea of an illicit relationship, whether that be religious, economic, political, or a combination of these.”²⁹ ¶ Make sweet melody, sing many songs, that thou mayest be remembered. The Targum (Ⲯ) reads, “Thy harp is turned into mourning, and thy song to lamentation; perhaps, thou mayest be remembered (Chaldee, ‘thy remembrance may enter’ the mind; compare the Hebrew phrase, ³⁰אֵל שׁוֹם לִבְ, ‘not to set the mind upon,’ ‘not to consider’).” Stenning translates the Targum (Ⲯ) as: “Turn thy lute into mourning, and thy song into a lamentation; it may be that thou wilt be remembered.” The LXX (Ⲯ) has, “Play skilfully; sing many songs, that thou mayest be remembered.”

17 And it shall come to pass after the end of seventy years, that the LORD will visit Tyre, and she shall turn to her hire, and shall commit fornication with all the kingdoms of the world upon the face of the earth.

And it shall come to pass after the end of seventy years, that the LORD will visit Tyre. Instead of visit, the Targum (Ⲯ) has remember, “Tyre shall be remembered³¹ before the Lord.” The Targum (Ⲯ) certainly seems to fit better in this verse than the Masoretic text (ⲙ) the Syriac (Ⲫ) or the Vulgate (ⲱ), when one considers the context of her holiness in ISAIAH 23:18. Regarding the word visit, וְיָבִיט, Gesenius believes it means “to look after again (after an interval).” The expression, however, can also mean to visit with punishment. The LXX (Ⲯ) has, “And it shall come to pass after seventy years, that God will take account of Tyre.” Interestingly, this is the very word that has caused so much controversy in ISAIAH 24:22, וְיָבִיטוּ, where it means to visit in kindness, or to visit to redeem. No doubt, however, ISAIAH 23:17 seems to clash against ISAIAH 23:18. It is quite likely that ISAIAH 23:17 speaks of Tyre’s economic recovery after being buffeted for 70 years, while ISAIAH 23:18 seems to speak of a latter-day time when Tyre will join other nations to serve the Lord. And certainly Tyre would fall many times beyond the Babylonian captivity, such as the attack by Alexander and others. ¶ And she shall turn to her hire, and shall commit fornication with all the kingdoms of the world upon the face of the earth. The LXX (Ⲯ) renders it, “and she shall be restored to her former state, and be a mart for all the kingdoms of the world ; which are on the face of the earth.” The Vulgate (ⲱ) similarly has: “et reducet eam ad mercedes suas, et rursum fornicabitur cum universis regnis terrae super faciem terrae” (and will bring her back again to her traffic: and she shall commit fornication again with all the kingdoms of the world upon the face of the earth—Douay). The Targum (Ⲯ) has Tyre restored as at first, being able to satisfy all of the nations with her

²⁴ Fleming, p. 44.

²⁵ Fleming, p. 46.

²⁶ Fleming, p. 47–48.

²⁷ See also מְהִימָנָה, ‘honestidad, fidelidad, autenticidad’

(Targarona), i.e., honesty, fidelity, authenticity. See also מְהִימָנָה.

²⁸ Greek instrument of the lyre family.

²⁹ Page 1139.

³⁰ Often לִב is put for the heart, even though it can also mean mind.

³¹ Targum Jonathan to the Prophets, וְיִזְכְּרֶנָּה, remembrance.

merchandize, but drops the prostitute comment. The Dead Sea Scrolls (Q), instead of אֶת-כָּל-מַמְלָכוֹת (all the kingdoms) drops the כָּל (all). Fleming writes, "... and as appears from the records of the Persian period, she recovered much of her former glory."³²

18 And her merchandise and her hire shall be holiness to the LORD: it shall not be treasured nor laid up; for her merchandise shall be for them that dwell before the LORD, to eat sufficiently, and for durable ✓ clothing.

✓ old

And her merchandise and her hire shall be holiness to the LORD: The LXX (G) reads, "And her traffick and gain shall be holy to the Lord." So also the Vulgate (V): "et erunt negotiationes ejus et mercedēs ejus sanctificatæ Dōmino" (And her merchandise and her hire shall be sanctified to the Lord—Douay). Ibn Ezra asks the questions we all ask ourselves. "Some ask, How can the prophet promise that the hire of the harlot Tyre will be sanctified to the Lord, since the Law prohibits the hire of an harlot to be brought to the house of the Lord? (Deuteronomy 23:19)." Ibn Ezra himself says, "The reply to this question is, that the Law prohibits the real hire of an harlot, but the prophet uses the words, 'her hire,' in a figurative sense; in reality, he does not speak of an harlot at all." ¶ It shall not be treasured nor laid up; for her merchandise shall be for them that dwell before the LORD, to eat sufficiently, and for durable clothing. The Targum (T), likewise, makes it clear that Tyre's merchandize will be to feed and clothe those who minister or serve before the LORD, "for food sufficient, and for vestments of glory." The LXX (G) also, "All her gain shall not be treasured up for themselves, but for them who dwell before the Lord, that they may eat and drink and be filled, and for contributions to be kept in remembrance before the Lord." The Syriac (S) has "and replace their old garments with new ones." The Peshitta en Español has, instead, "and be clothed with her old (or used) clothing," as does the KJV margin || (עֲתִיק). The Hebrew עֲתִיק also means *choice attire*³³ and even *sacred clothing*³⁴. The Vulgate (V) also gives this feeling of temple service: "non condentur neque reponentur, quia his qui habitaverint coram Domino erit negotiatio ejus, ut manducent in saturitatem, et vestiantur usque ad vetustatem" (they shall not be kept in store, nor laid up: for her merchandise shall be for them that shall dwell before the Lord, that they may eat unto fulness, and be clothed for a continuance — Douay). I like the NRSV here, "will not be stored or hoarded, but her merchandise will supply abundant food and fine clothing for those who live in the presence of the LORD." Ibn Ezra suggests that part of Tyre's profits will be used to help the Jewish exiles during the reign of Cyrus in their return to Jerusalem.

13 June 2011

³² Fleming, p. 48.

³³ BDB.

³⁴ HAL.

Isaiah 24

Most commentators feel that ISAIAH 24 through 27 are part of a single prophetic unit. The prophecy is directed to the whole world. Keith says that “much of it must be understood of events yet to come [as furthermore] the prophecy has not yet received its accomplishment in all its particulars.” Cheyne well says, “As for the vagueness or mysteriousness of the language, this ought to be no difficulty to those who recognise in any degree the eschatological purport of the prophecy. The more the authors of the prophetic or apocalyptic literature have their minds directed to the ‘latter days,’ the more mysterious becomes their language, the greater their tendency to wide and general expressions.” It is gratifying to see that many understand this prophecy correctly as being related to the end of times. Horsley says, “The terms of the prophecy are such as cannot be naturally expounded of anything less than the general tribulation of the last ages, and the succeeding prosperity of the Church in the end of the world.” Our Savior said, “For then shall be great tribulation, such as was not since the beginning of the world to this time, no, nor ever shall be. And except those days should be shortened, there should no flesh be saved: but for the elect’s sake those days shall be shortened” (Matthew 24:21–22). President Joseph Fielding Smith explained that the earth would die and be resurrected, just as its human inhabitants. So we also read in Matthew 24:24, “Heaven and earth shall pass away, but my words shall not pass away.” Sometimes similar language is used to describe this process, but there are differences between the changes that will overtake the earth in (1) the beginning of the millennium (D&C 101:23–31; ISAIAH 65:17) and, (2) the post-millennium (D&C 88:18–26; 29:22–23; 77:1–2, ISAIAH 24:4, 19; ISAIAH 51:6). President Joseph Fielding Smith explained: “This earth is filling the measure of its creation. Today it is passing through its mortal state. The time will come when it shall die and pass away as do all things upon it. [In contrast] at the beginning of the Millennial reign, as we declare in the tenth article of the Articles of Faith, [the renewed earth] shall receive its paradisiacal glory, or be restored as it was before the fall of man.”¹ We see references to the burning and melting down, some of which seems to be associated with the second coming, and some is given in reference to the final transition of the earth into a celestial orb. We then move from this scene, to a glorious one where “a remnant left in the midst of the earth, who should lift up their voice and sing for the majesty of the Lord.”² They sing to the Righteous One, even Christ Jesus. The moments of joy are short-lived for the prophet, who sees some horrible scenes before we can once again rejoice. Some have thought it was the crucifixion and rejection of our Lord in the meridian of time. Others, that it may regard the impending doom and the horrors of the end of days. The great mission of our Lord and Savior, who would liberate the repentant from spirit prison, is alluded to. The Prophet Joseph Smith taught, referring to this chapter, that just as those who lived before the flood had a day of deliverance after the gospel was preached to them, so would those who came after Noah. While men generally believe that a man’s destiny is fixed forever at his death, to be eternally happy or miserable, this is not what the scriptures have to say on this matter; nor is man damned because he was deprived of an opportunity to know Christ in this life, explains Brother Joseph.³ The Lord would reign from both Zion and from Jerusalem during the Millennium. I include a brief note here on the circular logic of the higher critics. Ewald, beginning with ISAIAH 24:21 and spilling into ISAIAH 25:6–11, calls these verses a “beautiful and glowing picture of the Messianic reign.” So beautiful, indeed, that although Ewald assigns these set of chapters (ISAIAH 24–27) to some unknown, more modern writer, yet some strophes are regarded by Ewald as so beautiful that they must originate from some ancient writer, to include Isaiah himself! Stanley B. Frost⁴ according to Young, “maintains that these chapters were written by one who deliberately posed as Isaiah.” Wildberger, along similar lines says, speaking of Isaiah’s peculiar use of the word קריה for a city, rather than the more usual עיר, “This is once again a small indicator that there must have been something like an Isaiah school.” In other words, this “unknown writer” who, according to the higher critics, could not be Isaiah, wrote just like Isaiah, in every peculiarity of style and vocabulary. So the author must have (1) either found some ancient writing that was originally written by Isaiah; or (2) there was an Isaiah school of writing to train these men. It would be comic if it was not so tragic.

¹ Smith, Joseph Fielding. Church History and Modern Revelation, 1:132.

² Millennial Star, Volume 5, No. 2, July 1844.

³ Joseph Smith, Teachings of the Prophet Joseph Smith, selected and arranged by Joseph Fielding Smith, p.218.

⁴ Frost is the author of Old Testament apocalyptic, its origins and growth, Epworth Press, 1952.

vv. 1–5. Elder John Taylor wrote, “...it would seem that terrible judgments await the inhabitants of the world; that there will be a general destruction; the world will be full of war and confusion, the nations of the earth will be convulsed, and the wicked hurled out of it.”¹ Latter-day prophets have applied these verses of Isaiah to at least two distinct time periods when the earth will be cleansed: (1) the pre-millennial latter-day before the coming of our Lord; and (2) the post-millennial latter day, after Satan is permitted to torment the inhabitants of this earth one last time.

1 ¶ BEHOLD, the LORD maketh the earth empty, and maketh it waste, and turneth it upside down, and scattereth abroad the inhabitants thereof.

✓ perverteth the face thereof

BEHOLD, the LORD maketh the earth empty, and maketh it waste. The Dead Sea Scrolls² 4QIsa^c (Q) has the earth (הָאָרֶץ) while the Great Isaiah Scroll, 1QIsa^a (Q) ηασ the land (הָאֲרָצָה). The Masoretic text (M) has the earth (הָאָרֶץ). The Targum (T) has the Lord delivering the earth “over to the enemy,” and adds that “confusion shall cover the faces of the princes.” The LXX³ (G) reads, “Behold the Lord is about to destroy this inhabited land!” The Douay-Rheims (based on the Vulgate, V)⁴ has, “Behold the Lord shall lay waste the earth, and shall strip it.” The Targum (T), as translated by Pauli, tends to render the Aramaic אֲרָצָא as land rather than as earth. Stenning’s (T) translation systematically uses earth, for the complete globe rather than any one particular geographical area. ¶ Behold, הִנֵּה. Ibn Ezra (in ISAIAH 24:14) explains: “The prophet refers to the remote future [beginning with ISAIAH

24:1].” For Ibn Ezra, this remote future would be around the time of Gog and Magog. Cheyne explains, “‘Behold’ with a participle, in the prophets, almost always points to the future... [and it is better] to regard these as prophetic—as proceeding from the point of view of one who had attained a specially clear insight into the eternal purposes of God.” ¶ Make empty, בִּקְבֹּק (from the root, בָּקַק). The expression, to make empty or empty, according to Gesenius (see also Gray), is derived—as we have already pointed out in earlier chapters—from the sound made by a bottle when its liquid contents are poured out. Gesenius has it deriving from בִּקְבֹּק, pronounced roughly as bakbuk, with the Persian equivalent being gulgul, غلغل. Calvin says, “בִּלְקָהּ, he maketh bare the earth, because the earth is said to be ‘covered,’ when it is inhabited by a great multitude of men, and when it abounds in fruits and flocks; and it is said to be ‘uncovered’ or ‘laid bare,’ when it is deprived of its inhabitants, and when its covering is taken away from it, as if one were stripped of his raiment and ornaments.” Likewise in 2 Kings 21:13b: “And I will wipe Jerusalem as a man wipeth a dish, wiping it, and turning it upside down.” The word for dish used in 2 Kings 21:13 is אֶת־הַצִּלְחָתָה, and a similar word is used for jar (BDB) צִלְחִית, which matches this verse even more (see 2 Kings 2:20). ¶ And turneth, וְעָנָה. Gray explains, “The fundamental meaning of the root עָנָה, to bend, twist; and possibly the Hebrews thought of a ruin as a kind of distortion of the face of the earth into shapelessness.” Certainly this is a good way to describe distortions caused by such natural disasters as earthquakes, floods, volcano eruptions, hurricanes, and tsunamis. ¶ Upside down, פָּנֶיהָ. Or, as in the margin ||, the face (פָּנֶיהָ). So Alexander explains this expression, as to mean “the upper part or mouth of the vessel.” This matches well the allusion already spoken referred to in regards to making empty, בִּקְבֹּק a dish or jar that is turned over.

¶ And scatter, וְהִפִּיץ. Alexander explains that “וְהִפִּיץ is not to cause to flow, as in Arabic, but to scatter, according to the uniform Hebrew usage” (emphases added). The earth would be put through violent distortions. ¶ And turneth it upside down, and scattereth abroad the inhabitants thereof. The Targum (T) instead has, “confusion shall cover the faces of the princes, because they have transgressed the law, and scattered its inhabitants.” The LXX (G) reads, “He will lay it waste and uncover the face thereof and scatter abroad them who dwell therein.” The Douay-Rheims (based on the Vulgate, V) has, “And shall afflict the face thereof, and scatter abroad the inhabitants thereof.” Wildberger

¹ Taylor, John. The Government of God. Liverpool: S. W. Richards, 1852, Chapter 11.

² Beginning with Isaiah 24, I am also leaning on the Dead Sea Scrolls at the Israel Museum (<http://dss.collections.imj.org.il/isaiah>); Discoveries in the Judean Desert, XXXII, Qumran Cave 1, Volume II. Ulrich and Flint; the Accordance DSS-M and DSS-C; Biblical Dead Sea Scrolls (Logos Bible Software), as well as the Dead Sea Scrolls Bible (DSSB). Another excellent reference, although it is limited to the Great Isaiah Scroll (1QIsa^a), are the photos of Fred P Miller of each page of the Dead Sea Scrolls in its ancient script.

³ Thompson, beginning with Isaiah 22, unless otherwise mentioned.

⁴ To simplify, future references to the Douay-Rheims (based on the Vulgate, V), will appear simply as The Douay-Rheims (V), while direct quotes from the Vulgata Clementina in Latin will appear Vulgate (V). Special thanks to Michael Tweedale for making available these texts as part of the VulSearch free software under the GNU General Public License at <http://vulsearch.sourceforge.net/>.

prefers and disfigures as a translation of וְעִנְיָהּ (and turneth): “the face of the earth will be disfigured. That would fit in with what happens in floods, earthquakes, and drought.” Kaiser, especially in ISAIAH 24:4 and 7 thinks of severe drought, such as those mentioned in Rain in Due Season. Regarding וְעִנְיָהּ, Young has, “Possibly the reference is to the ravages that war brings, and that so upset and displace everything that it no longer looks as formerly.” ¶ Elder Orson Pratt explained, “Many portions of the earth which now lie buried will be thrown to the surface, and many portions which now are the upper crust of the earth will be turned under.”⁵

2 And it shall be, as with the people, so with the priest; [✓]as with the servant, so with his master; as with the maid, so with her mistress; as with the buyer, so with the seller; as with the lender, so with the borrower; as with the taker of usury, so with the giver of usury to him.

✓ or, prince

Each pair in these expressions seems to indicate the totality of humanity who will be affected. Ibn Ezra explains it this way, “When two nouns with the prefix כִּ follow each other, the phrase is elliptical; the complete sentence would be: as with the people so with the priest, and as with the priest so with the people, as with the servant so with the master, and as with the master so with the servant, etc.” ¶ And it shall be, as with the people, so with the priest. This expression is also used by Hosea: “And there shall be, like people, like priest: and I will punish them for their ways, and reward them their doings” (Hosea 4:9). This expression, explains Whitehouse, “seems to have been proverbial.” The Targum (ת), likewise, has the non-priest or laity, חֵיל וְנָאָה contrasted to the priest, כֹּהֵן. The Lamsa Peshitta (ܣ) renders the pair, “so with the priest; as with the servant,” while the Biblia Peshitta en Español (BPE ܣ) has it the same as the Masoretic text (מ). Elder Matthias F. Cowly taught, “We learn from the twenty-fourth chapter of Isaiah that the effects of this ancient apostasy would be so universal as to cover all classes of society, affecting not only the religious and social circles, but the business transactions of the human family.”⁶ The Prophet Joseph Smith, in the same article in which he spoke about the Great Apostasy and ISAIAH 24:5, seemed to make some allusion to ISAIAH 24:3: “I will proceed to tell you what the Lord requires of all people, high and low, rich and poor, male and female, ministers and people, professors of religion and non-professors, in order that they may enjoy the Holy Spirit of God to a fullness, and escape the judgments of God, which are almost ready to burst upon the nations of the earth. Repent of all your sins, and be baptized in water for the remission of them, in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost, and receive the ordinance of the laying on of the hands of him who is ordained and sealed unto this power, that ye may receive the Holy Spirit of God; and this is according to the Holy Scriptures, and the Book of Mormon; and the only way that man can enter into the celestial kingdom. These are the requirements of the new covenant, or first principles of the Gospel of Christ: then ‘Add to your faith, virtue; and to virtue, knowledge; and to knowledge, temperance; and to temperance, patience; and to patience, godliness; and to godliness, brotherly kindness; and to brotherly kindness, charity [or love]; for if these things be in you, and abound, they make you that ye shall neither be barren nor unfruitful, in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ.’”⁷ President Spencer W. Kimball taught, speaking about ISAIAH 24:2, “The term priest is here used to denote all religious leaders of any faith ... From among the discordant voices we are shocked at those of many priests who encourage the defilement of men and wink at the eroding trends and who deny the omniscience of God. Certainly these men should be holding firm [regarding virtuous principles], yet some yield to popular clamor.”⁸ Elder John Taylor also used ISAIAH 24:2 to describe priests from other religious denominations,⁹ as did Elder Bruce R. McConkie, “If there are false Christs, there are false witnesses of these Christs. If there are false churches, there are false ministers.”¹⁰ A number of non-LDS exegetes have similar opinions. Gill suggests that these are not the righteous priests, but the apostate, “who have led the people into superstition and idolatry; blind leaders of the blind, and so both fall into the ditch together.” Jennings sounds very much as a LDS, “The New Testament [has], ‘For that day shall not come except there come the apostasy first,’ and every falsely called ‘Christian’ pulpit shall ring with open attacks on the ⁷ Smith, Joseph. Teachings of the Prophet Joseph Smith. Selected by Joseph Fielding Smith. Salt Lake City: Deseret Book Press, 1938.

“January 4, 1833, the Prophet wrote to Mr. N. E. Seaton, an editor of a newspaper, the following words of counsel and warning concerning the state of the world and the purpose of the Lord in the restoration spoken of by the ancient prophets,” pp. 14–17.

⁸ Kimball, Spencer W. CR April 1971, Saturday Morning session.

⁹ Taylor, John. Journal of Discourses 11:50.

¹⁰ McConkie, Bruce R. The Millennial Messiah, False Prophets Precede His Coming, False Prophets Minister on Every Hand, p. 73.

⁵ Elder Orson Pratt, Journal of Discourses, 18:315–316.

⁶ Cowly, Mattias F. Cowley’s Talks on Doctrine. Apostasy.

Person and Work of the Son of God. I can leave my readers to decide as to there being any such indications this very day.” ¶ As with the servant, so with his master. As with the maid, so with her mistress. As with the buyer, so with the seller. As with the lender, so with the borrower. As with the taker of usury, so with the giver of usury to him. Ezekiel 7:12 also seems to be given in the same vein: “The time is come, the day draweth near: let not the buyer rejoice, nor the seller mourn: for wrath is upon all the multitude thereof.” Rabbi Rashi (in Rosenberg) has, “Not like other travelers, that the master is led by the slave, and the mistress is led by her maidservant; the master is esteemed and the slave is held in low esteem, the mistress is esteemed and the maidservant is held in low esteem, but when the captor leads the captives, all are equal before him.” The Lamsa Peshitta (ܣ) renders the first pair, “his master; as with her mistress,” while the BPE (ܣ) has it the same as the Masoretic text (מִי). For the last clause, the Douay-Rheims (V) has, “As with him that calleth for his money, so with him that oweth.” Gill says, “There shall be no distinction of superiors and inferiors; as not of prince and subjects, so not of master and servant, mistress and maid; no respect will be had to persons, but the one shall be treated even as the other.” Regarding the lender and the borrower, mentioned here in ISAIAH 24:2, President Anthony W. Irvins wrote in 1932, “And we are nearing that condition now [regarding out of control debt]. I do not know who is the worse off today, the banker who is lending money, or the person to Whom he lends it.”¹¹

3 The land shall be utterly emptied, and utterly spoiled: for the LORD hath spoken this word.

The Targum (ܬ) has “utterly trampled underfoot,” for spoiled. The LXX (G) reads, “With destruction the land will be destroyed, and with spoiling this land will be ransacked: for the mouth of the Lord hath spoken this.” The Douay-Rheims (V) has, for the first half, “With desolation shall the earth be laid waste, and it shall be utterly spoiled.” Some of the Rabbis interpreted this of Israel, but it is preferable to look at the subject from an eschatological worldwide perspective. Elder Marion G. Romney of the Council of the Twelve Apostles, spoke in the 1968 General Conference about searching for peace: “I call your attention to the following quotations from the scriptures: Isaiah, envisioning our day, declared: ‘The land shall be utterly emptied, and utterly spoiled. . . .’ And then, as if in retrospect, he lamented: ‘Therefore hath the curse devoured the earth, and they that dwell therein are desolate: therefore the inhabitants of the earth are burned, and few men left’ (ISAIAH 24:3, 6) . . . President George Albert Smith, speaking from this stand in 1950, said: ‘It will not be long until calamities will overtake the human family unless there is speedy repentance. It will not be long before those who are scattered over the face of the earth by millions will die like flies because of what will come’ (Era, Vol. 53 [May 1950], p. 412).”¹² President Brigham Young quoted Isaiah when he said, “There is no true faith, for all is uncertainty—every man pursuing his own way. They have no light of revelation to guide them, and that which would have saved this nation from its present awful chastisement they have cast out from them, therefore ‘Behold the Lord maketh the earth empty, and maketh it waste, and turneth it upside down, and scattereth abroad the inhabitants thereof. The land shall be utterly emptied, and utterly spoiled; for the Lord hath spoken this word.’”¹³ ¶ Regarding the formula, “For the LORD hath spoken this word”

(כִּי יְהוָה דִּבֶּר אֶת־הַדְּבָר הַזֶּה), Henderson explains that it “is usual with the prophets, and expresses the certainty of the events predicted.”

4 The earth mourneth [and] fadeth away, the world languisheth [and] fadeth away, the haughty people of the earth do languish.

✓ the height of the people

Regarding the last clause the Targum (ܬ) adds, “the strength of the people of the land hath come to an end.” The LXX (G) reads, “The land mourned and this empire is destroyed—the lofty people of the land mourned.” The Peshitta (ܣ)¹⁴ has mourn instead of “fadeth away,” in the first clause. For the second clause, BPE (ܣ) has the world as weeping, sitting, and making lamentation. The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “The earth mourned, and faded away, and is weakened: the world faded away, the height of the people of the earth is weakened.” נָבַל, fadeth, is a favorite word with the Prophet Isaiah, and he also uses it in ISAIAH 40:7–8, there to describe the wilting flower. Regarding תִּבֵּל, Delitzsch has, “‘The world’ (תִּבֵּל) is used here in ISAIAH 24:4, as in ISAIAH 26:9 (always in the form of a proper name, and without the article), as a parallel to ¹¹ Irvins, Anthony W. CR October 1932.

¹² Romney, Marion G. Conference Report, April 1968, p. 113.

¹³ Young, Brigham. Journal of Discourses 9:367. Discourse delivered in the Bowery, Great Salt Lake City, August 31, 1862.

¹⁴ Unless otherwise noted, from this chapter on, the Peshitta (ܣ) is based on George Lamsa’ Peshitta (ܣ) and the BPE (ܣ) translations. The PPE, of course, is in Spanish, so I am speaking about equivalent meanings.

‘the earth’ (אֶרֶץ), with which it alternates throughout this cycle of prophecies. It is used poetically to signify the globe, and that without limitation... and therefore ‘the earth’ is also to be understood here in its most comprehensive sense.” Young says, “Kittel asserts that תבל is never used of the land of Judah but always of the inhabited world... [and] hence he takes אֶרֶץ in the sense, ‘inhabitant¹⁵ of the earth.’” President Joseph Fielding Smith quoted ISAIAH 24:4 (along with ISAIAH 51:6; Psalm 102:25–28; 2 Peter 3:10; Matthew 24:35; D&C 29:22–25; 88:25–27) and the writings of the Prophet Joseph Smith and Brigham Young (D&C 130:8–9; Journal of Discourses 7: 163) to explain that (1) after the millennium, or thousand years of peace, there would once again come upon the earth the influence of Satan along with contention and wickedness; (2) the earth would die and Satan would be defeated; and (3) the earth would be resurrected into a glorious celestial body that would radiate light becoming a great Urim and Thummim. Furthermore, President Joseph Fielding Smith wrote: “To Joseph Smith the Lord said, speaking of this earth... That is what the Lord means by the expression: ‘Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth.’”¹⁶ In other words, only those who can abide a Celestial glory will be permitted to dwell upon this earth at that time. ¶ The haughty people of the earth do languish. Both Rabbis Rashi and David Kimhi believe that the expression “the lofty people” (גִּבּוֹרִים), the people refer to the nobility (Slotki/Rosenberg). Regarding haughty people, גִּבּוֹרִים, Barnes writes, “Margin ||, as in the Hebrew, ‘Height of the people.’ It denotes the great, the nobles, the princes of the land.” I like what Ludlow says here: “The ‘most exalted people on earth’ (New Jewish Version) could be those who exalt themselves and thus become the proud or haughty. They might also be the ancient Israelites or members of Christ’s latter-day church who have been called and ordained to great callings but who ‘languish’ (New Jewish Version) or grow prideful and fail to fulfill their stewardship. Whoever they are, their primary sin is that they have changed the teachings, laws &c.” As Ludlow tells us, no one is exempt, whether it is prideful nations or individuals. Elder Neal A. Maxwell wrote: “In Isaiah’s remarkable prophesy contained in the first part of chapter 24 of his book, we read that the ‘haughty people of the earth do languish.’ One rendering of the words ‘haughty people’ is the ‘upper class.’ Languish connotes a drooping, a spiritlessness, a loss of animation ... Hence the disappointment in the secular search for the meaning of life. Hence the drooping of the human spirit in which the conscience can come to be regarded as an intruder. Indeed, ennui, boredom, and humdrum hedonism are descriptive of those thus afflicted.” Elder Maxwell concludes, “It is this [glorious perspective of the Restoration of the Gospel of Jesus Christ] which can give meaning to life and which can remedy those conditions in which people languish and droop and are desolate ... The restored gospel is thus a gospel of hope and meaning: not a vague, generalized hope but a message of specific and justified hope for which myriad mortals hunger and which all mortals need.”¹⁷

5 The earth also is defiled under the inhabitants thereof; because they have transgressed the laws, changed the ordinance, broken the everlasting covenant.

The Prophet Joseph Smith said, regarding the great apostasy: “After this chosen family [Israel] had rejected Christ and His proposals, the heralds of salvation said to them, ‘Lo we turn unto the Gentiles;’ and, the Gentiles received the covenant, and were grafted in from whence the chosen family were broken off: but the Gentiles have not continued in the goodness of God, but have departed from the faith that was once delivered to the Saints, and have broken the covenant in which their fathers were established (see ISAIAH 24:5); and have become high-minded, and have not feared; therefore, but few of them will be gathered with the chosen family ... [W]e may look at the Christian world and see the apostasy there has been from the apostolic platform; and who can look at this and not exclaim, in the language of Isaiah, ‘The earth also is defiled under the inhabitants thereof; because they have transgressed the laws, changed the ordinances, and broken the everlasting covenant?’”¹⁸ Then Elder Ezra Taft Benson also spoke of the falling away that would precede the glorious latter-day restoration of the Gospel of Jesus Christ upon the earth: “As the restored Church, we affirm that with the passing of the apostolic age, the Church drifted into a condition of apostasy ... [I]n the Old Testament, prophets had prophesied in a similar manner. Isaiah indicated that the earth would be defiled

¹⁵ Or, people.

¹⁶ Smith, Joseph Fielding. The Restoration of All Things. Salt Lake City: Deseret Book, 1973, pp. 295–300.

¹⁷ Maxwell, Neal A. Sermons Not Spoken. Salt Lake City, Utah: Bookcraft, 1985. ‘Search the Scriptures,’ pp. 65, 68–72, 82.

¹⁸ Smith, Joseph. Teachings of the Prophet Joseph Smith. Selected by Joseph Fielding Smith. Salt Lake City: Deseret Book Press, 1938. “January 4, 1833, the Prophet wrote to Mr. N. E. Seaton, an editor of a newspaper, the following words of counsel and warning concerning the state of the world and the purpose of the Lord in the restoration spoken of by the ancient prophets,” pp. 14–17.

under the inhabitants thereof because they have transgressed the laws, changed the ordinance, broken the everlasting covenant. (ISAIAH 24:5.) ... The everlasting covenant is the gospel of Jesus Christ. Amos had spoken of a famine that should come in the land for ‘hearing the words of the Lord’ and that people would ‘run to and fro to seek the work of the Lord, and shall not find it’ (Amos 8:11). Not only by history, which is quite conclusive, but through prophecy also we have been informed definitely that there was and there would be a complete apostasy from the truth. Many of the early reformers recognized this fact as they struck out against the false teachings and practices of their day. Wesley, the founder of Methodism, lamented that the ‘Christians had turned heathen again and had only a dead form left.’ Even here in America, Roger Williams, head of the oldest Baptist congregation in the land, recognized, as he quit the ministry, that there was no divinely constituted authority or church upon the face of the earth, nor would there be such a church until one arose having apostles and other officers as found in the church established in the Meridian of Time ... I testify in all humility that God has again spoken from the heavens, following a long period of apostasy, that he has raised up a prophet, that Joseph Smith was the instrument in his hands in restoring again to the earth the Holy Priesthood, the true Church organization with all the blessings enjoyed in former days”¹⁹ Elder Sterling W. Sill, in General conference compared the spiritual famine spoken of in Amos 8:11–12 to ISAIAH 24:5.²⁰ ¶ The earth also is defiled under the inhabitants thereof. The LXX (Ϛ) reads, “As for the land, it transgressed by means of its inhabitants.” The Peshitta (ܣ) has like rather than under. The Douay-Rheims (ϣ) has, “And the earth is infected by the inhabitants thereof.” This concept of the earth being defiled, and the earth defiled וְהָאֲרֶץ חִנְפָּה, is critical to our LDS theology. Throughout the Book of Mormon we read about the blessing or cursing of the land, such as: “But the word of the Lord was verified, which he spake unto our fathers, saying that: Inasmuch as ye will keep my commandments ye shall prosper in the land” (Jarom 1:9b), or a few pages later, the very opposite, “For the Lord would not suffer, after he had led them out of the land of Jerusalem and kept and preserved them from falling into the hands of their enemies, yea, he would not suffer that the words should not be verified, which he spake unto our fathers, saying that: Inasmuch as ye will not keep my commandments ye shall not prosper in the land. Wherefore, the Lord did visit them in great judgment; nevertheless, he did spare the righteous that they should not perish, but did deliver them out of the hands of their enemies” (Omni 1:6–7). Likewise, Alexander points out: “The land of [Israel] is said to be profaned as being a holy land or consecrated to Jehovah.” Skinner points out: “The condition of the world resembles that which preceded the Deluge (Genesis 6:11).” Such will be the case before the second coming of our Savior. ¶ Because they have transgressed the laws, changed the ordinance, broken the everlasting covenant. The Targum (ܬ) has “made the festivals to cease” instead of ordinances. The Furthermore, the Targum (ܬ) has changed instead of broken. The LXX (Ϛ) reads, “Because they transgressed the law, and changed the institutions—the everlasting covenant, therefore a curse devoureth the land.” Young says, “[Isaiah] has taken the language of the theocracy, terms such as laws, statute, eternal covenant, they are reckoned guilty, etc., designations which belong to Israel; and he has applied these to the whole world.”

¶ Laws תּוֹרָה,²¹ ordinance חֹק, everlasting covenant בְּרִית עוֹלָם. ¶ The expression everlasting covenant בְּרִית עוֹלָם, is first mentioned in relation to the post-flood covenant (Genesis 9:16, see also 1–17) between God and man. We often focus on what God agrees to do, that is, to withhold another universal Deluge. But it also appears that mankind was also commanded to keep some very specific laws as mentioned in Genesis 9:1–7. There are at least fourteen instances of the expression in the Old Testament, which can be found in Genesis, Leviticus, 2 Samuel, Isaiah, Jeremiah and Ezekiel. In the Prophets, the expression is often looking to a future date, and to a future covenant, “and I will make an everlasting covenant with them,” וַיַּבְרִית עִלָּם אֶבְרֹתָ לָהֶם (ISAIAH 61:8), and וַיַּבְרִית עִלָּם אֶבְרֹתָ לָהֶם (Jeremiah 32:40, literally, and I will make with them covenant everlasting). Beside the everlasting covenant mentioned in relation to the flood and to circumcision, we have that all important everlasting covenant with Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, all of which point to the everlasting covenant διαθήκης αἰωνίου, even that of Jesus Christ, Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ himself. Elder B. H. Roberts elucidates: “The prophet cannot have reference to transgressing the law, and changing the ordinances of the Mosaic covenant, for the Mosaic Law was not an everlasting covenant, but merely a temporary law, ‘added to the Gospel because of transgression’ (Galatians 3). It was a law of carnal commandments to act as a schoolmaster to bring the people to Christ; and when Christ came was laid aside, having fulfilled its purpose. It was not, therefore an everlasting covenant, and hence was not the thing the prophet Isaiah had in mind in his great prophecy. On the other hand, Paul refers to the blood of Christ as the ‘blood of the everlasting covenant’ (Hebrews 13:20). Hence, it is the covenant sealed by that blood to which Isaiah must have had reference—the Gospel; and the transgression of its laws, the changing of its ordinances, the breaking of that covenant, was to result in making desolate the earth and the inhabitants thereof. Hence, the everlasting covenant in the passage represents the gospel covenant.”²² Elsewhere, Elder B. H. Roberts has, “Because they have broken—not the covenant made with Moses, or with Abraham—but because they have broken the everlasting covenant; of which covenant the blood of Christ is the sign and seal. In other words, they have broken the Gospel covenant—departed from the Gospel faith—hence the predicted judgment.”²³ ¶ For ordinance אֶרֶץ, Calvin feels it refers to the commandments. Finally, Calvin says, “The third term employed by him is בְּרִית, by which he means a covenant and contract.”

¹⁹ Elder Ezra Taft Benson, Of the Council of the Twelve Apostles, October 1949 General Conference, p. 26–28.

²⁰ Elder Sterling W. Sill, Assistant to the Council of the Twelve Apostles, 3 April 1956, General Conference, p. 14.

²¹ Some exegetes have spoken about the unusual form the word takes in the plural. It may be an unusual form, but it is quite typical. תּוֹרָה is often translated as the law/s. The very first usage of the word וְתוֹרָתִי, appears in Genesis 26:5, ‘and my laws.’

6 Therefore hath the curse devoured the earth, and they that dwell therein are desolate: therefore the inhabitants of the earth are burned, and few men left.

Therefore hath the curse devoured the earth, and they that dwell therein are desolate: The Masoretic text (מ) has devoured [the] earth (אֶרֶץ אֲכָלָה), which is also supported Dead Sea Scrolls (Q) 4QIsa^c fragment 24 (אֶרֶץ אֲכָלָה), but not by 1QIsa^a (אֲכָלָה) which has dropped earth from the expression. The Targum (T) adds, “Because of perjury (בְּיָמִין, ‘an oath’ from יָמָא, ‘to swear’).” The LXX (G) reads, “Because they who dwell therein have sinned, therefore the inhabitants of the land shall be distressed.” The BPE (S) has mourned and Lamsa Peshitta has “sit in mourning” for curse devoured. The Douay-Rheims (V) has, for the second clause, “And the inhabitants thereof shall sin.” ¶ Curse.

²² Elder B. H. Roberts. Improvement Era, June 1908. Seventy’s Council Table.

²³ B. H. Roberts. Seventy’s Course, 2:205–206, The Apostatic Period., The Testimony of Prophecy.

²⁴ Translators sometimes use brackets [] or italics to indicate an ellipsis. Brackets [] are also used to indicate a lacunae. That is, pieces or fragments of the original are missing. In this case the Aleph א is missing from the word אֲכָלָה, devoured, but can safely be assumed to have been part of this word, based on either the Masoretic text (מ) or other fragments of the Dead Sea Scrolls (Q).

Luther and Calvin see this reference, those found in the Rain in Due Season. ¶ Desolate. Elder Neal A. Maxwell wrote: “While we usually think of apostasy solely in terms of theological deviation, we often fail to see its connections to the everyday, human condition in which the consequences of that deviation are enormous. To continue the suggestion about connecting up the scriptures and the human condition, the words of Isaiah indicate that the dwellers of the earth will be ‘desolate’ (ISAIAH 24:6). ‘Desolate’ connotes joylessness or a grief-stricken condition—a state kindred to the spiritlessness which the word languish connotes.”²⁵ ¶ Therefore the inhabitants of the earth are burned, and few men left. The LXX (G) reads, “And few are the men who shall be left.” The Peshitta (S) has destroyed (Lamsa) / massacred (BPE) rather than burned. The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “And therefore they that dwell therein shall be mad, and few men shall be left.”

¶ Burned, בָּרָק. Gray has, “The inhabitants . . . are scorched” Revelation 16:8 records that, as a result of the pouring out of the fourth vial of God’s wrath, ‘men were scorched with great heat.’” Elder Orson Pratt taught, “To the query, how many are to be overtaken by this last great judgment, Isaiah would answer, ‘the inhabitants of the earth are burned and few men left.’ What, only a few persons to be converted, only a few to receive the true Gospel, and be prepared for the coming of the Bridegroom; only a few people to escape this awful desolation? So says the Prophet Isaiah; that is, few in comparison to the great and numerous population of our globe.”²⁶ Elder B. H. Roberts wrote, “Clearly all this prophecy of Isaiah’s has not yet been fulfilled; for the earth, however much it may have been defiled under the inhabitants thereof, has not yet been burned, and but few men left. That is a judgment that still hangs over the world; and will come upon it as sure as the Lord has spoken the word.”²⁷ Elder Bruce R. McConkie wrote, “Fire, flaming fire, literal fire, fire that burns trees, melts ore, and consumes corruption—such shall accompany the Lord Jesus and cover the earth when he returns in all the glory of his Father’s kingdom. Not only will the Lord come in flaming fire, but that fire will produce fervent, glowing, intense heat, heat that has not been known in the entire history of the earth, heat that will cause the very elements to melt, the mountains to flow down at his presence, and the very earth itself, as now constituted, to dissolve . . . Only those who are quickened, as were Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego in the furnace of Nebuchadnezzar, shall be able to abide the day of burning. In that day, as Isaiah says ... ‘The inhabitants of the earth are burned and few men left’ (ISAIAH 24:6).”²⁸ Here we can turn to the questions often posed by the Prophets of God, regarding the human qualities we are to possess if we wish to abide that day. We have three such who (וְ) questions (emphasis added). “Who among us shall dwell with the devouring fire? who among us shall dwell with everlasting burnings? He that walketh righteously, and speaketh uprightly; he that despiseth the gain of oppressions, that shaketh his hands from holding of bribes, that stoppeth his ears from hearing of blood, and shutteth his eyes from seeing evil; (ISAIAH 33:14b–15); “Who shall ascend into the hill of the LORD? or who shall stand in his holy place? He that hath clean hands, and a pure heart; who hath not lifted up his soul unto vanity, nor sworn deceitfully. He shall receive the blessing from the LORD, and righteousness from the God of his salvation” (Psalm 24:3–5); and “But who may abide the day of his coming? and who shall stand when he appeareth? for he is like a refiner’s fire, and like fullers’ soap” (Malachi 3:2).

²⁵ Maxwell, Neal A. Sermons Not Spoken. Salt Lake City, Utah: Bookcraft, 1985. ‘Search the Scriptures,’ pp. 65, 68–72, 82.

²⁶ Elder Orson Pratt, Journal of Discourses 20:14–16.

²⁷ B. H. Roberts. Seventy’s Course, 2:205–206, The Apostatic Period., The Testimony of Prophecy.

7 The new wine mourneth, the vine languisheth, all the merryhearted do sigh.

The Targum (ܬ) has, “All that drink wine mourn, because the vines are broken down &c.” The Peshitta (ܣ) has grain rather than new wine. The Douay-Rheims (V) has, for the first half, “The vintage hath mourned, the vine hath languished away.” Joel 1:10 has a similar note, “The field is wasted, the land mourneth; for the corn²⁹ is wasted: the new wine is dried up, the oil languisheth.” The Dead Sea Scrolls 4QIsa^c (Q) adds oil ³⁰(יִצְהָר) after vine. Not so the 1QIsa^a (Q). Rabbi Ibn Ezra (in Rosenberg) suggests that it is the vines that have been neglected and left without pruning or care so the vine no longer yields. Gray, along with a number of exegetes, here suggests that new wine, תִּירָשׁ (or, תִּירָשׁ) refers to grape juice. More likely, it was partially fermented. The Bible makes it clear that wine in excess can have a negative effect on people, and more importantly, the Lord in these latter days has prohibited its use. This has been a great blessing to members of the Church. Drinking of wine is much more than a health hazard; wine and other forms of alcohol are often associated with violations of the law of chastity (both today and in Biblical times). At any rate, in this verse people are weeping because they do not have wine to drink. I have seen plenty of that, but never because they lacked grape juice! Those who love their wine will whine because they will not find it. Vineyards will also be abandoned, and probably because of conditions of drought. Young says, “When [God] deprives them of their luxury, they do not turn to Him, but sigh at their own supposed misfortune.” Regarding new wine, also see notes under ISAIAH 5:2.

8 The mirth of tabrets ceaseth, the noise of them that rejoice endeth, the joy of the harp ceaseth.

Instead of the noise &c., the Targum (ܬ) has, “the tumultuous assembly of the mighty is restrained.” The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “The mirth of timbrels hath ceased, the noise of them that rejoice is ended, the melody of the harp is silent.” Revelation 18:22 has, “And the voice of harpers, and musicians, and of pipers, and trumpeters, shall be heard no more at all in thee; and no craftsman, of whatsoever craft he be, shall be found any more in thee; and the sound of a millstone shall be heard no more at all in thee.” (See notes on ISAIAH 24:10.) The lack of wine spoken of in the previous verse may mean less drunken revelry?

9 They shall not drink wine with a song; strong drink shall be bitter to them that drink it.

They shall not drink wine with a song. The LXX (G) reads, “They are confounded: they have drunk no wine.” Whitehouse points us to Amos, “And I will turn your feasts into mourning, and all your songs into lamentation” (Amos 8:10). Whitehouse says, “The mirth of tabrets would be the inevitable accompaniment of the vintage-season commemorated in the festival of Succoth (or Tabernacles).” Perhaps the drought would mean not only a lack of a vintage, but also of the general harvest. ¶ Strong drink shall be bitter to them that drink it. Instead of “strong drink,” the Targum (ܬ) has, “old wine.” Old wine is considered the best and most refined of wines. The LXX (G) reads, “The palm wine was bitter to them who drank it.” The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “The drink shall be bitter to them that drink it.” Lowth and Horsley suggest that שִׁכָּר (in LXX, σικερα), refers to wine made out of the palm tree, that is, from dates. In ISAIAH 5:11, Lowth explains, ²⁸ McConkie, Bruce R. A New Witness for the Articles of Faith. Salt Lake City, Utah: Deseret Book Company, 1985. pp. 644–646.

²⁹ Not maize, but rather grains.

³⁰ The Dead Sea Scrolls DSSB (Q) adds it as a separate clause, the oil: “The new wine dries up, the vine, the oil decays &c.” I had supposed that the intention of the 4QIsa^c (Q) scribe was to specify olive tree, in contrast to a grapevine. יִצְהָר, however, is seldom used other than for grapevines and never for an olive tree.

“Judea was famous for the abundance and excellence of its palm-trees; and consequently had plenty of this wine.” Even alcohol will not be able to reduce the feelings of despair of those who drink it.

10 The city of confusion is broken down: every house is shut up, that no man may come in.

The city of confusion is broken down: The Targum (Ⲯ) has “Their city is broken down, and laid desolate.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Every city is desolated.” The Peshitta (Ⲫ) has the city being plundered rather than “broken down.” The Douay-Rheims (ⲩ) has, “The city of vanity is broken down.” תְּהוֹמָה is often rendered as vanity, confusion, emptiness, wilderness, or nothingness. Rabbi Joseph Kara (in Rosenberg), “This is Jerusalem, formerly called ‘joyous city,’ will now be called ‘wasted city.’” So also Delitzsch who has, “We understand it as referring to Jerusalem, as the majority of commentators have done, including even Schegg and Stier... after we have taken ‘the earth’ in the sense of kosmos (the world). It is rather the central city of the world as estranged from God; and it is here designated according to its end, which end will be tohu, as its nature was tohu.” Ibn Ezra has, “The city whose inhabitants go after vain things.” Rawlinson says, “No special city seems to be intended.” Wordsworth has, “The Earth of the last days is represented as a city of confusion. It will be in the same condition, socially and politically, as it was physically before its creation in its present form, viz. as a city of confusion, Heb. tohu [תְּהוֹמָה], a remarkable word; see on Genesis 1:2, where that word is rendered without form, and where it represents the Earth in its ruined condition, before its reproduction in its present state. The analogy is this. The Earth will be reduced to a ruinous and chaotic state, morally and socially, before the future creation of the ‘new heavens and new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness’ (2 Peter 3:13).” Cheyne also believes that chaos תְּהוֹמָה, “is an allusion to the narrative... of the Creation... [and] it is the most striking expression for utter desolation [no germ of life remaining] which the prophet could have chosen.” Gill similarly explains תְּהוֹמָה: “Or ‘of vanity’, as the Vulgate Latin version; or of ‘emptiness’ or ‘desolation’; the word is ‘tohu,’ used in Genesis 1:2 this is to be understood not of Bethel, where one of Jeroboam’s calves was, called Bethaven, or ‘the house of vanity’; nor Samaria, the chief city of the ten tribes; nor Jerusalem; but mystical Babylon,³¹ whose name signifies ‘confusion’ ... in which there is nothing but disorder and irregularity, no truth, justice, or religion; a city of vanity, full of superstition and idolatry, and devoted to ruin and desolation; and will be broke to pieces by the judgments of God, which will come upon it in one hour, Revelation 18:8.” In Revelation 24:21 we read, “And a mighty angel took up a stone like a great millstone, and cast it into the sea, saying, Thus with violence shall that great city Babylon be thrown down, and shall be found no more at all.” The very next verse, Revelation 24:22, is associated with ISAIAH 24:8, as we have already seen. And yet another reason to believe the city here mentioned is Babylon is found in ISAIAH 25:2: “For thou hast made of a city an heap; of a defenced city a ruin: a palace of strangers to be no city; it shall never be built.” The clause it shall never be built alludes principally to Babylon, although there would be others who would suffer a similar fate. In the introduction to ISAIAH 24 we said that most commentators believe that ISAIAH 24 through 27 form part of a single unit. Isaiah often introduces a subject and then little by little comes back to it. We first hear some clues about the city here and then again in ISAIAH 25:2. Gray writes, “The city of Chaos is the city of idolatry, of sham gods, in contrast to Jerusalem, ‘the city of God’; it is essentially, as the capital of the world empire which is in rebellion against God...” Jennings writes: “I take no specific city is intended by the City of Confusion, but as in Revelations 16:9, where it is termed ‘the great city,’ not a literal city (for that would not accord with the intensely spiritual and symbolic character of that book), but what man has been building as in united opposition to God, as Babel of old, expressive of their pride... as the central city of Jerusalem is really representative of all Israel, as Babel was the representative of the whole earth, so here there is again a symbolic city that represents the proud building of the whole earth...” Yeah, the proud and great and spacious building with people pointing their mocking fingers at those who partake of the good fruit of the gospel of Jesus Christ (1 Nephi 8:26–27). Gray continues, is broken נִשְׁבְּרָה, “compare ‘Babylon is fallen and broken,’ Jeremiah 51:8 like a cup (ib. v. 7). Possibly the writer has this v. in mind, for the use of נִשְׁבָּר of the destruction of a city is uncommon.”

¶ Every house is shut up, that no man may come in. The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “The houses will be shut up that none may enter.” The Peshitta (Ⲫ) has almacén (storage place or store, BPE) / cellar (Lamsa) rather than house. Ibn Ezra in Slotki/Rosenberg have that either “Most houses will be deserted, and there will be no one to enter them (Ibn Ezra³²) [or] alternatively, most of the houses will be in ruins (Kimhi).” Gill writes, “Not for fear of the enemy, and to keep him out; but because there are no inhabitants in them, being all destroyed by one means or another, by fire or sword, or famine or pestilence, so that there is none to go in or out.” ¶ Both ISAIAH 24:10 and 24:12 seem to be strongly related to ISAIAH 6:11, where Isaiah asks the question “Lord, how long?” For how long would the Gospel be preached? The answer seems to be: to the very end. Until every house is emptied and every city destroyed. In D&C 88:88–91 we read: “And after your testimony cometh wrath and indignation upon the people. For after your testimony cometh the testimony of earthquakes, that shall cause groanings in the midst of her, and men shall fall upon the ground and shall not be able to stand. And also cometh the testimony of the voice of thunders, and the voice of lightnings, and the voice of tempests, and the voice of the waves of the sea heaving themselves beyond their bounds. And all things shall be in commotion; and surely, men's hearts shall fail them; for fear shall come upon all people.”

³¹ Also, August Dillmann, according to Wade.

³² “They had to count the houses, in order to know the number of the soldiers. And the houses have ye broken down. The houses that were near the wall from without” (Ibn Ezra).

11 [There is] a crying for wine in the streets; all joy is darkened, the mirth of the land is gone.

[There is] a crying for wine in the streets. The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “Raise the mournful cry everywhere for the wine.” The BPE (Ⲥ) renders this as does the Masoretic text (מ). Once again, we hear about the shortage of wine. Joel 1:5 has a similar bend, “Awake, ye drunkards, and weep; and howl, all ye drinkers of wine, because of the new wine; for it is cut off from your mouth.” ¶ All joy is darkened, the mirth of the land is gone. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “all joy is ended” rather than darkened. The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “A stop is put to all the joy of the land—all the joy of the land is gone.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲯ) has, “All mirth is forsaken: the joy of the earth is gone away.” Regarding עֲרֵבָה, darkened, the Rabbis once again make some interesting points. Ibn Ezra explains that the word עֲרֵבָה is related to עָרַב. That is, darkened is related to evening, and as Rabbi Joseph Kara (in Rosenberg) says, “All joy is confused. The two interpretations are closely related, since darkness leads to impairment or confusion of perception.”

12 In the city is left desolation, and the gate is smitten with destruction.

The Targum (Ⲯ) has, for the second clause, “and tumult at the destruction of the gates.” The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “The cities will be left desolate, and the houses being forsaken will be destroyed.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲯ) has, for the second clause, “And calamity shall oppress the gates.” Alexander writes, “The gate is here named as the most important part of the city; but it does not directly mean the city itself.” Barnes says, “The idea is, that the gates of the city, once so secure, are how battered down and demolished, so that the enemy can enter freely.” Henderson explains, “The gates of cities were well fortified. When laid in ruins, as here expressed, there was no more defence.” Birks well says, “It was threatened long before that ‘the cities would be wasted without inhabitant, and the land with desolation.’³³ The fulfillment is now shewn.” And even before that, we read in Rain in Due Season what would befall rebellion against our God, “And he shall besiege thee in all thy gates, until thy high and fenced walls come down, wherein thou trustedst, throughout all thy land: and he shall besiege thee in all thy gates throughout all thy land, which the LORD thy God hath given thee” (Deuteronomy 28:52). Rabbi Rosenberg has: “Redak [Rabbi David Kimhi] interprets this verse as a prophecy for the future, for the Messianic era, when Gog and Magog, as well as all sinful nations, will meet with divine retribution, and very few people will survive, as the prophet relates in the following verses.”

vv. 13–15. There will be few followers of Christ in the end of times. They shall glorify and sing praises to God. An invitation is made to all who will, to join these choirs of praise.

13 ¶ When thus it shall be in the midst of the land among the people, [there shall be] as the shaking of an olive tree, [and] as the gleaning grapes when the vintage is done.

When thus it shall be in the midst of the land among the people, [there shall be] as the shaking of an olive tree (see ISAIAH 17:6). The Targum (Ⲯ) thinks this verse as that of the few solitary righteous who are left: “When thus the righteous shall be left alone in the midst of the earth, among the kingdoms.” The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “All this shall come to pass in this land, in the midst of the nations. As when one shall shake an olive tree, so shall they be shaken.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲯ) has, “For it shall be thus in the midst of the earth, in the midst of the people, as if a few olives, that remain, should be shaken out of the olive tree.” As in ISAIAH 17:5–6, where very few men shall be left and this is compared to the difficulty in finding berries after the harvest is finished. ¶ Elder B. H. Roberts explained ISAIAH 24:13–14, ³³ ISAIAH 6:11.

“From which it is to be understood that there will be a few even in those disastrous times, whose righteousness will call down the favor of God.”³⁴ Gill says, “For now shall be left alone the righteous in the midst of the earth, among the kingdoms, as the shaking of olives, as the gleanings of grapes after the vintage;’ and to olives and grapes are these gracious persons fitly compared, for the goodness, loveliness, and fruitfulness of them, through the grace of God.” It is the job of all missionaries to “shake the olive tree.” ¶ [And] as the gleanings of grapes when the vintage is done. The LXX (Ϯ) reads, “And when the vintage is over a shout will be raised.” The Douay-Rheims (Ϯ) has, “Or grapes, when the vintage is ended.” Govett says, “Jerome notices, in connexion with this, the Saviour’s words, ‘Nevertheless, when the Son of Man cometh, shall he find faith on the earth?’ implying, that believers shall be few as the gleanings of grapes.” We read these tender words in D&C 43:25: “How oft have I called upon you by the mouth of my servants, and by the ministering of angels, and by mine own voice, and by the voice of thunders, and by the voice of lightnings, and by the voice of tempests, and by the voice of earthquakes, and great hailstorms, and by the voice of famines and pestilences of every kind, and by the great sound of a trumpet, and by the voice of judgment, and by the voice of mercy all the day long, and by the voice of glory and honor and the riches of eternal life, and would have saved you with an everlasting salvation, but ye would not!”

14 They shall lift up their voice, they shall sing for the majesty of the LORD, they shall cry aloud from the sea.

They shall lift up their voice, they shall sing for the majesty of the LORD. The Targum (ⲉ), in the second clause, has “they shall praise on account of the Word of the Lord (the Royal Polyglot reads ⲃⲱⲥⲙⲁ, ‘in,’ or ‘on account of the name;’ but all other copies agree with the Biblia Magna in reading ⲃⲱⲥⲙⲁⲙⲁ, ‘in,’ or ‘on account of the Word).’” The LXX (Ϯ) reads, “But they who are left in the land shall be gladdened with the glory of the Lord.” The Douay-Rheims (Ϯ) has, “These shall lift up their voice, and shall give praise: when the Lord shall be glorified.” Cowles well points out that here there is a sudden transition from grief to joy and a few verses later, in ISAIAH 24:16, the transition is just as abrupt the other direction. The joy seems to be placed in a chiasmus. ¶ According to

Lowth, the Jews “were greatly instrumental in propagating the knowledge of the true God amongst these heathen nations, and preparing them for the reception of Christianity. This is what the Prophet seems to mean by the celebration of the name of JEHOVAH in the waters, in the distant coasts, and in the uttermost parts of the land.” Gill looks to the end of days, “These shall lift up their voice, in singing the praises of God, for his judgments on Babylon, and avenging the blood of his saints; and for their deliverance and salvation, and the inestimable blessings they are now put into the possession of; these are they, who, having gotten the victory over the beast and his image, sing the song of Moses and the Lamb, Revelation 15:2.” ¶ They shall cry aloud from the sea. Masoretic text (ⲙ) (ⲙⲓ) and the Dead Sea

Scrolls 1QIsa^a (ⲙ) (ⲙⲓ) both have from [the] sea, while 4QIsa^c (ⲙ) has from [the] day (ⲙⲓ). The Targum (ⲉ) makes an allusion to the escape from Egypt, at the Red Sea, and the shout for joy made by the Israelites at that time: “They shall rejoice as they rejoiced on account of the mighty works which were done for them by the sea.” Alexander writes, “Dathe give the ⲙ its comparative sense: more (i.e. louder) than the sea. Jarchi [i.e., Rashi] had before given the same construction but a different sense: more than (at) the sea, i.e. more than they rejoiced at the deliverance from Egypt.” So also the Rabbis explains Rosenberg: “More than they shouted for joy by the sea during the redemption from Egypt—[Rashi, Kara, following Jonathan³⁶].” So also more modern exegetes, such as Kaiser. The LXX (Ϯ) reads, “The water of the sea will be troubled.” The Douay-Rheims (Ϯ) has, “They shall make a joyful noise from the sea.” The sea may also be put for the isles, or the countries from afar, such as the American Continent and other nations who accept the Gospel of Jesus Christ. Nägelsbach surprises us with his insight, “Does there lie in the expression ⲙⲓ something like a foreboding of the fact that the Church of the LORD would spread especially in the lands of the west, and that, therefore, the great mass of the redeemed would come from that quarter?” Nägelsbach goes on to say that “All the godly dwelling in the east and west are to praise the name of the Lord who has given to them, in place of the terrible day of judgment, the promise of deliverance.” ¶ They shall cry aloud, ⲙⲓⲙⲓ. Ibn Ezra compares this crying out loud to the neighing of the horse, ⲙⲓⲙⲓⲙⲓ.³⁷

³⁴ B. H. Roberts. Seventy’s Course, 2:205–206, The Apostatic Period., The Testimony of Prophecy.

³⁵ Memra, ⲙⲓⲙⲓⲙⲓ, Word, or Logos (Λόγος).

³⁶ “Following Jonathan” means, that Rashi and Kara followed the Targum Jonathan (ⲉ).

³⁷ Friedländer prefers a Biblical expression, such as Jeremiah 8:16, “the neighing of his strong ones,” ⲙⲓⲙⲓⲙⲓⲙⲓ.

15 Wherefore glorify ye the LORD in the fires, [✓] [even] the name of the LORD God of Israel in the isles of the sea.

✓ or, valleys

Wherefore glorify ye the LORD in the fires. The Dead Sea Scrolls 4QIsa^c (Q) adds in Aram (בְּאַרָם) after in the fires while the 1QIsa^a (Q) follows the Masoretic text (M). Some translate in the fires (בְּאַרָם) as in the east and so the DSSB (Q) τρανσλατιον renders 4QIsa^c as in the east, in Aram. Some believe that בְּאַרָם is an error for what should have been the islands. But this suggestion is not related to the way the word is spelled. (More on this topic, below.) The Targum (T), “When light shall come to the righteous, they shall glorify the LORD.” The LXX (G) reads, “For this cause the glory of the Lord will be in the isles of the sea.” The Peshitta (S) has, song (Lamsa) / praise (BPE) rather than fires. The Douay-Rheims (D) has, “Therefore glorify ye the Lord in instruction.” Kay writes, “Or, ‘in the light,’ that is, the bright light of divine revelation (urim): compare the Targum, ‘When light shall come to the righteous.’ They are to reflect the Divine Light, so that men may glorify God (Cp. Matthew 5:14, 16); Philippians 2:15–16).” To these scriptures we may well add from Doctrine & Covenants 50:24: “That which is of God is light; and he that receiveth light, and continueth in God, receiveth more light; and that light groweth brighter and brighter until the perfect day.” Birks suggests: “The faithful remnant, both in the land itself, in the fires of affliction, and as exiles, even in the farthest isles of the sea, will glorify Jehovah, the God of Israel.” There are two words used frequently for fire, אֵשׁ and אֹר. Birks explains: “Isaiah’s own use of the word [בְּאַרָם or אֹר] seems the safest guide, ISAIAH 31:9; 44:16; 47:14; and 50:2.” In ISAIAH 50:2, however, we read walking in the light of your fire בְּאֹר אֶשְׁכֶּם, where the prophet uses the word אֹר, in relation to “walking in the light [בְּאֹר] and אֵשׁ for fire [אֶשְׁכֶּם]. Regarding אֹר, Delitzsch writes, “the lands of the Asiatic East, which are called ‘urim’, the lands of light, i.e., of the sun-rising. This is the true meaning of ‘urim’, as J. Schelling and Drechsler agree.” So also Faussett, “Rather translates for “fires,” “in the regions of morning light,” that is, the east, in antithesis to the “isles of the sea,” that is, the west [Maurer]. Wheresoever ye be scattered, east or west, still glorify the Lord (Malachi 1:11). The reference to Malachi is instructive: “For from the rising of the sun even unto the going down of the same my name shall be great among the Gentiles; and in every place incense shall be offered unto my name, and a pure offering: for my name shall be great among the heathen, saith the LORD of hosts” (Malachi 1:11). Gill writes, “These are the words of the remnant, now triumphing and singing, calling upon others also to glorify the Lord in the fires of affliction and tribulation, in which they had lately been, and had themselves done: or, ‘in the valleys’; in low estates and conditions: or, ‘in holes’; dens and clefts of rocks, where they fled from their persecuting enemies; but neither of these versions suit the state of the true church, as it will be at this time. The word ‘Urim’,³⁸ here used, which is one of the names of what was put into the breastplate of the high priest, signifies ‘lights’; which sense of the word the Vulgate Latin version retains, rendering it, ‘in doctrines glorify the Lord’, and so the Targum, ‘therefore, when light cometh to the righteous, they shall glorify the Lord’ and so the words may be rendered, ‘glorify the Lord for the Urim,’ or ‘the lights’; for Christ, who has the true ‘Urim’ and ‘Thummim’, lights and perfections; for the light of his Gospel, and the truths of it, which will now be spread in a most wonderful manner throughout the world; to which times may be applied those words, ‘arise, shine, for thy light is come, and the glory of the Lord is risen upon thee—and the Gentiles shall come to thy light, and kings to the brightness of thy rising,’ (ISAIAH 60:1) and which will be a just and sufficient reason for giving glory to the Lord.” ¶ [Even] the name of the LORD God of Israel in the isles of the sea. The Targum (T) has “In the islands of the sea they shall laud and bless the name of the Lord, the God of Israel.” The LXX (G) reads, “In the isles of the sea the name of the Lord will be glorious.” The Douay-Rheims (D) has, “The name of the Lord God of Israel in the islands of the sea.” Kaiser writes: “The most likely possibility is the redeemed Jews³⁹ in the Holy Land, who are now putting out a call to the nations of the world to give their God Yahweh the honour due to him, and hear their call echoed by the choirs of the ends of the earth. That this interpretation is not pure imagination is shown not only by the emphasis on Yahweh as the God of Israel, but also the fact that in passages such as Psalm 76:11; 97:1, 6; 98:2 ff.; ISAIAH 42:10, 12 and 51:5, we learn that the nations and islands are waiting upon Yahweh and giving him honour.” Gill writes, “Whose name will now be known, not in Israel, or among the Jews only, but in all distant and foreign countries, which are sometimes meant by the isles of the sea; and in all islands, even the most remote, who will have reason to join with them on the continent to glorify God, whose name will now be great in all the earth.” M. H. Mansfield wrote in the Improvement Era, “Lands distant from Palestine, where the sea separated them from that land, are referred to by the prophets as isles of the sea. ‘Wherefore, glorify ye the Lord in the fires [valleys], even the name of the Lord God of Israel in the isles of the sea’ (ISAIAH 24:15).”⁴⁰ ¶ Now, here we have an interesting quote from Jenour: “The prophet, as if transported to the times in which he speaks, encourages the scattered pious remnant to proclaim the name of Jehovah in those parts wither they had fled.” Or rather, where they had been scattered. This would serve an important purpose, to bring Israel back to the Lord.

³⁸ בְּאַרָם (in Urim). As mentioned in the LDS Scripture Resources, ‘perhaps a scribal error for “islands.”’

³⁹ As LDS we would say Jews, but not only Jews, but all of those of Israel, who have returned to the covenant, along with a minority who have been adopted in.

vv. 16–19. Christ is the recipient of the songs of praise, but suddenly the prophet sees something that makes him gasp in agony. The cheerfulness departs as suddenly as it came. We are then transported to the end of days one more time, where various disasters are enumerated. In JS–M (Matthew 24) we read: “Behold I speak for mine elect’s; for nation shall rise against nation, and kingdom against kingdom; there shall be famines, and pestilences, and earthquakes, in divers places. And again, because iniquity shall abound, the love of men shall wax cold; but he that shall not be overcome, the same shall be saved. And again, this Gospel of the Kingdom shall be preached in all the world, for a witness unto all nations, and then shall the end come, or the destruction of the wicked” (JS–M:29–31).

16 ¶ From the uttermost[✓] part of the earth have we heard songs, [even] glory to the righteous. But I said, My leanness,[✓] my leanness, woe unto me! the treacherous dealers have dealt treacherously; yea, the treacherous dealers have dealt very treacherously.

✓ wing

✓ ✓ Leanness to me, or, My secret to me

From the uttermost part of the earth have we heard songs, [even] glory to the righteous. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “From the house of the sanctuary,⁴¹ yea, from thence joy shall go forth to all the inhabitants of the earth, for we have heard the praise of the righteous!” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “‘Lord the God of Israel! from the outskirts of the earth we have heard of thy wonders : there is hope for the righteous.’” The Douay-Rheims

(Ⲯ) has, “From the ends of the earth we have heard praises, the glory of the just one.” Compare with Rain in Due Season, “If any of thine be driven out unto the outmost parts of heaven, from thence will the LORD thy God gather thee, and from thence will he fetch thee”

(Deuteronomy 30:4). Regarding מִכְנֶנֶךָ, and also making allusion to the margin ||, Birks says, “The wing, or uttermost part of the earth, seems to refer, not to the bounds of Judea, but to the furthest limit of Jewish dispersion among the heathen.” The remnant that shall be gathered into The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints will break out in songs of praise to the Lord. Gill writes, that praise would be given “For the glorious appearance of Christ’s kingdom; for the spread of his Gospel throughout the world; for the conversion of the Jews, and the bringing in of the fulness of the Gentiles everywhere; wherefore these songs are heard from all parts of the world, and the uttermost parts of them; these are the voices said to be heard in heaven, or in the church, everywhere, Revelation 11:15 so some Jewish writers (Midrash Kohelet, fol. 62:3) interpret the words of the days of the Messiah, and of the songs then to be sung.” ¶ Glory to the righteous, צְבִי לְצַדִּיק.

Most exegetes feel these words are supposed to refer to various classes of men or even to the land of Israel. I cannot entertain such thoughts, as to me there is but only one Righteous, even the Messiah, הַמְּשִׁיחַ.

Horsley well suggests that צְבִי לְצַדִּיק should read glory to the Just One. Wildberger, likewise says, “Since Yahweh is apparently the one who is to be praised, it seems likely that the צַדִּיק (righteous one), to whom צְבִי (majesty) is attributed, is God.” Wildberger backs up this assertion with three excellent points, that although in the Old Testament the Righteous does not appear elsewhere as a title, that: (1) leaning on Henry, how odd it would be to suddenly change the focus of praise from the Lord to some other person or thing; (2) similar expressions are found in Psalm 11:7 and elsewhere in the Old Testament (For the righteous Lord, כִּי צַדִּיק יְהוָה); and (3) we find the title in I Enoch 38:2, “And when the Righteous One shall appear &c.” and 1 Enoch 53:6, “And after this the Righteous and Elect One &c.” In any case, ISAIAH 24:16 here continues the praise for the Lord, to the name of the Lord God of Israel, שֵׁם יְהוָה אֱלֹהֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל. ¶ But I said, My leanness, my leanness, woe unto me! The treacherous dealers have dealt treacherously; yea, the treacherous dealers have dealt very treacherously. The Targum (Ⲯ) has: “The Prophet said, a secret! A reward to the righteous is shown to me, a secret! A punishment for the wicked is revealed to me. Woe to the oppressors, for they shall be oppressed; and to those who spoil, for, behold, they shall be spoiled.” The LXX (6) reads, “Let them say also, ‘Woe to the rebels who reject the law.’” The Peshitta (5) repeats the expression, “it is a mystery to me” instead of “my leanness.” The Douay-Rheims (8) has, “And I said: My secret to myself, my secret to myself, woe is me: the prevaricators have prevaricated, and with the prevarication of transgressors they have prevaricated.” ¶ My leanness, my leanness, לֵי-רֵי-לֵי. The word רֵי means destruction (Gesenius); leanness, wasting [away] (BDB); my secret, diminution, vanishing (HALOT, based on Wildberger and Bauer); and consumption (Bosman & Potsma). Gesenius, with the Douay-Rheims, has the full expression meaning something equivalent to “Woe is me.” Wildberger, similarly translates is as “I am done for.” Regarding this clause, Horsley explains this looking toward the first coming of the Savior: “The Prophet, hearing songs of praise to the Just One, is naturally led to think of the general corruption of human nature, and of the base treatment which the Just One met with from the Jews.” Luther presents a similar view, at the distress of the rejection of Christ by “the Jews, who have not accepted this loveliness of the Gospel.” Gill, rather, thinks of the pain of the present moment and has, “[Isaiah is] either pining and fretting at the present state of his people, so very unlike to that which he now had a view of.” So also Rawlinson, “The thought of this joyful time, when the saints shall reign with their Lord in a new heaven and a new earth, recalls the prophet (contrast being one of the laws of the association of ideas) to the misery of the present, and his own participation therein. A time of suffering, of wasting, and pining away must be endured—for how long he knows not—before the joyous consummation, towards which he stretches in hope and confident expectancy, can be reached.” Or, even perhaps the view of the impending disasters that would come upon the earth in the last days as spoken of in Joseph Smith-Matthew (Matthew 24). There we read that most will be clueless about the impending appearance of the Savior despite all of the signs of the times: “But of that day, and hour, no one knoweth; no, not the angels of God in heaven, but my Father only. But as it was in the days of Noah, so it shall be also at the coming of the Son of Man; For it shall be with them, as it was in the days which were before the flood; for until the day that Noah entered into the ark they were eating and drinking, marrying and giving in marriage; And knew not until the flood came, and took them all away; so shall also⁴² the coming of the Son of Man be” (JS-M:40–43). ¶ The treacherous dealers have dealt treacherously, בְּנִדְרִים בְּנִדְרֵי וּבְנִדְרֵי. Wordsworth would rather translate this expression as the transgressors have transgressed.

⁴⁰ Mansfield, M. H. Improvement Era, February 1904. Jacob’s Isle.

⁴¹ Or temple, בֵּית.

To support his argument, Wordsworth points to 1 Samuel 14:33, where it is translated as transgress.⁴³ BDB for בְּנִדְרֵי has, “act or deal treacherously, faithlessly, deceitfully, in the marriage relation, in matters of property or right, in covenants, in word and in general conduct.” Wildberger explains, “When the Prophet ‘writes בְּנִדְרִים בְּנִדְרֵי וּבְנִדְרֵי (in cunning the cunning ones act cunningly)... one cannot conceive of, and plumb the depths of, how horrible this event really is.”

17 Fear, and the pit, and the snare, [are] upon thee, O inhabitant of the earth.

See also, Jeremiah 48:43–44, who repeats the same paronomasia we have here. The LXX (6) reads, “Terror and a pit and a snare are for you who dwell in the land.” Gill writes, “There is an elegant play on words in the Hebrew, which cannot well be expressed in English, in the words ‘pachad, pachath, pach’,⁴⁴ fear, pit, and a snare; which are expressive of a variety of dangers, difficulties, and distresses; there seems to be an allusion to creatures that are hunted, who flee through fear, and fleeing fall into pits, or are entangled in snares, and so taken.” Barnes explains: “In the passage before us, there is an advance from one danger to another, or the subsequent one is more to be dreaded than the preceding. The figure is taken from the mode of taking wild beasts, where various nets, toils, or pitfalls were employed to secure them. The word ‘fear’ (פַּחַד), denotes anything that was used to frighten or arouse the wild beasts in hunting, or to drive them into the pitfall that was prepared for them. Among the Romans the name ‘fears’ (‘formidines’) was given to lines or cords strung with feathers of all colors, which, when they fluttered in the air or were shaken, frightened the beasts into the pits, or the birds into the snares which were prepared to take them (Seneca, De Ira, ii. 122; virg. AE. xii. 7499; Geor. iii. 372). It is possible that this may be referred to here under the name of ‘fear.’ The word ‘pit’ (פֶּחַח) denotes the pitfall; a hole dug in the ground, and covered over with bushes, leaves, etc., into which they might fall unawares. The word ‘snare’ (פֶּחַח) denotes a net, or gin [a snare or trap], and perhaps refers to a series of nets enclosing at first a large space of ground, in which the wild beasts were, and then drawn by degrees into a narrow compass, so that they could not escape.” Lowth describes it as “a series of nets, inclosing at first a great space of ground, in which the wild beasts were known to be; and then drawn in by degrees into a narrower compass, till they were at last closely shut up, and entangled in them.” Wordsworth writes, “These words are adopted by our Blessed Lord, when speaking of the Day of Doom: ‘As a snare shall it come upon all them that dwelt on the face of the whole earth’ (see Luke 21:35).” In that same place, the Lord says, “Watch ye therefore, and pray always, that ye may be accounted worthy to escape all these things that shall come to pass, and to stand before the Son of man.”

⁴³ בְּנִדְרֵי הֵם, Ye have transgressed.

⁴⁴ Or in the Hebrew, פַּחַד וְפֶחַח וְפֶחַח.

⁴² Speaking of the surprise factor, not of the universal flood.

18 And it shall come to pass, [that] he who fleeth from the noise of the fear shall fall into the pit; and he that cometh up out of the midst of the pit shall be taken in the snare: for the windows from on high are open, and the foundations of the earth do shake.

And it shall come to pass, [that] he who fleeth from the noise of the fear shall fall into the pit. The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “And it shall come to pass, that he who fleeth from the terror, shall fall into the pit.” Regarding the noise of the fear, Barnes explains, “A cry or shout was made in hunting, designed to arouse the game, and drive it to the pitfall.” Recall in Rain in Due Season the Lord warns Israel that disobedience will bring fright: “And upon them that are left alive of you I will send a faintness into their hearts in the lands of their enemies; and the sound of a shaken leaf shall chase them; and they shall flee, as fleeing from a sword; and they shall fall when none pursueth” (Leviticus 26:36). This whole verse shows how escape from one danger only exposes them to the next. Joel 1:4 has a similar tone: “That which the palmerworm hath left hath the locust eaten; and that which the locust hath left hath the cankerworm eaten; and that which the cankerworm hath left hath the caterpillar eaten.” See also, Amos 5:19. In reality, the only escape from danger is turning to the Lord for refuge. ¶ From the noise, קוֹל מִקּוֹל usually stands for sound, voice, word, speech and noise, especially in relation to the crack of thunder (see HAL, BDB, Gesenius). Noise is often heard during times of war, as well as in storms and large earthquakes. I have heard the sound of earthquakes in Chile that sounded like that of a lion during feeding time. So also can anyone attest who has woken up to the sound of nearby thunder strikes. It is interesting to see how in Psalm 29:3 the voice of Yahweh (קוֹל יְהוָה) is associated with thunder (Gesenius). ¶ And he that cometh up out of the midst of the pit shall be taken in the snare: The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “And he who getteth out of the pit, shall be caught by the snare.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲱ) has, rid himself rather than cometh up. Barnes adds, “A figure taken still from hunting. It was possible that some of the more strong and active of the wild beasts driven into the pitfall would spring out, and attempt to escape, yet they might be secured by snares or gins purposely contrived for such an occurrence.” ¶ For the windows from on high are open, and the foundations of the earth do shake. The Targum (ⲡ), “For mighty works are done in the heavens, therefore the foundations of the earth quake.” The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “Because the flood gates of heaven are opened, therefore the foundations of the land shall be shaken.” The Peshitta (Ⲫ) has, torrents (BPE) / fountains (Lamsa) for windows. The Douay-Rheims (Ⲱ) has, flood-gates rather than windows. Regarding the windows from on high, Barnes has, “The word ‘windows’ here (אֲרָבוֹת) is the same which occurs in Genesis, and properly denotes a grate, a lattice, a window, and then any opening, as a sluice or floodgate, and is applied to a tempest or a deluge, because when the rain descends, it seems like opening sluices or floodgates in the sky. The sense here is, that calamities had come upon the nation resembling the universal deluge.” Rawlinson well says, “It is not actually another flood that is threatened, but it is a judgment as sweeping and destructive as the Flood.” So says Young, “Just as that deluge was all-destroying, so will this judgment be also ... Isaiah does not teach that there will be a repetition of that flood, for it was expressly revealed (Genesis 8:21) that such a means of universal destruction would never be repeated ... The ‘windows from on high’ are the windows through which the power from on high will flood.” Gill writes regarding the shaking of the earth, “Very probably the dissolution⁴⁵ of the world may be attended with a general earthquake; or this may denote the dread and terror that will seize the inhabitants of it.”

19 The earth is utterly broken down, the earth is clean dissolved, the earth is moved exceedingly.

The Targum Stenning (ⲡ), “The earth shall tremble greatly, the earth shall shake to and fro, the earth shall be utterly torn asunder.” The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “With confusion the land will be confounded; with perplexity this land will be perplexed.” The Lamsa Peshitta (Ⲫ) renders it, “The earth is broken down, the earth is utterly moved, the earth is staggering exceedingly.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲱ) has, “With breaking shall the earth be broken, with crushing shall the earth be crushed, with trembling shall the earth be moved.” Rabbi Rosenberg has: “The repetition is for emphasis of the grave troubles destined to befall the nations at the onset of the Messianic era⁴⁶.—[Redak].” Whitehouse renders it, “the earth is shattered to pieces, the earth violently swayed to and fro.” Barnes explains, “Everything in this verse is intense and emphatic. The verbs are in the strongest form of emphasis: ‘By breaking, the land is broken;’⁴⁷ ‘by scattering, the land is scattered;’⁴⁸ ‘by commotion, the land is moved.’⁴⁹ The repetition also of the expression in the same sense three times, is a strong form of emphasis; and the whole passage is designed to denote the utter desolation and ruin that had come upon the land.” Keith points out the writings of Revelation: “And there were voices, and thunders, and lightnings; and there was a great earthquake, such as was not since men were upon the earth, so mighty an earthquake, and so great. And the great city was divided into three parts, and the cities of the nations fell: and great Babylon came in remembrance before God, to give unto her the cup of the wine of the fierceness of his wrath” (Revelation 16:18–19). ¶ President Joseph Fielding Smith taught that this verse was related to the post-millennial death of the earth, before its resurrection.⁵⁰ Elder Bruce R. McConkie wrote about this verse, “Employing the strong language and graphic imagery that he alone can use with such power, Isaiah says: ‘The earth is utterly broken down, the earth is clean dissolved, the earth is moved exceedingly.’ He is talking of the new heaven and the new earth that shall come into being when the elements melt with fervent heat.”⁵¹ Of course some of the elements of this prophecy can also be applied to the Second Coming. See also ISAIAH 51:6.

⁴⁵ Better, transformation.

vv. 20–22. The principle of deliverance of the dead from their bonds of spiritual prison is among the most glorious to be found in the Holy Scriptures but has only come to be understood after the restoration of the Gospel in these latter days. The Prophet Joseph Smith taught that just as the antediluvians had their day of deliverance and visitation from the bonds of spiritual prison, so would those who lived after them: “The situation of the Christian nations after death, is a subject that has called forth all the wisdom and talent of the philosopher and the divine, and it is an opinion which is generally received, that the destiny of man is irretrievably fixed at his death, and that he is made either eternally happy, or eternally miserable; that if a man dies without a knowledge of God, he must be eternally damned, without any mitigation of his punishment, alleviation of his pain, or the most latent hope of a deliverance while endless ages shall roll along. However orthodox this principle may be, we shall find that it is at variance with the testimony of Holy Writ, for our Savior says, that all manner of sin and blasphemy shall be forgiven men wherewith they shall blaspheme; but the blasphemy against the Holy Ghost shall not be forgiven, neither in this world, nor in the world to come, evidently showing that there are sins which may be forgiven in the world to come... Peter, also, in speaking concerning our Savior, says, that ‘He went and preached unto the spirits in prison, which sometimes were disobedient, when once the long-suffering of God waited in the days of Noah’ (1 Peter 3:19, 20). Here then we have an account of our Savior preaching to the spirits in prison, to spirits that had been imprisoned from the days of Noah; and what did He preach to them? That they were to stay there? Certainly not! Let His own declaration testify. ‘He hath sent me to heal the broken-hearted, to preach deliverance to the captives, and recovering of sight of the blind, to set at liberty them that are bruised’ (Luke 4:18). Isaiah has it—‘To bring out the prisoners from the prison, and them that sit in darkness from the prison house.’ (ISAIAH 42:7.) It is very evident from this that he not only went to preach to them, but to deliver, or bring them out of the prison house. Isaiah, in testifying concerning the calamities that will overtake the inhabitants of the earth, says, ‘The earth shall reel to and fro like a drunkard, and shall be removed like a cottage; and the transgression thereof shall be heavy upon it; and it shall fall and not rise again. And it shall come to pass in that day, that the Lord shall punish the host of the high ones that are on high, and the kings of the earth upon the earth. And they shall be gathered together, as prisoners are gathered in the pit, and shall be shut up in the prison, and after many days shall they be visited.’ Thus we find that God will deal with all the human family equally, and that as the antediluvians had their day of visitation, so will those characters referred to by Isaiah, have their time of visitation and deliverance; after having been many days in prison” (emphasis added).⁵² Elder Theodore M Burton, spoke at the October 1964 General Conference regarding ISAIAH 24:21–22, “There is no question but that Jesus was to be the Deliverer and that they that sit in this prison were to be in the bonds of darkness, which must refer to spiritual darkness rather than to political prisoners here upon the earth. The work of Jesus definitely was not ⁴⁶ Many of the Jews today have lost hope for the coming of an actual Messiah, and are waiting for a Messianic Era instead.

⁴⁷ רָעָה הַתְּרַעֲשָׁה הָאָרֶץ

⁴⁸ פֹּזַר הַתְּפֹרְרָה אֶרֶץ

⁴⁹ מוֹט הַתְּמוֹטָה אֶרֶץ

⁵⁰ Smith, Joseph Fielding. Church History and Modern Revelation, 1:132.

⁵¹ McConkie, Bruce R. Millennial Messiah, The Promised Signs and Wonders, Signs and Wonders in Heaven and on Earth, p. 411.

⁵² Joseph Smith, Teachings of the Prophet Joseph Smith, selected and arranged by Joseph Fielding Smith, p.218.

confined solely to those of his own earthly generation who heard his voice in person as on this occasion when he spoke in the synagogue at Nazareth. His work was a greater work, a universal work, and applied not only to the whole wide world of those then living, but also to all who ever lived or ever would live upon this earth" (emphasis added).⁵³ ¶ In these verses, then, we read about the consequences of man's transgression, but also the ultimate mercy of the Lord after these individuals have come to a repentant understanding. Those who will inherit in the Telestial Kingdom, such as King David ben Jesse,⁵⁴ will not come forth in the first resurrection but will, eventually, toward the end of the millennium, obtain their resurrection and be released from spirit prison (see Psalm 16:10a, see also TPJS, 339). Elder Talmage explains, "Further, if, in the plan of God, provision be made for the redemption of the wilfully disobedient, those who actually spurn the truth, can we believe that the still greater multitudes of spirits who have never heard the Gospel are to be left in punishment eternally? No; God has decreed that even the heathen nations, and those that knew no law, shall be redeemed. The gifts of God are not confined to this sphere of action, but will be bestowed in justice throughout eternity. Upon all who reject the word of God in this life will fall the penalties provided; but after the debt has been paid the prison doors shall be opened, and the spirits once confined in suffering, then chastened and clean, shall come forth to partake of the glory provided for their class."⁵⁵ In ISAIAH 42:7, we include additional pertinent quotes on the matter of the teaching of the gospel to those in the spirit world.

20 The earth shall reel to and fro like a drunkard, and shall be removed like a cottage; and the transgression thereof shall be heavy upon it; and it shall fall, and not rise again.

The earth shall reel to and fro like a drunkard. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, "The land is utterly cast down like a drunkard." The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, "It reeled to and fro like a drunkard when intoxicated." The Douay-Rheims (Ⲳ) has, "With shaking shall the earth be shaken as a drunken man." Nyman has, "The Savior quoted part of ISAIAH 24:20 in two revelations given to Joseph Smith (see D&C 49:23; 88:87). Oliver Cowdery paraphrased the same verse in noting which scriptures the angel Moroni said were soon to be fulfilled (see MA, April 1835, pp. 111–12). The Prophet Joseph Smith taught that the events spoken of in ISAIAH 24:20 were soon to occur as the Second Coming rapidly approached (TPJS, pp. 29, 71)." Kaiser well writes, "The world and history will not really come to an end, but will only then have their true beginning, which will then continue throughout the future." Enormous earthquakes must have played a role in the dividing of the land mass into continents. In the last days there once again will be earthquakes of great proportion (I write these words in Chile about a year after the 2010 earthquake and in a nation where we have suffered the very largest earthquakes in recorded history). Bishop Edward Partridge taught, "When we reflect upon the many mighty earthquakes that have been, and that the earth was never so shook as it then will be: and especially when we reflect that in the days of Peleg it was so shaken as to be divided, probably into two continents, besides numerous islands—I say, when we reflect upon this subject and see what a tremendous shaking the earth must have, we are not at all surprised that the earth shall reel to and fro like a drunkard, and be removed like a cottage."⁵⁶ ¶ And shall be removed like a cottage. The Stenning Targum (Ⲯ), "And shall swing to and fro like a booth." The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, "Like a lodge in a vineyard the land shall be shaken." The Douay-Rheims (Ⲳ) has, "And shall be removed as the tent of one night." As a cottage, כְּמִלּוּנָה. Gill explains, "Or, 'a tent'; either of soldiers or shepherds, which are easily taken down and moved; or like 'a lodge', as the word is rendered (ISAIAH 1:8). The Septuagint render it a 'fruit watch'; and, according to the Jewish writers, it signifies a booth or tent, in which the keepers of gardens or vineyards watched in the night; which Jarchi [i.e., Rashi] says was built on the top of a tree, and Kimhi on a hill; and, being made of light wood, was easily moved to and fro with the wind." Or, moved from one location to another. This is the reason why it will appear as if the stars are falling because the whole earth will be transported to another location. President Brigham Young explains: "This earth is our home, it was framed expressly for the habitation of those who are faithful to God, and who prove themselves worthy to inherit the earth when the Lord shall have sanctified, purified and glorified it and brought it back into his presence, from which it fell far into space ... When the earth was framed and brought into existence and man

⁵³ Elder Theodore M Burton, October 1964 General Conference CR.

⁵⁴ To me, no story is sadder than that of King David. No youth or man was ever so valiant as young David. He truly feared God more than man. And this is why his fall is so painful. He was worthy to receive some of the most transcendental Messianic revelations ever given to man. The life of David is a warning to each one of us to ever be vigilant and pray always that we might endure to the end in righteousness.

⁵⁵ Elder James E. Talmage, Articles of Faith. Baptism for the Dead, p. 134. With the words, "glory provided for their class" was placed upon it, it was near the throne of our Father in heaven. And when man fell—though that was designed in the economy, there was nothing about it mysterious or unknown to the Gods, they understood it all, it was all planned—but when man fell, the earth fell into space, and took up its abode in this planetary system, and the sun became our light. When the Lord said— ‘Let there be light,’ there was light, for the earth was brought near the sun that it might reflect upon it so as to give us light by day, and the moon to give us light by night. This is the glory the earth came from, and when it is glorified it will return again unto the presence of the Father, and it will dwell there, and these intelligent beings that I am looking at, if they live worthy of it, will dwell upon this earth.”⁵⁷ ¶ Faussett has, “Here, a hanging couch, suspended from the trees by cords, such as Niebuhr describes the Arab keepers of lands as having, to enable them to keep watch, and at the same time to be secure from wild beasts. Translate, ‘Shall wave to and fro like a hammock’ swung about by the wind.” ¶ And the transgression thereof shall be heavy upon it; and it shall fall, and not rise again. The Targum (ⲧ) renders it, “And her sins are heavy upon her: she shall fall, and rise no more.” The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “For iniquity hath prevailed over it; and it shall fall and shall not be able to rise.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲱ) has, iniquity instead of transgression. Nägelsbach writes: “As man ... fell by sin, so must the earth also, the theatre of human history, fall by sin never again to rise in its previous form” (emphasis added). Gill similarly says, “In the form it now is [the earth]; for there will be new heavens and a new earth, in which the righteous, who will share the first resurrection, will dwell; for as for the first earth, or present one, it shall pass away ... (Revelation 20:11).”

⁵⁶ Partridge, Edward. Messenger and Advocate, January 1835, p. 58.

21 And it shall come to pass in that day, [that] the LORD shall punish ✓ the host of the high ones [that are] on high, and the kings of the earth upon the earth.

✓ visit upon

And it shall come to pass in that day, [that] the LORD shall punish the host of the high ones [that are] on high. The Targum (ⲧ) has “the Lord shall punish the mighty host that is dwelling in power.” The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “When God shall bring his hand on the hosts of heaven.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲱ) has, for the second half, “The Lord shall visit upon the host of heaven on high.” In Revelation we have: “And the kings of the earth, and the great men, and the rich men, and the chief captains, and the mighty men, and every bondman, and every free man, hid themselves in the dens and in the rocks of the mountains; And said to the mountains and rocks, Fall on us, and hide us from the face of him that sitteth on the throne, and from the wrath of the Lamb: For the great day of his wrath is come; and who shall be able to stand?” (Revelation 6:15–17). ¶ And the kings of the earth upon the earth. The Targum (ⲧ) adds to the list of those who will be punished, the “sons of men,” ⲁⲛⲱⲛ ⲁⲛⲱⲛ. The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “Even upon the kings of this land.”

22 And they shall be gathered together, [as] prisoners are gathered ✓ in the pit, ✓ and shall be shut up in the prison, and after many days shall they be visited. ✓ ✓

✓ with the gathering of prisoners

✓ ✓ or, dungeon

✓ ✓ or, found wanting

The partial Dead Sea Scrolls 4QIsa^c (ⲱ) has (ⲁⲛⲱⲛ ⲁⲛⲱⲛ) and thus preserves the Masoretic text (ⲙ) inclusion of the word prisoners (ⲁⲛⲱⲛ) while the 1QIsa^a (ⲱ) has dropped it. For visited, the Targum (ⲧ) has remembered (Chaldee, ‘their memory shall come up’). The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “And the congregation thereof shall have been assembled for imprisonment, and shut up as chaff for many generations; of them there shall be a visitation.” The Lamsa Peshitta (Ⲥ) renders it saved rather than visited. The BPE Peshitta (Ⲥ) does not include either end clause, but ends with “and they will be abandoned for many days.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲱ) has, for the first half, “And they shall be gathered together as in the gathering of one bundle into the pit.” Pseudepigraphical 1 Enoch 18:14–15 reads: “... the prison house for the stars and the powers of heaven. And the stars which roll over upon the fire, they are the ones which have transgressed the commandments of God from the beginning of their rising because they did not arrive punctually [i.e. in their allotted time].” While it is not clear what this unpunctuality refers to, it is quite apparent that the prisoners are there because they have transgressed the commandments. Those who inherit the Telesstial kingdom are compared to stars. But these are not to stay in prison for ever: “And he was wroth with them and bound them until the time of the completion of their sin in the year of mystery (or, for a myriad years)” (1 Enoch 18:16).⁵⁸ On 21 December 2010, I had the opportunity to get up very early in the morning in Llanquihue, Chile, and spend the rest of the night watching the full lunar eclipse. As a heavenly body, the moon lost its brightness and was left as a dark red mass.

⁵⁷ President Brigham Young, Journal of Discourses 17:144.

⁵⁸ The Old Testament Pseudepigrapha (James H. Charlesworth, editor). Volume I. Doubleday, 1983.

The moon, without the sun, has no glory at all. In ISAIAH 24:23 we see that just as the moon has no glory without the sun, neither the sun nor the moon have any glory compared to the Son. This passage in 1 Enoch 18:14b–16 seems to go hand in hand with what we know about the millennium and those who will come forth in the resurrection of the unjust. Regarding the word pit, Henderson writes, “[בֹּרַר] is descriptive of the most ancient kinds of prisons, which consisted of empty cisterns that narrowed towards the mouth, so that it was scarcely possible for those who were confined in them to make their escape without assistance (Genesis 37:20, 22; Jeremiah 38:13). Not unfrequently the bottom was covered with mire or soft clay, which rendered them at once unhealthy and disagreeable.” Nägelsbach says, “The pit is here used for Sheol ... oftentimes (ISAIAH 14:15, 19; 38:18).” Lowth adds, “The image seems to be taken from the practice of the great monarchs of that time; who, when they had thrown their wretched captives into a dungeon, never gave themselves the trouble of inquiring about them; but let them lie a long time in that miserable condition, wholly destitute of relief, and disregarded.” Contrary to these rulers, Lowth explains that the Lord will visit these prisoners with mercy. Lowth, however, makes the prisoners his people, implying Israel will not be abandoned. ¶ And after many days shall they be visited [וְיִבְקְרוּ]. Exegetes are here divided as to the nature of this visitation, whether one of mercy or one of punishment. We saw this same word, יִבְקַר, in ISAIAH 23:17, where it also appears to be used in the sense of visit to redeem, to remember in mercy. Rabbi David Kimhi felt that the purpose of the visitation was to release the prisoners from the pit (in Rosenberg). Barnes has, “To me it seems that the connection seems to require the idea of a visitation for the purpose of relief or of deliverance... [and] after a long time they would be visited by the Great Deliverer.” Henderson says, “A merciful visitation, for the purpose of restoring those here spoken of from captivity, alone suits the connexion.” Cheyne tends towards a merciful visitation, for, says he, “It is difficult... to see why there should be two punishments.” Alexander says, regarding the opinion of mercy, “This explanation is as old as Rabbi Joseph Kimhi, if not as the Peshito.” To these voices we add that of Jenour and according to Delitzsch, also Hitzig, Knobel and Luzzatto. For every exegete who believes this is a merciful visit, there are probably four who believe the visitation is one of punishment. ¶ Gladly, we have the inspired comments of prophets who have made it clear that indeed this is a visitation of mercy. To us as LDS, it is of great interest that Faussett associates this verse with 1 Peter 3:19, “By which also he went and preached unto the spirits in prison,” and calls that verse “the disputed passage.” Also see ISAIAH 42:7.

23 Then the moon shall be confounded, and the sun ashamed, when the LORD of hosts shall reign in mount Zion, and in Jerusalem, and before his ancients gloriously. ✓

✓ or, there shall be glory before his ancients

Then the moon shall be confounded, and the sun ashamed. The Targum (Ⲯ), “And they shall be confounded that worship the moon, and they shall be ashamed that worship the sun.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “When the bricks shall have mouldered away, and the wall shall have fallen.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲟ) has blush instead of confounded. Slotki/Rosenberg have: “God’s glory will outshine the celestial lights, the moon and the sun being eclipsed into insignificance (cf. 60:19) (Ibn Ezra⁵⁹).” Young is correct in saying, “Isaiah uses a poetic word for ‘moon,’ a word that really means ‘white⁶⁰’” Likewise, Young points out that for the sun, Isaiah has the hot. חֹם, (in several places), rather than שֶׁשֶׁשׁ. ISAIAH 60:19–20 has, “The sun shall be no more thy light by day; neither for brightness shall the moon give light unto thee: but the LORD shall be unto thee an everlasting light, and thy God thy glory.” Alexander correctly says, “It was not merely when Jehovah reigned, but because he reigned, that all inferior luminaries were to be eclipsed.” Nägelsbach says, not exactly as we would as LDS explain it, but interestingly close: “Then follows the last, highest and grandest revelation of God. The earth now becomes what it ought originally to have been, but which it was hindered from being by sin, viz., the common dwelling-place of God and of men. The heavenly Jerusalem, the tabernacle in which God dwells with men (Revelation 21:3) descends upon the renovated earth. This is the Jerusalem in which according to ISAIAH 24:23, Jehovah Zebaoth reigns as King.” Elder Orson Pratt taught, “In describing the glory of his personal reign on the earth, [Isaiah] says that ‘Then the moon shall be confounded and the sun ashamed,’ because of the superior light that will attend the presence of the being who is to reign in Zion and Jerusalem.”⁶¹ Rashi suggests that the reason the moon and the sun will “fade into insignificance because of the light radiating from the righteous (Rashi in Sanh. 91b)” (Talmud, Soncino). Elder Orson Pratt makes uses similar language in the Journal of Discourses: “... because of the superior light that will attend the presence of the being who is to reign in Zion and Jerusalem.”⁶² Who is this Being, this Righteous? The Holy One of Israel. Elder Pratt goes on to explain that it is this same light and heat—ininitely more powerful than that of the sun—that will burn the wicked at His coming: “This seems, then, to be a work preparatory to the coming of the Lord in flaming fire. The nature of the fire that will be exhibited at his second coming in the clouds of heaven will be such that it will consume the wicked and ungodly, and those who repent not and who do not sanctify themselves before the Lord. Our God in that day will be a consuming fire; the intensity of this fire will be so great that the very hills, the Psalmist David informs us in another place, ‘will melt like wax before his presence.’ The Prophet Isaiah in speaking of the fire or heat that would accompany the second advent of the Son of God, declares that the mountains shall flow down at his presence. The elements that now constitute these rugged mountains which we see here on this continent and in all parts of the earth where we travel will melt with fervent heat, and will flow down before the presence of the Lord. The brightness of this fire will be greater than that of the sun in its glory. I mean our temporal, literal sun, from which we receive light and heat, as you will find recorded in the last verse of the 24th chapter of Isaiah, which says that ‘when the Lord of Hosts shall come to reign in Mount Zion and in Jerusalem, and before his ancients gloriously, the sun shall hide his face in shame and the moon shall be confounded.’ With all the brightness of that luminary which lights this creation it will hide its face in shame; and the bright luminaries of heaven will be confounded as it were, so great will be the glory of his presence—a fire devouring before him, and all nature feeling the power of the Almighty, which will be exerted on that grand occasion.”⁶³ Elder Bruce R. McConkie taught: “In his vision of the Celestial Jerusalem, John saw ‘the holy Jerusalem, descending out of heaven from God, having the glory of God ... The street of the city was pure gold, as it were transparent glass.’ There was no temple therein, neither the need for the sun nor moon to give light, ‘for the glory of God did lighten it, and the Lamb is the light thereof.’ (Revelation 21).”⁶⁴ ¶ When the LORD of hosts shall reign in mount Zion, and in Jerusalem, and before his ancients gloriously. The Targum (T) renders it: “Because the power of the Lord of hosts shall be revealed in mount Zion, and before the elders of his people in glory.” The LXX (G) reads, “Because the Lord will commence his reign from Sion and from Jerusalem, and be glorified in the presence of the elders.” The Peshitta (S) has for (Lamsa) / because (BPE) rather than when. The Peshitta (S) also has the Lord praised (BPE) / glorified (Lamsa) by His saints rather than ancients. The book of Revelation talks about a New Jerusalem (Revelation 21:2) and the Talmud tradition (Seder Nezikin, Baba Bathra 75b) likewise speaks of a Messianic one: “Rabbah said in the name of Rabbi Johanan: Jerusalem of the world to come will not be like Jerusalem of the present world. [To] Jerusalem of the present world, anyone who wishes goes up, but to that of the world to come only those invited will go” (Talmud, Soncino). ¶ Before his ancients, לְנִיחַ זְקֵנָיו. It is interesting to note that the word ancients זְקֵנִים, here also stands for elders. Calvin writes, “By expressly mentioning the ‘elders,’ he employs a figure of speech frequently used in Scripture, by which the chief part of the Church is taken for the whole body of it.” Cheyne says, “These shall be admitted to a direct intuition of the Divine glory, like the seventy elders of old (Exodus 24:9), and shall carry the reflection of it wherever they go (Exodus 34:29).” ¶ Regarding the Lord of hosts, here it may well be asked, “Who is this King of glory?” The answer, “The LORD of hosts, he is the King of glory,” (Psalm 24:10) even Jesus Christ! Regarding Lord of hosts, Gill testifies: “Who is no other than the Lord Jesus Christ, the true Jehovah, the Lord of hosts or armies, of the sun, moon, and stars, the host of heaven, and of the heavenly host of angels, and of men on earth; who was King from eternity, and reigned during the Old Testament dispensation; came a King into this world, though his kingdom was not of it.” Calvin writes, “He shews how great will be the splendor and glory of God, when the kingdom of Christ shall be established, because all that is brilliant must be obscured, and the glory of Christ alone must hold a high and prominent place.” From Bishop Edward Partridge, in the Messenger and Advocate, we have this: “Thus we see that the Lord is not only to reign in Jerusalem, but in mount Zion, also, which shows that Jerusalem and Zion are two places.”⁶⁵ We read in the Evening and Morning Star, “[In ISAIAH 24:23]... here he is said to reign before his ancients, that is, all the saints from our father Adam, down...”⁶⁶ President Charles W. Penrose often quoted ISAIAH 24:23 in his General Conference talks: “He shall rule and reign in Mount Zion and in Jerusalem, and before His ancients, gloriously, as the prophets predicted. This is to be a kingdom of righteousness, a kingdom of truth, a kingdom of equity, of kindness, of brotherly love and of unity, a kingdom and organization in which the utmost fraternity will ⁶² Pratt, Elder Orson. Journal of Discourses 20:16.

⁵⁹ Not in my copy of Ibn Ezra, in Isaiah 60:19 we have: “Thou wilt not want the light of the sun, because of the light of God.”

⁶⁰ חֹם means the white, from לבן, instead of moon, יָרֵחַ.

⁶¹ Elder Orson Pratt, Journal of Discourses 20:14–16.

⁶³ Pratt, Elder Orson, Journal of Discourses 15:55.

⁶⁴ McConkie, Elder Bruce R. A New Witness for the Articles of Faith, p. 588

⁶⁵ Partridge, Edward. Messenger and Advocate, January 1835, p. 58.

⁶⁶ Evening and Morning Star, 2:155, May, 1834.

prevail” (emphasis added).⁶⁷ On another occasion President Penrose said, “[Christ] said, the keys should not be taken from the Prophet Joseph, for he had been tested and proved and found worthy before the Lord, before the angels and before the Church. They should not be taken from him and from the Twelve (that is the promise) ‘until I shall come, saith the Lord.’ So the keys were to abide with the Church from that time henceforth, until the Lord Himself should come and reign in Zion and Jerusalem and before His ancients gloriously” (emphasis added).⁶⁸ In the 1842 Times and

Seasons we read, “The prophet [Isaiah] says, that the Lord shall reign in Mount Zion, and in Jerusalem, and before his ancients gloriously; hence, when the redeemed saints dwell on earth, they will dwell in Mount Zion, and in Jerusalem which places the Lord will fully prepare for them.”⁶⁹

6 March 2011

⁶⁷ Penrose, Elder Charles W. April 1912 CR, pp. 18–19. Also see Journal of Discourses 21:140.

⁶⁸ Penrose, Elder Charles W. CR October 1905.

⁶⁹ Times and Seasons 3:690–692, February 15, 1842. The Millennium.

Isaiah 25

As Cheyne points out, we find Jeremiah 31 in much harmony with this chapter. There we hear about the gathering of Israel, a new covenant to be embraced by the people, the Lord telling us He will be Israel's God, the song of gratitude, and the feast of fat things. All of these things bring us to the removal of the veil of ignorance until all who live shall know the Lord—such that it will not be necessary to preach about Him anymore. This is probably to take place, to a large degree, during the Millennium. Finally, Moab, representing the nations that hate God, is brought down to the depths of humiliation. ⁴¹ At the same time, saith the LORD, will I be the God of all the families of Israel, and they shall be my people.² Thus saith the LORD, The people which were left of the sword found grace in the wilderness; even Israel, when I went to cause him to rest.³ The LORD hath appeared of old unto me, saying, Yea, I have loved thee with an everlasting love: therefore with lovingkindness have I drawn thee.⁴ Again I will build thee, and thou shalt be built, O virgin of Israel: thou shalt again be adorned with thy tabrets, and shalt go forth in the dances of them that make merry.⁵ Thou shalt yet plant vines upon the mountains of Samaria: the planters shall plant, and shall eat them as common things.⁶ For there shall be a day, that the watchmen upon the mount Ephraim shall cry, Arise ye, and let us go up to Zion unto the LORD our God.⁷ For thus saith the LORD; Sing with gladness for Jacob, and shout among the chief of the nations: publish ye, praise ye, and say, O LORD, save thy people, the remnant of Israel.⁸ Behold, I will bring them from the north country, and gather them from the coasts of the earth, and with them the blind and the lame, the woman with child and her that travaileth with child together: a great company shall return thither.⁹ They shall come with weeping, and with supplications will I lead them: I will cause them to walk by the rivers of waters in a straight way, wherein they shall not stumble: for I am a father to Israel, and Ephraim is my firstborn.¹⁰ Hear the word of the LORD, O ye nations, and declare it in the isles afar off, and say, He that scattered Israel will gather him, and keep him, as a shepherd doth his flock.¹¹ For the LORD hath redeemed Jacob, and ransomed him from the hand of him that was stronger than he.¹² Therefore they shall come and sing in the height of Zion, and shall flow together to the goodness of the LORD, for wheat, and for wine, and for oil, and for the young of the flock and of the herd: and their soul shall be as a watered garden; and they shall not sorrow any more at all.¹³ Then shall the virgin rejoice in the dance, both young men and old together: for I will turn their mourning into joy, and will comfort them, and make them rejoice from their sorrow.¹⁴ And I will satiate the soul of the priests with fatness, and my people shall be satisfied with my goodness, saith the LORD” (Jeremiah 31:1-14, emphasis added); ³¹ Behold, the days come, saith the LORD, that I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel, and with the house of Judah:³² Not according to the covenant that I made with their fathers in the day that I took them by the hand to bring them out of the land of Egypt; which my covenant they brake, although I was an husband unto them, saith the LORD:³³ But this shall be the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel; After those days, saith the LORD, I will put my law in their inward parts, and write it in their hearts; and will be their God, and they shall be my people.³⁴ And they shall teach no more every man his neighbour, and every man his brother, saying, Know the LORD: for they shall all know me, from the least of them unto the greatest of them, saith the LORD: for I will forgive their iniquity, and I will remember their sin no more” (Jeremiah 31:31-34, emphasis added).

vv. 1–5. The Lord is praised, for He has redeemed Israel and the faithful against those who hate her.

1 ¶ O LORD, thou [art] my God; I will exalt thee, I will praise thy name; for thou hast done wonderful [things; thy] counsels of old [are] faithfulness [and] truth.

O LORD, thou [art] my God; I will exalt thee, I will praise thy name. The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Lord God, thee I will glorify: in songs of praise I will extol thy name.” The Peshitta (ܣ) combines I will exalt thee and I will praise thy name into a single clause, “I will exalt (BPE) / praise (Lamsa) thy name.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲕ) has, for the last clause, “And give glory to thy name.” As the Prophet Joseph Smith often taught, “for the testimony of Jesus is the spirit of prophecy” (Revelation 19:10b). Without such a spirit of prophecy, it is not possible to truly sing praises to Christ the Lord, even the LORD (JEHOVAH) my God (Elohai), יהוה אֱלֹהֵי.

Besides the exalted title we use for the Father, Elohim appears hundreds of times in the Old Testament, almost always associated with God the Son. ¶ I will exalt thee. According to Rabbi Ibn Ezra, “The first person singular refers to the prophet, or these are the words which every one of ‘the ancients’ [i.e., elders] is represented speaking (ISAIAH 24:23).” Kimhi explains, according to Rabbi Rosenberg, that each and every one of the elders who is privileged to behold the power of God over the heathen nations will recognize and glorify God. Kimhi explains regarding אַתָּה (thou) / שְׁמִי (thy name), “The prophet uses the expressions, ‘You’ and ‘Your name’ interchangeably because they are synonymous” (in Rosenberg). Delitzsch, and most commentators, note that Isaiah begins by borrowing from the Psalmist, “Thou art my God, and I will praise thee: thou art my God, I will exalt thee” (Psalm 118:28); and finishes with Moses, “... fearful in praises, doing wonders” (Exodus 16:11). ¶ For thou hast done wonderful [things; thy] counsels of old [are] faithfulness [and] truth. פְּלֵא עֲצוֹת, wonderful and counsels. (Compare with ISAIAH 9:6, wonderful, counselor, פְּלֵא יוֹעֵץ.) Isaiah seems to be praising not only Yahweh, the God of Israel, but also has in his view set at a time when Jehovah would put on mortality as the Christ child born in Bethlehem and later fulfilled His Father’s will, and died that we might live. ¶ Nägelsbach well says that the “כִּי in the beginning of verse 2 and the כִּי in the beginning of verse 4 correspond to one another. Both serve to prove the truth of what was said in ISAIAH 25:1: For [כִּי] thou hast done, etc.” The Targum (ܬ) reads: “Surely though hast brought to pass and hast established the counsels which thou hadst promised of old to bring to pass.” The LXX (ϸ) reads, “For thou hast executed wonderful things, a counsel of old immutably true.” The Peshitta (ܣ), “from afar” instead of “of old,” and ends the idea with an amen.¹ The BPE (ܣ) has, “From afar thou hast given faithful counsel. Amen.” The Douay-Rheims (ܕ) has, for the second half, “Thy designs of old faithful, amen.” Kimhi explains, according to Rosenberg, “You have performed a wonder for us, for You have taken us from among the nations among whom we were scattered and whom we served... i.e., the prophecies You conveyed to the prophets long ago have been truly realized today.” Abarbanel, according to Rosenberg, also looked at Israel’s exiles or scatterings and “the final redemption” which was given with “an irrevocable promise.” Ibn Ezra, according to Rosenberg, explained that מִרְחֹק, of old, has to do with a long time ago rather than the more literal far in distance. LITV, for instance, renders it “counsels from afar” (emphasis added). Most of the Rabbis, explains Rosenberg, see this fulfillment taking place at the time of Gog and Magog. Young explains: “As once God had stated (ISAIAH 1:2) that He had raised² (רִמְּתִי) sons, now the prophet declares that he will exalt (אֲרִמְּנִי) God.”

¹ So also we have praise and a grand amen in the NT, “And the four and twenty elders and the four beasts fell down and worshipped God that sat on the throne, saying, Amen; Alleluia” (Revelation 19:4).

² Or, exalted.

2 For thou hast made of a city an heap; [of] a defenced city a ruin: a palace of strangers to be no city; it shall never be built.

For thou hast made of a city an heap; [of] a defenced city a ruin: The Targum (ܬ) has, “For thou hast made the unfortified cities heaps; the fortified city is a ruin.” The LXX (ϸ) reads, “Because thou hast reduced cities to a heap of ruins.” The Douay-Rheims (ܕ) has, “For thou hast reduced the city to a heap, the strong city to ruin.” This is an allusion to Babylon, or to spiritual Babylon—or sometimes called Edom (Idumea)³—in the war between Zion and the world; between good and evil. So Rashi (in Rosenberg) says this represents Seir, or Esau’s home in Edom. Henderson, Alexander, Barnes, Jennings, Cowles, Keith and JFB, to name a few, think it of Babylon (or a spiritual or mystic Babylon). Kaiser, instead, calls it the “World Capital.” Such a thought of a world capital immediately makes us think of Satan, the prince of this world (John 12:31; 14:30; 16:11). ¶ A palace of strangers to be no city; it shall never be built. The Targum (ܬ) has, “The idolatrous house of the nations in the city of Jerusalem, shall never be built again.” The LXX (ϸ) reads, “Cities made strong, that their foundations might not fall; (a city of wicked men cannot be built to last forever).” NETS ϸ renders it, “Fortified cities, so their foundations might fall.” Brenton ϸ probably has the right idea, by filling the ellipsis “Even cities made strong that their foundations should not fall &c.” The idea of the ϸ is that even the strongest fortified city would not be able to resist the punishment that would come upon it. The BPE (ܣ) gives the idea that the temple of the foreigner shall never be built again in the city, while the Lamsa Peshitta (ܣ) suggests that neither the palace of the stranger nor the city shall ever be rebuilt. The Douay-Rheims (ܕ) has, “The house of strangers, to be no city, and to be no more built up for ever.” In terms of the city that shall never be rebuilt, or Babylon, we read, “It shall never be inhabited, neither shall it be dwelt in from generation to generation” (ISAIAH 13:20a, also see vv. 19–23). In Revelation 18:2 we read: “And he cried mightily with a strong voice, saying, Babylon the great is fallen, is fallen, and is become the habitation of devils, and the hold of every foul spirit, and a cage of every unclean and hateful bird.” Regarding אֲרָמִים (strangers), Ibn Ezra has, non-Israelites, and renders it “The palaces of the heathen people shall never be built again in any city.” Kimhi believes the palace of strangers refers to Babylon (see both Rosenberg and Gill). Barnes, also speaking of זָרִים, explains: “Of strangers—Foreigners; a term often given to the inhabitants of foreign lands, and especially to the Babylonians... the capital of the whole Pagan world; the city where foreigners congregated and dwelt.” McFadyen suggests that strangers here may well be interpreted as the insolent.

³ D&C 1:36.

3 Therefore shall the strong people glorify thee, the city of the terrible nations shall fear thee.

Therefore shall the strong people glorify thee. The LXX (6) reads, “Therefore the distressed people will bless thee.” The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “Therefore shall a strong people praise thee.” Ibn Ezra explains it as, “Those who have escaped or are far off shall glorify thee, when they hear the report.” Barnes suggests that the strong people represent not only Babylon, but all the surrounding nations that become her allies. ¶ The city of the terrible nations shall fear thee. The LXX (6) reads, “And the cities of injured men will give thee thanks.” The BPE (S) has, “The cities of the tyrannical nations shall fear thee.” The Lamsa Peshitta (S) has worship instead of fear. The Douay-Rheims (V) has, mighty instead of terrible. Kimhi and Kara, according to Rosenberg, suggest that even the “tyrannical nations that did not worship You heretofore, shall honor You and fear You when they witness Your power over Gog and Magog.”

4 For thou hast been a strength to the poor, a strength to the needy in his distress, a refuge from the storm, a shadow from the heat, when the blast of the terrible ones [is] as a storm [against] the wall.

For thou hast been a strength to the poor. The LXX (6) reads, “For thou hast been the support of every humble city.” According to Kimhi, in Rosenberg, this refers to Israel. Ibn Ezra suggests, “It is wonderful how all well fortified towns were taken and the city of the poor, that is, Jerusalem, escaped.” Barnes suggests, regarding this verse: “By the ‘poor’ and the ‘needy’ here undoubtedly are mean; the captive Jews who had been stripped of their wealth, and carried from their homes, and confined in Babylon.” Likewise, Alexander says, “לַדָּל and אֶבְיֹוֹן are epithets often applied to Israel considered as a sufferer.” ¶ A strength to the needy in his distress. The LXX (6) reads, “And the defence of them who were dispirited, by reason of their weakness.” It is the Lord, then, who will strengthen Israel, or the poor and the needy. Also see ISAIAH 26:6, however. ¶ A refuge from the storm, a shadow from the heat. The Targum (T) has, “As those who are protected from before the storm.” The LXX (6) reads, “From wicked men thou will deliver them.” The Douay-Rheims (V) has whirlwind instead of storm. Ibn Ezra has showers instead of storm, “from the enemy who is compared to showers of water.” Kimhi explains, according to Rosenberg, “God was a shelter for the Jews throughout the years of exile.” Alexander writes: “The two figures of extreme heat and a storm of rain are combined to express the idea of persecution or affliction.” All of this can be applied to spiritual Babylon. ¶ When the blast of the terrible ones [is] as a storm [against] the wall. The Targum (T) has, “Or who are protected as in a shade from the scorching heat; thus the words of the wicked against the righteous are as a storm that beats against the wall.” To no avail, then, are the words of the wicked against the righteous, according to the Targum (T). The LXX (6) reads, “Thou art the support of the thirsty and the breath of men in distress.” The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “For the blast of the mighty is like a whirlwind beating against a wall.” Henderson believes that here רָעַם stands for anger, rather than blast. The Hebrew certainly can mean spirit, wind, breath or, in this case, threatening. HCSB has, “...the breath of the violent is like rain against a wall.” It is the same idea as what we find in Saul, “breathing out threatening” (ἐμπνέω ἀπειλή, Acts 9:1) before his heart was turned to the Lord. Kay tells us that the same word for wall (קִיר) is used in Ezekiel 13:12–15, “where the figure of a tempest beating against a fortress-wall is expanded (cp. Matthew 7:25, 27).” Alexander, who speaks of the “striking and impressive imagery of this verse,” explains: “As a storm of rain beats upon a wall, so the Babylonian persecution beat upon the captive Jews.” Today, the influence of the world is beating upon our homes. It is only by turning to Christ that we may be kept safe.

5 Thou shalt bring down the noise of strangers, as the heat in a dry place; [even] the heat with the shadow of a cloud: the branch of the terrible ones shall be brought low.

Thou shalt bring down the noise of strangers, as the heat in a dry place; [even] the heat with the shadow of a cloud: The Targum (T) has, “As the scorching heat in a dry land thou shalt bring low the tumult of the mighty: as the shade of a cooling rock in a parched land.” The LXX (6) reads, “When dispirited men shall be thirsting in Sion on account of wicked men to whom thou hast delivered us up.” The Lamsa Peshitta (S) has, “Thou shalt blot out the pride of aliens as the shadow at noonday, and as the heat is blotted out by the shade of a cloud.” The Douay-Rheims (V) reads, “Thou shalt bring down the tumult of strangers, as heat in thirst.” The noise (נִשְׁאֵן) of strangers seems to represent the sound of the heathen coming to battle against Israel (or else of their joyous victory songs, זִמְרֵי), something that the Lord will bring down or eliminate. Malbim has, according to Slotki/Rosenberg: “As the heat of the day, however fierce, is abated by the shadow of a cloud, so will God subdue the arrogant clamour or triumphant song of the most violent oppressors.” Gill explains that the shadow of a cloud provides shelter: “from the scorching beams of the sun, and by letting down rain, which moistens the earth; so the Lord protects his people from the fury of persecution, and abates it by the interposition of his power and providence; and at last puts an end to it.” ¶ The branch of the terrible ones shall be brought low. The Targum (Ƨ) has, “Thus peace of mind shall be to the righteous, when the wicked shall be humbled.” The Peshitta (S) translators use “tyrants (BPE) / mighty (Lamsa)” for terrible. The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “And as with heat under a burning cloud, thou shalt make the branch of the mighty to wither away.” ¶ As the heat in a dry place, פֶּחַח בְּצִיּוֹן. Kay says, “The word for ‘parched land’ occurs only here and in ISAIAH 32:2. In both places the LXX has Σῶν.—There need be little doubt that Sion was referred to. The refreshing dews of divine blessing, the fertilizing clouds of spiritual grace, had been long withheld from it (v. 6).” Zion is almost always spelled צִיּוֹן (but in Deuteronomy 4:48, we find it as שִׁיאֵן).⁴ ¶ Instead of branch, Gesenius, BDB and HALOT have song, especially a victory song, for זִמְרֵי. Kay says, “The word for chant [זִמְרֵי] (AV, branch) occurs elsewhere only in Song of Solomon 2:12)” [AV, the singing זִמְרֵי]. Bishop’s 1568 Bible renders this verse as: “Like as the heate in a drye place wasteth all thinges: so shalt thou suppress the noyse of aliantes, the heate [is abated] with the shadowe of the cloude, [euen so shall God] asswage the noyse of the cruel tirauntes.” Geneva’s 1587 Bible renders it “Thou shalt bring downe the noyse of the strangers, as the heate in a drie place: he wil bring downe the song of the mightie, as the heate in the shadowe of a cloude.” So also, most modern English Bibles (e.g., AAT, AMP, ASV, BBE, Berkeley, CEV, EB, HCSB, JPS, NASB, NBLH, NJB, NRSV, REB, RV, Tanakh, YLT). The German Luther Bible has Siegesgesang (i.e., victory song). The DRB leaning on the Vulgate (V); and the LBP leaning on the Aramaic (S) have branch. A number of Bibles use the word shout, also. Moffatt gives us the idea that the tyrants are humbled, which is the result either way. Barnes has, “Here it is undoubtedly used in the sense of a song, meaning either a shout of victory or of revelry; and the idea of the prophet is, that this would be brought low by the destruction of Babylon, and by the return of the captive Jews to their own land.”

vv. 6–8. The Supper of the Lord is announced—for all who fear Him, Jew and Gentile alike—as well as Christ’s victorious triumph over death.

6 ¶ And in this mountain shall the LORD of hosts make unto all people a feast of fat things, a feast of wines on the lees,⁵ of fat things full of marrow, of wines on the lees well refined.

And in this mountain shall the LORD of hosts make unto all people a feast of fat things / Of fat things full of marrow. The Targum (Ƨ) has, “And in this mountain shall the Lord of hosts make a feast and a banquet.” The Targum (Ƨ) offers, “They think that it shall be for their glory; but it shall be to them for disgrace and for mighty (the Royal Polyglot omits הִילָא, ‘mighty’) afflictions, from which they shall not deliver themselves, afflictions through which they shall come to an end.” The LXX (6) reads, “Then will the Lord of Hosts make provision for all the nations.” Ibn Ezra takes בְּהָרֵי, in [the] mountains, for Zion. And compares it to Obadiah 1:16, were the heathen nations who hate the Lord are destroyed, but those in mount Zion בְּהָרֵי צִיּוֹן (Obadiah 1:17) are blessed. Kay has, “At the end of ISAIAH 24 the prophet had spoken of a time, when ‘the Lord of Hosts’ should ‘reign on Mount Zion’ in glory. He now adds that ‘on this mountain,’ which must still be Zion, ‘the Lord of Hosts’ would ‘make for all peoples (v. 7) a feast’ of richest viands (compare Psalm 22:26).” Nägelsbach explains that the mountain here referred to “points back to ‘Mount Zion,’ ISAIAH 24:23.” Interestingly to us, as LDS, Wordsworth says, “Wherever the Church is, there is Zion—there is Jerusalem.” Gill explains that “the Lord’s supper itself is a feast... it seems rather to respect the marriage supper of the Lamb, in the latter day, when antichrist shall be destroyed, and Jews and Gentiles be converted, and shall join together in the participation of divine blessings... and ‘fat’ being mentioned is a proof that the ⁴ My friend שִׁיאֵן כהן lives in Jerusalem, and has this unique name.

⁵ Sediment is another word for lees. So, it appears to be the wine whose sediment has separated and thus only the clear part remains.

words must respect the times of the Messiah, since, under the law, fat was not to be eaten.” Nägelsbach writes, regarding the fat: “What God Himself formerly required of men, as the noblest part of the victims offered to Him, He now Himself as host offers to His redeemed upon His holy mountain. But the expression ‘fat’ or ‘marrow’ is used also in reference to the land and its vegetable products, to designate the finest. Thus it is said in Genesis 45:18, ‘ye shall eat the fat of the land,’ &c.” John M. Lundquist writes, “The ultimate sacramental meal was the one celebrated in honor of the Savior, who ‘by his own blood ... entered in once into the holy place, having obtained eternal redemption for us’ (Hebrews 9:12). In this setting the temple imagery is very clear. Indeed, there is to be yet another messianic sacramental meal, and this too is spoken of in the scriptures within the context of the temple. We read in Revelation 19:9, ‘Blessed are they which are called unto the marriage supper of the Lamb.’ And earlier in the same book: ‘Therefore are they before the throne of God, and serve him day and night in his temple: and he that sitteth on the throne shall dwell among them.... For the Lamb which is in the midst of the throne shall feed them, and shall lead them unto living fountains of waters: and God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes’ (Revelation 7:15, 17; emphasis added). This same conjunction of concepts is found in the Doctrine and Covenants, where we read of ‘a supper of the house of the Lord, well prepared, unto which all nations shall be invited ... And after that cometh the day of my power; then shall the poor, the lame, and the blind, and the deaf, come in unto the marriage of the Lamb, and partake of the supper of the Lord, prepared for the great day to come’ (D&C 58:9, 11; emphasis added). Nyman explains: “The Saints who went into Jackson County in 1831 were to invite the rich and the learned, the wise and the noble (the Gentiles) to participate in the establishment of Zion. Since the Gentiles rejected this opportunity, the work would be accomplished later by the poor, the lame, the blind, and the deaf (the house of Israel) through the Lord’s power. This is the time spoken of by Isaiah in ISAIAH 25:6. The law of consecration was to do away with the poverty, and the feast would be physical as well as spiritual.” It is within this context of a millennial supper, to be enjoyed in the temple (‘on this mountain’) by all those who have entered into holy temple covenants with the Lord, that I believe the passage in Isaiah is to be understood”⁶ We have an exquisite explanation offered in Understanding Isaiah, “Feast of fat things, a feast of wines. By teaching the gospel to the earth’s inhabitants, our missionaries invite people to come to this feast, also called ‘the supper of the Lord’ (D&C 58:11), the ‘supper of the house of the Lord’ (D&C 58:9), and the ‘marriage supper of the Lamb’ (Revelation 19:9). ‘All nations’ are invited—‘first, the rich and the learned, the wise and the noble’—but when these reject the invitation to the feast, the Lord’s representatives will invite the poor and the humble. Only those who have received the ordinances of the temple and who are truly the humble followers of Christ will be able to partake of the feast. This feast will take place at or near the time of the Second Coming (D&C 58:9–11; Revelation 19:7–8; Matthew 22:2–14; Luke 14:16–24). Fat things full of marrow. The feast, like the sacramental emblems, reminds us of Christ’s atonement, for fat things and wines recall sacrificial offerings (Leviticus 3:3–16) these things also imply abundance and bounty. The phrase wines on the lees well refined speaks of ‘wine that remains upon its settlings until it is well matured. It is then poured off and strained to provide the best wine possible,’ [Hailey, Commentary on ISAIAH, 206] since only the very best will be served at the Lord’s feast.”⁷ Calvin has, “Some render the Hebrew word שְׁמֵרִים, dregs, but inaccurately, for it means ‘old wines,’ such as the French call, vins de garde, ‘wines that have been long kept,’ and that are preferable to ordinary wines [as] ... they carry their age better. He calls them liquids which contain no dregs or sediment.” Delitzsch explains that this mountain is Zion, and the feast is a spiritual one taken from an allusion to the peace offerings (Psalm 22:27). Barnes has, “The following verses undoubtedly refer to the times of the Messiah. Several of the expressions used here are quoted in the New Testament, showing that the reference is to the Messiah, and to the fact that his kingdom would commence in Jerusalem and then extend to all people.” ¶ A feast of wines on the lees. / Of wines on the lees well refined (also see, Jeremiah 48:11). The LXX (Ⲫ) reads, “On this mount they shall drink gladness: they shall drink wine.” The Peshitta (ܣ) has the wines as aged and “exquisite (BPE) / rich (Lamsa),” and explains that these blessings will come from our Heavenly Savior. The Douay-Rheims (Ⲕ) has, “A feast of wine / of wine purified from the lees.” Delitzsch explains of this aged and filtered wines (LHI), שְׁמֵרִים מְזֻקִּים: “wines which have been left to stand upon their lees after the first fermentation is over, which have thus thoroughly fermented, and have been kept a long time (from shâmar, to keep, spec. to allow to ferment), and which are then filtered before drinking (Gr. οἶνος σακκίας, i.e., διυλισμένος or διηθικός, from διηθεῖν, percolare), hence wine both strong and clear ... The thing symbolized in this way is the full enjoyment of blessedness in the perfected kingdom of God.” Gray says, “That wine, not dregs, is intended, is clear from the last clause of the verse.” Kay explains, “old wines, but carefully strained... At Sinai the seventy elders, who accompanied Moses a certain distance up the ascent, ‘saw God, and did eat and drink.’ Afterwards, all Israel was invited to come up three times a year to Jerusalem, to hold festival and to ‘rejoice before the Lord.’ These sacred feasts were types of the great banquet, to which all nations should hereafter be called (ISAIAH 40:1–2),—the banquet held in celebration of the victory which was gained over Death and Hades by the Son of God Incarnate.” Also see ISAIAH 55:2, similarly an invitation to come unto Christ.

⁷ Parry, Donald W.; Parry, Jay A.; & Peterson, Tina M. Understanding Isaiah, p.227.

⁶ Lundquist, John M. Temple Symbolism in Isaiah (pp. 42–43).

7 And he will destroy[✓] in this mountain the face of the covering cast over[✓] all people, and the veil that is spread over all nations.

✓ swallow up

✓ ✓ covered

And he will destroy in this mountain the face of the covering cast over all people. The Targum (ⲧ) has, “The face of the prince, of the prince of all the people shall be destroyed (or swallowed up).” The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “And be anointed with myrrh on this mount.” The Peshitta (Ⲫ) renders it, “And the governor who had made himself ruler over all the people would be destroyed (Lamsa) / consumed (BPE) in this mountain.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲱ) has, “And he shall destroy in this mountain the face of the bond with which all people were tied.” Kimhi, in Slotki/Rosenberg, explains the veil in relation to the enemies of Israel: “A metaphor for the shelter and protection these nations enjoy. God will remove this, making them vulnerable to the punishment due them.” Probably so, but much better, Gill explains it of the dark veil of the false systems of religion: “the covering of human doctrines and traditions ... which now will be removed ... through the clear ministration of the everlasting Gospel, which will be spread with power, and in its purity, throughout the whole world (see ISAIAH 60:1); more especially this may respect the light and glory of the New Jerusalem state, in which Christ will be the light⁸ thereof, and the nations of them that are saved shall walk in it, and Satan will be bound a thousand years, that he may not deceive the nations any more.” Calvin says, “Not only the Jews, but all nations, which formerly were buried in every kind of errors and superstition, are invited to this banquet.” Ironside takes us to Ephesians 4:18, where we also read about this veil of darkness of false religion: “Having the understanding darkened, being alienated from the life of God through the ignorance that is in them, because of the blindness of their heart” (4:18). Also of interest is: “That we henceforth be no more children, tossed to and fro, and carried about with every wind of doctrine, by the sleight of men, and cunning craftiness, whereby they lie in wait to deceive” (4:14). Wordsworth writes, “In Exodus 34:19–34, Moses is described as putting a covering or veil over his face, after he had been communing with God on Mount Sinai (contrasted here with Mount Sion), because his face shone; and the people, who had been guilty of a great sin, could not bear to look on his countenance, which shone with a reflection of God’s glory, and dazzled them with its splendour. St. Paul teaches us to see there a figure of the veil which is on the hearts of the unbelieving Jews, in reading the Books of Moses and the Prophets; and he foretells that this veil or covering will be taken away in the Gospel, when they turn to the Lord Christ.” Similarly, when we read that the JST corrects the obviously incorrect and contradictory John 1:18, “No man hath seen God at any time, the only begotten Son, which is in the bosom of the Father, he hath declared him” to read: “And no man hath seen God at any time, except he hath borne record of the Son; for except it is through him no man can be saved.” The JST also corrects the corrupt text in 1 John 4:12. ¶ And the veil that is spread over all nations. The Targum (ⲧ) has, “and the face of the king, of the ruler of all the kingdoms.” The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “Hand down all these things to the nations for this counsel is for all the nations.” The Peshitta (Ⲫ) has slaughter rather than “veil that is spread.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲱ) has, “And the web that he began over all nations.” Delitzsch explains regarding the veil and also makes some curious observations about the same: “The ‘veil’ and ‘covering’ (מִסְכָּה from נָסַךְ = מָסַךְ, ISAIAH 22:8, from סָכַךְ, to weave, twist, and twist over = to cover) are not symbols of mourning and affliction, but of spiritual blindness, like the ‘veil’ upon the heart of Israel mentioned in 2 Corinthians 3:15.⁹ The פָּנֵי-הַלֹּוֹט¹⁰ (cf., Job 41:5)¹¹ is the upper side of the veil, the side turned towards you, by which Jehovah takes hold of the veil to lift it up.” Nägelsbach suggests that when the veil is removed, “men will be capable of seeing the glory of the LORD

⁸ Elder Bruce R. McConkie taught that this event, rather, is part of the post-Millennial earth. “In his vision of the Celestial Jerusalem, John saw ‘the holy Jerusalem, descending out of heaven from God, having the glory of God ... The street of the city was pure gold, as it were transparent glass.’ There was no temple therein, neither the need for the sun nor moon to give light, ‘for the glory of God did lighten it, and the Lamb is the light thereof.’ (Revelation 21)” (A New Witness for the Articles of Faith, p. 588).

⁹ See also 2 Corinthians 3:13–16.

¹⁰ Face of the covering.

¹¹ In the AV, Job 41:13, “Who can discover the face of his garment?” (מִי-נִלְוֶה פָּנֵי לְבוּשׁוֹ).

face to face (1 Corinthians 13:12¹²; 1 John 3:2).” Ludlow shares several scriptures, of which I include two: “But the day soon cometh that ye shall see me, and know that I am; for the veil of darkness shall soon be rent, and he that is not purified shall not abide the day” (D&C 38:8); and “And again, verily I say unto you that it is your privilege, and a promise I give unto you that have been ordained unto this ministry, that inasmuch as you strip yourselves from jealousies and fears, and humble yourselves before me, for ye are not sufficiently humble, the veil shall be rent and you shall see me and know that I am—not with the carnal neither natural mind, but with the spiritual” (D&C 67:10). I believe that, in effect, there is a double veil. When we are willing to humble ourselves in holy prayer, we remove our veil of incredulity from before our face. When our prayers reach God, He, in effect, removes the veil from off His face, and we can commune with God. The Savior’s promise then comes to pass, “And I will walk among you, and will be your God, and ye shall be my people” (Leviticus 26:12, emphasis added). This is why it is so vital to follow the scripture that says, “Quench not the Spirit” (1 Thessalonians 5:19). If we are in tune with the Spirit the Lord will speak to us through the Holy Ghost and direct our paths. In the Millennial day, of course, all these things will be magnified. But let not anyone think that such communion is not possible until then.

8 He will swallow up death in victory; and the Lord GOD will wipe away tears from off all faces; and the rebuke of his people shall he take away from off all the earth: for the LORD hath spoken [it].

He will swallow up death in victory; and the Lord GOD will wipe away tears from off all faces. ¶ The Targum (Ⲯ) has Jehovah God (Elohim), יְהוָה אֱלֹהִים (CAL); יְהוָה אֱלֹהִים (Stenning Ⲯ, as usual, I had to transform the superlinear punctuation into the more traditional underlinear type); or יְהוָה אֱלֹהִים (Sperber Ⲯ, where once again I had to transform the superlinear punctuation); while the literal Masoretic text (ⲙ) renders it Adonai (Lord) Jehovah, אֲדֹנָי יְהוָה.¹³ ¶ The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “Death shall be forgotten for ever; and the Lord God shall wipe away tears from off all the faces.” The LXX (Ⲙ) reads, “Mighty death had swallowed up; but the Lord God hath again wiped every tear from every face.” The Peshitta (Ⲑ) adds “forever” to the victory over death. The Douay-Rheims (Ⲕ) has, for the first clause, “He shall cast death down headlong forever.” Christ, through His expiatory sacrifice and resurrection, puts away physical death for all mankind. As Paul so beautifully writes under the inspiration of the Spirit: “Behold, I shew you a mystery; We shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed, In a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump: for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed. For this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality. So when this corruptible shall have put on incorruption, and this mortal shall have put on immortality, then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, Death is swallowed up in victory. O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory?” (1 Corinthians 15:51–55, also see Ezekiel 37:1–14; ISAIAH 26:19). Thompson (also see Whitehouse) says: “The quotation in 1 Corinthians 15:54 gives the word for ‘for ever’ its Aramaic sense of ‘victory.’” In his Old Testament commentary Clarke says that “Jesus dying instead of a guilty world” is what is meant by these words about swallowing up death. In his New Testament commentary, under 1 Corinthians 15:54, Clarke has, “Κατεποθη ὁ θάνατος εἰς νίκος. These words are a quotation from ISAIAH 25:8, where the Hebrew is בִּלְעַם הַמָּוֶת לְנִצָּחַ: He (God) hath swallowed up death in victory; or, for ever. These words in the Septuagint are thus translated: κατεπεν ὁ θάνατος ἰσχυσας: Death having prevailed, or conquered, hath swallowed up. But in the version of Theodotion, the words are the same with those of the apostle. The Hebrew לְנִצָּחַ the Septuagint sometimes translate εἰς νίκος, in victory, but most commonly εἰς τέλος, for ever; both, as Bishop Pearce observes, in such kind of phrases, signifying the same thing, because eternity conquers all things...” Likewise, Keith also suggests that לְנִצָּחַ, forever, may well be synonymous with victory. The idea is that Christ swallowed up death for each of us, and in glory will give us resurrection from death. Gesenius, according to Alexander, speaks of the abolishment of death as bringing man to enjoy the condition that existed before the fall, or the former paradisiacal glory. Luther compares this verse to Hosea 13:14, “I will ransom them from the power of the grave; I will redeem them from death: O death, I will be thy plagues; O grave, I will be thy destruction: repentance shall be hid from mine eyes.” The time will come when the cares of this earth will be left behind, and thus the Lord will wipe away tears from all faces. Delitzsch writes: “There is something very significant in the use of the expression דִּמְעָה (a tear), which the Apocalypse renders πᾶν δάκρυον (Revelation 21:4). Wherever there is a tear on any face whatever, Jehovah wipes it away; and if Jehovah wipes away, this must be done most thoroughly: He removes the cause with the outward symptom, the sin as well as the tear.” Kay says, “After the general resurrection and the judgment ‘Death and Hades’ are to be ‘cast into the lake of fire’ (Revelation 20:14).” Rawlinson observes, “But surely death is not the only cause of human mourning. Our own sins, the sins and sufferings of our dear ones, are the main provocatives of our tears. When it is promised, as here and in Revelation 7:17 and 21:4, that ‘there shall be no more pain, neither sorrow nor crying,’ the revelation is made that there shall be no more sin; for where sin is, sorrow must be.” ¶ And the rebuke of his people shall he take away from off all the earth: for the LORD hath spoken [it]. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “And the reproach of his people he shall remove from off all the earth, because it hath been decreed thus by the Word of the Lord.” It is of interest that Pauli has rendered בְּמִמְרָא Meimra, with a capital letter, which well suits the word in Syriac. The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “And removed from the whole earth the reproach of this people. For the mouth of the Lord hath spoken.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲯ) has, for the first clause, “And the reproach of his people he shall take away from off the whole earth.” ¶ His people, עַמּוֹ. Gray suggests that the Lord begins with a “feast for all His subjects” in ISAIAH 25:6–8 but at the end of ISAIAH 25:8 “the passage closes with a special reference to the Jews, Yahweh’s peculiar people.” Indeed, we note such universal words as unto all the people (לְכָל-הָעַמִּים, verse 6); over all the people (עַל-כָּל-הָעַמִּים, verse 7); and from off all faces (מֵעַל כָּל-פָּנִים, verse 8a), yet the verse moves on to say, and the rebuke of his people shall he take away (וְהִרְפֹּת עֲמוֹ יִסֵּר, verse 8b). This seems to be an allusion to other scriptures in which the Lord speaks about Israel paying a double portion for her sins but then receiving a double reward. For instance, in Isaiah we have, “Speak ye comfortably to Jerusalem, and cry unto her, that her warfare is accomplished, that her iniquity is pardoned: for she hath received of the LORD’s hand double for all her sins,” (ISAIAH 40:2); and “For your shame ye shall have double; and for confusion they shall rejoice in their portion: therefore in their land they shall possess the double: everlasting joy shall be unto them” (ISAIAH 61:7). But also, through the grace of Christ, the burden of sin is removed from all repentant followers of Christ. This requires, however, that we have a sincere desire to change and turn to follow Christ.

¹² “For now we see through a glass, darkly; but then face to face: now I know in part; but then shall I know even as also I am known” (1 Corinthians 13:12).

¹³ The Jewish tradition is to read this as in the KJV, Lord God.

vv. 9–12. Edom, as a type of the world, drowns in contaminated dung water. These verses make us think of ISAIAH 63, where the Lord says, “And I will tread down the people in mine anger” (see ISAIAH 63:3–6). The Savior will come to the rescue of Jerusalem (Zechariah 14:1–4) when the whole of the earth has turned against His people in the last days. Moab seems to be made a representative of the nations who turn against Israel and surround Jerusalem.

9 ¶ And it shall be said in that day, Lo, this [is] our God; we have waited for him, and he will save us: this [is] the LORD; we have waited for him, we will be glad and rejoice in his salvation.

And it shall be said in that day [וְאָמַר בַּיּוֹם], Lo, this [is] our God; we have waited for him, and he will save us: The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “And one shall say at that time: Behold, this is our God; this is he for whom we have hoped, and he shall save us.” The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “And in that day they will say, ‘Behold our God in whom we trusted, will indeed save us.’” ¶ This [is] the LORD; we have waited for him, we will be glad and rejoice in his salvation. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “This is the Lord, for his Word we have hoped; we will rejoice, and be glad in his salvation.” The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “He is the Lord, for him we waited and exulted; let us therefore rejoice in our salvation.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲯ) has, “This is the Lord, we have patiently waited for him, we shall rejoice and be joyful in his salvation.” Nägelsbach writes, “The redeemed now see the Lord in whom they have hitherto only believed (compare ISAIAH 25:7 and 1 John 3:2). The heathen, who believed in false gods, experience the very opposite. They are confounded when they must mark the vanity of their idols; but they who believe in Jehovah will after faith be rewarded with seeing... [and say]: we and all see Him as truly existing, as Him who was and is to come, יְהוָה (Exodus 3:14). Herein is their joy perfect (John 15:11)” (emphasis added).

10 For in this mountain shall the hand of the LORD rest, and Moab shall be trodden down under him, even as straw is trodden down for the dunghill. ✓ ✓

✓ or, threshed

✓ ✓ or, threshed in Madmenah

For in this mountain shall the hand of the LORD rest. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “For the power of the Lord of hosts shall be revealed in this mountain.” The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “God will give rest on this mountain.” Ibn Ezra explains that כִּי-תָנוּחַ יַד-יְהוָה (for-rest-hand of the LORD), is a reference to the Lord's punishment. Rashi, in Rosenberg, mentions that this is an anthropomorphic expression. This is because the hand of the Lord is mentioned. Barnes writes, "The hand' in the Scriptures is often used as the symbol of protection and defense. By the expression that the hand of Yahweh should REST on mount Zion, is meant probably that he would be its defender; his protection would not be withdrawn, but would be permanent there." ¶ And Moab shall be trodden down under him, even as straw is trodden down for the dunghill. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, "And the Moabites shall be trodden under foot even as straw is in the clay." The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, "When the country of Moab shall be trodden down, as a threshing floor is trampled with cars¹⁴ (i.e., 'wagons'—Brenton and NETS)." The Peshitta (Ⲫ) also has the straw trodden down with a threshing (Lamsa) or grinding (BPE) instrument. The Douay-Rheims (ⲩ) has, for the second clause, "As straw is broken in pieces with the wain." The קָרַי (what the Masoretic (Ⲛ) scholars indicated should be read despite what was written), in this case בְּמוֹ (in, through) suggest that the "straw is trodden down for [בְּמוֹ] the dunghill" (emphasis added, KJV); or "straw is trodden down in [בְּמוֹ] the dunghill" (emphasis added, JPS). Other translations follow the בְּתַיִב, or what is written, בְּתַיִב (in the water). Several versions follow the בְּתַיִב: "straw is trodden down in the water [בְּתַיִב] of the dung-hill" (emphasis added, ASV); or "straw is trodden down in the water [בְּתַיִב] of a manure pile" (emphasis added, NASB). As the DSSB 1QIsa^a (Ⲫ) points out, the Dead Sea Scrolls (Ⲫ) coincide with the Masoretic text (Ⲛ). So we see in [the] water בְּתַיִב. Ibn Ezra explains that Moab will be included in those who come to besiege. Slotki/Rosenberg, leaning on Kimhi, suggest that מִדְּמִנָּה or dunghill "may perhaps be a contemptuous allusion to a Moabite city named Madmen" (מִדְּמִנָּה, see Jeremiah 48:2). Having worked on a number of animal farms, rainy conditions—where the manure is made wet and mixes with the animal urine—tend to be more unpleasant and difficult to work around than in dry conditions. In dairies, these are removed from where the cows stand to a separate manure pond. Gray reflects, "Moab's end with that of a man drowned in dung-water recalls the malignancy of the saga that told of Moab's birth (Genesis 19:30–37)." Additional reasons, besides this, are suggested by Kay, for the use of Moab as the enemy of Israel: (1) Moab's desire to curse Israel through Balaam; (2) an allusion to the mountains of Moab that were divided by the Dead Sea from the mountains of Zion, possibly in rivalry to the latter, "'a great gulf is fixed;' like that which divine judgment interposed between Lot and Abraham,; and (3) the fact that Moab attempted to prevent Israel from returning to the promised land after she fled from Egypt. Nägelsbach adds yet another reason: (4) Moab's pride or arrogance at her living in peace and not under subjugation (Jeremiah 48:11). Kay goes on to say, "It is observable that the only place outside the Pentateuch, in which 'the children of Lot' are mentioned, is Psalm 83:8: where they appear as the leaders of a vast confederacy against God's 'hidden ones' (vv. 3–8). The sentence, which is there prayed for, is that they may become 'as the dung of the earth' (v. 10)." Nägelsbach does well in explaining that Moab is here only used as a type of the world, for the day will come when she will turn to the Lord, "Yet will I bring again the captivity of Moab in the latter days, saith the LORD" (Jeremiah 48:47a).

11 And he shall spread forth his hands in the midst of them, as he that swimmeth spreadeth forth [his hands] to swim: and he shall bring down their pride together with the spoils of their hands.

And he shall spread forth his hands in the midst of them, as he that swimmeth spreadeth forth [his hands] to swim: The Targum (Ⲯ) has, "And he shall extend the stroke of his power among them, as the swimmer extends himself to swim." The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, "And he shall cause his hands to relax ('spread forth his hands' Brenton)." The Douay-Rheims (ⲩ) has, for the first clause, "And he shall stretch forth his hands under him." This figure seems to have Israel's enemies crawling and 'swimming' in the manure mixed mire or manure pond after being trampled in it. Delitzsch has: "The swimmer is Moab itself, as Gesenius, Hitzig, Knobel, and in fact the majority of commentators suppose." Lowth also thinks this words as reflected in Moab, and adds, "So בְּקִרְבוֹ, in the midst of him, means, that this destruction shall be open and exposed to the view of all: The neighboring nations shall plainly see him struggling against it, as a man in the midst of the deep waters exerts all his efforts, by swimming, to save himself from drowning." Not just from drowning, but from the horror of drowning in a urine and manure pit. Wildberger, leaning on Duhm, suggests that this may have happened to Moab when she was "subjugated by Alexander Jannaeus (Josephus, Antiquities 13.13.5)."

¹⁴ Seems to refer to the rake or plow or some other implement of husbandry whose purpose is to incorporate the standing straw into the soil, after the grain has been harvested.

This scripture, however, is most likely looking to a mystic Moab as it earlier looked at a mystic Babylon. ¶ And he shall bring down their pride together with the spoils of their hands. The Targum (ⲧ) has, “And he shall humble his glory, together with the wiles of his hands (i.e., what Moab has got by craftiness or sleight of hands).” The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “As he indeed humbled him to be slain, and shall humble his pride—those things on which he hath laid his hands.” We must each overcome our own pride.

12 And the fortress of the high fort of thy walls shall he bring down, lay low, [and] bring to the ground, [even] to the dust.

And the fortress of the high fort of thy walls shall he bring down, lay low. The Targum (ⲧ) has, “He shall cast down the fortified city, the great city.” The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “And shall lower the height of his wall of refuge.” The BPE (Ⲥ) explains that even the most fortified walls shall be brought down. The Lamsa Peshitta (Ⲥ) calls it the “fortress of treason.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲱ) has, “And the bulwarks of thy high walls shall fall, and be brought low.” Rashi and Ibn

Ezra, according to Slotki/Rosenberg think this verse is addressed to Moab. Delitzsch has: “We are evidently to understand by it the strong and lofty walls of the cities of Moab in general.” Barnes has, “The repetition of the expressions ‘bring down,’ ‘lay low,’ and ‘bring to the ground,’ is designed to make the sentence emphatic, and to indicate that it would certainly be accomplished.” Regarding this city, Cheyne writes: “Most explain this of Kir Moab, or of the cities of Moab in general; Vitranga and Gesenius, of Babylon. I think it refers at any rate to the ‘city’ mentioned in ISAIAH 24:10–12; and especially (note the expressions) ISAIAH 26:5.” Moab and Babylon, however, seem to be synonyms when it comes to their mystic representation of the earth. ¶ [And] bring to the ground, [even] to the dust. The Targum (ⲧ) has, “he shall thrust it down, it shall come to the earth, even to the dust.” The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “And it shall be laid low in the dust.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲱ) has, “And shall be pulled down to the ground, even to the dust.” The dust here is probably Sheol, or the spirit prison portion of it.

FIRST POSTED: 6 March 2011

Isaiah 26

From Teachings of the Prophet Joseph Smith: “The land of America is a promised land unto [the descendants of Joseph], and unto it all the tribes of Israel will come, with as many of the Gentiles as shall comply with the requisitions of the new covenant. But the tribe of Judah will return to old Jerusalem. The city of Zion spoken of by David, in the one hundred and second Psalm, will be built upon the land of America, ‘And the ransomed of the Lord shall return, and come to Zion with songs and everlasting joy upon their heads.’ (ISAIAH 35:10); and then they will be delivered from the overflowing scourge that shall pass through the land. But Judah shall obtain deliverance at Jerusalem. See Joel 2:32; ISAIAH 26:20–21; Jeremiah 31:12; Psalm 1:5; 10. These are testimonies that the Good Shepherd will put forth His own sheep, and lead them out from all nations where they have been scattered in a cloudy and dark day, to Zion, and to Jerusalem; besides many more testimonies which might be brought.” This chapter may be contrasted with ISAIAH 35. There the focus is on Zion and the gathering of Israel; here on Judah and the gathering to Jerusalem and the Holy Land. Jenour says: “Doubtless the Spirit, in dictating the terms of this song to the prophet, intended that it should be for the instruction and comfort of believers in all ages.” Wordsworth does a brilliant job of applying this chapter of to the very times of Isaiah, Hezekiah and the invasion of Sennacherib. Other exegetes have applied these to the Babylonian captivity and return therefrom. And this is good. After all, Nephi taught us to liken all scripture unto us (1 Nephi 19:23b). These, however, are secondary applications. ISAIAH 26 is strictly eschatological (in this case pre-millennial, millennial and post-millennial days) and begins with the words in that day (יָמֵי הַהוּא). Judah is introduced as singing a song of praise and thanksgiving for she has much to be grateful for. The Lord, even the Lord of Hosts will be her protector; her ransom in Yom Kippur (Day of Atonement); her giver of peace; her bringer forth in the resurrection. Yes, the Lord’s hand has been lifted up to humble her, but this has been a show of the most exquisite love. Israel shall learn to call on the name of the LORD (Joel 2:32) in the last days. The Lord himself will be for a protection to the children of Israel, as He was also when they escaped out of Egypt. Who is the enemy referred to here? Not just the surrounding nations who hate Israel, but Satan himself (see ISAIAH 27:1). Israel shall trust in Yahweh and none else. The poor and the needy represent in great measure those who will join the Church. The just will behold the majesty of the Lord—while those who rebel against Him will not. Perfect peace is only found in serving the Lord. Others have ruled wickedly over Judah but these will not be remembered. The Lord will be resurrected and with him all the just. At the beginning of the Millennium, only the just shall be brought forth. All memory of the unjust is lost until the very end of the millennial day. The wicked nations only remembered God in the day of their trouble. The children of Israel suffered birth pains but were not able to bring forth delivery. Redemption only comes through Messiah. The bliss of the resurrected righteous is not to be yet. The Lord will come to punish the wicked as He did in the time of the Passover. The Lord’s disciples need to stand in holy places and protect themselves from Babylon, at least for “a little moment.” The earth shall be a witness against those who have spilled innocent blood and committed other abominations and none shall be able to hide his wickedness.

vv. 1–4. Judah will sing a song of gratitude to the Lord in that day. The Lord will be her protector. A very special place is prepared for those who have acted in righteousness and put their trust in the Lord. In return for obedience, the Lord gives His disciples perfect peace. It follows that we ought to put our trust in the Lord God if we want to be partakers of that peace.

1 ¶ IN that day shall this song be sung in the land of Judah; We have a strong city; salvation will [God] appoint [for] walls and bulwarks.

IN that day shall this song be sung in the land of Judah.

The Masoretic text (שִׁיר־הַיְּהוּדָה) renders it this the song in the masculine, while the DSS¹ 1QIsa^b (א) (שִׁירָה הַזֹּאת) has it in the feminine. The DSS 1QIsa^a (א) has song in the masculine and this in the feminine, שִׁיר הַזֹּאת. The Targum (ܬܠܬ) has, “At that time shall they sing a new (the Royal Polyglot reads ܢܚܕܐ, ‘this’) song in the land of the house of Judah.” The LXX (Ϯ) reads, “In that day shall this song be sung in the land of Judea.” Clarke writes, “[Kimhi] says, ‘This song refers to the time of salvation, i.e., the days of the Messiah.’” The days of the Messiah is a Jewish expression for the day of the Lord (e.g., ISAIAH 2:12; 13:6; 13:9; Ezekiel

¹ Beginning with this chapter I have no longer just quoted DSSB (first edition), but have consulted other sources, such as Accordance, Discoveries in the Judean Desert XXXII Isaiah (Volumes I & II) and Biblical Qumran Scrolls (both by Eugene Ulrich), Logos, Fred Miller, and DSSB.

30:3; D&C 2: 12; 13:6, 9), day of God (2 Peter 3:12), or the end of days. Now, regarding Kimhi's comment about salvation, the word in Hebrew is יְשׁוּעָה! That is, Yeshua, or in Greek, Iesus, Ἰησοῦς, or our Lord and Savior Jesus the Christ, Ἰησοῦς Χριστοῦ. And Messiah in Greek is Christos, or Christ, Χριστοῦ; and in Hebrew, Mashiaj, the Anointed One, מָשִׁיחַ. Numerous exegetes point to this allusion in the next clause. This song, then, will be sung in the last days, in Jerusalem (in ISAIAH 35 we hear another song, but that one in relation to the gathering of Israel back to Zion or the New Jerusalem).² ISAIAH 26:1 will have its more perfect fulfillment at the beginning of the millennial day. Young says, "This city is not yet inhabited, for, like the Garden of Eden, it was first made by God for those whom He loved and wished to be its inhabitants." Yes, indeed, the earth, like in the times of the Garden of Eden, will once again be restored to its paradisiacal glory in preparation for the resurrection of the just at the Second Coming. And in the Millennium the Lord will have two capitals: one of them in Jerusalem and the other in Zion (or the New Jerusalem). I also believe that this verse has a partial pre-millennium fulfillment as Judah has begun to be restored to the land of her former habitation. ¶ We have a strong city; salvation will [God] appoint [for] walls and bulwarks. As Ibn Ezra points out, the Masoretic text (מ) gives the Hebrew idiom, city strength to us, עִיר עֲזָרָנוּ, rather than a strong city. The Masoretic text (מ) has walls and bulwarks, חֻמוֹת וְיָחַל, as does the DSS 1QIsa^a (ש) and DSS 1QIsa^b (ש), חֻמוֹת וְיָחַל, while the DSS 4QIsa^c (ש) renders it her walls and her bulwarks, חֻמוֹתֶיהָ וְיָחַלֶּיהָ. The Targum (ס) has, "We have a strong city, salvation and mercy shall be established upon her walls." The BPE (ס) offers, "The strong city is its salvation; build walls and bulwarks." The Douay-Rheims (ט) has, "Sion the city of our strength a saviour, a wall and a bulwark shall be set therein." The LXX (θ) reads, "Behold we have a strong city! he will make salvation its wall and outworks." Lowth explains that this strong city is in contrast to that mentioned in ISAIAH 25:2. In the present passage the city has 'gates' (ISAIAH 26:2), but no 'walls'—walls and bulwarks being unnecessary, since the saving might of God himself would be its sure defense against every enemy." Calvin³ has, "As if he had said, 'Let other cities rely on their fortifications, God alone will be to us instead of all bulwarks.'"⁴ Barnes explains: "The idea here is, that Yahweh would be a protector, and that this would constitute its strength... [God] will himself be the defender of his people in the place of walls and bulwarks." Keith well says: "The language of this song, as well as its connexion and coincidence with other prophecies, shows that its fulfilment is still future. For when, either at their return from Babylon, or at any past period, can it be said that salvation has been the walls and bulwarks of Jerusalem?" ¶ חֻמוֹת וְיָחַל, walls and bulwarks.

Regarding bulwarks, various definitions are given but what is most important is that they are part of the fortifications. Barnes explains: "This word means properly bastions, or ramparts. The original means properly a pomoerium, or antemural defense; a space without the wall of a city raised up like a small wall. The Syriac renders it, Bar shuro, – 'Son of a wall,' meaning a small wall. It was usually a breastwork, or heap of earth thrown up around the city, that constituted an additional defense." Delitzsch beautifully writes: "for the walls and bulwarks of Jerusalem (חל), as in Lamentations 2:8, the small outside wall which encloses all the fortifications) are not dead stone, but yeshuâh, ever living and never exhausted salvation (ISAIAH 60:18). In just the same sense Jehovah is called elsewhere the wall of Jerusalem, and even a wall of fire in Zechariah 2:9."⁵ Barnes points us to Jeremiah's assertion that salvation can only come through the Lord: "Truly in vain is salvation hoped for from the hills, and from the multitude of mountains: truly in the LORD our God is the salvation of Israel" (Jeremiah 3:23); as well as ISAIAH 60:18, "Violence shall no more be heard in thy land, wasting nor destruction within thy borders; but thou shalt call thy walls Salvation, and thy gates Praise." ¶ Since the dedicatory prayer by Orson Hyde, 24 October 1841, for the return of Judah to Israel, we may see the hand of the Lord in this gathering back to ² Jerusalem (or, the Old Jerusalem) and Zion (or, the New Jerusalem) constitute two different locations (ISAIAH 2:3). Elder Bruce R. McConkie explained: "Before the Second Coming, gathered Judah, as directed by Ephraim, shall build up anew the Old Jerusalem and prepare therein a holy temple; and gathered Ephraim, aided by Manasseh, shall build a New Jerusalem in an American Zion and prepare therein a holy temple. It is to these two temples in particular that the Lord shall come at his glorious return, and it is from these two cities – Zion in America and Jerusalem in Old Canaan – that the governance and worship of the world will be directed" (A New Witness for the Articles of Faith, pp. 587–588).

³ Calvin also writes: "Let us learn to be satisfied with the Lord's protection, and with his sure salvation, which is better than all bulwarks." Indeed, this can be contrasted to Ahaz—when the pending attack of Syria and Ephraim was upon Israel—and he refused to be comforted by the Prophet of the Lord. How often do we, also, permit our fears to displace our trust in Him who will comfort, and guide, and save?

⁴ This is how I feel about our own home. No human protection is good enough to keep it safe, and so I prefer to put my trust in the Lord.

⁵ "And said unto him, Run, speak to this young man, saying, Jerusalem shall be inhabited as towns without walls for the multitude of men and cattle therein: For I, saith the LORD, will be unto her a wall of fire round about, and will be the glory in the midst of her" (Zechariah 2:4–5).

the Holy Land. Israel has been in continual peril since then, but who can deny that the Lord has appointed a wall and a bulwark for her?

2 Open ye the gates, that the righteous nation which keepeth the truth[✓] may enter in.

✓ truths

The Targum (ܬ) has, “Open ye the gates, and let the righteous nation enter, which have kept the law with a perfect heart.” What a beautiful and touching invitation, “To keep the law with a perfect heart!” The Peshitta (ܣ) has the righteous nation keeping the truth and being faithful. The 1QIsa^a (א) has שְׁעֵרֶיךָ, your gates, rather than the Masoretic text (מ), שְׁעָרִים, gates. The LXX (Ϝ) reads, “Open the gates; let the people enter, who keep righteousness and who keep truth.” We read: “Open to me the gates of righteousness: I will go into them, and I will praise the LORD: This gate of the LORD, into which the righteous shall enter” (Psalm 118:19–20). Beginning with the sacred ordinances of baptism and confirmation, we travel through a highway of ordinances that take us, step by step, toward those heavenly gates, if we stay the course. We make every attempt to keep the Abrahamic covenant (“walk before me, and be thou perfect”) knowing, however, that it is through the merits of Christ, that salvation can come.

The righteous nation (נֹרִי-צְדִיק) is being gathered, one by one, commencing with the tribe of Ephraim and will not cease to gather in until Judah and all of the twelve tribes have entered into the peace of the Lord (ISAIAH 60:21). Young says: “It is clear that this righteous nation [is] composed of those who have come from all over the earth.” Rashi has: “Open her gates, and let a righteous nation, awaiting and longed in its exile many days for the faith of the Holy One, blessed be He, that He fulfill His promise through His prophets, to redeem them” (in Rabbi Rosenberg). Keith points us to ISAIAH 35 (which speaks in contrast about Zion): “And an highway shall be there, and a way, and it shall be called The way of holiness; the unclean shall not pass over it; but it shall be for those: the wayfaring men, though fools, shall not err therein... the redeemed shall walk there: And the ransomed of the LORD shall return, and come to Zion with songs and everlasting joy upon their heads: they shall obtain joy and gladness, and sorrow and sighing shall flee away” (ISAIAH 35:8, 9b, 10). As Nägelsbach explains, this nation includes all that “are called and entitled to partake of the great feast on Mount Zion.” Our spiritual exile will come to an end as we return to the Lord bending the knee (ISAIAH 60:14). Gill reminds us that Christ is the door (or the gate) (see, John 10:1). Some of my favorite words from that ancient record, the Book of Mormon, read: “O then, my beloved brethren, come unto the Lord, the Holy One. Remember that his paths are righteous. Behold, the way for man is narrow, but it lieth in a straight course before him, and the keeper of the gate is the Holy One of Israel; and he employeth no servant there; and there is none other way save it be by the gate; for he cannot be deceived, for the Lord God is his name” (2 Nephi 9:41). At the end of the millennium the whole earth shall be transformed into its celestial glory and be given to the righteous posterity of Abraham. In a most beautiful and poetic way, all who desire to leave Babylon may have these gates of Zion opened for him or her. Kay says of this city, “for it was the city on the mount of the Lord, spoken in Psalm 24, whose gates were opened at the approach of the King of Glory. Its warders⁶ are now bidden to open the gates for admission of fresh citizens, the new created Israel;—the righteous nation, gathered in from the ends of the earth (ISAIAH 24:16); ‘that keepeth the truth,’ or, fidelity; maintaining loyalty of faith toward God... The King of Glory entered first; His people follow.”

3 Thou wilt keep [him] in perfect peace,[✓] [whose] mind[✓] [is] stayed [on thee]: because he trusteth in thee.

✓ peace peace

✓ ✓ or, thought or, imagination

The Targum (ܬ) has, “In a perfect heart they shall preserve peace: peace shall be wrought for them, because they have trusted in thy Word.” The LXX (Ϝ) reads, “Who support truth and keep peace; because their confidence is placed in thee.” The Douay-Rheims (Ϯ) has, “The old error is passed away: thou wilt keep peace: peace, because we have hoped in thee.” The 1QIsa^a (א) has בְּכֶפֶץ, ⁷ in thee, rather than 1QIsa^b (א) בְּכֶפֶץ, and the Masoretic text (מ), בְּכֶפֶץ, he trusteth in thee. Henderson translates this verse as “The mind that is firm, thou wilt keep in perfect peace, because it trusteth in thee.” The Hebrew word order in this verse begins with the expression mind stayed, נֶצַח סְמוּךְ, and Henderson is of the opinion that it is elliptical of a longer expression, “The man whose mind is stayed upon thee, &c.” The key point, according to Henderson, “is that by implication firm unshaken, steady.” The expression perfect peace comes from the repetition of the word Shalom or peace in the Masoretic text (שָׁלוֹם, שָׁלוֹם). In 2 Peter 1:2 we read: “Grace and peace be multiplied unto you through the knowledge of God, and of Jesus our Lord.” Also, we have, “Peace I leave with you, my peace I give unto you: not as the world giveth, give I unto you. Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid,” (John 14:27). Indeed, it is the function of the Holy Ghost to fill us with peace after we have been baptized and confirmed as tokens of our entering into the Abrahamic covenant, or the peace of the Lord. This is most certainly a peace that we can experience upon this earth now, not something that we have to wait for until the millennial day. “He [who] rests himself on God alone,” says Cowles, “he will be kept by him in perfect peace because of such faith.” ¶ Trusteth, בְּטִיחַ, from the root, בָּטַח, “to be confident” (HAL). Kay says, “The form (which occurs elsewhere only in Psalm 112:7⁸) implies entire repose of faith; such as leads a man to cast away human anxiety (cp. Philippians 4:6).” President Ezra Taft Benson gave this advice, “Let your minds be filled with the goal of being like the Lord, and you will crowd out depressing thoughts as you anxiously seek to know Him and do His will. ‘Let this mind be in you,’ said Paul (Philippians 2:5). ‘Look unto me in every thought,’ said Jesus (D&C 6:36). And what will follow if we do? ‘Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace, whose mind is stayed on thee’ (ISAIAH 26:3). (‘Do Not Despair,’ Ensign 16 [October 1986]: 5.)”⁹ President Howard W. Hunter likewise counseled, “The peace for which the world longs is a time of suspended hostilities; but men do not realize that peace is a state of existence that comes to man only upon the terms and conditions set by God, and in no other way. In a psalm in the book of Isaiah are these words: ‘Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace, whose mind is stayed on thee: because he trusteth in thee’ (ISAIAH 26:3). This perfect peace mentioned by Isaiah comes to one only through a belief in God. This is not understood by an unbelieving world.”¹⁰ Rawlinson points us to Psalm 112:7, “He shall not be afraid of evil tidings: his heart is fixed, trusting in the LORD.” But this peace is not automatic; our minds must be stayed (סָמַךְ) on the Lord. In other words, the Lord needs to become both our stay and our staff (ISAIAH 3:1). To stay on something, then, means we can lean or count on that thing for support (see, Gesenius, BDB, HALOT). Indeed, it is only when we are sustained and supported by the Lord that we can have that ever elusive peace. Abraham was promised this peace when the Lord said to him: “Fear not, Abram: I am thy shield, and thy exceeding great reward” (Genesis 15:1b). ¶ Notice that it all begins with the mind and thoughts¹¹ (נֶפֶשׁ, also see margin ||), and this is why the Book of Mormon is so explicit about the fact that we will be judged by our thoughts, our words, our desires and our deeds (see Alma 12:14; 41:3; Mosiah 4:30). Psalm 37:11 has, “But the meek shall inherit the earth; and shall delight themselves in the abundance of peace.” A like thought is found a few verses later in Psalm 37:37, “Mark the perfect man, and behold the upright: for the end of that man is peace.” ¶ Because he trusteth in thee. Perhaps a synonym to staying on the Lord is trusting the Lord, or even hoping on the Lord (קָוָה יְהוָה, ISAIAH 40:31), or glorying not in wisdom, might, or riches, but rather, in the Lord (Jeremiah 9:23–24).

⁶ Sentinels, watchmen (Oxford Dictionary of English, Merriam-Webster).

⁷ Where both בְּכֶפֶץ in 1QIsa^b and Masoretic text (מ) and בְּכֶפֶץ 1QIsa^a (א) are pronominal suffixes, equivalent to a contraction of כֹּ (in) and תָּהָה (thee), in thee. For example, see Kelley’s Biblical Hebrew (pp. 68–75 and 153–159), and specifically, Table 27.1.

4 Trust ye in the LORD for ever: for in the LORD JEHOVAH [is] everlasting strength: ✓

✓ the rock of ages

The Targum (ܬ) has, “Trust ye in the Word {or Memra} of the Lord for ever and ever: thus ye shall be saved by the Word, who is the fear of the Lord, the mighty One to eternity.” The LXX (Ϯ) reads, “Lord! who art to everlasting, the Mighty, the Eternal God.” The Douay-Rheims (Ϯ) has, “You have hoped in the Lord for evermore, in the Lord God mighty forever.” The Masoretic text (מ) has in Yah Yahweh בְּיָהּ יְהוָה as does 1QIsa^a (ϫ) בִּיהּ יְהוָה while 4QIsa^b (ϫ) has in Yah Adonai, אֲדֹנָיִי בִיהּ. ¶ In Yah Yahweh (but see Henderson, below), בְּיָהּ יְהוָה. There are a number of suggestions regarding the special meaning of the expression Yah Yahweh. Without any doubt, this is a beautiful expression of gratitude toward the Holy One of Israel implied in the expression. Birks prefers: “The double name Jah Jehovah is most emphatic, to denote God’s unchangeableness in His love to His people.” Another beautiful explanation is offered by Jennings: “The reduplication of the name has its significance, and to get it we must remember the meaning of the name Jehovah... Thus we have in the one sacred name, the full equivalent of ‘The Same, yesterday, today and ⁸ “He shall not be afraid of evil tidings: his heart is fixed, trusting in the LORD” (Psalms 112:7).

⁹ Benson, Ezra Taft. The Teachings of Ezra Taft Benson. Salt Lake City, Utah: Bookcraft, 1988. p. 385.

¹⁰ Hunter, Howard W. The Teachings of Howard W. Hunter. Edited by Clyde J. Williams. Salt Lake City, Utah: Bookcraft, 1997.

¹¹ In Holy Writ the heart is also the seat of our imaginings (e.g., Jeremiah 16:12; 18:12; Luke 1:51).

forever,’ written to Hebrews who would understand¹² the reference as we might at first fail to do. Again, in Revelation 1:8, we note a similar reference in the greeting from Him, ‘who is and who was, and who is to come,’ for that is a translation of Jehovah for us” (emphasis added). ¶ Trust in the Lord forever, where the Masoretic text uses the idiom עַד־יָעַד, rather than the traditional forever, לְעֹלָם / לְעֹלָם or עוֹלָם, as we find here in the Targum Jonathan (ܬ) where we can note the triple repetition לְעֹלָמָא וְלְעֹלָמִי עֹלָמָא, (Stenning {ܬ} translates it as forever and everlasting ages) with a fourth instance in this verse of עֹלָמָא (ages or eternity) associated with the Mighty One (or, Mighty One of the ages, תְּקוּנָה עֹלָמָא). The Targum (ܬ) translations into English use the expression Memra (מִימְרָא) or Word in capital letters, to signify they refer to YHWH, who is Jesus Christ our Lord (for a detailed discussion of the term Word as meaning Christ, see my notes under ISAIAH 40:1–8. The Masoretic text (מ) speaks of יְהוָה יְהוָה, or Yah Yahweh’s everlasting strength, or better (as in the margin ||), rock of ages, צוּר עוֹלָמִים. The Savior is that Rock, “look unto the rock whence ye are hewn” (ISAIAH 51:1b), אֶל-צוּר חֲצֵבְתֶּם. Faussett has, “Maurer translates, ‘For JAH (the eternal unchangeable One, Exodus 3:14) is Jehovah, the rock of ages’ (compare ISAIAH 45:17; Deuteronomy 32:15; 1 Samuel 2:2).” In Exodus 3:14 we read about the great I AM, and come to understand (as translated by the Targum ܬ) יְהוָה, that Jehovah means I am He who is and who will be, and Nägelsbach renders it as: “Him who was and is to come.” Barnes explains, “The sense is, ‘Let your confidence in God on no occasion fail. Let no calamity, no adversity, no persecution, no poverty, no trial of any kind, prevent your reposing entire confidence in him.’ This is spoken evidently in view of the fact stated in the previous verse, that the mind that is stayed on him shall have perfect peace.” Abarbanel (in Rabbi Rosenberg) has, “The prophet exhorts the people to trust solely in the Lord, not to rely on the nations’ love for Israel, or on the walls of Jerusalem, as they had done heretofore, but only in the Almighty Himself, for He is the strength of the worlds.” We cannot go wrong if we put our trust in the Rock of ages, even the Lord’s everlasting strength. Saul’s downfall was his inability to trust the Lord.¹³ But engraved in my heart. Why was Saul rejected from being king? Because Saul feared man more than God. This was not always the case. When Saul was anointed King of Israel, he was a humble young man. But later, Samuel the Prophet would chide him with these words: “When thou wast little in thine own sight, wast thou not made the head of the tribes of Israel, and the LORD anointed thee king over Israel?” (1 Samuel 15:17). Our first hint that Saul worried more about what men would say than what God would think takes place as Israel prepared to go to war in (1 Samuel 13). When the Prophet Samuel did not show up as promptly as he was expected by Saul, the latter took it upon himself to carry out priesthood duties for which he had no authority. He prepared a peace offering and carried out the ritual for burnt offerings (1 Samuel 13:9). When Samuel questioned Saul, the latter responded: “Because I saw that the people were scattered from me, and that thou camest not within the days appointed, and that the Philistines gathered themselves together at Michmash; Therefore said I, The Philistines will come down now upon me to Gilgal, and I have not made supplication unto the LORD: I forced myself therefore, and offered a burnt offering” (1 Samuel 13:11a-12). Saul, then, begins with an excuse, “Well, you were late and this thing had to be done.” From the excuse, he moves on to try and point out how noble his actions were, “Look, I forced myself, so instead of being upset, you should thank me, you should be happy I took the initiative.” We have a similar pattern in the matter of Agag and the Amalekites (1 Samuel 15). “But Saul and the people spared Agag, and the best of the sheep, and of the oxen, and of the fatlings, and the lambs, and all that was good, and would not utterly destroy them: but every thing that was vile and refuse, that they destroyed utterly” (1 Samuel 15:9). Saul had the audacity to tell Samuel, “Blessed be thou of the LORD: I have performed the commandment of the LORD” (1 Samuel 15:13b). Samuel, once again, was incredulous at this saying, and asked: “What meaneth then this bleating of the sheep in mine ears, and the lowing of the oxen which I hear?” (1 Samuel 15:14b). Once again, the excuse, the false justification: “the people spared the best of the sheep and of the oxen, to sacrifice unto the LORD thy God” (1 Samuel 15:15b). If there was anything Saul hated to do, was to correct the people, or teach the people. Saul refused to stand up to the people. When confronted with his evil doing, Saul again refuses to admit his error. He seems proud of his behavior: “Yea, I have obeyed the voice of the LORD, and have gone the way which the LORD sent me, and have brought Agag the king of Amalek, and have utterly destroyed the Amalekites” (1 Samuel 15:20b). Then he blames the people: “But the people took of the spoil, sheep and oxen, the chief of the things which should have been utterly destroyed, to sacrifice unto the LORD thy God in Gilgal” (1 Samuel 15:21b). Samuel rejoins with the often quoted: “Hath the LORD as great delight in burnt offerings and sacrifices, as in obeying the voice of the LORD? Behold, to obey is better than sacrifice, and to hearken than the fat of rams” (1 Samuel 15:22b). This was a hard lesson for Saul to learn. So Samuel gives Saul the bad news: “Because thou hast rejected the word of the LORD, he hath also rejected thee from being king” (1 Samuel 15:23b). Only now does Saul seem repentant: “I have sinned: for I have transgressed the commandment of the LORD, and thy words” (1 Samuel 15:24b). Saul is not moved by godly sorrow, but rather, by the unhappy consequences he will need to face. Then Saul explains what was in his heart, why he had been disobedient: “because I feared the people, and obeyed their voice” (1 Samuel 15:24c). Saul feared man more than God. His confession of what had moved him to do that which was wrong in the sight of God, nevertheless, was not a confession leading to change and repentance and turning to the Lord. Saul now pleads with Samuel to walk with him—even though it is a pretense—so that the people will not realize that the Lord has rejected him: “I have sinned: yet honour me now, I pray thee, before the elders of my people, and before Israel, and turn again with me, that I may worship the LORD thy God” (1 Samuel 15:30b). This was the critical moment; the moment of truth. This was the time for Saul to show God that he only cared about following the Lord’s will. Instead, it turned out to be among the most tragic events recorded in Scripture. Saul desired, above all things, to be popular with the people. I submit that the Lord

¹² וַיֹּאמֶר אֱלֹהִים אֶל-מֹשֶׁה אֲהִיָּה אֲשֶׁר אֲהִיָּה, see Exodus 3:14, and footnote 22 in ISAIAH 26, below. Also see notes under ISAIAH 52:6.

¹³ For many years I had a wipe board over the dining room table with the question: “Why was Saul rejected from being king?” It made for good conversation and stood there as a warning. The question is now returning to the expression, בֵּיתָּהּ יְהוָה, the most beautiful of all is suggested by Henderson: “בֵּיתָּהּ is not to be rendered ‘in Yah,’—the בֵּיתָּהּ being the Beth essentiae, which, according to a peculiar idiom points out the reality, certainty, substantive character or nature of the subject to which it is prefixed.” As a result Henderson (based on other examples by Schultens and Ewald, elsewhere) translates it as: “For truly Jehovah is Yah—an everlasting Rock.”

would have forgiven Saul had he acted upon godly sorrow. As an illustration, one of the most wicked kings of the Northern Kingdom (or Ephraim) after the civil war divided Israel, was Ahab. Yet even Ahab, when confronted by Elijah the Prophet “rent his clothes, and put sackcloth upon his flesh, and fasted, and lay in sackcloth, and went softly” (1 Kings 21:27b). Even though Ahab did not altogether escape punishment, these were delayed for a season. We read: “And the word of the LORD came to Elijah the Tishbite, saying, Seest thou how Ahab humbleth himself before me? because he humbleth himself before me, I will not bring the evil in his days: but in his son’s days will I bring the evil upon his house” (1 Kings 21:28–29). Furthermore, if Ahab’s sons would have turned unto the Lord with all their might, such punishment most likely would not have come upon them. Returning to Saul, a man who once had been able to consult the will of the Lord, now was left destitute of communication with God: “And when Saul enquired of the LORD, the LORD answered him not, neither by dreams, nor by Urim, nor by prophets” (1 Samuel 28:6). Saul’s prayers went unanswered. What the Father expects of us when we find the heavens shut, is not to give up and say, “Oh, well, God does not care about me, anyway. I do not deserve His tender mercies. The atonement of Jesus Christ does not apply to me.” When Saul was confronted with heavens turned into iron, instead of repenting, he decided to seek counsel from the dark side: “Then said Saul unto his servants, Seek me a woman that hath a familiar spirit, that I may go to her, and enquire of her. And his servants said to him, Behold, there is a woman that hath a familiar spirit at Endor. And Saul disguised himself, and put on other raiment, and he went, and two men with him, and they came to the woman by night” (1 Samuel 28:7–8a). What makes Saul’s story so very sad is that at one time he was a righteous youth who loved the Lord. What do we learn from the story of Saul? How can we apply these matters to our own lives? Are we more worried about what God thinks than about what people will say? Are we ashamed of being followers of Christ? Sometimes we are more worried about what men will say than about what God will think. I would submit that one of the main reasons we are upon this earth is to show that we can grow to fear [i.e., have respect for] God more than man. The fear of God is a great desire not to let God down, but to behave in ways that will help us glorify the Father, as the Savior so beautifully demonstrated for us. “And it came to pass that he said unto them: Behold, here are the waters of Mormon (for thus were they called) and now, as ye are desirous to come into the fold of God, and to be called his people, and are willing to bear one another’s burdens, that they may be light; Yea, and are willing to mourn with those that mourn; yea, and comfort those that stand in need of comfort, and to stand as witnesses of God at all times and in all things, and in all places that ye may be in, even until death, that ye may be redeemed of God, and be numbered with those of the first resurrection, that ye may have eternal life—Now I say unto you, if this be the desire of your hearts, what have you against being baptized in the name of the Lord, as a witness before him that ye have entered into a covenant with him, that ye will serve him and keep his commandments, that he may pour out his Spirit more abundantly upon you?” (Mosiah 18:8–10). And if we have been baptized onto such a great cause, let us now endure to the end as faithful followers of the Lord, the Holy One of Israel, even Jesus the Christ. (Adopted from my blog, Why was Saul rejected from being king? 19 June 2010.)

vv. 5–11. In contrast, the self-exalted and prideful, those who do not trust in the Lord and dwell in mystical city of Babylon, will be brought down very low. Despite her weakness, Israel will be helped by the Lord. Uprightness first and foremost refers to the Lord, and to a lesser degree, those who will follow after Him. The Lord will smooth out the way of His disciples. The followers of Christ have put their hopes on Him and sought God both night and day. The trials and tribulations of this earthy existence can help us come closer to God and desire to walk in His ways. Many will not see chastisement as a show of God’s love until it is too late. The Lord shows His zeal for His people.

5 ¶ For he bringeth down them that dwell on high; the lofty city, he layeth it low; he layeth it low, [even] to the ground; he bringeth it [even] to the dust.

The Targum (ܬ) has, “For he will humble the inhabitants of the high and strong city; he will humble her, he will cast her unto the ground, he will bring her even to the dust.” The LXX (Ϛ) reads, “Who hast humbled and brought down them who dwell in lofty places. Fortified cities thou canst demolish and level them with the dust.” The Douay-Rheims (ϙ) has, “For he shall bring down them that dwell on high, the high city he shall lay low. He shall bring it down even to the ground, he shall pull it down even to the dust.” The DSS 1QIsa^a (ϙ) has he layeth it low, יִשְׁפִּילָנָה, while the Masoretic text (מ) repeats it twice, he layeth it low, he layeth it low, יִשְׁפִּילָנָה יִשְׁפִּילָנָה, so it could be said that the Lord layeth her very low. The lofty city is here in contrast to Zion, and it is mystical Babylon. It is the crumbling of the large and spacious building (1 Nephi 12:18), were we find people who value what the earth has to give more than what God offers, individuals whose “manner of dress was exceedingly fine” (1 Nephi 8:27). In Micah 1:3, quoted in relation with v. 21 in this chapter, a similar sentiment is given, about bringing the self-exalted down.

6 The foot shall tread it down, [even] the feet of the poor, [and] the steps of the needy.

The Targum (ܬ) has, “The feet shall tread her down, the feet of the just, the sole of the foot of the poor, of the needy of the people.” Instead of the word foot appearing twice as it does in the Masoretic text (מ), רֶגֶל רֶגֶל, it appears a single time in the DSS 1QIsa^a (ϙ), רֶגֶל: The feet of the lowly trample &c. The DSS 1QIsa^a (Ⓢ) renders the word lowly (i.e., afflicted, humble, oppressed, needy, poor) in the plural (עניים) while the Masoretic text (Ⓜ) has the singular, עני. The LXX (Ⓟ) reads, “That the feet of the meek and lowly may trample them.” The most brilliant exegesis of this verse was given by Rashi, or Rabbi Shlomo ben Yitzchak (in R. Rosenberg): “The King Messiah, who is referred to as a poor¹⁴ man riding on a donkey (Zechariah 9:9¹⁵).” We also have: “The sons also of them that afflicted thee shall come bending unto thee; and all they that despised thee shall bow themselves down at the soles of thy feet; and they shall call thee, The city of the LORD, The Zion of the Holy One of Israel” (ISAIAH 60:14). In 60:14, the feet refer to those of Messiah; and the city, Zion. As in the how beautiful upon the mountains principle (see my notes in ISAIAH 52:7), where the LORD shares His glory with His disciples. The poor and the needy also represent those mentioned in ISAIAH 25:4, that is, Israel.

7 The way of the just [is] uprightness: thou, most upright, dost weigh the path of the just.

Psalm 37:23–24, likewise reads: “The steps of a good man are ordered by the LORD: and he delighteth in his way. Though he fall, he shall not be utterly cast down: for the LORD upholdeth him with his hand.” The Targum (Ⓣ) has, “The paths of the righteous are right: thou wilt establish the works of the ways of the just.” The LXX (Ⓟ) reads, “The way of the pious was straight; the way of the pious was well prepared.” The Peshitta (Ⓢ) renders it, “Straight is the way of the needy (BPE) / humble (Lamsa); straight and level is the path of the just (BPE) / righteous (Lamsa).” The Douay-Rheims (Ⓡ) has, “The way of the just is right, the path of the just is right to walk in.” As we have already said, the righteous here is the Holy One of Israel. It is through His righteousness that we can hope to achieve the same through the How beautiful upon the mountains principle (once again, please see ISAIAH 52:7). ¶ The Masoretic text (Ⓜ) has thou dost weigh (פלט, make level—also see BDB LHI, AMP, make level; JPS, makest plain), תפלט, while the DSS 1QIsa^a (Ⓢ) has deliver or cause to escape (פלט, Gesenius), תפלט. So it could read: “... thou, most upright, dost deliver the path of the just.” Also, the Masoretic text (Ⓜ), for the last just {dost make level the path of the just} spells it as צדיק while the DSS 1QIsa^a (Ⓢ) and DSS 4QIsa^c (Ⓢ) both have it as צדק. Spelled either way, it means the just (or the righteous). HCSB, YLT and NASB, for instance, render the translation of the Masoretic text (Ⓜ) righteous, while the KJV, RV, JPS, Geneva and LITV prefer just. The AMP version, which is more of an explanatory version, renders it with both: “You, O [Lord], Who are upright, direct aright and make level the path of the [uncompromisingly] just and righteous.” Kaiser has, “Yahweh himself makes [the path] smooth and removes obstacles from his path (Psalm 25:10; 27:11; Proverbs 1:3; 2:9; and Psalm 1:6).” Cowles writes: “The pathway for the just is straight and even; God who is upright makes their way level and smooth. The word rendered ‘weigh’ may mean either to weigh or to make even and level. Since the orientals weighed with scales, it is easy to see how these two senses should meet in one word. The context here requires the latter sense, that of making level their pathway. God smooths the roughnesses of the way for his trustful people.” Faussett explains that to weigh the path means: “‘thou dost make plain and level’ [Maurer], removing all obstacles (ISAIAH 40:3–4).” Alexander well points out: “A man’s way is a common Scriptural figure for his course of life.” ¶ Delitzsch translates this whole verse as: “The path that the righteous man takes is smoothness; Thou makest the course of the righteous smooth.” The Righteous [צדיק] One, Messiah, prepares the way for His disciples. Proverbs 3:6 has: “In all thy ways acknowledge him, and he shall direct thy paths.” In Isaiah we are instructed exactly how to walk in His paths (ISAIAH 58:13–14). In Psalm 37 we read: “The LORD knoweth the days of the upright: and their inheritance shall be for ever.

8 Yea, in the way of thy judgments, O LORD, have we waited for thee; the desire of [our] soul [is] to thy name, and to the remembrance of thee.

Yea, in the way of thy judgments, O LORD have we waited for thee. The LXX (Ⓟ) reads, “For the way of the Lord is justice,” while the Masoretic text (Ⓜ) has waited קיינו. Redak (in Rabbi Rosenberg) has, “Even [in] the way of Your judgment, O Lord, we hoped for you—Even when you visited judgments upon us, when You punished us during the exile, for our sins, we, nevertheless, hoped for You and did not despair of being redeemed.” The disciples of Christ wait or are filled by hope in Christ (see ISAIAH 40:31 for more detail as what it means to wait upon the LORD). Delitzsch says, “The church of the last days, looking back to the past, declares with what longing it has waited for that manifestation of the righteousness of God which has now taken place.” ¶ The desire of [our] soul [is] to thy name, and to the remembrance of thee. The LXX (ⓖ) reads, “We have trusted in thy name.” Instead of the Masoretic text (מז) and for remembrance of thee (or memorial of thee) וְלִזְכוֹרָתְךָ, the DSS 1QIsa^a (Ⓢ) has and for thy law וְלִתּוֹרַתְךָ. Barnes explains: “The word ‘name’ is used here, as it is often, to denote God himself. They desired that he would come and deliver them; they earnestly wished that he would manifest himself to them as their friend.”

¹⁴ Rather, lowly, in KJV, עני.

¹⁵ “Rejoice greatly, O daughter of Zion; shout, O daughter of Jerusalem: behold, thy King cometh unto thee: he is just, and having salvation; lowly, and riding upon an ass, and upon a colt the foal of an ass” (Zechariah 9:9).

9 With my soul have I desired thee in the night; yea, with my spirit within me will I seek thee early: for when thy judgments [are] in the earth, the inhabitants of the world will learn righteousness.

With my soul have I desired thee in the night; yea, with my spirit within me will I seek thee early: The Targum (Ⓣ) has, “My soul desireth to pray before thee in the night; yea, my spirit within me is blessing thee.” The LXX (ⓖ) reads, “And in that remembrance which is the desire of our soul by night.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⓣ) has, for the second clause, “With my spirit within me in the morning early I will watch to thee.” How often does man find the solitude of night to pour up his prayers unto God? Oliver Cowdery was one such man, and when he desired comforting reassurance from the Lord, he received this: “Verily, verily, I say unto you, if you desire a further witness, cast your mind upon the night that you cried unto me in your heart, that you might know concerning the truth of these things. Did I not speak peace to your mind concerning the matter? What greater witness can you have than from God? (D&C 6:22–23). After we have obtained our witness—either by day or by night—we are then left to rejoice. And what is better than speaking and rejoicing in these truths with those whose hearts are open to the light of the Gospel? Sweet is the Work, by Isaac Watts (1674–1748)¹⁶, has one of my favorite sentiments: “Sweet is the work, my God, my king, / To praise Thy name, give thanks and sing, / To show Thy love by morning light / And talk of all Thy truth at night.” This is also the sentiment found in Psalm 57:8b–9, about awaking early to praise and sing unto God: “I myself will awake early. I will praise thee, O Lord, among the people: I will sing unto thee among the nations.” What a beautiful word we have here, אֶשְׁחַרְרֶךָ, will I seek thee early, from the root שָׁחַר. It means to seek earnestly and diligently as one may seek for dawn (BDB); to seek... to break forth as the light of dawn (Gesenius); and “to be on the lookout for” (HALOT). To seek the Lord early, then, means to: (1) seek God with a passion, with a sincere heart and real intent (Moroni 10:4); and (2) to put our trust in God rather than man—and not procrastinate the day of [our] repentance (Alma 34:33). All of our darkness is dissipated when we seek the Lord. The night of darkness may well represent our earthly lives until that time when we acquire a knowledge of the truths of the Gospel, and seek for the saving ordinances, and thus take our first steps in walking in the way of the Lord. Indeed, “weeping may endure for a night, but joy cometh in the morning” (Psalm 30:5). We can then “Sing unto the LORD, O ye saints of his, and give thanks at the remembrance of his holiness” (Psalm 30:4b). ¶ For when thy judgments [are] in the earth, the inhabitants of the world will learn righteousness. The Targum (Ⓣ) has, “When thy judgments are prepared for the earth, those that dwell in the world shall be taught to practice truth.” The LXX (ⓖ) reads, “To thee, God, my spirit awaketh early, because thy statutes are a light on the earth.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⓣ) has, “When thou shalt do thy judgments on the earth, the inhabitants of the world shall learn justice.” This expression, when thy judgments are in the earth makes us think of the millennial day, when His kingdom will come upon the earth. Cheyne explains: “It is the Messianic hope which we have before us. The spread of righteousness over the earth is connected with the coming of Jehovah to ‘reign on mount Zion’ (ISAIAH 24:23), and this advent is to be ushered in by a series of judgments on the unbelievers and unrighteous.”

10 Let favour be shewed to the wicked, [yet] will he not learn righteousness: in the land of uprightness will he deal unjustly, and will not behold the majesty of the LORD.

Let favour be shewed to the wicked, [yet] will he not learn righteousness: The Targum (Ⓣ) has, “Thou hast granted unto the wicked continuance, that verily they should return to the Lord; but they did not return, all the days that they lived.” The LXX (ⓖ) reads, “Learn righteousness ye dwellers on earth, for the wicked one is no more. Whoever will not learn justice on earth, cannot act agreeably to truth.” The Peshitta (Ⓢ) renders it, “The wicked was removed far so that he does not learn justice (BPE) / righteousness (Lamsa).” The Douay-Rheims (Ⓣ) has, “Let us have pity on the wicked, but he will not learn justice.” Alexander points out the wisdom in the Lord’s way, when we are provided with challenges to overcome in this life: “It is here said that continued prosperity is insufficient [to teach men righteousness].” Gill writes: “As it often is in a providential way; they [the wicked] have the good things of this life, and sometimes more than heart could wish for; nor are they in trouble as other men; they have many mercies, and many deliverances; they have their portion here, and are filled with hidden treasure, and are spared when others are cut off.” So it is that we ought to rejoice in our trials and tribulations if at the end they help us obtain the greatest gift of all, to behold the majesty of the LORD and be partakers of the same. ¶ In the land of uprightness will he deal unjustly, and will not behold the majesty of the LORD. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “That they should practice truth in the earth, but they dealt falsely: yea, they will not regard the praise of thy glory, O Lord!” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Let the wicked be removed that he may not see the glory of the Lord.” The Peshitta (Ⲫ) has, for the first clause, the idea that wrongdoing in the land will lead to punishment, but this will be for naught (second clause), just as the Masoretic text (ⲙ) has, “In the land of the saints he hath done wicked things, and he shall not see the glory of the Lord.” Jenour says of those who refuse the straight and narrow way: “‘In the land of straightness he will walk crookedly.’ As if a man walking in a country where all the roads were perfectly straight and good, should perversely turn out of them, and choose a path of his own. Thus, however plain the ways of God may be, the wicked will not walk in them.” Faussett, leaning on Maurer, follows the same idea expressed by Gill in the previous clause: “uprightness — rather, as in ISAIAH 26:7, ‘prosperity,’ answering to ‘favor’ in the parallelism, and in antithesis to ‘judgments in the earth’ (ISAIAH 26:9); where prosperity attends the wicked as well as the just, ‘he will not learn righteousness,’ therefore judgments must be sent that he may ‘learn’ it [Maurer].” Rawlinson adds: “Even good example does not convert the wicked man. Though he live in a ‘land of righteousness,’ where God and his Law are acknowledged, where true religion is professed, where the gospel is preached, he will continue wicked, he will ‘deal unjustly.’” So we have the prosperous man neglect God and trust in his own wisdom, strength or wealth (see Jeremiah 9:23–24). When it says that the wicked will not behold the majesty of the LORD, it refers to those who go to the Teletial kingdom. Regarding those who will inherit the Teletial Kingdom we read: “And they shall be servants of the Most High; but where God and Christ dwell they cannot come, worlds without end” (D&C 76:112, emphasis added). To those in the Terrestrial Kingdom it is said: “These are they who receive of the presence of the Son, but not of the fulness of the Father” (D&C 76:77, emphasis added).

¹⁶ Hymn 147 in our LDS hymnbook.

11 LORD, [when] thy hand is lifted up, they will not see: [but] they shall see, and be ashamed for [their] envy at the people; yea, the fire of thine enemies shall devour them.

✓ or, toward thy people

LORD, [when] thy hand is lifted up, they will not see:

The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “O Lord, when thou shalt be in thy power to do good to them that fear thee.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Thy hand, Lord, was lifted high; but they did not know it.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲫ) has, “Lord, let thy hand be exalted, and let them not see.” A more literal and correct translation of the Masoretic text (ⲙ) is “O Lorde, they will not beholde thine hie hande,” (Geneva Bible), or from a more modern perspective, “Jehovah, thy hand is lifted up, yet they see not” (ASV). The elliptical idea that the hand is lifted up to strike (see, ISAIAH 1:5–6) was included in the Bishop’s Bible, “Lorde, when thy hande is lyft vp to strike, they see it not.” Similarly, HCSB has: “LORD, Your hand is lifted up to take action.” Delitzsch writes, “The hand of Jehovah had already shown itself to be highly exalted (ⲙⲁⲣ, 3 pr.), by manifesting itself in the history of the nations, by sheltering His congregation, and preparing the way for its exaltation in the midst of its humiliation; but as they had no eye for this hand, they would be made to feel it upon themselves as the avenger of His nation.” Barnes writes: “The lifting up of the hand here refers, doubtless, to the manifestations of the majesty and goodness of the Lord.” His goodness, of course, includes correction. Kimhi well explains that the wicked will not see the hand of God in the calamities they experience. So it is that the Scriptures say: “For whom the LORD loveth he correcteth; even as a father the son in whom he delighteth” (Proverbs 3:12; also Hebrews 12:6). Calvin shows Pharaoh as an example of chastisement making him “more obstinate.” When hearts harden, then humility cannot penetrate our soul. Regarding this verse, Calvin says, “Here he again censures the wicked.” ¶ [But] they shall see, and be ashamed for [their] envy at the people; yea, the fire of thine enemies shall devour them. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “There will be no light to the enemies of thy people: the wicked shall see it, and shall be confounded. The vengeance of thy people shall cover them; yea, fire shall consume thy enemies.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “But when they know they will be ashamed. Zeal will seize an uninstructed people; even now a fire devoureth the adversaries.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲫ) has, “Let the envious people see, and be confounded: and let fire devour thy enemies.” The but [or and] which is implied in the Masoretic text (ⲙ), “[But] they shall see...

(יְהוָה יִחַזֵּק) is written in the DSS 1QIsa^a (Q), יְחַזֵּק. Likewise, the is implied in the Masoretic text (M), “[The] people (עַם); yea, the fire...” but is explicit in the DSS 1QIsa^a (Q), הָעַם. The Peshitta (S) has zeal rather than envy, and the enemies shall be consumed by the fire (Lamsa) of an oven. The correct idea, here, rather, is the zeal of the Lord towards His people. Cowles says, “I take the sense to be that they shall behold with the confusion of shame, not their own envy at the people but God’s jealousy against the nations.” Barns has: “The word ‘their’ is not in the Hebrew, and the sense is, that they shall see the zeal of Yahweh in behalf of his people, and shall be ashamed that they did not sooner recognize his hand.” So then, קְנֵאת־עַם represents the zeal of the Lord in favor of His people, so as with the margin || might well read: “for zeal toward thy people.” ESV so renders it: “Let them see your zeal for your people, and be ashamed &c.” Wordsworth explains that this is the zeal the Lord feels toward His people, “This zeal, which burns (the Hebrew word for zeal, like the Greek and Latin, implies heat), is a fire which will devour the enemies.” Gesenius, likewise explains it as the third acceptance of קְנֵאתָ: “ardent zeal towards any one (ζῆλος), 2 Kings 10:16; ISAIAH 9:6, קְנֵאתָ יְהוָה צְבָאוֹת ‘the zeal of Jehovah of Tsebaoth’ (towards his people). קְנֵאת־עַם zeal (of God) towards the people, ISAIAH 26:11.” So also, Thompson, who explains the verse: “Zeal for Thy people (Yahwe’s zeal) and the fire of (i.e. directed against) Thine adversaries shall consume them.” Young also has: “Fire will devour the enemies of God. The zeal of God is like a flame.” Calvin says, “But at length ‘they shall see,’ but too late, and to their great hurt.”

vv. 12–19. Man can obtain peace, true perfect peace, only through embracing the gospel of Jesus Christ. We are able to embrace the gospel through grace or the Lord’s tender mercies. Despite the many rulers who govern this earth, we can only lean upon the Lord to save us. Those who hurt the Lord’s people will not obtain a resurrection with the just. The Lord will continue to chastise His people, even those He has scattered to the ends of the earth. Gladly, this chastisement will have its intended effect. His people will turn toward the Lord, pour their prayers unto God, who will have mercy and extend His arm of salvation. Just like false labor does not deliver a child, Israel could not deliver herself without the aid of the Lord, who would give His life for us. A promise of the resurrection of Christ and His people follow. This becomes another reason for joy and singing.

12 ¶ LORD, thou wilt ordain peace for us: for thou also hast wrought all our works in us. ✓

✓ or, for us

LORD, thou wilt ordain peace for us: The LXX (G) reads, “Lord, our God, grant us peace.” The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “Lord, thou wilt give us peace.” The Masoretic text (M) has thou wilt ordain (from root שָׁפַת, HALOT suggests that here, associated with the word peace, שָׁפַת שְׁלֹום means to offer peace or accomplish deliverance), תְּשַׁפֵּת. DSS 1QIsa^a (Q) and DSS 4QIsa^b (Q) also have שָׁפַת. HAL speaks about an action that restores peace, which fits well with this verse in Isaiah where we have תְּשַׁפֵּת שְׁלֹום; BDB speaks of the act of deliverance, especially when it involves Israel, שָׁפַת יִשְׂרָאֵל. Jenour here quotes: “And we know that all things work together for good to them that love God,” (Romans 8:28a). It is through the Comforter that we can experience true peace. It is the only enduring peace. This verse seems to be a request to God for the gift of peace, mentioned in ISAIAH 26:3. ¶ For thou also hast wrought all our works in us. This is the idea in Psalm 37:6, “And he [the Lord] shall bring forth thy righteousness as the light, and thy judgment as the noonday.” The Targum (T) has, “For at all times, when we restrained ourselves from our sins, thou wast working for us (or, ‘with us’). The LXX (G) reads, “For thou hast forgiven us all things.” The Lamsa Peshitta (S) has, for rather than in. The BPE (S) has, “for thou hast prepared us according to our works.” The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “For thou hast wrought all our works for us.” LITV, YLT, ASV, HCSB, JPS, NASB, and RV prefer “for us” for the Masoretic text (M), לָנוּ, along with the S and V. Bishops and Webster join the KJV in rendering it “in us.” The Amplified Version (AMP), translates the expression כָּל-מַעֲשֵׂינוּ פְעָלָהּ לָנוּ as to include both meanings “...wrought in us and for us all our works.” Birks writes: “‘Our works’ mean here the works needful for their deliverance.” ¶ Gladly, we are not left entirely on our own but can be blessed through the grace of the Lord. The LDS Bible Dictionary in part reads, regarding grace: “The main idea of the word [grace] is divine means of help or strength, given through the bounteous mercy and love of Jesus Christ ... It is likewise through the grace of the Lord that individuals, through faith in the atonement of Jesus Christ and repentance of their sins, receive strength and assistance to do good works that they otherwise would not be able to maintain if left to their own means.” So we read: “For we labor diligently to write, to persuade our children, and also our brethren, to believe in Christ, and to be reconciled to God; for we know that it is by grace that we are saved, after all we can do” (2 Nephi 25:23, also see notes in ISAIAH 33:6). ¶ Ibn Ezra has “For Thou hast always done for us what we do not know how to do.” Rabbi Rosenberg explains that Ibn Ezra is essentially saying, “Without God’s help all Israel’s efforts to save himself would be of no avail.” ¶ The theme of the resurrection is ever present in these chapters of ISAIAH. So it is fitting to read in 2 Nephi two verses that deal so directly with the subject of the resurrection and our dependence on Christ: “Wherefore, how great the importance to make these things known unto the inhabitants of the earth, that they may know that there is no flesh that can dwell in the presence of God, save it be through the merits, and mercy, and grace of the Holy Messiah, who layeth down his life according to the flesh, and taketh it again by the power of the Spirit, that he may bring to pass the resurrection of the dead, being the first that should rise. Wherefore, he is the firstfruits unto God, inasmuch as he shall make intercession for all the children of men; and they that believe in him shall be saved” (2 Nephi 2:8–9).

13 O LORD our God, [other] lords beside thee have had dominion over us: [but] by thee only will we make mention of thy name.

O LORD our God, [other] lords beside thee have had dominion over us: The Targum (ⲧ) has, “O Lord our God, the nations have had dominion over us, being lords over us beside thee.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Lord, our God, take possession of us!” Wade writes: “In the course of Israel’s history various heathen powers, such as Egypt, Assyria, Babylonia, Persia, had successively exercised dominion over them, instead of the Lord.” Ibn Ezra has: “For we worshipped Thee even when others became our masters.” By the very fact that we live in the earth, we are exposed to the forces of mystic Babylon and Satan. Furthermore, we are also subjected to earthly lords or rulers that often get much say in what happens to us in this earth. ¶ [But] by thee only will we make mention of thy name. The Targum (ⲧ) has, “But we trust in thy Word; we praise thy name (literally, ‘are praising’). The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Besides thee, Lord, we know none other. We celebrate (or, ‘we name,’ Brenton and NETS) thy name.” The Peshitta (Ⲫ) explains that even so, only the Lord’s name will they remember (BPE) / mention (Lamsa). The Douay-Rheims (ⲩ) has, “Only in thee let us remember thy name.” By this statement, only will we make mention of thy name means that only the Lord can act to help us. We will only put our trust in the Lord and in none else. In Joshua we read this admonition: “Neither make mention of the name of their gods, nor cause to swear by them, neither serve them, nor bow down yourselves unto them” (Joshua 23:7b). So also we see in Jeremiah 12:16, regarding the day when other nations will learn to acknowledge the one and only true God, “And it shall come to pass, if they will diligently learn the ways of my people, to swear by my name, The LORD liveth; as they taught my people to swear by Baal; then shall they be built in the midst of my people.” In Isaiah we read of that perfect day when only the Lord, the Holy One of Israel is acknowledged and none else (ISAIAH 44:5–6). So also Hosea 14:3: “Asshur shall not save us; we will not ride upon horses: neither will we say any more to the work of our hands, Ye are our gods: for in thee the fatherless findeth mercy.” In summary, as mentioned by Wade (who in turn leans on Dillmann and Duhm), the essence of this statement is that only through the Lord, and no other force, can we hope for salvation: “Truly in vain is salvation hoped for from the hills, and from the multitude of mountains: truly in the LORD our God is the salvation of Israel” (Jeremiah 3:23).

14 [They are] dead, they shall not live; [they are] deceased, they shall not rise: therefore hast thou visited and destroyed them, and made all their memory to perish.

[They are] dead, they shall not live; [they are] deceased, they shall not rise: The Targum (ⲧ) has, “They worship idols (לְמִיתִין, literally, ‘the dead’), who do not live, their heroes, who shall not rise.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “As for those who are dead they would not see life, nor could physicians raise them up.” The Peshitta (Ⲫ) renders it, “They cannot make the dead to live, nor the powerful (BPE) / mighty (Lamsa) to be raised up.” The Douay-Rheims (ⲩ) has, “Let not the dead live, let not the giants rise again.” The Masoretic text (ⲙ) has deceased (literally, Rephaim), רִפְּאִים, while the DSS 1QIsa^a (Ⲙ) has and [they are] deceased (literally, and Rephaim), רִפְּאִים. HALOT includes, under its definitions, רִפְּאִים as spirits of the dead. Among the “none else” mentioned in ISAIAH 26:13, are the rulers and powerful men who oppressed Zion and Israel. Barnes writes regarding deceased: “Hebrew, רִפְּאִים – a name given to the shades¹⁷ or manes¹⁸ of the dead.” As powerful as these “other masters” may have been, their power may not be compared to that of ¹⁷ Underworld or world of the spirits.

¹⁸ The spirits of the dead.

God, for they are now dead. Ibn Ezra writes: “Those our masters, that have owned us, are now dead.” From Acts 24:15b we know that there will be a “resurrection of the dead, both of the just and unjust.” So this verse is speaking of the resurrection of the just. At that time the wicked will not come forward. ¶ Therefore hast thou visited and destroyed them, and made all their memory to perish. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “Therefore, when thou shalt visit their sins, thou wilt make an end of them, and make all memorial of them to perish.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Therefore thou hast removed and destroyed and taken away all their males.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲟ) has, for the second clause, “And best destroyed all their memory.” The DSS 1QIsa^a (Ⲙ) has and imprisoned (or, and taken captive) וְהָאֵסִיר (from אָסִיר) while the Masoretic text (ⲙ) has and [made to] perish, וְהָאֵסִיר (from אָסִיר). Once again, the wicked men who distressed Judah are not to be found among the resurrected just in the early Millennium. All memory of the unjust is lost until the end of the millennial day. At an even further time, this prophecy is doubly fulfilled when the earth becomes celestial: “For evildoers shall be cut off: but those that wait upon the LORD, they shall inherit the earth” (Psalm 37:9).

15 Thou hast increased the nation, O LORD, thou hast increased the nation: thou art glorified: thou hadst removed [it] far [unto] all the ends of the earth.

Thou hast increased the nation, O LORD, thou hast increased the nation: thou art glorified: The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “Thou shalt reveal thyself to gather the dispersed of thy people, thou wilt bring together the captivity.” The Peshitta (Ⲥ) is missing, “thou art glorified.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲟ) has, “Thou hast been favourable to the nation, O Lord, thou hast been favourable to the nation: art thou glorified?” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Heap, Lord, evils upon them.” Ibn Ezra correctly takes וְהָאֵסִיר as continued, and fills the ellipsis with “to chastise.” Of the moderns, Kay is one of the few who also understands “thou hast added to the nation” as added chastisement. So also Birks, who says, “[וְהָאֵסִיר] refers to the exile of Israel, or their moral estrangement from God.” In Jeremiah we read: “For as the girdle cleaveth to the loins of a man, so have I caused to cleave unto me the whole house of Israel and the whole house of Judah, saith the LORD; that they might be unto me for a people, and for a name, and for a praise, and for a glory: but they would not hear” (Jeremiah 13:11, emphasis added). This is a similar sentiment, spoken by the Lord to Jeremiah, hoping that the Lord could rejoice in Israel at the time. The idea of scattering and captivity follows as a result of Israel’s disobedience: “Give glory to the LORD your God, before he cause darkness, and before your feet stumble upon the dark mountains, and, while ye look for light, he turn it into the shadow of death, and make it gross darkness. But if ye will not hear it, my soul shall weep in secret places for your pride; and mine eye shall weep sore, and run down with tears, because the LORD’s flock is carried away captive” (Jeremiah 13:16–17, emphasis added, spiritual and physical captivity). The idea, then, is that the Lord continued to chastise, or increase the chastisement upon the nation of Israel, until it finally had its intended effect. Israel was scattered to every corner of the globe in consequence of her sins. Her seed was mixed with the nations of the world. As her heart was softened, she would then be gathered again, beginning with Ephraim and Manasseh and ending with Judah, through both the book of the Lamb (i.e., the stick of Judah, or the Bible) and the stick of Joseph (Book of Mormon). ¶ Thou hadst removed [it] far [unto] all the ends of the earth. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “Thou wilt reveal thyself in thy power to cast all the wicked into hell.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲟ) has, “Thou hast removed all the ends of the earth far off.” BPE (Ⲥ) has “Thou has removed and eliminated the borders.” The Lamsa Peshitta (Ⲥ) has not only removed but also scattered, which is the correct idea. Numerous commentators explain that this removal (וְהָאֵסִיר) signifies a great expansion of the borders of the land of Zion in order to fit Israel (see ISAIAH 49:21.) Here, with Ibn Ezra, Lamsa (Ⲥ) and Kay, I believe it rather refers to the scattering of Israel to the far ends of the earth.

16 LORD, in trouble have they visited thee, they poured out a prayer [when] thy chastening [was] upon them.

✓ secret speech

LORD, in trouble have they visited thee. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “O Lord, in distress they remembered (the Royal Polyglot reads וְהָאֵסִיר, ‘they were fearing Thee’) thy fear (i.e., the object of fear).” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Lord, in affliction I remembered thee.” The Peshitta (Ⲥ) explains that only when they have been under distress (Lamsa) / anguish (BPE) they have sought the Lord. The Douay-Rheims (Ⲟ) has, “Lord, they have sought after thee in distress.” Also see D&C 101:7–8, which is followed by these words of comfort: “Verily I say unto you, notwithstanding their sins, my bowels are filled with compassion towards them. I will not utterly cast them off; and in the day of wrath I will remember mercy. I have sworn, and the decree hath gone forth by a former commandment which I have given unto you, that I would let fall the sword of mine indignation in behalf of my people; and even as I have said, it shall come to pass. Mine indignation is soon to be poured out without measure upon all nations; and this will I do when the cup of their iniquity is full. And in that day all who are found upon the watch-tower, or in other words, all mine Israel, shall be saved. And they that have been scattered shall be gathered. And all they who have mourned shall be comforted. And all they who have given their lives for my name shall be crowned. Therefore, let your hearts be comforted concerning Zion; for all flesh is in mine hands; be still and know that I am God” (D&C 101:9–16). ¶ They poured out a prayer [when] thy chastening [was] upon them. The Targum (Ⓢ) has, “In their trouble they were ardently learning the doctrine of thy law.” The LXX (Ⓟ) reads, “Thine instruction to us was with a small affliction.” The Lamsa Peshitta (Ⓢ) specifies that the chastening will be through a siege. The BPE (Ⓢ) has the people murmuring against God when they are in prison. The Douay-Rheims (Ⓢ) has, “In the tribulation of murmuring thy instruction was with them.” The DSS 1QIsa^a (Ⓢ) has their prayer, לַחֲשׁוּ, while the Masoretic text (Ⓜ) has a prayer, לַחֲשׁוּ. The word לַחֲשׁוּ means to whisper, so some render it as such (YLT, LITV, Parry). Others translate it: whispered prayer (HCSB), only whisper a prayer (NASB), or prayerful whisper (AMP). But just like לַחֲשׁוּ can mean to speak softly, it is sometimes associated with serpent charming or other types of enchantment {Gesenius, HALOT, BDB as well as margin ||) so others suggest some sort of enchanted prayer (LBP (Ⓢ), DSSB (Ⓢ), Miller (Ⓢ)). But this is, once again, an interesting point of hermeneutics. In the DSS and in the Masoretic text, the words in Hebrew are identical yet they are translated differently into English. The REB changes the meaning even more: “In distress, LORD, we sought you out, chastened by the whisper of your rebuke,” making the whisper the Lord’s. Gesenius explains לַחֲשׁוּ here as “a whispering, i.e. prayers uttered in a low voice.” Thus, Hannah, in 1 Samuel 1:9–16, similarly poured out her soul before the LORD, so that prayers are not always audible, but often poured out from the heart. Skinner also provides proof that a simple whisper may be signified, as “the cognate verb in 2 Samuel 12:19 and Psalm 41:7 might be appealed to in support of this view.” Thus, in Psalm 41:7 we have לַחֲשׁוּ, and in 2 Samuel 12:19, we have מִתְלַחֲשִׁים. Alexander explains that the word whisper is correct and here is “beautifully expressive of submissive humble prayer.” Calvin says, “The Hebrew word לַחֲשׁוּ signifies a muttering. The word therefore must not be taken for a prayer pronounced in words, but for that which indicates that the heart is wrung with sore pains, as those who are tortured by extreme anguish can hardly speak or express the feelings of their hearts.”

17 Like as a woman with child, [that] draweth near the time of her delivery, is in pain, [and] crieth out in her pangs; so have we been in thy sight, O LORD.

Like as a woman with child, [that] draweth near the time of her delivery, is in pain, [and] crieth out in her pangs. The LXX (Ⓟ) reads, “And as a woman in labour, when near delivery, crieth in her pangs.” Delitzsch says, “Pregnancy and pangs are symbols of a state of expectation strained to the utmost, the object of which appears all the closer the more the pains increase.” Barnes explains: “The comparison used here is one that is very frequent in the sacred writings to represent any great suffering.” Gill has, “By this simile are set forth the great distresses and afflictions the church of Christ will be in, before redemption and deliverance.” Faussett adds: “An image of anguish accompanied with expectation, to be followed by joy that will cause the anguish utterly to be forgotten. Zion, looking for deliverance, seemingly in vain, but really about to be gloriously saved (Micah 4:9–13; 5:1–3; John 16:21–22).” Jennings says, “Still musing, the prophet likens that time of anguish to travail-pangs [in Matthew 24:8 the word ‘sorrows’ {ὠδίνων} is literally, ‘travail-pains’], and the word suits so well the character of that ‘Great Tribulation’ that dwells upon it. The anguish has increased in its intensity as the hour of the delivery draws near; but there the parallel stops, for all the sufferings of Israel have been absolutely resultless. There has been no deliverance to her land,¹⁹ nor have her earth-dwelling oppressors been brought down.” Kay is brilliant in saying, “The nation [of Israel] had suffered the pains of labour; but in vain: no deliverer was born. And now the pangs were redoubled. Israel,—the outward, historical, Israel,—was enduring the sentence, ‘I will greatly multiply thy sorrow’ (Genesis 3:16).” ¶ So have we been in thy sight, O LORD. The Targum (Ⓢ) has, “So have we been, because we have sinned before thee.” The LXX (Ⓟ) reads, “So have we been to thy beloved.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⓢ) has presence instead of sight. The Lord has seen, all along, both our suffering as well as our placing trust in the arm of flesh rather than in the only one who can save.

18 We have been with child, we have been in pain, we have as it were brought forth wind; we have not wrought any deliverance in the earth; neither have the inhabitants of the world fallen.

¹⁹ Israel became a nation in May 1948, and Jennings died 17 April 1948.

We have been with child, we have been in pain, we have as it were brought forth wind. “Women in labour,” says Calvin, “as soon as they are free from their pains, break out into joy at the sight of what they have brought forth (John 16:21), and forget all their sorrows.” But here this is not the case. The pain is not followed by the joy of a birth. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “Distress swift as the wind has seized us, like a woman with child, who draweth near the time of her delivery.” The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “On account of the fear of thee, Lord, we conceived and suffered the pangs of child birth, and brought forth the spirit of thy salvation.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲯ) has, “We have conceived, and been as it were in labour, and have brought forth wind.” Rashi (in Rabbi Rosenberg) speaks of the pains that are part of false labor, before a woman is ready to give birth. Henderson writes, “The prophet had in view the false pains which frequently precede actual labour, and disappoint the expectations which they had excited. In this case וְרֵיחַ²⁰ is not to be taken literally, but metaphorically, as denoting vanity, nothing.” Likewise, Wade explains brought forth wind is “A figure for fruitless effort.” Wade points us to Ecclesiastes 1:14, “I have seen all the works that are done under the sun; and, behold, all is vanity and vexation of spirit.” The expression and vexation of spirit, וְרֵיחַ רִיחַ, is translated in the ASV, “and a striving after wind.” Young, similarly, points us elsewhere in Isaiah: “Behold, they are all vanity; their works are nothing: their molten images are wind [וְרֵיחַ] and confusion” (ISAIAH 41:29). So also we see this very idea of nothingness in other scriptures, such as: “For he remembered that they were but flesh; a wind [וְרֵיחַ] that passeth away, and cometh not again” (Psalm 78:39). Mankind must realize that salvation can only come through the Holy One of Israel; else, its only power is to bring forth wind, but never deliverance. This scene is to be contrasted to that in ISAIAH 66:7–9. ¶ We have not wrought any deliverance in the earth; neither have the inhabitants of the world fallen. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “The inhabitants of the world have not brought deliverance: they have not tilled the earth, neither have they been able to perform any miracles.” The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “For what we did in that land we are not to fall; but all the dwellers in that land are to fall.” The Peshitta (Ⲯ) renders it, “Save us so we are not eliminated (BPE) / perish (Lamsa) from the earth, nor the inhabitants of the world fall (BPE) / come to an end (Lamsa).” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲯ) has, “We have not wrought salvation on the earth, therefore the inhabitants of the earth have not fallen.” DSS 1QIsa^a (Ⲯ) has your deliverance (יְשׁוּעָתְךָ) while the Masoretic text (Ⲯ) simply has deliverance (יְשׁוּעָה). Only God’s power could help Israel be gathered back to her land and protect her territories. The Lord Himself will come to the rescue of Jerusalem in majesty as the nations of the earth turn against her (Zechariah 14:1–5; ISAIAH 66:7–9).

19 Thy dead [men] shall live, [together with] my dead body shall they arise. Awake and sing, ye that dwell in dust: for thy dew [is as] the dew of herbs, and the earth shall cast out the dead.

The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “Thou art he who dost quicken the dead, the bones of their dead bodies thou dost raise up. They shall live, and offer praise before thee, all that were cast into the dust, because thy dew is the dew of light (i.e., the early dew) to them who do thy law; but thou wilt deliver the wicked into hell, to whom thou hast given power, for they have transgressed against thy Word.” The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “The dead shall be raised up again, even they in the tombs shall be raised up: and they in this land shall be filled with joy: for the dew from thee is healing for them; but the land of the ungodly shall fall.” The Peshitta (Ⲯ) renders it, “Thy dead men shall live again, their corpses (BPE) / dead bodies (Lamsa) shall rise. Those who lie / dwell in the dust shall awake and sing (BPE) because your dew is a dew of light Thou shall bring the land of the powerful / giants to naught.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲯ) has, “Thy dead men shall live, my slain shall rise again: awake, and give praise, ye that dwell in the dust: for thy dew is the dew of the light: and the land of the giants thou shalt pull down into ruin.” Part of the supposed controversy surrounding this verse is that the plural (my bodies, גְּבִיִּי) is given instead of the singular. Tradition, as we shall see, has been well established in its Messianic meaning: that the Lord would be resurrected as would His disciples. Bishops Bible translates as: “Thy dead men shall liue, euen as my body shall they rise againe.” Geneva, likewise renders it: “Thy dead men shall liue: euen with my body shall they rise.” LITV renders it, “Your dead ones shall live, my dead body, they shall rise up,” while YLT has: “Thy dead live—My dead body they rise.” Birks says: “A promise of resurrection implies naturally that the speaker is the Lord.” ¶ Elder B. H. Roberts²¹ defends the Authorized Version translation with its Messianic ellipsis in ISAIAH 26:19.

²⁰ That is, wind, spirit.

²¹ Elder B. H. Roberts, Rasha the Jew (pp. 23–34).

Elder Roberts quotes a number of different explanations of this verse, including this one by Faussett: “‘Together with my dead body—rather, my dead body, or bodies (the Jewish nation personified, which had been spiritually, and civilly dead; or the nation, as a parent speaking of the bodies of her children individually, note ISAIAH 26:9, ‘I’, ‘My’): Jehovah’s ‘dead’ and ‘my dead’ are one and the same. However, as Jesus is the anti-type to Israel (St. Matthew 2:15) English Version gives a true sense, and one ultimately contemplated in the prophecy: Christ’s dead body being raised again is the source of Jehovah’s people ... also being raised (1 Corinthians 15:20–22)’ (A Commentary Critical and Explanatory on the Old and New Testaments, Jamieson, Faussett and Brown).” Elder Roberts also adds: “My reasons for taking this course [of defending the AV] arose from the consciousness that I knew the passage as presented by the plain meaning of the translators of the Authorized Version, and the text and context taken together, represented the truth in the matter, viz.: That Jehovah was to become incarnate—tabernacle in the flesh—have a body; That Jehovah was in a real body to suffer the pains of all men—and to die; That Jehovah was to be raised from the dead—and with him many of his ancient saints were to be raised from the dead; also ‘the earth would cast out the dead.’” Finally, from Elder B. H. Roberts, I include this: “Another American prophet, King Benjamin, in the second century B. C. prophetically said: ‘Behold, the time cometh, and is not far distant, that with power, the Lord Omnipotent who reigneth, who was, and is from all eternity to all eternity,²² shall come down from heaven, among the children of men, and shall dwell in a tabernacle of clay, and shall go forth amongst men, working mighty miracles, such as healing the sick, raising the dead, causing the lame to walk, the blind to receive their sight, and the deaf to hear, and curing all manner of diseases; ... and lo, he shall suffer temptations, and pain of body, hunger, thirst, and fatigue, even more than man can suffer, except it be unto death; for behold, blood cometh from every pore, so great shall be his anguish for the wickedness and the abominations of his people. And he shall be called Jesus Christ, the Son of God, the Father of heaven and earth, the Creator of all things, from the beginning; and his mother shall be called Mary. And lo, he cometh unto his own, that salvation might come unto the children of men, even through faith on his name; and even after all this, they shall consider him a man, and say that he hath a devil, and shall scourge him, and shall crucify him. And he shall rise the third day from the dead; and behold, he standeth to judge the world; and behold, all these things are done, that a righteous judgment might come upon the children of men’ (Book of Mormon, Mosiah 3:5–10).”

²² See notes on ISAIAH 52:6 as well as footnote 12 in ISAIAH 26.

¶ Awake and sing. Rashi (in Rabbi Rosenberg) says: “All this the Holy One, blessed be He, shall say to them. ‘Awaken and sing,’ is an imperative form.” So also see the Masoretic text (מ), and the DSSB. We seem to hear the voice of the Lord commanding the dead to live and to feel free to shout for joy. It is like the imperative “Receive the Holy Ghost!” Awake! Come forth from the dust! The dust, by the way, is not only an expression for the abode of our carcass after death, but also used as a poetical way of those in the spirit world as well as those in exile or in prison. When they speak from the dust, they speak from the spirit world (see ISAIAH 29, in relation to the Book of Mormon). The DSS 1QIsa^a (Q) has they shall awake and sing, קִיצוּ וְרִנְנוּ, while the Masoretic text (מ) has the *imperative*²³ form, Awake and sing! (DSSB, Awake and shout for joy!) קִיצוּ וְרִנְנוּ. Gray translates as ring out their joy. Now, our attention turns drastically to the resurrection of the dead. Several exegetes mention that this verse is the antithesis (e.g., Faussett, Geneva, Barnes) to ISAIAH 26:14.” In the Talmud tradition (Seder Nezikin, Sanhedrin 90b) Rabbi Gamaliel quoted this verse as proof of the resurrection (Talmud, Soncino). Ibn Ezra writes, “Generally, it is believed, that this phrase contains some reference to the resurrection of the dead.” ¶ President Harold B. Lee spoke of the glorious resurrection, “It was to Israel in her days of travail in the wilderness that the Lord gave, through His prophet, a comforting thought that must have been understood to be both a promise as well as a prophecy: ‘Thy dead men shall live, together with my dead body shall they arise. Awake and sing, ye that dwell in dust; for thy dew is as the dew of herbs, and the earth shall cast out the dead’ (ISAIAH 26:19). Nearly 800 years passed before that promise was to be realized when ‘the earth shall cast out the dead.’ This event of such importance to the unnumbered dead occurred at the conclusion of the work and ministry of our Lord and Master and is recorded in these words: ‘And, behold, the veil of the temple was rent in twain from the top to the bottom; and the earth did quake, and the rocks rent; And the graves were opened; and many bodies of the saints which slept arose, And came out of the graves after his resurrection, and went into the holy city, and appeared unto many’ (Matthew 27:51–53). By whom had this mighty miracle been wrought, and what power had thus been manifested? True, the prophets had foretold a day when the Lord would ‘bring out the prisoners from the prison, and them that sit in darkness out of the prison house’ (ISAIAH 42:7), and that He was to bear the sins of many and make intercession for the transgressors (ISAIAH 53:12), but until the Master himself declared the purpose of His mission on earth, it is doubtful that the saints of former days comprehended its full significance.”²⁴ Gill writes, “as sure as Christ’s dead body was raised, so sure shall every one of his people be raised; Christ’s resurrection is the pledge and earnest of theirs; because he lives, they shall live also; he is the first fruits of them that slept: or as in like manner he was raised, so shall they; as he was raised incorruptible, powerful, spiritual, and glorious, and in the same body, so shall they; their vile bodies shall be fashioned like unto his glorious body.” Both believing Jew and Gentile exegete assert that, indeed, these verses can only be understood as pertaining to the resurrection from the dead. ¶ For thy dew. Here dew is representative as that force which gives life. In Deuteronomy 32:2, we thus read: “My doctrine shall drop as the rain, my speech shall distil as the dew, as the small rain upon the tender herb, and as the showers upon the grass.” So it is that Elijah forbid not only the rain from coming down, but also the dew: “As the LORD God of Israel liveth, before whom I stand, there shall not be dew nor rain these years, but according to my word” (1 Kings 17:1b). ¶ The earth shall cast out the dead as the dew helps grass break forth through the earth. In the Discourses of Brigham Young we read that the Spirit Word, the place where the spirits depart after leaving their earthly bodies, “is on this earth that was organized for the people that have lived and that do and will live upon it (3:372)” (p. 576). So, when Isaiah says that the earth shall cast out the dead, we can think of it in terms of both the spirits and the bodies. Young writes: “The shades [i.e., the word of the departed spirits] are in the earth, in Sheol [i.e., the Spirit World]; and the earth... now gives up the shades... This causative usage of the verb with earth as subject is reminiscent of the first chapter of Genesis, ‘and the earth caused to go forth...’” Jenour says: “The parching heat of day is succeeded by the refreshing dew which makes the vegetable kingdom revive and flourish; such was the effect of the returning favour of Jehovah, after his wrath toward his people had ceased.”

²³ Here, the imperative form is constructed by adding the ה prefix. See also, AHCL, p. 215.

vv. 20–21. But we must dry our tears of joy and remember that for those who are upon the earth now, there is much tribulation ahead. We must stand in holy places and have a continual prayer in our hearts.

20 ¶ Come, my people, enter thou into thy chambers, and shut thy doors about thee: hide thyself as it were for a little moment, until the indignation be overpast.

²⁴ Lee, Harold B. Ye Are the Light of the World: Selected Sermons and Writings of Harold B. Lee. Salt Lake City: Deseret Book, 1974.

Come, my people, enter thou into thy chambers, and shut thy doors about thee: The Targum (ⲧ) has, “Come, O my people; produce for thyself good works, which shall protect thee in the time of distress.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Go my people, enter into thy chambers; shut thy door.” The Peshitta (Ⲫ) has shut the doors behind thee, rather than about thee. The meaning is, of course, the same. The Douay-Rheims (ⲱ) has, “Go, my people, enter into thy chambers, shut thy doors upon thee.” The memory of resurrected bliss ends, and we come back to the reality of our present earthly terrestrial life. The Prophet Joseph Smith, in relation to this verse, after speaking about the gathering that will take place in the American continent and the “[deliverance] from the overflowing scourge that shall pass through the land,” explains: “But Judah shall obtain deliverance at Jerusalem. See Joel 2:32; ISAIAH 26:20 and 21; Jeremiah 31:12; Psalm 1:5; 10.” The implication here is that a separate deliverance is required for each (once again, see Zechariah 14:1–5). Note how the Lord, in tenderness, calls His people עַמִּי. With the Geneva translators’ notes, I believe that “He exhorts the faithful to be patient in their afflictions and to wait on God’s work.” Ibn Ezra applies it to the time of Sennacherib, which fits perfectly well. But that is only a type and a shadow of greater problems and commotions to come upon the earth. This reminds us of the Passover (פֶּסַח) night, once again, where in Exodus 12:11–12 the Lord would pass over and not hurt those homes who had obediently kept His word and brushed the lamb’s blood on the posts of their homes or chambers (Exodus 12:7). So will it be in the last days, as we are commanded likewise: “Wherefore, stand ye in holy places, and be not moved, until the day of the Lord come; for behold, it cometh quickly, saith the Lord. Amen” (D&C 87:8). So, while these difficult periods are all about us, let us exclaim, with the psalmist, “In the shadow of thy wings will I make my refuge, until these calamities be overpast” (Psalm 57:1b). Easton’s Bible Dictionary [Chamber] says that “To enter into a chamber is used metaphorically of prayer and communion with God (ISAIAH 26:20).” And well it should be as physical places can do nothing to protect us. ¶ Hide thyself as it were for a little moment, until the indignation be overpast. The Targum (ⲧ) has, “Hide thyself as it were for a little moment, until the curse shall have passed away.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Hide thyself for a little while; until the anger of the Lord is passed.” The Douay-Rheims (ⲱ) has, “Hide thyself a little for a moment, until the indignation pass away.” Bishops Bible has, “Hide thy selfe for a litle whyle, vntill the indignation be ouerpast.” As Alexander points out, the expression as it were is not in the Masoretic text (ⲙ). Alexander also writes: “The sufferings of the present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory which shall be revealed in us.” From Gill, we have: “The design of [these words] is, to let the people of God know that there would be times of great trouble and distress, previous to that glorious one before mentioned.” Keith points us to Zephaniah 2:3, “Seek ye the LORD, all ye meek of the earth, which have wrought his judgment; seek righteousness, seek meekness: it may be ye shall be hid in the day of the LORD’s anger.” Jenour has: “As upon the approach of a storm of thunder and lightning, people flee to their houses, and close fast their doors; or as the Israelites, when Jehovah smote the first-born of the Egyptians, were commanded not to move out of their house whilst the destroying angel was passing through the land (Exodus 12:22); so God bids his believing people among the Jews, not to be troubled or disquieted on account of the approaching calamities, nor to attempt to avert them; but to have their minds stayed upon him, and to leave the disposition of all events to the wisdom of his providence.” Kaiser agrees with Jenour in comparing the passage to the Passover night and adds: “It has rightly been pointed out that in the call to hide from the terrible apparitions of Jehovah in the rock or in the dust (cf. 2:10, 19) the poem is alluding to the day of Yahweh... [The prophet] is thinking of a powerful storm which will break out over Jerusalem and the nations gathering together outside its gates.” ¶ So, what is the indignation of the Lord? It seems to be the difficulties and challenges that will befall the earth as the advent of the Lord’s second coming approaches:²⁵ Also see D&C: 88:89–91. This verse is an allusion to a future time, when all nations will gather against Jerusalem to battle (Zechariah 14) and then shall Jehovah go forth, and fight against those nations. And the Holy One will stand upon the Mount of Olives, which shall split in half and provide a refuge to His people Judah in Jerusalem and then there will be but one King who shall rule in this earth.

21 For, behold, the LORD cometh out of his place to punish the inhabitants of the earth for their iniquity: the earth also shall disclose her blood, ✓ and shall no more cover her slain.

✓ bloods

For, behold, the LORD cometh out of his place to punish the inhabitants of the earth for their iniquity: The Targum (Ⓣ) has, “For behold, the Lord is revealing himself from the place of his Shekinah, to punish the inhabitants of the earth for their sins.” The LXX (ⓖ) reads, “For behold the Lord from his sanctuary is about to bring wrath on the inhabitants of this land.” The Douay-Rheims (ⓓ) has, visit instead of the synonym punish. The DSS 1QIsa^a (Ⓢ) has for, כִּי, rather than for behold, כִּי־הִנֵּה, as seen in the Masoretic text (Ⓜ).

This verse is a continuation of the previous one, where the Saints are told that the earth would be in commotion in the end of days. As Young points out, a similar expression is found in Micah 1:3 “For, behold, the LORD cometh forth out of his place, and will come down, and tread upon the high places of the earth.” ¶ The earth also shall disclose her blood, and shall no more cover her slain. The Targum (Ⓣ) has, “And the earth shall disclose the innocent blood that was shed in her, and shall no more cover her slain.” The LXX (ⓖ) reads, “And the land will disclose the blood on it, and will no longer coyer the slain.” The earth, which has been a witness to every atrocity, will be a witness against those who have defiled her. In Genesis 4:10 we read: “And he said, What hast thou done? the voice of thy brother’s blood crieth unto me from the ground.” Gill writes: “what was hid and covered, or thought to be so, will now be discerned, and brought to light, and just punishment inflicted for it.” Rawlinson well says, “‘There is nothing covered that shall not’ in the last day ‘be revealed, and hid that shall not be known’ (Matthew 10:26). Every murder, however secret, will be brought to light, and every murderer, however unsuspected previously, denounced and punished.” Thompson says, regarding this verse, that the blood is a “cry for vengeance.” We also read: “There is nothing which is secret save it shall be revealed; there is no work of darkness save it shall be made manifest in the light; and there is nothing which is sealed upon the earth save it shall be loosed” (2 Nephi 30:17).

NOTE: ISAIAH 27:1 fits best here, after these last two verses.

27 March 2011

²⁵ The children of Lehi would certainly apply this scripture, also, to the earthly commotions experienced in the American continent associated with the LORD’S crucifixion.

Isaiah 27

ISAIAH 18 is intimately related to ISAIAH 27, both focused on the role that Ephraim would play in the restoration of the sons of Jacob, including Judah, to the Lord. Satan is defeated by the sword of the Lord, a leftover and concluding thought from ISAIAH 26. We are then transported to a pre-millennial time when the Lord restores His Church for the last time. Those within the Church who do not abide will be burnt. The Lord makes a plea for them to take hold of His strength and find peace. All of this is done with a new parable of the vineyard (compare ISAIAH 5). In the last days Ephraim plays a key role in gathering Israel one by one. The joy of the latter-day vineyard is replaced by thoughts of the impending scattering of children of Jacob. The Lord has not permitted the house of Israel to be punished more than was necessary to accomplish the required humility and subsequent repentance. In the last days the children of Israel would be gathered back to their lands—and more importantly—to the temple.

v. 1. In that day, יָמֵינוּ, we are transported to the logical conclusion of ISAIAH 26:20–21, where this verse belongs,¹ as a brief excursion back to the millennium. It is at both the beginning and end of the millennium that Satan, the great crooked serpent of the sea is to be banished. Satan is to be bound for a thousand years and at the end of the millennium defeated once again by the forces of good.

1 ¶ IN that day the LORD with his sore and great and strong sword shall punish leviathan[✓] the piercing serpent,[✓] even leviathan that crooked serpent; and he shall slay the dragon that [is] in the sea.

✓ or, crossing like a bar [both]

In that day the LORD with his sore and great and strong sword shall punish leviathan the piercing serpent. The Targum (ⲧ) has, “At that time the Lord shall punish (or, ‘visit’) with his great, mighty, and strong sword the king, who has magnified himself as Pharaoh the first, and the kind who has exalted himself as Sennacherib the second.” The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “In that day God will bring his holy sword, even his great and powerful sword, upon the dragon, the flying serpent.” The Peshitta (Ⲫ) has large (BPE) / hard (Lamsa) for sore. The Douay-Rheims (ⲩ) has, “In that day the Lord with his hard, and great, and strong sword shall visit leviathan the bar serpent.” Most exegetes see in the piercing serpent, the crooked serpent and the dragon of the sea three distinct nations or evil forces. I wonder if it is not three different descriptions of Satan and those who do his bidding. Wordsworth says, “Leviathan, the piercing serpent, or flying (or apostate) serpent; words used in this [i.e., referring to “Satan and all his agents, the proud and mighty Powers of this world, represented by his symbols and theirs”] spiritual sense in Job 26:13.” Wordsworth also has, “Justin Martyr, c. Tryphon., § 91 and § 112, who regards the ‘Leviathan and piercing serpent’ as a name of Satan himself, and the sword, with which he is slain, as an emblem of Christ.” Govett says “By the punishment of Leviathan ... is evidently intended to be inflicted on Satan, who is in the Revelation² called ‘The great dragon, that old serpent, the devil, and Satan.’” The word לִוְיָתָן that is translated in our KJV as sore also means hard, hardened, strong, heavy (HALOT, Gesenius). In Leviticus 26:25 (Rain in due Season) the Lord used His sword of strength against rebellious Israel. Now Christ smites Satan who is the prince of this earth. The setting here seems to be the millennium because we see that leviathan that crooked serpent is about to be crushed, thus fulfilling the promise made in the Garden of Eden: “And I will put enmity between thee and the woman, and between thy seed and her seed; it shall bruise thy head, and thou shalt bruise his heel” (Genesis 3:15). In Revelation we read: “And I saw an angel come down from heaven, having the key of the bottomless pit and a great chain in his hand. And he laid hold on the dragon, that old serpent, which is the Devil, and Satan, and bound him a thousand years, And cast him into the bottomless pit, and shut him up, and set a seal upon him, that he should deceive the nations no more, till the thousand years should be fulfilled: and after that he must be loosed a little season” (Revelation 20:1–3). Latter-day scriptures contain some additional details. After the Lord’s people are gathered from the four quarters of the earth (1 Nephi 22:25b) we read: “And because of the righteousness of his people, Satan has no power; wherefore, he cannot be loosed for the space of many years; for he hath no power over the hearts of the people, for they dwell in righteousness, and the Holy One of Israel reigneth” (1 Nephi 22:26). Right after this we read that “all nations, kindreds, tongues, and people shall dwell safely in the Holy One of Israel” (1 Nephi 22:28b), which is another way of saying that they will have that perfect peace spoken about in ISAIAH 26:3. Also, we read, “and Satan shall have power over the hearts of the children of men no more, for a long time” (2 Nephi 30:18). There are other hints in 2 Nephi 30 regarding this chapter of Isaiah, as we shall see below. The Savior added that after every attempt is made to gather His people from the nations of the earth through the voice of servants, angels, His own voice, and the voice of natural disasters and even the sound of a trumpet (D&C 43:24–25); when the “cup of the wrath of mine indignation is full” (D&C 43:26b), then, would come “the great Millennium, of which I have spoken by the mouth of my servants... For Satan shall be bound, and when he is loosed again he shall only reign for a little season, and then cometh the end of the earth” (D&C 43:30b–31). At the end of the millennium, Satan shall again be loosened for a little season for the final battle of Gog and Magog where Adam—as a commander in Christ’s army—shall once again triumph over Satan (D&C 88:111–116, Revelation 12:7–9 speaks of the war in heaven). ¶ Even leviathan that crooked serpent; and he shall slay the dragon that [is] in the sea. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “And he shall slay the king that is strong as the dragon that is in the sea.” The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “Upon the dragon, the crooked serpent; he will slay the dragon.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲯ) has whale rather than dragon. In the last days Satan will have dominion over the sea, while in the former days he had dominion over the land (D&C 61:14; Revelation 8:10). Thus, it makes sense that the expression dragon that is in the sea be utilized. Since Satan is the director of mystic Babylon, Faussett and Barnes, among others, suggest that the sea mentioned here is the Euphrates River. Leviathan may well also be the crocodile or wounded dragon (Pharaoh or Satan) in Rahab or Egypt (ISAIAH 51:9). Psalm 74:13–14, as Keith says, also mentions leviathan, a monster of the sea. In the next verse we return to pre-millennial days, or the days spoken of in the Book of Revelation when angel Moroni has, with his great voice—even as a sound of a loud shofar (ram’s horn)—invited all to come unto Christ through the Book of Mormon. “And I saw another angel fly in the midst of heaven, having the everlasting gospel to preach unto them that dwell on the earth, and to every nation, and kindred, and tongue, and people, Saying with a loud voice, Fear God, and give glory to him; for the hour of his judgment is come: and worship him that made heaven, and earth, and the sea, and the fountains of waters” (Revelation 14:6–7).

¹ I was pleased to find agreement from Ironside, Wade, Jennings, Keith, and Ewald.

² “And the great dragon was cast out, that old serpent, called the Devil, and Satan, which deceiveth the whole world: he was cast out into the earth, and his angels were cast out with him” (Revelation 12:9).

vv. 2–6. In that day, יוֹם הַיּוֹם, we are again transported through time, but now to the pre-millennial day. In this chapter we see how the Lord once again speaks tenderly of His vineyard, which here represents His restored Church—and later on we read about the gathering of Israel one by one.

2 In that day sing ye unto her, A vineyard of red wine.

The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “At that time the congregation of Israel, which is like a vineyard planted in goodly land, shall sing concerning that vineyard.” The Brenton LXX (Ⲯ) translation reads, “In that day there shall be a fair vineyard, and a desire to commence a song concerning it.” The Peshitta (Ⲯ) is missing the adjective red. The Douay-Rheims (Ⲯ) has, “In that day there shall be singing to the vineyard of pure wine.” In the DSS 1QIsa^a (Ⲯ) we have חֹמֶר, which may be translated as red wine (can also mean wine, red, fermenting—Gesenius, HALOT). The Masoretic text (Ⲯ), instead, has חֲמֵץ, desirous (Gesenius, HALOT), so the passage would be translated desirous vineyard. So also Lowth: “The beloved vineyard—For חֲמֵץ, a great number of manuscripts, and some printed editions, have חֲמֵץ; which is confirmed by the LXX and Chaldee.” It seems that both acceptations for חֲמֵץ could be correct, depending on the context.³ ¶ There are several types of vineyards including those that produce (1) table grapes, (2) raisins, or (3) wine. The latter, in turn, are divided among those that produce red or white wine. ¶ In that day. Birks writes: “The day is that of the ingrafting of the olive branches of Israel (Romans 11).”⁴ ¶ Sing ye

³ It is of great interest to me how well before the DSS were discovered, the KJV, based on the Masoretic text (Ⲯ), provided the red wine translation (leaning on the 1587 Geneva Bible, “vineyarde of redde wine”). The idea of fine wine (or desirable vineyard), instead, was used by the 1568 Bishops Bible, “vineyarde that bringeth forth the best wine.” More recent translations follow one of three translation traditions: (1) “On that day sing about a desirable vineyard” (HCSB); (2) “In that day sing ye to her, A vineyard of red wine” (Webster); (3) “In that day: A vineyard of wine, sing ye unto it” (ASV). We also have, “At that time, ‘A fermenting vineyard—sing about it!’” (ISV). This is another way of saying that the grapes are for the production of wine.

⁴ Indeed, in Romans 11 we read, in part: “I say then, Hath God cast away his people [i.e., Israel, see Romans 10:21]? God forbid... For if the casting away of them be the reconciling of the world, what shall the receiving of them be, but life from the dead? [Allusion to Ezekiel 37:1–14, valley of dry bones] For if the firstfruit be holy, the lump is also holy; and if the root be holy, so are the branches. And if some of the branches be broken off, and thou, being a wild olive tree [see also Jacob 5], wert grafted in among them, and with them partakest of the root and fatness of the olive tree; Boast not against the branches. But unto her, עֲנֵה לָהּ. Barnes points out: “That is, sing unto, or respecting the vineyard. The word rendered ‘sing’ (עָנָה) signifies properly, ‘answer, respond to,’ and then, sing a responsive⁵ song, where one portion of the choir responds to another (see Exodus 15:21).” Henderson and others argue the opposite view, and suggest that this point of responsiveness does not belong here. And even others argue that these verses only mentions the song, but that no part of this chapter includes the song. ¶ A vineyard. Gill explains that this vineyard is the “church of Christ under the Gospel dispensation” and is different from that described as relating to apostate—yet always beloved—Israel (ISAIAH 5:5, Hosea 10:1) and suggests that the redness “tincture [which it received is] from the blood⁶ of Christ.” Rawlinson similarly says: “But whereas, on the former occasion [ISAIAH 5], all was wrath and fury, menace and judgment, here all is mercy and loving-kindness, protection and promise. The difference is, no doubt, not with God, ‘with whom is no variableness, neither shadow of turning’ (James 1:17), but with the vineyard...” ¶ Of red wine. In ISAIAH 5:4 we note that the vineyard only produced wild inedible grapes while here it produces the very best or fine red wine (Redak in Rabbi Rosenberg). Such wine perhaps represents a turning unto Christ followed by godly works.

3 I the LORD do keep it; I will water it every moment: lest [any] hurt it, I will keep it night and day.

I the LORD do keep it; I will water it every moment: lest [any] hurt it. The Targum (T) has, “I, the Lord, keep the covenant of their fathers with them, that I may not destroy them; but at the time that they provoked me to if thou boast, thou bearest not the root, but the root thee. Thou wilt say then, The branches were broken off, that I might be grafted in. Well; because of unbelief they were broken off, and thou standest by faith. Be not highminded, but fear: For if God spared not the natural branches, take heed lest he also spare not thee. Behold therefore the goodness and severity of God: on them which fell, severity; but toward thee, goodness, if thou continue in his goodness: otherwise thou also shalt be cut off. And they also, if they abide not still in unbelief, shall be grafted in: for God is able to graft them in again. For if thou wert cut out of the olive tree which is wild by nature, and wert grafted contrary to nature into a good olive tree: how much more shall these, which be the natural branches, be grafted into their own olive tree? For I would not, brethren, that ye should be ignorant of this mystery, lest ye should be wise in your own conceits; that blindness in part is happened to Israel, until the fulness of the Gentiles be come in. And so all Israel shall be saved: as it is written, There shall come out of Sion the Deliverer, and shall turn away ungodliness from Jacob: For this is my covenant unto them, when I shall take away their sins” (Romans 11:1, 15–27).

⁵ See Lowth, also.

⁶ And points us to the patriarchal blessing of Judah, the Savior’s forefather, in Genesis 49:12.

anger, I gave them the cup of their punishment to drink; but their sins were the cause of their punishment.” The LXX (G) reads, “I am a strong city, a city besieged.” The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “I am the Lord that keep it, I will suddenly give it drink: lest any hurt come to it.” Ironside says, “No longer will Jehovah’s vineyard be let out to unfaithful husbandmen, but He will watch over it Himself.” Young, along the same vein says, “In ISAIAH 5:2 He had stated that He had erected a tower in the vineyard, and now He Himself is watching over the vineyard from that tower.” Redak (in Rabbi Rosenberg) also points out the contrast between “I will also command the clouds that they rain no rain upon it” (ISAIAH 5:6) and here, “I will water it every moment.” Rawlinson makes the same contrast and compares the latter-day vineyard to the Church. When Jesus spoke to the Samaritan woman at the well he distinguished the water available from the well from the spiritual water He offered: “But whosoever drinketh of the water that I shall give him shall never thirst; but the water that I shall give him shall be in him a well of water springing up into everlasting life” (John 4:14). It should be clear that the Lord of the vineyard knows exactly how to water His vineyard. To water every day stands for careful and minute care. The daily care is very real; the watering represents the giving forth of blessings or “rain in due season.” The watering here spoken of is the pouring out of blessings upon His people. (A vineyard that was literally watered daily, unless different portions of a large vineyard were watered, would die of root rot or from root asphyxiation.) I truly feel of the Lord’s love and His daily watering and pouring out blessings. ¶ I will keep it night and day. The Targum (T) has, “Nevertheless, my Word shall protect them by day and by night.” The LXX (G) reads, “In vain shall I supply her with drink: for by night she will be taken, and by day she will fall (or, ‘by day the wall shall fall,’ Brenton and NETS).” The BPE (S) has, for the second clause, “I will water it by night and visit it by day.” The Lord Himself will keep or watch over this vineyard, latter-day Israel, night and day. While we have been promised that the Church will never fall away again, as individuals we have to secure our salvation by being faithful.⁷ The Psalmist speaks about the protection that

⁷ “Teach [the people] an everlasting hatred against sin and iniquity. Preach unto them repentance, and faith on the Lord Jesus Christ; teach them to humble themselves and to be meek and lowly in heart; teach them to withstand every temptation of the devil, with their faith on the Lord Jesus Christ. Teach them to never be weary of good works, but to be meek and lowly in heart; for such shall find rest to their souls. O, remember, my son, and learn wisdom in thy youth; yea, learn in thy youth to keep the commandments of God. Yea, and cry unto God for all thy support; yea, let all thy doings be unto the Lord, and whithersoever thou goest let it be in the Lord; yea, let all thy thoughts be directed unto the Lord; yea, let the affections of thy heart be placed upon the Lord forever. Counsel with the Lord in all thy doings, and he will direct thee for good; yea, when thou liest down at night lie down comes from the Lord: “Behold, he that keepeth Israel shall neither slumber nor sleep” {Psalm 121:4 (1–8)}. We also read this beautiful sentiment from the Lord: “And even to your old age I am he; and even to hoar hairs will I carry you: I have made, and I will bear; even I will carry, and will deliver you” (ISAIAH 46:4). So the Lord not only blesses us every hour, but is ever mindful of us. I am filled with gratitude as I feel of His tender care.

4 Fury [is] not in me: who would set the briers [and] thorns against me in battle? I would go through[✓] them, I would burn them together.

✓ or, march against

Fury [is] not in me: who would set the briers [and] thorns against me in battle? The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “Behold, many might works are before me. Is it not so?” The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “There is no wall, or it hath not availed her. Will any one set me to watch a stalk in a field? On account of this warfare I have rejected her.” The Peshitta (Ⲯ) renders it, “You have not been hedged. Who put the briers and thorns in you?” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲯ) has, “There is no indignation in me: who shall make me a thorn and a brier in battle.” In the Masoretic text (Ⲯ) the and is implied between briers [and] thorns, שׁוֹמֵר וְשִׁית, while the DSS 1QIsa^a (Ⲯ) spells it out, briers and thorns, שׁוֹמֵר וְשִׁית.

¶ NOTE: The expression Fury not in me, חֲמָה אֵין לִי, seems to fit better as that which completes ISAIAH 27:3, where it would mean, as many have interpreted the sentiment, that the Lord is no longer angry at Israel and contrasts this with the vineyard in ISAIAH 5. Gill writes, regarding חֲמָה אֵין לִי: “Against his vineyard he takes so much care of, his church and people, whom he has loved with an everlasting love; they are indeed deserving of his wrath, but he has not appointed them to it, but has appointed his Son to bear it for them...” So now that the Lord makes it clear that He is protecting His vineyard, then it makes all the sense of the words to ask, “Who would dare set briers and thorns against her?” and thus by extension, against the Lord Himself. Regarding fury, Kay reminds us of some verses in Rain in Due Season: “And if ye will not for all this hearken unto me, but walk contrary unto me; Then I will walk contrary unto you also in fury; and I, even I, will chastise you seven times for your sins.” (Leviticus 26:27–28). ¶ Briers and thorns. Nägelsbach explains:

unto the Lord, that he may watch over you in your sleep; and when thou risest in the morning let thy heart be full of thanks unto God; and if ye do these things, ye shall be lifted up at the last day” (Alma 37:32b–37).

“Thorns and thistles, which grow from the soil of the vineyard itself, are in opposition to the wild beasts which break in from without, symbols of internal decay, symptoms of the germs of evil still existing in the vineyard itself.” Rawlinson likewise suggests: “The ‘briers and thorns’ are apparently unrighteous members of the Church, who have fallen below their privileges. God asks, ‘Who will set the briers and thorns in array against me?’ in a tone of contempt. ‘Who will dare to do battle against me with such weak material?’ And then he adds a forecast of the result in such a case: ‘I would move forward; I would burn them all together’ (compare with ISAIAH 10:17).” Gill proposes various possibilities for the briers and thorns, including: “...for the hurt and mischief they do, and the grief and trouble they give to the people of God, as hypocrites and false teachers, and all such as are of unsound principles, and bad lives and conversations, and which are very offensive to the Lord; and therefore, though there is no fury in him against his vineyard, the church, yet there is against those briers and thorns, wicked men, whom he accounts his enemies, and will fight against them in his wrath, and consume them in his fury; see 2 Samuel 23:6.” Rosenberg shares a number of Rabbinic views, including this one: “Therefore God says, ‘I have no wrath’ to mete out upon Israel, for I had wrath against Israel, the vineyard ‘that would give Me thorns and briers’ instead of grapes... [Redak quoting his father, Rabbi Joseph Kimhi].” Redak says: “The prophet compares [Israel] to a plant that strikes roots below and blossoms from above” (in Rabbi Rosenberg).⁸ ¶ I would go through them, I would burn them together. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “If the house of Israel would set their face to do my law, I would send my anger and my fury among the nations, who are waging war against them, and I would destroy them, as the fire destroyeth the briers and the thorns together.” The LXX (Ⲯ) reads,

⁸ Jacob, after sharing Zenos’ allegory of the tame and wild olive trees, teaches: “And how merciful is our God unto us, for he remembereth the house of Israel, both roots and branches; and he stretches forth his hands unto them all the day long; and they are a stiffnecked and a gainsaying people; but as many as will not harden their hearts shall be saved in the kingdom of God. Wherefore, my beloved brethren, I beseech of you in words of soberness that ye would repent, and come with full purpose of heart, and cleave unto God as he cleaveth unto you. And while his arm of mercy is extended towards you in the light of the day, harden not your hearts. Yea, today, if ye will hear his voice, harden not your hearts; for why will ye die? For behold, after ye have been nourished by the good word of God all the day long, will ye bring forth evil fruit, that ye must be hewn down and cast into the fire? Behold, will ye reject these words? Will ye reject the words of the prophets; and will ye reject all the words which have been spoken concerning Christ, after so many have spoken concerning him; and deny the good word of Christ, and the power of God, and the gift of the Holy Ghost, and quench the Holy Spirit, and make a mock of the great plan of redemption, which hath been laid for you?” (Jacob 6:4–8). It seems, then, that the foolish virgins (Matthew 25:1–13) in the kingdom of God will be burn together with those who altogether refuse to listen and be gathered in.

“For this cause therefore the Lord hath executed all that he determined. I am about to be burned up.” The Peshitta (S) renders it, “I will blow against him (Lamsa, ‘vineyard’) from near and burn them together. The Douay-Rheims (D) has, “Shall march against it, shall I set it on fire together?” In the DSS 1QIsa^a (Q) we have and set on fire אֶצִּיתָנָהּ, while the and is not present in the Masoretic text (M), אֶצִּיתָנָהּ. The Lord will burn those who reject His gospel. In 2 Nephi we read: “For the time speedily cometh that the Lord God shall cause a great division among the people, and the wicked will he destroy; and he will spare his people, yea, even if it so be that he must destroy the wicked by fire” (2 Nephi 30:10).

5 Or let him take hold of my strength, [that] he may make peace with me; [and] he shall make peace with me.

The Targum (T) has, “If (the Royal Polyglot and the Biblia Magna, Hebrew, have evidently the right reading, אֶלֶּא⁹) they would lay hold on the words of my law, peace would be made with them; henceforth peace would be enduring, according to the Targum (T) if based on obedience to Scripture. The LXX (G) reads, “Let the inhabitants therein cry aloud, ‘Let us make peace with him. Let us make peace.’” The Lamsa Peshitta (S) has, “Or let Israel take hold of my strength, and I will make peace for him, peace will I give him.” The BPE (S) once again makes no reference to Israel, and ties the first clause of this verse, “Unless he takes hold of my strength,” to ISAIAH 27:4. The Douay-Rheims (D) has, “Or rather shall it take hold of my strength, shall it make peace with me, shall it make peace with me?” A number of exegetes suggest that יִחַזַק בְּמַעֲוֵי let him take hold of my strength, stands as an allusion to the protection afforded by the horns of the altar [מִזְבֵּחַ] of burnt offering. Two examples are 1 Kings 1:50; and 2:28. Henderson writes that this “is a mode of expression borrowed from the practice of fleeing to, and laying fast hold of altars, &c. as asylums or places of refuge.” ¶ Or, אִם. Gesenius explains that אִם can include an elliptical expression for unless. Using an example from Rain in Due Season, Delitzsch (so also Kay) explains: אִם with a voluntative following [means]

‘unless,’ as in Leviticus 26:41¹⁰.” Gesenius, Barnes and BPE (S) here translate אִם as unless, which gives the correct sense. Spanish versions NBLH and LBLA translate אִם as a no ser que (i.e., unless). Another common rendering, one which also gives the correct sense of אִם in this verse, is or else (AMP, ASV, GW, ISV, JPS, RV). Thus, not only are those who take hold of the Lord’s strength not burnt, but they also partake of His peace. Rashi would translate אִם as if (and would do the same in Exodus 21:36, or if {KJV, ASV, LITV, JPS}, if, however {HCSB, contrast with GW}) and render it, “If My people grasp My fortress i.e., My Torah, that they seek no other fortress but My fortress...” (Rabbi Rosenberg). See also אֶלֶּא in the Targum Jonathan (T) in this place. And lay hold not only of the Torah, but also all of the Holy Scriptures The word of God (the rod of iron, 1 Nephi 11:25) permits us to come to the Word of God (Messiah, see ISAIAH 40:8) as Christ is the source of our strength. Gill writes, “The sense is, let the people of God, any and everyone of them, when afflicted and chastised by him particularly, and are ready to conclude that he is wroth with them, and is dealing with them in hot displeasure; let such look to Christ, and lay hold, and a strong hold, on him by faith, which will be greatly to their advantage and support.” Wordsworth, also leaning on Gesenius, says, “Let him take hold of My strength (let him stay himself on Me as his support).” In other words, this is a call to שׁוּבוּ, to turn or return and follow Christ.

¶ [That] he may make peace with me; [and] he shall make peace with me. Gill says, “The phrase is doubled for the certainty of it.” Rawlinson writes, “The reiteration constitutes an appeal of extreme earnestness and tenderness.” Wildberger suggests: “To find shelter with Yahweh means that a person achieves שְׁלוֹם ... Does this verse intend to say: the enemies of Israel should hurry up and make peace with Yahweh? Hardly; it is more likely that it is intended as an indicative statement: They will get peace as a result. This means that the peace is not actually the ‘work’ of those who are seeking protection, but the result of their having turned toward Yahweh. Jerusalem, most specifically, the temple, is the place where שְׁלוֹם (peace) dwells.”

⁹ According to the Targum Lexicon, אֶלֶּא can mean but, only, except, moreover, besides, unless. The idea seems to be that peace can only be had if they hold on the iron rod—or to the horns of the altar.

¹⁰ In Leviticus 26:41 (Rain in Due Season) we see אִם-אִם translated as if then. For instance: “I also walked contrary unto them, and brought them into the land of their enemies: if then their uncircumcised heart be humbled, and they then accept of the punishment of their iniquity” (ASV, emphasis added).

6 He shall cause them that come of Jacob to take root: Israel shall blossom and bud, and fill the face of the world with fruit.

He shall cause them that come of Jacob to take root:

The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “They shall be gathered from the midst of their captivity, and return to their country; there children shall be born to the house of Jacob.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “They who are coming are children of Jacob.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲕ) has, “When they shall rush in unto Jacob.” Simeon speaks of the great persecution endured by Judah “being despised of all” so that “The possession of landed property has been, till of late,¹¹ universally denied them; so that they could never ‘take root’ in any place, or be established in any country under heaven.” ¶ Them that come / days that come, הַיָּמִים הַבָּאִים. The term הַיָּמִים, come (בֹּא), many exegetes and translators give as elliptical for “days that come,” as the word days is only implied. Delitzsch (also see Henderson) explains, “We may see from הַיָּמִים (acc. temp. as in Ecclesiastes 2:16, equivalent in meaning to ‘Behold, the days come,’ Jeremiah 7:32, etc.), that the true language of prophecy commences again here.” Thus Bishops Bible has, “The dayes are coming that Iacob shall take roote, Israel shalbe greene and florishe, and the world shalbe filled with fruite.” We also have: “Hereafter, Iakob shall take roote: Israel shall florish and growe, and the world shall be filled with fruite” (Geneva); “In days to come shall Jacob take root; Israel shall blossom and bud; and they shall fill the face of the world with fruit” (ASV). ¶ *To take root.*¹² Barnes explains: “This language is derived from the vine, as the shoots or cuttings of the vine take root and flourish. To take root, therefore, is an emblem denoting that the descendants of Jacob, or the people of God, would increase and prosper.” Indeed, we know that through Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, that all the families of the earth would be blessed: “And I will bless them that bless thee, and curse him that curseth thee: and in thee shall all families of the earth be blessed” (Genesis 12:3). Kay has: “Israel, so long cut off from the Fountain of Life,—a mere dry rod,—shall be like Aaron’s rod which ‘budded ... and bloomed blossoms.’” Young says, “In the missionary proclamation of the Gospel this truth finds its fulfillment.” And when it comes to fruit—when looked upon from this missionary in this view—certainly it fell upon Ephraim (with the help of Manasseh) to gather this fruit. So we read in Genesis, “Joseph is a fruitful bough, even a fruitful bough by a well; whose branches run over the wall” (Genesis 49:22). We might say, indeed, that not only did the branches grow over the wall to be planted in the American continent, but that also they grew back over the wall again, and not just one wall, to preach the gospel of Jesus Christ to every people—and every person—upon this earth. All who do not wish to be burned are invited to join Israel, both those who are direct descendants as well as those who have been grafted in or adopted. ¶ Vineyards have to be heavily pruned if they are to yield good grapes with a high degree of sugar. This is done in the winter, when the leaves fall off, and depending on the size of the vineyard, may last about two and a half months. Of the wood that is removed (sarmiento in Spanish) a very small amount may be used for plant propagation while the greatest percentage is simply burnt. ¶ Israel shall blossom and bud, and fill the face of the world with fruit. (Also see ISAIAH 32:15; D&C 49:24.) The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “They of the house of Israel shall be fruitful, and they shall multiply; their children’s children shall fill the face of the world.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Israel shall bloom and blossom; and the world shall be filled with his fruit. The Douay-Rheims (Ⲕ) has, “Israel shall blossom and bud, and they shall fill the face of the world with seed.” Gray makes an astute observation, however, that buds come before the blossom, and indeed, the Hebrew (HALOT) would permit the translation יָצִיץ וּפָרַח of to be bud and blossom instead, as well as bud and “put out new shoots” (HALOT). A number of interesting translations include: “Israel will put out buds and flowers” (BBE); “Israel shall blossom and send forth shoots” (AMP, also see ESV, ISV, NASB); and “[Israel] will blossom and bear fruit that covers the earth” (CEV). Kimhi explains, “Filled with fruitage. The blessing conferred upon Israel will be enjoyed by the whole world” (in Slotki/Rosenberg). Ironside says, “[Israel] will be a means of blessing to the whole earth as God has intended from the beginning—a nation of priests,¹³ through whom God will make known His salvation to the ends of the earth.” People would be gathered into the Church from every quarter of the earth and produce much good fruit. ¶ Face of the world, פְּנֵי-תֵבֵל.

Alexander says, “תֵּבֵל does not mean the land of Israel, ¹¹ Simeon wrote in 1832, when the Holocaust with all its attendant horrors would pain Judah.

¹² From a horticultural perspective, this is an interesting concept. In our vineyard in Chile, we would plant the choice canes that were pruned in a nursery until they took root, at which point they were transplanted to the various portions of the vineyard to replace decaying or missing vines. Because of phylloxera, in other nations such cuttings must first be grafted into a resistant rootstock. The point here is that prunings or cuttings from vineyards and other types of fruit trees are used for plant propagation. And that these plants are not viable until they take root (i.e., roots grow out of the cuttings).

¹³ Allusion to Exodus 19:5–6, where we read about “a peculiar treasure” and “a kingdom of priests, and an holy nation.”

but the world.” Gesenius explains regarding תִּכְלָה: “A poetic word—(1) fertile and inhabited earth, the habitable globe.” Indeed Israel is scattered and intermixed with all of the world and through the ingathering bring back fruit from the entire world. Barnes correctly writes: “The sense is, that the people of God would so increase and flourish that the true religion would ultimately fill the entire world.” Not long after I joined the Church I heard Elder McConkie teach: “The gathering place for Peruvians is in the stakes of Zion in Peru, or in the places which soon will become stakes. The gathering place for Chileans is in Chile;¹⁴ for Bolivians it is in Bolivia; for Koreans it is in Korea; and so it goes through all the length and breadth of the earth. Scattered Israel in every nation is called to gather to the fold of Christ, to the stakes of Zion, as such are established in their nations. Isaiah prophesied that the Lord ‘shall cause them that come of Jacob to take root; Israel shall blossom and bud, and fill the face of the world with fruit.’ The Lord’s promise is: ‘Ye shall be gathered one by one, O ye children of Israel.’ (ISAIAH 27:6, 12). That is to say—Israel shall be gathered one by one, family by family, unto the stakes of Zion established in all parts of the earth so that the whole earth shall be blessed with the fruits of the gospel. This then is the counsel of the Brethren: Build up Zion, but build it up in the area where God has given you birth and nationality. Build it up where he has given you citizenship, family, and friends. Zion is here in South America and the Saints who comprise this part of Zion are and should be a leavening influence for good in all these nations.”¹⁵

vv. 7–13. Israel’s enemies have been punished more severely than she has. Part of her punishment, however would require scattering over the surface of the earth. Jerusalem would yet be left desolate. In the last days a new gathering would take place—one much greater than the return of Judah to Jerusalem after the Babylonian captivity. This gathering, instead, would not only be geographical in nature, but a spiritual one. The gathering spot would be the temple; the House of the Lord (see ISAIAH 2:2; 18:7).

7 ¶ Hath he smitten him, as he smote[✓] those that smote him? [or] is he slain

¹⁴ For years this caused me much pain as I so much wished to go back to the land of my birth, to my beautiful Chile. I have been greatly blessed of the Lord in that I was able to return to Chile with my lovely Principessa and eternal companion in 2014. I have much to be grateful, however, for the time I spent in California, especially the 34 years I worked for the University of California.

¹⁵ McConkie, Bruce R. Come: Let Israel Build Zion, Ensign (CR), May 1977, p.115.

according to the slaughter of them that are slain by him?

✓ according to the stroke of Hath he smitten him, as he smote those that smote him? The LXX (Ⓞ) reads, “He shall not, as he smote, be so smitten.” The Lamsa Peshitta (Ⓢ) has the Lord smiting, and the oppressor being smitten, while the BPE (Ⓢ) specifies no such thing. The Douay-Rheims (Ⓟ) has, “Hath he struck him according to the stroke of him that struck him?” Henderson explains: “In such appeals, the interrogatory ¶, and the corresponding particle Ⓢ,¹⁶ have the force of a strong negative. As McFadyen says: “Hath he (Jehovah) smitten him (Israel), as he (Jehovah) smote those (the foreign oppressors) that smote him (Israel)? Or was he (Israel) slain according to the slaughter of them that are slain by him?” ¶ This is not to say that the children of Israel have not been smitten. For instance, The Historical Atlas of Judaism (Barnes and Bacon, 2009) contains a small fraction of the sufferings of Judah and it is enough to make me almost ill. When one adds the sufferings of those who are part of the Ten Tribes of Israel as well as others who have been broken off Israel, such as the natives of the American continent, and their sufferings, all of this constitutes a bleak picture indeed. At the end, however, a remnant remains and will be mixed with the nations of the earth and will be gathered. Calvin makes an important observation in all of this: “The Lord often employs the agency of wicked men in chastising us.” ¶ [Or] is he slain according to the slaughter of them that are slain by him? The LXX (Ⓞ) reads, “Nor, as he slew, shall he be so slain.” Not a direct translation, but one that gives its signification has, “I, the LORD, didn’t punish and kill the people of Israel as fiercely as I punished and killed their enemies” (CEV).

8 In measure, when it shooteth forth,[✓] thou wilt debate with it: he stayeth[✓] his rough wind in the day of the east wind.

✓ or, thou sendest it forth

✓ ✓ or, when he removeth it [with]

One translation of this difficult verse is: “In measure, when thou sendest her away, thou dost contend with her; he hath removed her with his rough blast in the day of the east wind” (RV, cf. ASV). ¶ In measure, when it shooteth forth, thou wilt debate with it: The Targum (Ⓣ) has, “With the measure wherewith thou didst measure¹⁷

¹⁶ Ⓢ, i.e., or.

¹⁷ According to Stenning and Chilton’s Targum (Ⓣ) translations, “with the measure you were measuring with.”

they shall measure unto thee.¹⁸ The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Having fought and disgraced them he will let them go.” The Peshitta (Ⲫ) renders it, “With that measure with which he has measured you, so judge him (BPE) / you will judge him (Lamsa).” The Douay-Rheims (ⲫ) has, “In measure against measure, when it shall be cast off, thou shalt judge it.” ¶ In measure. Nägelsbach explains: “מִסָּאָה is by all means a definite measure of grain, and according to the statements of the ancients, the third part of an ephah. But this signification suits admirably. The translation in measure is of course not literal. It should be: with a measure of a מִסָּאָה by putting away thou punishest her. The meaning accordingly is that the Lord ordains only a small measureful of punishment for Israel... the expression ‘small measure’ involves necessarily the idea of clemency.” Wesley says, “In measure—With moderation.” Barnes has in part: “The word used here is probably a contraction of מִסָּאָה סָאָה literally, ‘measure by measure,’ i: e., ‘moderately,’ or in moderation. So the rabbis generally understand it. The idea is ‘small measure by small measure,’ not a large measure at a time; or, in other words, moderately, or in moderation. It refers, I suppose, to the fact that in inflicting judgment on his people, it had not been done with intolerable severity. The calamity had not been so overwhelming as entirely to cut them off, but had been tempered with mercy.” Calvin quotes Jeremiah, “O LORD, correct me, but with judgment” (Jeremiah 10:24a). ¶ When it shooteth forth. The margin ||, rather, renders it, “when thou sendest her¹⁹ forth.” Kaiser says, this is “the image of the driving out of a woman.” Cowles’ says, “‘In sending her (i.e., his people) away,’ ...the word being admirably taken out of the legal phrase for divorcing, putting away, an unfaithful wife.” This notion of sending away or sending to exile is found in most modern translations of בְּשִׁלְחָהּ. We have this same expression in ISAIAH 50:1, שְׁלַחְתִּיהָ, from (שָׁלַח, “to dismiss, send away” HALOT). ISAIAH 50:1 reads: “Thus saith the LORD, Where is the bill of your mother’s divorcement, whom I have put away (שְׁלַחְתִּיהָ)? or which of my creditors is it to whom I have sold you? Behold, for your iniquities have ye sold yourselves, and for your transgressions is your mother put away (שְׁלַחְתִּיהָ).” Jeremiah, returning to the notion in ISAIAH 27:7, and the notion of in measure, greatly clarifies this passage—in terms of how the Lord treats His people in contrast to her enemies: “Fear thou not, O Jacob my servant, saith the LORD: for I am with thee; for I will make a full end of all the nations whither I have driven thee: but I will not make a full end of thee, but correct thee in measure (לְמִשְׁפָּט) from שָׁפַט, to judge); yet will I not leave thee wholly unpunished” (Jeremiah 46:28, also see Jeremiah 30:11). A similar sentiment is found in Psalm 118:18, “The LORD hath chastened me sore: but he hath not given me over unto death.” Jennings says: “... we must bear in mind the peculiar place that people [Israel] has amid the nations of the earth. It is the only one with which He has entered into a blood-based covenant relationship, as He says: ‘You only have I known of all the families of the earth: therefore I will punish you for all your iniquities.’ (Amos 3:2); that is, I will chasten you because I take a tender interest in you as a father in the child he punishes.” ¶ Thou wilt debate. As Wesley and others explain, contend תִּתְּרִיבְנָה. I particularly like the translation: “Thou didst contend with them by banishing them, by driving them away” (NAS77). The Lord, out of love, only exacted the smallest consequence that would lead Israel to be reformed. And He did this little by little, measure by measure. At the end, because Israel would not be easily corrected, the Lord had to send her away as an unfaithful wife. Even so, in the latter-days he would take her back in forgiveness. ¶ He stayeth his rough wind in the day of the east wind. Wade, Young and others make mention this wind as the Sirocco. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “Thou didst send forth and oppress them. He meditated a word against them. He prevailed (or, ‘was angry’) against them in the day of wrath. The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Thou hast not been visiting with this severe wind, to destroy them utterly with a blast of anger.” The Peshitta (Ⲫ) renders it, “According to that which his violent spirit has devised in the day of commotion (BPE) / in fierce anger on a day of blasting heat (Lamsa). The Douay-Rheims (ⲫ) has, “He hath meditated with his severe spirit in the day of heat.” The Geneva Bible notes have: “That is, you will not destroy the root of your Church, though the branches of it seem to perish by the sharp wind of affliction.” So also Wesley, who says, stayeth, thus “mitigate[ing] the severity of the judgment.” HALOT instead suggests that הִנָּה means drive away. Most translate this clause similarly to Geneva, “When he bloweth with his rough winde in the day of the East winde,” or ASV, “He hath removed them with his rough blast in the day of the east wind.” That is, the Lord sent Israel away with His strong wind. It was through the power of an east wind that the Lord was able to make a way for the escape of the children of Israel. “And Moses stretched out his hand over the sea; and the LORD caused the sea to go back by a strong east wind all that night, and made the sea dry land, and the waters were divided” (Exodus 14:21, see also Genesis 41:6; Job 27:21; Jeremiah

¹⁸ The Targum (Ⲯ) seems to have the sense of Matthew 7:2, “For with what judgment ye judge, ye shall be judged: and with what measure ye mete, it shall be measured to you again.”

¹⁹ בְּשִׁלְחָהּ. [“driving her away” (HCSB); “Thou sendest her away” (RV, JPS); “by sending her away” (LITV).]

18:17; Ezekiel 17:10; Hosea 13:15; Jonah 4:8). We also read how personal an act this was: “And with the blast of thy nostrils the waters were gathered together, the floods stood upright as an heap, and the depths were congealed in the heart of the sea” (Exodus 15:8). Gill has, “When afflictions, like a blustering and blasting east wind, threaten much mischief, and to carry all before them, Jehovah, from whom they have their commission, and who holds the winds in his fist, represses them, stops the violence of them, and gradually abates the force of them, and quite stills them, when they have answered the end for which they are sent.” Calvin says, “We know that each country has its own particular wind that is injurious to it.” As I read this, a radio ad has been playing about the Mahan caused by the Santa Ana winds of Southern California.²⁰

9 By this therefore shall the iniquity of Jacob be purged; and this [is] all the fruit to take away his sin; when he maketh all the stones of the altar as chalkstones that are beaten in sunder, the groves and images[✓] shall not stand up.

✓ or, sun images

By this therefore shall the iniquity of Jacob be purged. The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “By means of this the iniquity of Jacob will be removed.” The Peshitta (ܣ) uses the term forgive rather than purge. The Douay-Rheims (Ⲱ) has, “Therefore upon this shall the iniquity of the house of Jacob be forgiven.” For יָכַפֵּר, purged, HALOT has to atone, from the root כָּפַר (also see Horsley, LHI, ISV). So we read, “Therefore by this the guilt of Jacob will be atoned for, and this will be the full fruit of the removal of his sin &c.” (ESV). Gill explains: “Not that afflictions are atonements for sin, or give satisfaction to divine justice for it; but they are the means of bringing the Lord’s people to a sense of their sins, and to repentance and humiliation for them, and confession of them ...” Young says (regarding יָכַפֵּר), “As may be seen by a comparison with ISAIAH 6:7²¹, this word really means expiated or atoned. At the same time, the present context shows that it is here employed by metonymy for the effect, namely, purification or purgation. The thought is found also in Proverbs 16:6, ‘By mercy and truth iniquity is purged: and by the fear of the LORD men depart from evil.’ In other words, the prophet is not stating that the exile provided an atonement for the iniquity of Israel, but merely that by means of the exile, there was purification.” Wordsworth speaks about this purging by quoting Zechariah: “And I will bring the third part through the fire, and will refine them as silver is refined, and will try them as gold is tried: they shall call on my name, and I will hear them: I will say, It is my people: and they shall say, The LORD is my God” (Zechariah 13:9, emphasis added). ¶ And this [is] all the fruit to take away his sin. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “And thus it shall be with all the works of the perverseness of their sins.” The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “And this will be to him a subject of thanksgiving, when I take away his sin.” The Peshitta (ܣ) has, “With all this fruit his sin will be removed.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲱ) has, “And this is all the fruit, that the sin thereof should be taken away.” In ISAIAH 5:5 the Lord takes away [יִסְרֹף] the protective hedge from Israel; here, He takes away [יִסְרֹף] Israel’s sin. Horsley translates this verse as follows: “Yet with all this, the iniquity of Jacob shall be expiated, And this is the whole fruit, the removal of his sin. When he maketh all the stones of the altar as fine dust, The groves and the images, being broken to pieces, shall rise no more ... The end and purpose and the effect of all God’s judgments will be the recovery of his people from their sin.” ¶ When he maketh all the stones of the altar as chalkstones that are beaten in sunder, the groves and images shall not stand up. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “Namely, that they shall make all the stones of the (idolatrous) altar like chalk stones that are beaten asunder; the groves and the sun-images shall not be raised up again.” The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “When they grind to powder all the hewn stones of their altars, and their groves no longer remain, and their idols hack’d to pieces like a forest are far away.” The Peshitta (ܣ) has pulverized (BPE) / broken in pieces for “beaten in sunder.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲱ) has, “When he shall have made all the stones of the altar, as burnt stones broken in pieces, the groves and temples shall not stand.” The ASV has a more literal rendition: “that he maketh all the stones of the altar as chalkstones that are beaten in sunder, so that the Asherim [אַשְׁרִים]²² and the sun-images shall rise no more.” Horsley writes: “When he maketh] At the same time that the temple of Jerusalem and its altar are demolished, idolatry with that very event shall receive its mortal wound.” Alexander—even though he does not agree with it himself—says: “Some refer the suffix in בְּשׁוֹמוֹ [KJV, when he maketh, LHI breaks down as when make him, בְּ שֵׁם הָאֵל] to Jehovah, or to the enemy, and the whole clause to his demolition of the altar at the conquest of Jerusalem.” I like what Horsley²³ has to say in that it becomes clear that “When he maketh all the stones of the altar as chalkstones that are beaten in sunder.” Most exegetes attribute this to Judah destroying her own altars.²⁴ Rather, the effect of the destruction of the temple in Jerusalem would bring about Judah’s rejection of her idols. Only after the temple is pulverized do we have the desired reform: “The groves and images shall not stand up” anymore. Judah indeed realized that she could not lean on her אֲשֵׁרִים after the first temple was destroyed (at the time they were carried captive into Babylon). The notion of this verse is not that Judah would show her repentance by pulverizing her idols as most have supposed, but rather, after the altar of the temple²⁵ and the temple itself where pulverized, then Judah would realize that she could not lean of her Asherim or other idols—whether those made out of wood, or those related to apostate religion. Gill has, “The sin of idolatry seems to be particularly designed by what follows; unless the sin of the present Jews, in their disbelief and rejection of the Messiah, should be rather intended; which, through their long affliction, they will be convinced of in the latter day, and it will be taken away from them, and be purged and expiated through the atoning sacrifice of Christ, the Saviour and Deliverer, they will embrace (Romans 11:25).”

²⁰ In Wikipedia we read: “The Santa Ana winds are strong, extremely dry offshore winds that affect coastal Southern California and northern Baja California in autumn and winter. They can range from hot to cold, depending on the prevailing temperatures in the source regions, the Great Basin and upper Mojave Desert. The winds are known for the hot dry weather (often the hottest of the year) that they bring in the fall, and are infamous for fanning regional wildfires.” (URL accessed 25 April 2012).

²¹ יָכַפֵּר, “And he laid it upon my mouth, and said, Lo, this hath touched thy lips; and thine iniquity is taken away, and thy sin purged” (ISAIAH 6:7).

²² Many of the exegetes reject chapters or portions of chapters of Isaiah as being part of what Isaiah wrote. Here, Even Cheyne, considered among the critics, ridicules the possibility of this chapter coming from someone in a later time period: “That Ashérâhs...” The mention of the symbols of Ashérâh is not what we should expect from a writer living during the Babylonian exile.”

²³ Also, apparently, Gesenius (see Henderson).

²⁴ As Wordsworth well points out, this did happen during the time of Josiah, where “in his Reformation ... he brake down the idolatrous images (2 Kings 23:6; 7–14; 2 Chronicles 34:3–7). This, however, was a very temporary reformation that only lasted a few years and it took place a few decades before the Babylonian captivity.

²⁵ One of the altars in Solomon’s temple was made out of bronze, and the other out of stone (1906 Jewish Encyclopedia, Altar, מִזְבֵּחַ): “The chief Altar of the temple was ever ... of stone. Upon this Altar the daily sacrifices were offered thereafter, while the bronze Altar was reserved for the king. This stone Altar is called ‘the great Altar’ (2 Kings 16:15).” And also of interest: “Both Josephus and the Mishna state that the altar [in Herod’s temple] was built of unhewn stones.” Delitzsch explains under ISAIAH 33:12—the effects of “the totality of the destruction: they will be so completely burned up, that nothing but ashes will be left, like the lump of lime left at the burning of lime.”

10 Yet the defenced city [shall be] desolate, [and] the habitation forsaken, and left like a wilderness: there shall the calf feed, and there shall he lie down, and consume the branches thereof.

Yet the defenced city [shall be] desolate, [and] the habitation forsaken, and left like a wilderness: The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “But the city that was fortified shall sit solitary: she shall totter, and be forsaken like a desert.” The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “The folded flock shall be disconsolate, like a flock which hath been forsaken.” The Peshitta (Ⲫ) has fortified city (BPE) / strong city for defensed city. The Douay-Rheims (Ⲫ) has, “For the strong city shall be desolate, the beautiful city shall be forsaken, and shall be left as a wilderness.” Rather than yet, ASV, HCSB, LITV, NASB, YLT and many others translate כִּי as for. Wesley has: “Yet—Yet before this glorious promise be fulfilled, a dreadful and desolating judgment shall come. The city—Jerusalem and the rest of the defenced cities in the land.” There would be more than one total desolation of Jerusalem. ¶ There shall the calf feed, and there shall he lie down, and consume the branches thereof. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “The just shall wage war against her, and plunder her treasures, and make an end of her hosts, so that none shall go forth.” The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “And for a long time the country shall be for a pasture, and flocks shall there take their rest.” Instead of branches the Peshitta (Ⲫ) has grass (Lamsa) / tender grass (BPE). The Douay-Rheims (Ⲫ) has, “There the calf shall feed, and there shall he lie down, and shall consume its branches.” Delitzsch says, “So desolate does Jerusalem lie, that in the very spot which once swarmed with men a calf now quietly eats the green foliage of the bushes that grow between the ruins.” The idea of a desolate city being represented as only good for animal pasture is also found in ISAIAH 7:25, Ezekiel 25:5; Zephaniah 2:14–14 and elsewhere.

11 When the boughs thereof are withered, they shall be broken off: the women come, [and] set them on fire: for it [is] a people of no understanding: therefore he that made them will not have mercy on them, and he that formed them will shew them no favour.

When the boughs thereof are withered, they shall be broken off: The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “Their armies shall be cut off; and they shall be confounded on account of their works, which shall be broken.” The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “And after a time there will be no verdure in it, by reason of its being parched up.” The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “Its harvest shall be destroyed with drought.” This verse may, in part, be an allusion to ISAIAH 18:5 where we read: “For afore the harvest, when the bud is perfect, and the sour grape is ripening in the flower, he shall both cut off the sprigs with pruning hooks, and take away [and] cut down the branches.” But in this verse, why are the branches withered? Perhaps, from lack of care, the vine is now dead and the branches are simply snapped off, and not the branches only, but the whole vine makes for magnificent fire wood. Grapevine wood are especially good to give warmth but not for much else.²⁶ Yet another figure used in Holy Writ is that of a pruned vine, where the branches cannot sustain life and are ready to be burnt when separated from Christ: “I am the true vine, and my Father is the husbandman. Every branch in me that beareth not fruit he taketh away: and every branch that beareth fruit, he purgeth it, that it may bring forth more fruit. Now ye are clean through the word which I have spoken unto you. Abide in me, and I in you. As the branch cannot bear fruit of itself, except it abide in the vine; no more can ye, except ye abide in me. I am the vine, ye are the branches: He that abideth in me, and I in him, the same bringeth forth much fruit: for without me ye can do nothing. If a man abide not in me, he is cast forth as a branch, and is withered; and men gather them, and cast them into the fire, and they are burned” (John 15:1–6). These prunings are sometimes taken to homes to burn, and are sometimes burned by the side of the vineyard. ¶ Jenour says, “This passage illustrates the meaning of our Lord’s words, Luke 23:31. ‘If, says he, they do these things in a green tree, what shall be done in the dry?’ That is, if my heavenly Father permits me, who am holy and innocent, to suffer such things, what shall be done to Jerusalem and its inhabitants who, because of their sins, are fitted for destruction, as a dry and rotten tree is fit only to be burnt?” Faussett has: “Boughs ... broken off—so the Jews are called (Romans 11:17, 19–20).” And not the Jews only, but all of the house of Israel. ¶ The women come, [and] set them on fire: for it [is] a people of no understanding: The Targum (T) has, “Women shall enter the house of their idolatry, and teach them, because they are a people of no understanding.” The LXX (G) reads, “O ye women who are coming from a goddess attend! For this is not a people, who have understanding.” The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “Women shall come and teach it: for it is not a wise people.” Redak suggests that Israel is the people of no understanding because of their apostasy (in Rabbi Rosenberg). Alexander says, “Women are mentioned, not in allusion to [their weakness], but because the gathering of firewood in the East is the work of women and children.” ¶ For it [is] a people of no understanding [כִּי לֹא עָם בִּינּוּת]. Rawlinson has: “It was folly, madness, to turn away from Jehovah, and go after other gods. Only through having ‘no understanding’ could Israel have been so foolish. (compare Deuteronomy 32:28; 2 Kings 17:15; Jeremiah 4:22).” This is similar the complaint of ISAIAH 1:3, “The ox knoweth his owner, and the ass his master’s crib: but Israel doth not know, my people doth not consider.” Also, a similar sentiment is expressed through the writings of Jeremiah: “Hear now this, O foolish people, and without understanding; which have eyes, and see not; which have ears, and hear not” (Jeremiah 5:21). Wildberger says, “In this context, בִּינָה (insight) must be interpreted in a religious sense ... this people can be said to have departed from knowledge of God and from the fear of God. The inhabitants of the city do not understand God’s ways and are not aware of what his promises are all about.” ¶ Therefore he that made them will not have mercy on them, and he that formed them will shew them no favour. The Targum (T) has, “Therefore He that made them shall not have mercy on them, and he that created them shall show them no favour.” The LXX (G) reads, “Therefore he who made them will not have pity on them; nor will he who formed them shew them any favour.” The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “Therefore he that made it, shall not have mercy on it: and he that formed it, shall not spare it.” This is of the broken off wood that will not hold on to the Savior.

²⁶ This idea is made manifest in Ezekiel: “And the word of the LORD came unto me, saying, Son of man, what is the vine tree more than any tree, or than a branch which is among the trees of the forest? Shall wood be taken thereof to do any work? or will men take a pin of it to hang any vessel thereon? Behold, it is cast into the fire for fuel; the fire devoureth both the ends of it, and the midst of it is burned. Is it meet for any work? Behold, when it was whole, it was meet for no work: how much less shall it be meet yet for any work, when the fire hath devoured it, and it is burned? Therefore thus saith the Lord God; As the vine tree among the trees of the forest, which I have given to the fire for fuel, so will I give the inhabitants of Jerusalem. And I will set my face against them; they shall go out from one fire, and another fire shall devour them; and ye shall know that I am the LORD, when I set my face against them. And I will make the land desolate, because they have committed a trespass, saith the Lord God” (Ezekiel 15:1–8). In this verse Ezekiel speaks of the vine-tree עֵץ־הַנֶּחֱסֵן (some translate as grapevine (AMP, CEV, ERV), as do most Spanish translators (who use vid, a word associated with the grapevine, cultivated or wild). Since one cannot say that grapevines are useless, perhaps it is speaking of the wild grapevine or other vines that do not produce edible fruit) and contrasts it to the wood cuttings (See Gesenius and HALOT, זֶמֶר) of the trees of the forest (הָעֵצִים הַיְּבֵשִׁים). The latter are useful while the cuttings of the vines are only good for burning. Grapevine branches are only useful while they are attached to the living plant (or when they are used as scions for plant propagation).

12 And it shall come to pass in that day, [that] the LORD shall beat off from the channel of the river unto the stream of Egypt, and ye shall be gathered one by one, O ye children of Israel.

And it shall come to pass in that day, [that] the LORD shall beat off from the channel of the river unto the stream of Egypt. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “And it shall come to pass at that time, that the slain of the Lord shall be cast from the bank of the river Euphrates into the river of Egypt.” The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “But it shall come to pass in that day, that God will hedge them about from the channel of the river even to Rinocorouron.” The Peshitta (Ⲫ) has, for the second clause, “shall stir up the people (Lamsa) / shall thresh from the fountain or head (BPE) of the river Euphrates (Lamsa) / river (BPE) to the river of Egypt (Lamsa) / torrent of Egypt (BPE). The Douay-Rheims (Ⲫ) has, “And it shall come to pass, that in that day the Lord will strike from the channel of the river even to the torrent of Egypt.” In the DSS 1QIsa^a (Ⲫ) we have the masculine for channel {flow (Gesenius) / floodwaters (LHI)} מִשְׁבַּל, while the Masoretic text (Ⲫ) has the feminine ending, מִשְׁבַּלִּית.

As usual, HA-NAHAR, נַחַר, or the river, stands for Euphrates. Regarding Egypt, Wade speaks of the prophecy’s earlier fulfillment, “Jews took refuge in Egypt after the capture of Jerusalem in 587; and their numbers eventually increased so greatly that a translation of the Hebrew scriptures [the LXX Ⲯ] was required to meet their needs, and was begun in the reign of Ptolemy Philadelphus (285–246).” Regarding ISAIAH 27:12–13, Skinner writes: “A prophecy of the restoration of the dispersed of Israel.” The whole idea is for a large harvest, and this is made easier to understand by some of the other translations: “And it shall come to pass in that day, that Jehovah will beat off his fruit from the flood of the River unto the brook of Egypt” (ASV); “And it shall be in that day that the Lord will thresh out His grain from the flood of the River [Euphrates] to the Brook of Egypt” (AMP); “And in that day shall the Lorde make a threshing, from the midst of the riuer Euphrates, vnto the riuer of Egypt” (Bishops); “And in that day shall the Lord thresh from the chanell of the Riuer vnto the riuer of Egypt” (Geneva). Delitzsch has: “The Euphrates and the brook of Egypt, i.e., the Wady el-Arish, were the north-eastern and south-western boundaries of the land of Israel, according to the original promise (Genesis 15:18; 1Kings 8:65).” This is indeed an interesting expression, as it leaves no doubt that it is Israel that is being gathered. The land mentioned is given as symbolism for every corner of the earth. Indeed, the promise was made in such places as Deuteronomy 30:1–6; ISAIAH 11:12 and Ezekiel 37:15–28, that Israel would be gathered. The gathering of Israel is one of the most sublime and constant messages of the Old Testament. Redak here sees an allusion to the gathering of the Lost Tribes as well as Judah and Benjamin (in Rabbi Rosenberg). ¶ Beating, יִחַבֵּט.

Some translators have focused on the harvest of grains motif and thus utilize words like threshing and winnowing for translating יִחַבֵּט (from חָבַט), e.g.,

Ruth 2:17, יִחַבֵּט (יִחַבֵּט). Wesley explains: “[Beating] is a metaphor from grain which was beaten out with a rod or staff, and then carefully gathered and laid up.” Others have suggested the harvest of fruit, such as grapes or olives (Deuteronomy 24:20; ISAIAH 17:6; 24:13) and thus speak of picking or beating these off the trees.

Cheyne explains that the word beating יִחַבֵּט suggests “a more careful plan than threshing.” This is indeed a beautiful sentiment, as the idea is that every individual in a very personal way will receive a warning voice and an invitation to embrace the Gospel of Jesus Christ. Barnes has: “The use of these words here shows that the image is taken from the act of collecting fruit or grain after harvest; and the expression means, that as the farmer gathers in his fruit, so God would gather in his people. In the figure, it is supposed that the garden or vineyard of Yahweh extends from the Euphrates to the Nile; that his people are scattered in all that country; that there shall be agitation or a shaking in all that region as when a farmer beats off his fruit from the tree, or beats out his grain; and that the result would be that all those scattered people would be gathered into their own land.” Gill writes: “alluding either to the beating off of fruit from a tree, or to the beating out of grain from the ear; and signifies the separating of the Lord’s people in the effectual calling from the rest of the world; as the fruit beaten off is separated from the tree, and corn beaten out is separated from the ear and chaff; for this beating off does not intend judgment, but mercy; and is done not by the rod of affliction, but by the rod of the Lord’s strength sent out of Zion, even the Gospel, the power of God to salvation; which, in the ministration of it.” Amos has, “For, lo, I will command, and I will sift the house of Israel among all nations, like as corn²⁷ is sifted in a sieve, yet shall not the least grain fall upon the earth” (Amos 9:9).²⁸ These are them that leave Babylon and enter Zion or The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. ¶ And ye shall be gathered one by one, O ye children of Israel. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “And ye shall be brought near one to the other (or, ‘one to the side of the other’), O ye sons of Israel.” The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “Therefore gather ye the sons of Israel together one by one.” The BPE (Ⲫ) follows the ²⁷ Not maize, but rather grains.

²⁸ Faussett explains this verse in Amos: “I will cause the Israelites to be tossed about through all nations as corn is shaken about in a sieve, in such a way, however, that while the chaff and dust (the wicked) fall through (perish), all the solid grains (the godly elect) remain (are preserved), (Romans 11:26; compare Note, see on Jeremiah 3:14).”

Masoretic text (מ) while Lamsa (ס) instead of gathered one by one renders it gathered one to another. The Douay-Rheims (D) has, “And you shall be gathered together one by one, O ye children of Israel.” Regarding לְאֶחָד אֶחָד, one by one, several translations have been proposed, but the best is that we have in the Authorized Version, or as Calvin explains: “I will gather you, not in companies nor in great numbers, but one after another.” Young has, “The gathering will not be by a mighty influx, but one by one.” Elder McConkie explained: “Israel—his chosen ones—shall be gathered in from their long dispersion; though they have been scattered in all the nations of the earth, yet they shall come out of darkness into the marvelous light of Christ when the Lord raises an ensign to the nations. ‘Ye shall be gathered one by one, O ye children of Israel . . . and shall worship the Lord in the holy mount at Jerusalem.’ (ISAIAH 27:12–13)”²⁹ ¶ The Bible is full of promises about this Holy gathering (see Rain in Due Season introduction). And so is the Book of Mormon: “And then shall the remnants, which shall be scattered abroad upon the face of the earth, be gathered in from the east and from the west, and from the south and from the north; and they shall be brought to the knowledge of the Lord their God, who hath redeemed them” (3 Nephi 20:11–13, see also Zechariah 8:7–8). Furthermore we read: “And I will remember the covenant which I have made with my people [now speaking of Judah]; and I have covenanted with them that I would gather them together in mine own due time, that I would give unto them again the land of their fathers for their inheritance, which is the land of Jerusalem, which is the promised land unto them forever, saith the Father” (3 Nephi 20:29).

13 And it shall come to pass in that day, [that] the great trumpet shall be blown, and they shall come which were ready to perish in the land of Assyria, and the outcasts in the land of Egypt, and shall worship the LORD in the holy mount at Jerusalem.

And it shall come to pass in that day, [that] the great trumpet shall be blown. The LXX (G) reads, “And it shall come to pass in that day, that the great trumpet shall be sounded.” The Douay-Rheims (D) has, “And it shall come to pass, that in that day a noise shall be made with a great trumpet.” Barnes writes: “This verse is designed to describe in another mode the same fact as that stated in ISAIAH 27:12, that Yahweh would recollect his scattered people.” Gill says regarding the first part of this clause, וְהָיָה בַּיּוֹם, “When the Lord is about to do the above things... The Talmudists (T. Bab. Sanhedrin, fol. 110. 2. Midrash Kohelet. fol. 68. 3.) apply this text to the world to come, or times of the Messiah, when the ten tribes shall be returned.” ¶ Great trumpet, בְּשׁוֹפָר גָּדוֹל. Or rather, with great shofar, or ram’s horn. This is the same shofar (שׁוֹפָר, or trumpet) we read about in ISAIAH 18:3 where dispersed Israel is called to return unto the Lord: “All ye inhabitants of the world, and dwellers on the earth, see ye, when he lifteth up an ensign on the mountains; and when he bloweth a trumpet, hear ye.” Kimhi says, “The blowing of the shofar is a signal for assembly and return to God” (in Slotki/Rosenberg). Jennings points us to Matthew 24:31, calling all her outcasts back: “And He shall send forth His angels with a great sound of a trumpet, and they shall gather together His elect from the four winds, and from one end of heaven to the other.” Faussett has: “great trumpet—image from the trumpets blown on the first day of the seventh month to summon the people to a holy convocation (Leviticus 23:24). Antitypically, the gospel trumpet (Revelation 11:15; 14:6³⁰) which the Jews shall hearken to in the last days (Zechariah 12:10; 13:1).” In Matthew 24:31 we observe: “And he shall send his angels with a great sound of a trumpet, and they shall gather together his elect from the four winds, from one end of heaven to the other.” ¶ Now this is an interesting relation I will share here. I attended a fireside where we heard Sarah Grimes speak to the Modesto 12th Spanish Branch upon returning from the Osorno, Chile Mission (April 2012). She related to us a story about a convert she knew who had frequent visits from an angel with a trumpet in his mouth. When she received the lessons from the Elders, they showed her a copy of the Book of Mormon—the one that has angel Moroni blowing a trumpet. She asked in surprise, “What are you doing with my angel?” After gaining a testimony of the one and true Church she never saw those apparitions again. ¶ And they shall come which were ready to perish in the land of Assyria, and the outcasts in the land of Egypt. These lands are outside what was mentioned as the land proper to be inherited by Israel and thus represents the idea of gathering from the four quarters of the earth (see ISAIAH 27:12). The Targum (T) seems a clearer continuation of the Masoretic (M) text here, with strong allusions to the gathering of the Lost Tribes: “And they shall come, who had gone into captivity in the land of Assyria, and those who were cast into the land of Egypt.” The LXX (G) reads, “And those shall come who are perishing in the land of Assyria, and they who are perishing in ²⁹ McConkie, Bruce R. The Mortal Messiah: From Bethlehem to Calvary, 4:350.

³⁰ Angel Moroni, also quoted earlier in this chapter.

Egypt.” The Peshitta (S) has instead of perish in the land of Assyria, scattered (Lamsa) / dispersed (BPE) in the land of Assyria; and instead of outcasts in the land of Egypt, lost (Lamsa) / disappeared (BPE) in the land of Egypt. The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “And they that were lost, shall come from the land of the Assyrians, and they that were outcasts in the land of Egypt.” ¶ So why is Asshur (אַשּׁוּר, i.e., Assyria) mentioned here instead of Babylon? Because it would be the ten tribes that would be gathered one by one, and it was Assyria who took them away captive; while Judah was taken captive by Babylon. Judah, in contrast, would be restored in a day. This will happen at the time when Judah will look at Him whom they have pierced and recognize the promised Messiah (Zechariah 13:6). ¶ In the Bishops Bible we have, “In that day shall the great trumpe be blowne, so that they which were lost in the lande of Assyria &c.” Also see ABP {LXX (G)}, AMP, DRB, ESV, HCSB, JPS, LBP). Others have those wondering (BBE), dragged away (CEV) and exile[d] (GNB). All make the allusion to the scattering of Israel clear. Gray says, regarding הָאֲבָדִים, “away from home in a strange and unfamiliar land,” and translates Ezekiel 34:4b–5a, “The outcast (הַגִּבְרִית) ye brought not back (home), and the lost (הָאֲבָדִים) ye sought not, and they were scattered from having no shepherd, and became food for all the beasts of the field,” and continues with Ezekiel 34:12–16, “As a shepherd seeketh out his flock..., so will I seek out my sheep, and rescue them from all the places wither they have been scattered; and I will bring them out from all the peoples, and collect them from all the lands, and bring them to their ground (KJV has, and gather them from the countries, and will bring them to their own land); and I will feed them on the mountains of Israel. There shall they lie down in a good home-stead ... I myself will feed my flock, and I will cause them to lie down.... The lost (הָאֲבָדִים) I will seek, and the outcast (הַגִּבְרִית) will I bring back (home).” Hosea, in regards to Ephraim, or the northern tribes, says: “O Israel [speaking of Ephraim in contraposition to Judah], return unto the LORD thy God; for thou hast fallen by thine iniquity [Ephraim is invited to return, or repent]. Take with you words, and turn to the LORD: say unto him, Take away all iniquity, and receive us graciously: so will we render the calves of our lips. [Ephraim recognizes her faults and asks for forgiveness] Asshur shall not save us [אַשּׁוּר, Asshur, that is Assyria, Ephraim now recognizes, will not be able to save her—another form of idolatry is leaning on strong nations rather than on the Lord]; we will not ride upon horses [another allusion, as horses stand for strength, Ephraim recognizes that she cannot lean upon horses any more than she can lean upon Asshur]: neither will we say any more to the work of our hands, Ye are our gods [Ephraim recognizes that her idol gods can do nothing for her]: for in thee the fatherless findeth mercy [Ephraim represents herself as the fatherless here, and recognizes that her only true strength comes from the Lord]. I will heal their backsliding, I will love them freely: for mine anger is turned away from him. [The Lord is here accepting of Ephraim’s repentance] I will be as the dew unto Israel: he shall grow as the lily, and cast forth his roots as Lebanon. [A horticultural figure is given both as Israel putting forth roots and the Lord watering her with daily dew or care] His branches shall spread, and his beauty shall be as the olive tree, and his smell as Lebanon. [Ephraim shall greatly grow and give much fruit] They that dwell under his shadow shall return [this particular shadow seems to be the one offered by the Lord to those who return—and also seems to represent the shadow of protection offered by His Church through Ephraim, to the rest of the tribes of Israel, in the last days]; they shall revive as the corn, and grow as the vine: the scent thereof shall be as the wine of Lebanon. [Representing the blessings and fruitfulness of those who turn to Christ and live] Ephraim shall say, What have I to do any more with idols? [All sort of idols are rejected, those of wood and all others, ready to make peace with the Lord (see ISAIAH 27:5)] I have heard him, and observed him: I am like a green fir tree. From me is thy fruit found. [Representing the Savior, or the green tree] Who is wise, and he shall understand these things? prudent, and he shall know them? [the lack of understanding of former days is gone] for the ways of the LORD are right, and the just shall walk in them: but the transgressors shall fall therein.” (Hosea 14:1–9). ¶ And Keith makes comment much like mine, about ISAIAH 27:12–13: “It is ... of the ten tribes of Israel that the text seems specially to speak; it is of them that it is said that their return will be one by one.” ¶ And shall worship the LORD in the holy mount at Jerusalem [בְּהַר הַקֹּדֶשׁ בִּירוּשָׁלַם]. The LXX (G) reads, “And shall bow themselves down before the Lord, on this holy mountain in Jerusalem.” The Douay-Rheims (V) has adore instead of its synonym, worship. Once again we must turn to ISAIAH 18, and its most triumphal verse: “In that time shall the present be brought unto the LORD of hosts of a people scattered and peeled, and from a people terrible from their beginning hitherto; a nation meted out and trodden under foot, whose land the rivers have spoiled, to the place of the name of the LORD of hosts, the mount Zion” (ISAIAH 18:7). This stands for Israel being gathered to the holy temples, including Judah’s gathering to the House of the Lord that once again will be built in Jerusalem. “This is the great and central purpose of the return,” Young explains. “It is that the dispersed ones may worship the Lord.” The return will be both a physical and a spiritual phenomenon. Barnes writes: “Their temple shall be rebuilt; their city shall be restored; and in the place where their fathers worshipped shall they also again adore the living God. This closes the prophecy which was commenced in ISAIAH 24; and the design of the whole is to comfort the Jews with the assurance, that though they were to be made captive in a distant land, yet they would be again restored to the land of their fathers, and again worship God there.”

30 April 2011

Isaiah 28

ISAIAH 28 and 29 are intimately connected. Ephraim is drunk—but not just with wine or hard liquor (ISAIAH 29:9)—but with false doctrine. ISAIAH 28 has dual fulfillments, both to the children of Israel living at the time of Isaiah and shortly thereafter, as well as to the latter days. The Lord would deal with both Ephraim and Judah in His own wise way, as mentioned by Kay, for He “is wonderful in counsel, and excellent in working” (ISAIAH 28:29). Various references to the Messiah are found here as well as to the restoration of the Gospel of Jesus Christ. The Lord gives more knowledge to those who accept what has already been given to them. Great calamities will threaten the earth in the last days. Spiritual bondage comes to those who will not accept the peace the Lord offers through His Gospel. A parable of a planter is given to show how the Lord will correct as needed, in order to guide His children back to the truth.

vv. 1-8. Ephraim is drunk. In former times it would be through the instrumentality of Asshur that Ephraim would be castigated. When it comes to crowns, the only true crown would be that of the Savior. After a rejoicing thought about the Messiah, Isaiah turns his attention to the calamities to befall Judah.

1 ¶ WOE to the crown of pride, to the drunkards of Ephraim, whose glorious beauty [is] a fading flower, which [are] on the head of the fat valleys of them that are overcome ✓ with wine!

✓ broken

WOE to the crown of pride, to the drunkards of Ephraim, whose glorious beauty [is] a fading flower. The Targum (ⓧ) has, “Woe that he gave a crown to the proud and foolish prince of Israel, and that he gave a diadem to the wicked of the house of the sanctuary of His praise.” The LXX (ⓖ) reads, “Ah! the crown of haughtiness! The mercenaries of Ephraim! That flower which hath fallen from the glory” The Peshitta (Ⓢ) has, for the final clause, “the shameful diadem of the strength (Lamsa) / power (BPE) of his glory (Lamsa) / boasting (BPE).” The Douay-Rheims (Ⓟ) has, for the last clause, “And to the fading flower the glory of his joy.” LHI here translates אִי as Ah! (see ISAIAH 18).

This concept of a fading flower is developed to its ultimate beauty in ISAIAH 40:6–8, where the glory of man—or a fading flower—is contrasted to the glory of the Lord Jesus Christ. The glorious beauty of Ephraim is nothing but temporal and fleeting. In ISAIAH 28:7 we see that all have given themselves to drunkenness. Rawlinson has, “The ‘drunkards of Ephraim,’ or of the ten tribes, were at once intoxicated with wine (Amos 4:1; 6:6) and with pride (Amos 6:13). As the external aspect of affairs grew more and more threatening through the advances of Tiglath-Pileser and

Shalmaneser, they gave themselves up more and more to self-indulgence and luxury, lay upon beds of ivory, drank wine from bowls, feasted to the sound of the viol, and even invented fresh instruments of music (Amos 6:4–5). At the same time, they said in their hearts, ‘Have we not taken by our own strength?’ (Amos 6:13). They persisted in regarding themselves as secure, when even ordinary political foresight might have seen that their end was approaching.” ¶ This drunkenness, as we have already pointed out, is not just the imbibing of alcohol but also the drinking in of false doctrines. Ironside says, “Drunkenness, in Scripture, is often used to illustrate or represent the effects of spiritual intoxication brought about by refusing obedience to the Word of the Lord and giving heed to false teaching.” Jennings wrote of his fellow religious professors: “It is ever the characteristic mark of the ‘last days;’ so today, under cover of a formal religion called ‘church-membership,’ the mass of Christian professors are ‘lovers of pleasure, rather than lovers of God’ (2 Timothy 3:4), and there is again, alas, that same spiritual torpor as wine produces on the brain.” Jenour, leaning on Vitranga, speaks of the false or childish doctrines that would lead the people to reject the very Christ. It was Ephraim, through Jeroboam, who made false temples and ordained false priests after the Israeli civil war: “And Jeroboam said in his heart, Now shall the kingdom return to the house of David: If this people go up to do sacrifice in the house of the LORD at Jerusalem, then shall the heart of this people turn again unto their lord, even unto Rehoboam king of Judah, and they shall kill me, and go again to Rehoboam king of Judah. Whereupon the king took counsel, and made two calves of gold, and said unto them, It is too much for you to go up to Jerusalem: behold thy gods, O Israel, which brought thee up out of the land of Egypt. And he set the one in Bethel, and the other put he in Dan. And this thing became a sin: for the people went to worship before the one, even unto Dan. And he made an house of high places, and made priests of the lowest of the people, which were not of the sons of Levi. And Jeroboam ordained a feast in the eighth month, on the fifteenth day of the month, like unto the feast that is in Judah, and he offered upon the altar. So did he in Bethel, sacrificing unto the calves that he had made: and he placed in Bethel the priests of the high places which he had made. So he offered upon the altar which he had made in Bethel the fifteenth day of the eighth month, even in the month which he had devised of his own heart; and ordained a feast unto the children of Israel: and he offered upon the altar, and burnt incense” (1 Kings 12:26–33). ¶ As a result of these and subsequent actions, Asshur would take Ephraim captive. The Prophet, however, is getting ready to introduce a future apostasy, one that was just as sinister, and one which would take place before the coming forth of the Book of Mormon: “For the time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine; but after their own lusts shall they heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears” (2 Timothy 4:3). Isaiah, then, managed to weave together the present situation with Asshur, and the great apostasy. Delitzsch says, “The epithet נָבֵל (fading: possibly a genitive, as in ISAIAH 28:4), which is introduced here into the midst of this picture of splendour, indicates that all this splendour is not only destined to fade, but is beginning to fade already.

¶ Which [are] on the head [עַל-רֹאשׁ] of the fat valleys of them that are overcome with wine! The Targum (Ⓣ) has, “They who are at the head of the valley of fatness are smitten with wine.” The LXX (Ⓦ) reads, “On the top of the fertile mountain! Ye who are drunk without wine!” The Douay-Rheims (ⓓ) has, “Who were on the head of the fat valley, staggering with wine.” Barnes writes, “The allusion in this verse to the ‘crown’ and ‘the fading flower’ encircling Samaria, Grotius thinks is derived from the fact that among the ancients, drunkards and revellers were accustomed to wear a crown or garland on their heads, or that a wreath or chaplet of flowers was usually worn on their festival occasions.” Lowth explains: “That this custom of wearing chaplets in their banquets prevailed among the Jews, as well as among the Greeks and Romans, appears from the following passage of the book of Wisdom: ‘Let us fill ourselves with costly wine and ointments, And let no flower of the spring pass by us: Let us crown ourselves with rose-buds before they are withered’ (Wisdom 2:7–8).” Delitzsch writes: “Samaria stood upon a beautiful swelling hill, which commanded the whole country round in a most regal way (Amos 4:1; 6:1), in the centre of a large basin, of about two hours’ journey in diameter, shut in by a gigantic circle of still loftier mountains (Amos 3:9). The situation was commanding; the hill terraced up to the very top; and the surrounding country splendid and fruitful (Ritter, Erdkunde, xvi. 660, 661).” Let us also remember that in ISAIAH 7:9 Ephraim is condemned because her head (רֹאשׁ) was a man and not the Lord.

2 Behold, the Lord hath a mighty and strong one, [which] as a tempest of hail [and] a destroying storm, as a flood of mighty waters overflowing, shall cast down to the earth with the hand.

The Targum (Ⓣ) has, “Behold plagues (the Royal Polyglot reads נִסֵּי וּמוֹת, ‘behold how’ &c.), strong and mighty, are coming from the Lord: like a storm of hail, like a whirlwind, like a storm of mighty waters, overflowing, thus (Royal Polyglot כִּי, ‘when’) the nations shall come upon them, and shall lead them into captivity to another land on account of the sins which are in their hands.” The LXX (Ⓦ) reads, “Behold the wrath of the Lord is a harsh and terrible thing. Like a tempest of hail furiously driven when there is no shelter, like a mighty deluge sweeping a country.” The Peshitta (Ⓢ) renders the last clause, “I will give rest to the earth through your hand.” The Douay-Rheims (ⓓ) has, “Behold the Lord is mighty and strong, as a storm of hail: a destroying whirlwind, as the violence of many waters overflowing, and sent forth upon a spacious land.” The Masoretic text (Ⓜ) has Lord (Adonai) אֲדֹנָי, rather than LORD (YHWH) יְהוָה, as is found in the DSS 1QIsa^a (Ⓢ). ¶ Behold, the Lord hath a mighty and strong one. As Gill says, “That is, a powerful king, with a mighty army, meaning Shalmaneser king of Assyria; whom the Lord had at his beck and command, and could use at his pleasure, as his instrument, to bring down the towering pride of Ephraim, and chastise him for his sensuality.” ¶ [Which] as a tempest of hail [and] a destroying storm, as a flood of mighty waters overflowing. The expression a flood of mighty waters overflowing reminds us of Asshur: “Now therefore, behold, the Lord bringeth up upon them the waters of the river, strong and many, even the king of Assyria, and all his glory: and he shall come up over all his channels, and go over all his banks” (ISAIAH 8:7). Rawlinson further explains: “The fearfully devastating force of an Assyrian invasion is set forth under three distinct images—a hailstorm, a furious tempest of wind, and a violent inundation—as though so only could its full horror be depicted. War is always a horrible scourge; but in ancient times, and with a people so cruel as the Assyrians, it was a calamity exceeding in terribleness the utmost that the modern reader can conceive. It involved the wholesale burning of cities and villages, the wanton destruction of trees and crops, the slaughter of thousands in battles and sieges, the subsequent massacre of hundreds in cold blood, the plunder of all classes, and the deportation of tens of thousands of captives, who were carried into hopeless servitude in a strange land.” ¶ Shall cast down to the earth with the hand. Barnes has: “Septuagint: βίη bia - ‘Force,’ ‘violence.’ This is its meaning here; as if it were taken in the hand, like a cup, and dashed indignantly to the ground.”

3 The crown of pride, the drunkards of Ephraim, shall be trodden under feet: ✓

✓ with feet

The Targum (Ⓣ) has, “The crown of the pride of the foolish prince of Israel shall be trodden down with feet.” The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “In this land it will put a stop to the labour of hands; and with the feet shall be trampled down the crown of your pride, mercenaries of Ephraim.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⓟ) has, “The crown of pride of the drunkards &c.” In other words, Ephraim should be brought down in her pride despite the crown of beautiful flowers mentioned in ISAIAH 28:1, 4. Gill notes: “Not only cast down with the hand, but trampled upon with the feet; showing their utter destruction, and the contempt with which they should be used.”

4 And the glorious beauty, which [is] on the head of the fat valley, shall be a fading flower, [and] as the hasty fruit before the summer; which [when] he that looketh upon it seeth, while it is yet in his hand he eateth ✓ it up.

✓ swalloweth

And the glorious beauty, which [is] on the head of the fat valley, shall be a fading flower. The Targum (Ⓣ) has, “And the diadem, which he gave to the wicked of the house of the sanctuary of His praise, which is on the head of the valley of fatness.” The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “And the flower which hath dropped from the hope of the Glory, on the top of the lofty mountain.” The Peshitta (Ⓢ) renders it “And the shameful diadem, the strength (Lamsa) / power (BPE) of his glory (Lamsa) / boasting (BPE) which dominates at the entrance (Lamsa) / is found in the best (BPE) of the fertile valley.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⓟ) has, “And the fading flower the glory of his joy, who is on the head of the fat valley.” ⓂⓂⓂ is correctly translated, as first fruits, from ⓂⓂⓂ. Others translate more specifically as early figs, but fig trees are ⓂⓂⓂ. I suppose the latter translation assumes an elliptical associated with

ⓂⓂⓂ, as we see below. For instance, the ASV has: “And the fading flower of his glorious beauty, which is on the head of the fat valley, shall be as the first-ripe fig before the summer.” There are various early crops that are harvested before the full summer comes in, such as strawberries, cherries and the first figs. Fig trees are very interesting in that they provide a double crop. In Spanish, the first and more delicious crop, brevas (but albacora from Hebrew ⓂⓂⓂ bicur and Arabic alabakura (see María Moliner, below), is differentiated from the second, higos. In María Moliner we read the first acceptance for *albacora*¹: “(del árabe and. ‘albakúra’) f. *Breva (higo de la primera cosecha).” In Nahum we read: “All thy strong holds shall be like fig trees [ⓂⓂⓂ] with the firstripe [ⓂⓂⓂ] *figs*²: if they be shaken, they shall even fall into the mouth of the eater” (Nahum 3:12). ¶ [And] as the hasty fruit before the summer; which [when] he that looketh upon it seeth, while it is yet in his hand he eateth it up. The Targum (Ⓣ) has, “Shall be as the first ripe fig before the summer, which, when one sees it (literally, ‘when he seeth’ ‘on looking at it’), no sooner is it in the hand (literally, as if it were in his hands), that one devours it.” The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “Shall be like the early fruit of a fig tree, which he who seeth it will wish to devour, before he can get it into his hand.” The Peshitta (Ⓢ) has early (BPE) / first (Lamsa) fruits rather than hasty fruit. The Douay-Rheims (Ⓟ) has, “Shall be as a hasty fruit before the ripeness of autumn: which when he that seeth it shall behold, as soon as he taketh it in his hand, he will eat it up.” The CEV paraphrase offers, “It will be gobbled down like the first ripe fig at harvest season.” ⓂⓂⓂ While it is yet. Henderson writes: “While the others [latter fig crops] hang long upon the tree after they become ripe, the boccora drops immediately on the tree being slightly shaken by the hand, or even of itself, Jeremiah 24:2; Hosea 9:10; Micah 7:1. It is from these circumstances the prophet here borrows his image, in order to shew how suddenly and easily Samaria should be taken. A three years’ siege must have been reckoned short in ancient times, since that of Tyre, under ebuchadnezzar, lasted thirteen, and that of Askalon twenty-nine years.” This idea of a short siege is mentioned by almost all of the exegetes, but I prefer Alexander’s comments: “The immediate eating of the fruit is only mentioned as a sign of eagerness or greediness³. Vitringa understands the simile as meaning that Samaria when taken would be instantly destroyed, ¹ Alexander has, “This name of the early fig is still retained not only in Arabic, but in Spanish, into which it was transplanted by the Moors.

² This second figs is not in the text, so it should also be in italics.

³ Archaic expression for someone who enjoys eating.

as the first ripe fruit is eaten and not stored away...

בְּעוֹד ... does not literally mean as soon as, but while yet, which renders the expression stronger still, as strictly denoting that he eats it while it is yet in his hand.” Certainly, if Samaria and the northern tribes are represented by the breva, or the early fig, Jerusalem and Judah are well represented by the higo or late fig. They would both be taken. In terms of history at that time, the first would be completely devoured in terms of the exile experience, but mixing metaphors, the latter would be stored away for seventy years and some of her peoples returned to the homeland.

5 In that day shall the LORD of hosts be for a crown of glory, and for a diadem of beauty, unto the residue of his people,

The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “At that time, the Messiah of the Lord of hosts shall be for a crown of rejoicing, and for a crown of praise to the remnant of his people.” Here is the Hosea Principle, where the Lord cannot speak of the evils that will befall his people Israel without very soon telling us how in the last days these things will happily change. These words have a thrilling tone to them. The fading glory of the crown of Ephraim is now replaced by the crown of glory, the crown of beauty, the crown of the King Messiah, of Jesus the Christ. Rabbi Rosenberg says, “The Rabbis, too, interpret this passage as referring to Messianic times, as is evidenced by their interpretation of וְלִצְפִּירֶת תְּפאָרָה [and for a diadem of beauty] for those who hope for His glory, i.e., those who hope for God’s glory in Messianic times (Redak).”

¶ In that day, בְּיוֹם / Unto the residue of his people.

The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “In that day the Lord of Hosts will be the crown of hope—the diadem of glory to the remnant of the people.” The Peshitta (Ⲫ) uses remnant instead of residue. Most Jewish and Gentile authors think this as the residue of Judah, the tribes to remain after Ephraim would be captured by Asshur. Instead, it refers to the remnant of the children of Israel that the Lord would recover in the last days. The expression in that day בְּיוֹם strengthens the view that the latter days are referred to, rather than the temporary righteousness of Judah under King Hezekiah. Skinner well says, “It means a converted remnant ... The writer is here looking beyond the whole series of national judgments, and the insertion of the promise is evidently suggested by the contrast between the false glory that has vanished and the true glory which shall endure.” ¶ Shall the LORD of hosts be for a crown of glory, and for a diadem of beauty. The Douay-Rheims (Ⲕ) has garland of joy instead of diadem of beauty. Instead of wanting an earthly king as demanded by the children of Israel in the days of Samuel, the Christ King will be the glory of Israel, even a diadem of beauty. The Targum tradition (Seder Nezikin, Sanhedrin 111b) has this: “R. Eleazar said in R. Hanina’s name: The Lord shall be a crown upon the head of every righteous man, as it is written, In that day shall the Lord of hosts be for a crown of glory [zebi], and for a diadem of beauty, unto the residue of his people etc. What is meant by for a crown of glory, and for a diadem of beauty? — To those who obey His will and hope for His salvation. I might think, this applies to all; therefore Scripture states, unto the residue of his people, [meaning] unto those who make themselves as a remnant. And for a spirit of judgment to him that sitteth in judgment, and for strength to them that turn the battle to the gate. ‘And for a spirit of judgment’ — this means, to him who rules over his [evil—GB] inclinations; ‘and to him that sitteth in judgment’: i.e., to him that renders an honest judgment according to the truth thereof; ‘and for strength’ — viz., to him that prevails against his evil inclinations; ‘that turn the battle’ — to those who engage in the battle of the Torah; ‘to the gate’ — to those who repair morning and evening to the synagogue and house of study” (Talmud, Soncino). Barnes says, “This reign of Yahweh shall be to them better than palaces, towers, walls, and fruitful fields, and shall be a more glorious ornament than the proud city of Samaria was to the kingdom of Israel ... [crown of glory] A beautiful garland. The phrase stands opposed to the wreath of flowers or the diadem which was represented ISAIAH 28:1, 3 as adorning the kingdom and capital of Israel. Yahweh and his government would be to them their chief glory and ornament” (emphasis added). As I read these words from Barnes I see, with thrilling gratitude, that this prophecy has been fulfilled in me as partly a descendant of Ephraim (maternal side), and partly a descendant of Judah (paternal side). And this reminds me of something that happened only a few weeks ago in our Gospel Doctrine class. This year (2012) our subject of study is the Book of Mormon. We were reading the words of Enos in the Modesto 12th Spanish Branch: “And after I, Enos, had heard these words, my faith began to be unshaken in the Lord; and I prayed unto him with many long strugglings for my brethren, the Lamanites. And it came to pass that after I had prayed and labored with all diligence, the Lord said unto me: I will grant unto thee according to thy desires, because of thy faith. And now behold, this was the desire which I desired of him—that if it should so be, that my people, the Nephites, should fall into transgression, and by any means be destroyed, and the Lamanites should not be destroyed, that the Lord God would preserve a record of my people, the Nephites; even if it so be by the power of his holy arm, that it might be brought forth at some future day unto the Lamanites, that, perhaps, they might be brought unto salvation—For at the present our strugglings were vain in restoring them to the true faith. And they swore in their wrath that, if it were possible, they would destroy our records and us, and also all the traditions of our fathers. Wherefore, I knowing that the Lord God was able to preserve our records, I cried unto him continually, for he had said unto me: Whatsoever thing ye shall ask in faith, believing that ye shall receive in the name of Christ, ye shall receive it. And I had faith, and I did cry unto God that he would preserve the records; and he covenanted with me that he would bring them forth unto the Lamanites in his own due time” (Enos 1:11–16, emphasis added). The Spirit wrought upon me with much strength as we read those words in class and I was moved to ask class members: “What records were these, and to whom were they particularly written for?” While some had a bit of a blank stare for a moment, others caught the spirit of the moment and said, “The Book of Mormon... and to us, who are the very descendants of the Lamanites spoken about. Enos was praying for us!”⁴

6 And for a spirit of judgment to him that sitteth in judgment, and for strength to them that turn the battle to the gate.

And for a spirit of judgment to him that sitteth in judgment. The Targum (ܬ) has, “For a word of true judgment (literally, ‘judgment of truth’) to them that sit in the house of justice, in order that they should judge according to truth.” The LXX (ϸ) reads, “They shall be left for the spirit of Justice.” The Peshitta (ܣ) has spirit of justice instead of spirit of judgment. Also, in that day ܒַּיּוֹם, of ISAIAH 28:5, the remnant would be filled by a spirit of judgment and would judge with righteousness. Delitzsch says, “There would be an end to unjust judging and powerless submission.” ¶ And for strength to them that turn the battle to the gate. The Targum (ܬ) has, “And to give victory to them that are going forth into battle, to bring them back in peace to their homes.” The LXX (ϸ) reads, “To administer justice and destroy the power of the opposers.” The Peshitta (ܣ) renders it “And for strength to those who at the gate are able to resist the battle.” The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “And strength to them that return out of the battle to the gate.” The Masoretic text (M) has the locative ִּי⁵ ending that

⁴ I sometimes have very poignant moments as I prepare to teach. And it also has happened to me, often, that the Spirit is manifested in a very special way in our classes with additional information that I had not considered as I prepared. Every Priesthood, Sunday school, Seminary and Institute class can be a sort of School of the Prophets experience if we bring the right spirit with us.

⁵ Andersen, F. I., & Forbes, A. D. (2006; 2006). A Systematic Glossary to the Andersen-Forbes Analysis of the Hebrew Bible. Logos Bible Software.

here does not indicate feminine gender but rather the direction of the movement, שַׁעַר, to the gate, in contrast to the DSS 1QIsa^a (Q), where we just find שַׁעַר, [at the] gate (DSSB). Henderson explains: “‘to the gate,’ i.e. of the enemy; not only repelling his attack in Judaea, but driving him back into his own fortified places. (Compare 1 Samuel 17:52.)”

7 But they also have erred through wine, and through strong drink are out of the way; the priest and the prophet have erred through strong drink, they are swallowed up of wine, they are out of the way through strong drink; they err in vision, they stumble [in] judgment.

But they also have erred through wine, and through strong drink are out of the way; the priest and the prophet have erred through strong drink. The Targum (ܬ) has, “But verily these are drunk with wine, they are swallowed up of old wine: the priest and the scribe are drunk, in old wine are swallowed up: on account of wine they have erred.” The LXX (ϸ) reads, “For by wine these were made transgressors; they were led astray by strong drink. Priest and prophet were stupefied with strong drink.” The Peshitta (ܣ) has gone astray rather than have erred. The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “But these also have been ignorant through wine, and through drunkenness have erred: the priest and the prophet have been ignorant through drunkenness.” The Masoretic text (M) has But these also, וְגַם אֵלֶּה, while the MSS 1QIsa^a (Q) is missing the vav and renders it These also, גַּם אֵלֶּה. After condemning Ephraim, and stopping to briefly celebrate the times of King Messiah, the Prophet now turns his attention to Judah (see also ISAIAH 28:14, where Jerusalem is mentioned by name). This mutual censure is seen frequently. For instance, in Ezekiel 23 the Lord speaks of two sensual sisters—Aholah, representing Samaria; Aholibah, Jerusalem—as being guilty of apostasy. Such a state of apostasy was to be found both in pre-exilic Judah and Ephraim, as well as the latter days when counterfeit doctrine would prevail. Jennings explains that they were “intoxicated with the falsehood they preach.” Kay has, “Isaiah’s contemporary, Micah, represents the prophets as ‘making God’s people to err,’ by ‘prophesying to them of wine and strong drink’ (Micah 2:11; 3:5),—promising them an interrupted course of worldly prosperity.” Elder Bruce R. McConkie explained: “Truly this is the day of which Isaiah spoke: ‘The priest and the prophet have erred, . . . they are out of the way, . . . they err in vision, they stumble in judgment.’ And then with reference to the spiritual food they offer their congregations, he acclaimed: ‘All tables are full of vomit and filthiness, so that there is no place clean’ (ISAIAH 28:7–8).⁶ So also in the Book of Mormon we see such instances of apostasy: “And now Abinadi said unto them: Are you priests, and pretend to teach this people, and to understand the spirit of prophesying, and yet desire to know of me what these things mean? I say unto you, wo be unto you for perverting the ways of the Lord! For if ye understand these things ye have not taught them; therefore, ye have perverted the ways of the Lord” Mosiah 12:25–26). ¶ They are swallowed up of wine, they are out of the way through strong drink; they err in vision, they stumble [in] judgment. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “They are turned after sweet food; their judges have erred.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “They were gorged with wine—they were agitated by drunkenness; they reeled to and fro.” The Lamsa Peshitta (Ⲥ) has, “They are overcome with wine, they stagger with strong drink, they err in judgment with drunkenness, they eat immoderately.” The BPE (Ⲥ) has, “They stagger because of drink that causes drunkenness; they are lost because of gluttony.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲳ) has, beginning with the second clause, “They have gone astray in drunkenness, they have not known him that seeth, they have been ignorant of judgment.” This stumbling in judgment, then, is more than inebriation, but a stumbling in spiritual discernment. ¶ In vision ⲃⲣⲁⲓⲁ, from ⲣⲁⲓⲁ, too see (Gesenius). Also see 1 Samuel 9:9.

8 For all tables are full of vomit [and] filthiness, [so that there is] no place [clean].

The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “Because all their tables are full of polluted and loathsome food: they have not a spot free from rapine.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “This is oracling! A curse shall devour their counsel; for their counsel is for the sake of gain.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲳ) has, for the last clause, “So that there was no more place.”

¶ ⲃⲗ-ⲥⲗⲁⲛⲟⲩ all tables. Kay begins to tie this chapter to the coming one, “There is little indication of penitential sorrow having laid hold of the people... They ‘honoured the Lord with their lips,’ though ‘their heart was far from Him’ (ISAIAH 29:13)... Thus their outward reform became to most of them like a draught of spiritual intoxication.” Elder Bruce R. McConkie explained that these tables of vomit and filth are reflective of false doctrines that abound outside of the restored Church.⁷

vv. 9–13. The question is asked regarding who is able to receive true doctrine and revelation. And how will such be received when it is received. The humble will accept revelation from God rather than lean on man’s teachings. The Lord instructs us through the Spirit, little by little, as we are able to bear it. The hearing of the word brings to pass much good, including entering into the rest or peace of the Lord. Yet many are not willing to accept this invitation and thus remain in spiritual bondage.

9 ¶ Whom shall he teach knowledge? and whom shall he make to understand doctrine? ~ [them that are] weaned from the milk, [and] drawn from the breasts.

✓ the hearing?

Whom shall he teach knowledge? and whom shall he make to understand doctrine [ⲛⲃⲓⲛ ⲥⲙⲟⲩⲉⲃⲁ]? Of ⲥⲙⲟⲩⲉⲃⲁ Horsley explains that “This is a general word for the whole matter of Divine revelation, consisting of doctrine, precept, prophetic warning, promises and threatenings.” Alexander has, “ⲥⲙⲟⲩⲉⲃⲁ properly denotes something heard, and here means that which the Prophet heard from God and the people from the Prophet; in other words, divine revelation, whether general or special.” The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “To whom was the law given? And to whom was the command given to understand wisdom? Was it not to the house of Israel, who were beloved above all nations, and beloved above all the kingdoms?” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “To whom, [say they] have we announced evils? And to whom have we announced a message?” For doctrine the Peshitta (Ⲥ) has report (Lamsa) / message (BPE). The Douay-Rheims (Ⲳ) has understand the hearing for understand doctrine. The question at hand is to whom the Spirit of God can teach knowledge to, given such a great apostasy. As we see below, the context of this verse is strictly associated with the learning of doctrine line upon line, as individuals show they are able to do so. The Prophet Brigham Young taught “The Gospel may be preached to an individual, and the truth commend itself to the conscience of that person, creating but a little faith in its truth, to which there may be an addition made. If persons can receive a little, it proves they may receive more. If they can receive the first and second principles with an upright feeling, they may receive still more, and the words of the Prophet be fulfilled. He, seeing and understanding the mind of man, and the operations of the different spirits that have gone abroad into the world, and knowing the ways of the Lord, and the vision of his mind being opened to those things we call mysteries, said—‘Whom shall he teach knowledge? And whom shall he make to understand doctrine? Them that are weaned from the milk, and drawn from the breasts. For precept must be upon precept, precept upon precept; line upon line, line upon line; here a little, and there a little.’ That is, He gives a little to His humble followers today, and if they improve upon it, tomorrow He will give them a little more, and the next day a little more. He does not add to that which they do not improve upon, but they are required to continually improve upon the knowledge they already possess, and thus obtain a store of wisdom. It is plain, then, that we may receive the truth, and know, through every portion of the soul, that the Gospel is the power of God unto salvation, that it is the way to life eternal; still there may be added to this, more power, wisdom, knowledge, and understanding.”⁸

⁶ Bruce R. McConkie, The Millennial Messiah: The Second Coming of the Son of Man, pp. 75–76.

⁷ Bruce R. McConkie, The Millennial Messiah: The Second Coming of the Son of Man, p.693

¶ [Them that are] weaned from the milk, [and] drawn from the breasts. The LXX (6) reads, “—we who have been weaned from milk, we who have been withdrawn from the breasts?” The Douay-Rheims (V) has, for the second clause, “that are drawn away from the breasts.” The idea here is that when men are ready, the Lord is ready to reveal more. But they first have to be weaned from the breasts, i.e., from the spiritual milk: “And I, brethren, could not speak unto you as unto spiritual, but as unto carnal, even as unto babes in Christ. I have fed you with milk, and not with meat: for hitherto ye were not able to bear it, neither yet now are ye able. For ye are yet carnal: for whereas there is among you envying, and strife, and divisions, are ye not carnal, and walk as men?” (1 Corinthians 3:1–3). ¶ Brigham Young explained: “The Lord gives us little by little, and is ever willing to give us more and more, even the fullness; when our hearts are prepared to receive all the truths of heaven. This is what the Lord desires, what he would delight in doing, for his children.”⁹ Jennings explains that “It shall be so simple that even infants with nothing but the ability of listening shall be able to understand it; yet that very simplicity will stumble the wise and prudent who in their pride will be blind to its perfections.” Indeed, we shall see in ISAIAH 29 “the boy that driveth the plow [i.e., Joseph Smith] to know more of the Scriptures” than the professors of religion spoken about by Jennings and William Tyndale.

⁸ Brigham Young, Journal of Discourses 2:1–2a. Also, compare to JD 9:167a.

⁹ Brigham Young, Journal of Discourses 18:212.

10 For precept [must be] ~ upon precept, precept upon precept; line upon line, line upon line; here a little, [and] there a little:

✓ or, hath been

For precept [must be] upon precept, precept upon precept. The Targum (T) has, “Surely, they were commanded to do the law; but what they were commanded, they were not willing to do. The prophets prophesied unto them, that if they would repent, it should be forgiven them; but they did not obey the words of the prophets: they walked after the desire of their soul, neither did they desire to do my law. They hoped to have idolatrous worship established among them, and they did not consider the worship of the house of my sanctuary: to worship in the house of my sanctuary was a little thing in their eyes, my Shekinah was a little thing in their eyes.” The LXX (6) reads, “Expect affliction on affliction.” The Peshitta (S), instead of line and precept uses such words as filth and vomit. The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “For command, command again; command, command again.” Ibn Ezra explains: “This is just the way how writing is taught. Here a little and there a little. Little by little, gradually.” Many moderns have really twisted the meaning of this verse, so it is nice to find a straight forward interpretation offered by Ironside, that God had, through His prophets “who could teach them the way of righteousness, endeavoring to instruct them as one deals with little children, giving them ‘precept upon precept &c.’ as they were able to bear it.” So also Kay, who writes, “In his spiritual husbandry the prophet used the same minute discrimination, the same adjustment of means to end, as are set forth in the parable of ISAIAH 28:23–29.” ¶ There are volumes that could be written about ISAIAH 28:10. Truly, it has been my experience that this is the way the Lord reveals His truth unto us, line upon line. It is as waves of knowledge and understanding. Truly, there is no greater call than teaching. I so much love to be invited to speak about the Gospel either in a classroom, a fireside, as a home teacher or with the missionaries. I seldom encounter a teaching situations but that I do not get additional inspiration on the subject. This insight may come directly through the Spirit of the Holy Ghost, or through a member of the class. This has happened to me not only in spiritual matters, but also in my academic fields and in the equestrian sports. No sooner would I publish the most recent edition of a book, when I would have to begin revising the manuscript for the next edition. I have spent most of my academic and personal life studying, pondering and writing. But it is at those times when I leave my studying and my writing and get out and share with others when I tend to receive even a greater amount of revelation. I may well be the only person that has been chastised by the Spirit and told to stop studying the scriptures and get out and minister. I have so much to be grateful for. I feel I have received from the Lord “wisdom and great treasures of knowledge, even hidden treasures” (D&C 89:19). One of my recurring prayers includes asking God for opportunities to share what I have learned. I feel the Spirit of God upon my mind and my hand as I study and write; but even more so, as I teach. But here I will say that God has indeed revealed many things to me, even before I joined the Church. The thing which I am most grateful for is that God answers my prayers as I ask in the name of His beloved Son Jesus Christ. I believe each one of us can obtain these answers. Most of my answers to prayer (perhaps because I am more interested in asking God if He heard my prayer and then leave things to Him than demanding that something happen the way I might want it to) come right away. Others take longer, and some I know will probably not be answered in this lifetime. The answer to one particular prayer that bears upon this study on Isaiah is instructive. I was in Yesterday’s Books in Modesto about ten years ago, checking to see if there were any new books on Isaiah or others related to my Scripture study. The word of the Lord came to me and said something to this effect: “You know how you asked to find the Chaldee. You already have it, it is also called the Targum.” I had been, little by little, finding the various ancient manuscripts that I have used for this study, including the LXX, Targum, Peshitta, and so on. But many authors spoke about the Chaldee and I yearned to add this to my collection. A year earlier I had prayed to the Father to help me find this book. Now I was amazed at what I was hearing. The voice of the Lord, when He speaks to me under these types of situations is often followed, line upon line. While I was still pondering what I had just received, not doubting at all, I received the next: “Go over across the room look up Chaldee in that dictionary.” This was Hastings’ five volume dictionary which I had looked at before. I walked across the room and opened Volume I¹⁰ to “Chaldee Versions” and read: “See TARGUMS.” So it is that the Lord does reveal line upon line &c., and I have noticed that if we will write these impressions more is revealed to us. By writing these things we honor what God has given us. The Lord will always honor His promises to us. ¶ In the Book of Mormon we read: “We be unto him that shall say: We have received the word of God, and we need no more of the word of God, for we have enough! For behold, thus saith the Lord God: I will give unto the children of men line upon line, precept upon precept, here a little and there a little; and blessed are those who hearken unto my precepts, and lend an ear unto my counsel, for they shall learn wisdom; for unto him that receiveth I will give more; and from them that shall say, We have enough, from them shall be taken away even that which they have. Cursed is he that putteth his trust in man, or maketh flesh his arm, or shall hearken unto the precepts of men, save their precepts shall be given by the power of the Holy Ghost” (2 Nephi 28:29–31)¹¹; and “And I give unto you a commandment, that ye shall forsake all evil and cleave unto all good, that ye shall live by every word which proceedeth forth out of the mouth of God. For he will give unto the faithful line upon line, precept upon precept; and I will try you and prove you herewith” (D&C 98:11–12). The first of these has reference to the rejection of the Book of Mormon by many; while the second speaks about the manner that we receive commandments through the Lord. As we learn to keep the commandments, more light and truth and guidance is given to us until the perfect day. Elder Gene R. Cook, formerly of the First Quorum of the Seventy, explained that our understanding of any given scripture can always grow—that we are never done learning: “[Then we finally] understand that revelation is continual on that verse. It almost doesn’t matter what the words are; if we continue to approach the verse humbly and prayerfully, the Lord will continue to give us additional revelations on it.”¹² Elder Cook also wrote: “Obedience to the Lord’s voice helps us receive additional instructions from that voice.”¹³ ¶ The Lord also guides us line upon line, precept upon precept when it comes to revealing His commandments to us. I had just baptized someone to whom I had taught the Gospel of Jesus Christ to in Chile. She said she was going to do some business transaction the next day—it was something I did not think was appropriate for a LDS to do, in terms of the integrity of the matter. The word of the Lord came to me something like this: “I gave you fourteen years before I taught you it was wrong to do such and such; I will teach her myself

¹⁰ Hastings, James. A Dictionary of the Bible dealing with its Language, Literature, and Contents Including the Biblical Theology. New York: Charles Scribner’s Sons. 1911, p. 368. By the way, some months later I bought that set even though it was extremely expensive for me at the time.

¹¹ Kent P. Jackson, ed., in Studies in Scripture (Vol. 4:1 Kings to Malachi, p.109) makes a very interesting observation: “Although about one-third of the entire book of Isaiah is directly quoted and interpreted in the Book of Mormon, apart from chapter 29 ... only one verse of Isaiah from chapters 18 through 33 is cited in the Book of Mormon (ISAIAH 28:10, in 2 Nephi 28:30).”

¹² Gene R. Cook, Searching the Scriptures: Bringing Power to Your Personal and Family Study, p.62.

¹³ Gene R. Cook, Searching the Scriptures: Bringing Power to Your Personal and Family Study, p.109. I have always thought of learning by faith as also implying direct revelation when the windows of heaven are opened and light and knowledge are poured into our minds and into our hearts.

when she is ready.” Indeed, this is precisely what happens. As we show God that we are capable of keeping a commandment, He adds precept to precept. Just as I believe that it will be impossible to truly understand Isaiah in a single lifetime, our life is too short to become the person we wish to become. The Prophet Joseph Smith shared these reassuring words: “When you climb up a ladder, you must begin at the bottom, and ascend step by step, until you arrive at the top; and so it is with the principles of the gospel—you must begin with the first, and go on until you learn all the principles of exaltation. But it will be a great while after you have passed through the veil before you will have learned them. It is not all to be comprehended in this world; it will be a great work to learn our salvation and exaltation even beyond the grave.”¹⁴ ¶ Line upon line, line upon line; here a little, [and] there a little: The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “Hope on hope, yet a little while—yet a little while.” The BPE (Ⲫ) instead of line uses spitting. The Peshitta (Ⲫ) also has the last clause as the Masoretic text (ⲙ). The Douay-Rheims (Ⲫ) has, “Expect, expect again; expect, expect again: a little there, a little there.”

11 For with stammering lips and another tongue will he speak to this people.

✓ stammerings of lip

✓ ✓ or, he hath spoken

The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “Because with feigned speech, and with mocking language, these people mocked the prophets, who prophesied unto them.” The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “On account of the mockery of their lips—because they will speak to this people with a strange tongue.” The Peshitta (Ⲫ) has, “Because with a difficult speech and with another tongue shall he (Lamsa) / I (BPE) speak to this people.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲫ) has speech of lips instead of stammering lips. In 1 Corinthians we read: “Brethren, be not children in understanding: howbeit in malice be ye children, but in understanding be men. In the law it is written, With men of other tongues and other lips will I speak unto this people; and yet for all that will they not hear me, saith the Lord” (1 Corinthians 14:20–21). Now this scripture is given in the New Testament quoting the Law תִּירָה, or the Torah, where תִּירָה is put for Scripture in general. A curious comment is made by Rawlinson: “The application of this Old Testament quotation furnishes one of the many singular instances of quotation which prove that the Jews often referred to the words without any direct reference to their context or original meaning.” The reason for this comment is that most all exegetes feel that ISAIAH 28:11 is speaking about the fact that because Israel did not learn from her own prophets, she would learn from being taken captive into a land where people would speak in a foreign tongue to them. ¶ Latter-day Prophets, however, have consistently applied these scriptures to the preaching of the Gospel of Jesus Christ by the weak and the humble. The correct idea here is that the Gospel of Jesus Christ would be taught by the Spirit through the weak unto the convincing of sincere seekers: “But God hath chosen the foolish things of the world to confound the wise; and God hath chosen the weak things of the world to confound the things which are mighty” (1 Corinthians 1:27). And this weakness often comes not only because the young and inexperienced missionaries sent to confound the proud and the learned, but they often do so in a tongue they do not know. Think about this and rejoice! This is the Lord’s work and who can stay it? Elder Erastus Snow taught: “We testify and bear witness that it is not of man, but of God,—that it is the power of the Gospel of Jesus Christ—that it is the gift and influence of the Holy Ghost that bears witness to the hearts of this people. When in the simplicity of my heart I could speak but little unto them with stammering lips, I said more with my eyes and fingers than with my tongue. The power of the Holy Ghost rested upon the people; and when I asked them if they understood me, ‘Yes,’ said they, ‘we understood it all.’ It was not because I spoke it fully with my tongue, but God made them understand me. If I asked them if they believed it, ‘Yes,’ would be the reply; ‘we have the testimony of the Holy Ghost bearing witness within us that it is true.’”¹⁵ Kay well says, regarding another tongue, “A tongue that deviated widely from the ordinary style of speech; sometimes resorting to strangely bold figures, and constantly employing metaphor and parable and allegory (which last is almost literally ‘other speech,’ ἀλληγορία¹⁶).”

12 To whom he said, This [is] the rest [wherewith] ye may cause the weary to rest; and this [is] the refreshing: yet they would not hear.

The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “The prophets said unto them, This is the house of the sanctuary, worship ye in it: and this is the possession in which there is rest; but they would not accept instructions.” The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “Saying to them, ‘This is the rest for him who is hungry: and this is the destruction, but they would not hear.” The Peshitta (S) has tranquility (Lamsa) / peace (BPE) for refreshing. The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “To whom he said: This is my rest, refresh the weary, and this is my refreshing: and they would not hear.” The Vulgate (V) renders it, “Cui dixit : Hæc est réquies mea, reficite lassum; et hoc est meum refrigerium: et noluérunt audire.” This verse speaks of the invitation to find peace (ISAIAH 27:5), or in other words rest and refreshment, through the Gospel of Christ, but the people would not hearken to it. Matthew has, “O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, thou that killest the prophets, and stonest them which are sent unto thee, how often would I have gathered thy children together, even as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, and ye would not!” (Matthew 23:37). Rawlinson points us to the Rain in Due Season: “God had from remote times offered to his people ‘rest’ and ‘refreshing’ or a life of ease and peace in [the Holy Land] but on condition of their serving him faithfully and observing his Laws (Deuteronomy 28:1–14). But they had rejected this ‘rest,’ since they had refused to observe the condition on which it was promised.” So also Kay, “The words ‘rest’ and ‘refreshing’ occur in Deuteronomy 28:65, where the penalty of disobedience was proclaimed beforehand. (‘The Lord shall scatter thee among all peoples, from the one end of the earth even to the other.) And among these nations shalt thou find no ease (refreshing, [תְּרִיבָהּ from מְרִנָּה and רַנַּע, see HAL and here in ISAIAH, the refreshing, תְּרִיבָהּ]), neither shall the sole of thy foot have rest [מְנוּחָה, see HAL מְנוּחָה, and here in ISAIAH, the resting, תְּמַנְיָהּ.]” Jennings says, “Here we get a forecast that the proud will reject the ‘report.’” Lowth writes, “God had warned them by his Prophets, that their safety and security, their deliverance from their present calamities, and from the apprehensions of still greater approaching, depended wholly on their trust in God, their faith and obedience; but they rejected this gracious warning with contempt and mockery.”

¹⁴ Prophet Joseph Smith, “The King Follett Sermon,” April 1971 Ensign.

¹⁵ Erastus Snow, Journal of Discourses 7:129. Also see beginning with 7:125. Remarks by Elder Erastus Snow, Delivered in the Tabernacle, Great Salt Lake City, September 18, 1859.

¹⁶ Allegory, see Galatians 4:24.

13 But the word of the LORD was unto them precept upon precept, precept upon precept; line upon line, line upon line; here a little, [and] there a little; that they might go, and fall backward, and be broken, and snared, and taken.

But the word of the LORD was unto them precept upon precept, precept upon precept, line upon line, line upon line; here a little, [and] there a little. The Targum (T) has, “This shall be the cup of their punishment, because they have transgressed the word of the Lord, and because they were commanded to do my law, but would not do what they were commanded. Therefore they shall be delivered unto the nations, who do not know the law; because they walked after the desire of their soul, and had no delight to do my will. Therefore they shall hope for help at the time that I shall bring distress upon them; but they shall have no help or support.” The LXX (G) reads, “Therefore the oracle of God will be to them ‘Affliction on affliction; hope on hope, yet a little while, yet a little while.’” The Peshitta (S), as in ISAIAH 28:10, instead of line and precept uses filth and vomit. The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “And the word of the Lord shall be to them: Command, command again; command, command again: expect, expect again; expect, expect again: a little there, a little there.” To those who would not hear the tender pleadings of precept upon precept and line upon line would come the punishment mentioned next (this also reminds us somewhat of ISAIAH 6:10). ¶ Kimhi explains (see Slotki / Rosenberg), related to ISAIAH 28:10, but fits better here, that this is the process used by the Lord to teach line upon line yet many of the people “do not accept it.” Ibn Ezra explains: “They indeed thought that the word of God itself was of no importance.” Ironside well writes that despite the careful efforts of the Prophets to teach the people, “They had not profited by such careful teaching but had turned away from the truth and like many today accepted in its place the traditions of men.” ¶ That they might go, and fall backward, and be broken, and snared, and taken. The Targum (T) has, “Because the house of my sanctuary was too little in their eyes to worship there, therefore they shall be left as a little thing in the eyes of the nations, among whom they shall go into captivity, in order that they may walk, and stumble backward, and be broken, and snared, and taken.” The LXX (G) reads, “That they may proceed on and fall backwards; and they shall be broken and snared and caught.” The Peshitta (S) has that they might return instead of that they might go. With the expression to “fall backward” we are reminded of Eli, Samuel’s tutor, who had not raised his children in obedience to the Lord: “Eli sat upon a seat by the wayside watching: for his heart trembled for the ark of God... And it came to pass, when [the messenger of bad tidings] made mention of the ark of God [which had been captured by the enemies of Israel], that he fell from off the seat backward by the side of the gate, and his neck brake, and he died” (1 Samuel 4:13b; 18a). Calvin says, “We had a similar sentiment on a former occasion (ISAIAH 8:15), and expressed in nearly the same words; for there the Prophet speaks on the same subject, the blinding of the people, who by their obstinacy had provoked the wrath of God. He shews that they who go astray, in opposition to the word of God, are always very near destruction.” Here in Isaiah there seems to be an allusion to Ephraim and Judah who would soon go into exile (that they might go, as well as and [be] taken) and suffer greatly (and fall backward, and be broken, and snared), because they refused to turn to the Lord. In the latter days these same words may be used of those who are taken captive and bound into mystic Babylon. The Prophet Joseph Smith explains that those who have fought against the Church, as Haman against the Jews, would “go backwards and stumble and fall.”¹⁷

vv. 14–22. We return here to the time of Isaiah. Delitzsch says, “The prophet now directly attacks the great men of Jerusalem, and holds up a Messianic prophecy before their eyes.” Barnes explains: “This verse commences a direct address to the scoffing and scornful nation, which is continued to the close of ISAIAH 28:22. It is addressed particularly to the rulers in Jerusalem, as being the leaders in crime, and as being eminently deserving of the wrath of God.” Christ is the foundation stone, a tried stone, a corner stone.

14 ¶ Wherefore hear the word of the LORD, ye scornful men, that rule this people which [is] in Jerusalem.

The LXX (6) reads, “Therefore hear the word of the Lord, ye afflicted men, and ye rulers of this people in Jerusalem!” The Douay-Rheims (v) has over my people rather than this people. As it is so clearly spoken about during the time of Jeremiah (e.g. Jeremiah 6, 8, 9, 15, 17, 21, etc.), those in Jerusalem thought it was impossible for them to fall. Never mind the fact that by then Ephraim had fallen to Asshur. Not too many years hence, and Jerusalem would fall and be taken captive by Babylon. This verse is a stinging reproach to the rulers of Jerusalem. Rawlinson writes, “Isaiah now turns from a denunciation of the priests and prophets, who especially opposed his teaching, to a threatening of the great men who guided the course of public affairs. He taxes them with being ‘men of scorn,’ i.e. scornors of Jehovah, and with ‘a proud and insolent self-confidence’ (Delitzsch).” I facilitated a meeting on interpersonal relations in 2012 and we had an interesting roundtable after the guest speaker was finished. I found it necessary to explain that I believed in right and wrong, good and bad, and in an absolute truth. To my shock—for this has not happened to me very frequently—one of the participants mocked my beliefs. I found it very interesting that the two of us in the room who had a firm belief in Christ were the most confident when it came to life and joy, while those who did not have a belief (despite the immense amount of good that they had accomplished in the field of peace making) were full of misery. Truly, it is only through Christ that we can find peace. As it later became evident in that same meeting, those who rejected Christ leaned on superstition.

15 Because ye have said, We have made a covenant with death, and with hell are we at agreement; when the overflowing scourge shall pass through, it shall not come unto us: for we have made lies our refuge, and under falsehood have we hid ourselves:

The LXX (6) reads, for the final section, “We have made falsehood our refuge and by this falsehood we shall be saved (or, ‘protected,’ Brenton).” The Douay-Rheims (v) has, “For you have said: We have entered into a league with death, and we have made a covenant with hell. When the overflowing scourge shall pass through, it shall not come upon us: for we have placed our hope in lies, and by falsehood we are protected.” The theme of ISAIAH 28:14 continues here with Jerusalem truly thinking that she could not be captured. The expression, a covenant with death and with hell is a sarcastic comment as to Judah’s overconfident trust in Egypt and Assyria. Anytime that God is not our head, we are in effect making such a covenant with death. In speaking about covenants, Elder Matthias F. Cowley said, “In making a covenant with death they broke the ‘everlasting covenant’ and dishonored God, for He is everlasting and His ordinances endure forever, unimpaired by death, hell or the grave.”¹⁸ In ISAIAH 28:18 we shall say more about the proper order of covenants. The Lord uses in D&C many of the same expressions that He used when inspiring Isaiah to write. For instance, we read in D&C 97:23–26: “The Lord’s scourge shall pass over by night and by day, and the report thereof shall vex all people; yea, it shall not be stayed until the Lord come; For the indignation of the Lord is kindled against their abominations and all their wicked works. Nevertheless, Zion shall escape if she observe to do all things whatsoever I have commanded her. But if she observe not to do whatsoever I have commanded her, I will visit her according to all her works, with sore affliction, with pestilence, with plague, with sword, with vengeance, with devouring fire.”

16 Therefore thus saith the Lord GOD, Behold, I lay in Zion for a foundation a stone, a tried stone, a precious corner

¹⁷ Joseph Smith, History of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, introduction and notes by B. H. Roberts, 3:227 (also see 5:128, in regards to the Prophet Joseph Smith’s enemies).

¹⁸ Matthias F. Cowley, Cowley’s Talks on Doctrine, p.189.

[stone], a sure foundation: he that believeth shall not make haste.

The Targum (Ⓣ) has, beginning with the second clause, “Behold, I appoint a King in Zion; a King mighty, powerful, and terrible: I will make him powerful, and I will strengthen Him, saith the prophet. But the righteous, who believe these things shall not be moved, when distress shall come.” The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “‘Therefore thus saith the Sovereign Lord; behold I lay for the foundation of Sion a stone of inestimable worth—a chosen, precious cornerstone for the foundations of it, and he who believeth shall not be ashamed.’” Brenton Ⓛ (also NETS Ⓛ) fills the ellipsis, “and he that believes on him shall by no means be ashamed.” So also the Lexham Greek-English Interlinear as well as the LXX SESB (πιστεύων ἐπ’ αὐτῷ). As in ISAIAH 27:5–6, amidst all of the challenges faced by man, an invitation is given to take hold of the horns of salvation through Christ Jesus. ¶ Therefore thus saith the Lord GOD, Behold, I lay in Zion for a foundation a stone. Rashi (in Rabbi Rosenberg) has “I have set up the King-Messiah, who shall be in Zion as an בֵּיתֶיךָ אֶבֶן a fortress stone, an expression of a fortress and strength.” Elder Bruce R. McConkie explained that a much better rendition of this verse was given in Romans 9:33, “As it is written, Behold, I lay in Sion a stumblingstone and rock of offence: and whosoever believeth on him shall not be ashamed.”¹⁹ ¶ No doubt this is an excellent example of how the New Testament leans on the LXX (Ⓛ), which at times has excellent renderings. The beauty and power of its rendering and Messianic allusion are breathtaking. The Lamsa Peshitta (Ⓟ) renders it, “Therefore thus says the LORD God: Behold, I lay in Zion a foundation, a stone, a tried stone, a precious corner stone, a sure foundation; he who believes shall not be afraid.” The BPE (Ⓟ) has, “For thus saith Yahweh God: I have placed a stone in Zion, and approved stone, angular and precious, a fundamental and principal of the wall. He who believes shall not fear.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⓡ) has, “Therefore thus saith the Lord God: Behold I will lay a stone in the foundations of Sion, a tried stone, a corner stone, a precious stone, founded in the foundation. He that believeth, let him not hasten.” ¶ This verse clearly speaks of Christ, at His first coming. Elder Jeffrey R. Holland explained: “Jehovah said to the prophet Isaiah that in building the kingdom of God on earth, a ‘stone, a tried stone, a precious corner stone, a sure foundation’ would be used (ISAIAH 28:16). He was, of course, speaking of himself. Paul used that same imagery in declaring that Jesus was the chief cornerstone, that basic block around which a foundation of apostles and prophets would be laid and onto which the Church of God would be built (Ephesians 2:20). Peter noted that builders of lesser vision simply shoved him aside in favor of less substantial material (see Acts 4:11). The tragic irony is that to most, he was not a building stone at all, but rather a mere stumbling block, a huge boulder obstructing the journey toward death (see 1 Corinthians 1:23.)”²⁰ Referring to 1 Peter 2:6–8, Elder McConkie writes: “Peter here quotes, combines, and interprets three Messianic prophecies, two from Isaiah and one from the Psalms. ‘Thus saith the Lord God,’ Isaiah announced in one of them, ‘I lay in Zion for a foundation a stone, a tried stone, a precious corner stone, a sure foundation: he that believeth shall not make haste’ (ISAIAH 28:16). The clear meaning is: ‘Christ our Lord, the promised Messiah, the Stone of Israel—as a precious and tried person—shall come to Israel; and be the foundation upon which they shall build the house of salvation; he shall be the cornerstone of the house and kingdom of God itself; and all they who believe in him and build on the foundation he lays shall be saved.’ The other Isaiah prophecy says that ‘he shall be for a sanctuary; but for a stone of stumbling and for a rock of offence to both²¹ the houses of Israel, for a gin and for a snare to the inhabitants of Jerusalem. And many among them shall stumble, and fall, and be broken, and be snared, and be taken’ (ISAIAH 8:14–15). Again the meaning is clear: ‘When the stone of Israel comes, he shall be a sanctuary for the righteous; they shall find peace and safety under the shelter of his gospel; but he shall be a Stone of Stumbling and a Rock of Offense (as also a gin and a snare) to the rebellious and disobedient in Jerusalem and in all Israel. They shall stumble and fall because of him; they shall take offense because of his teachings and be condemned and broken and snared and taken for rejecting them.’ During his mortal ministry, our Lord discussed this very prophecy with his disciples and said that ‘on whomsoever this stone shall fall, it shall grind him to powder’ (Commentary I, pp. 590–595).”²² And today, we may say that the Book of Mormon is playing a like role. Some recognize the words of the Savior in this wonderful book and others have taken offense and rejected the message. This is so well expressed by Nephi: “And now, my beloved brethren, and also Jew, and all ye ends of the earth, hearken unto these words and believe in Christ; and if ye believe not in these

¹⁹ McConkie, Bruce R. Doctrinal New Testament Commentary. (3 vols.). Salt Lake City, Utah: Bookcraft, 1965–1973. Vol. II.

²⁰ Jeffrey R. Holland, However Long and Hard the Road, p.23 (see also p. 24).

²¹ Ephraim and Judah.

²² Bruce R. McConkie, Doctrinal New Testament Commentary, 3:293.

words believe in Christ. And if ye shall believe in Christ ye will believe in these words, for they are the words of Christ, and he hath given them unto me; and they teach all men that they should do good. And if they are not the words of Christ, judge ye—for Christ will show unto you, with power and great glory, that they are his words, at the last day; and you and I shall stand face to face before his bar; and ye shall know that I have been commanded of him to write these things, notwithstanding my weakness” (2 Nephi 33:10–11). ¶ A tried stone, a precious corner [stone], a sure foundation. Gill explains that King Messiah was tried, “... by the Old Testament saints, and by saints in all ages, who have ventured their souls on him, and laid the whole stress of their salvation upon him, and have been saved by him; by Satan, and his principalities and powers, by his temptations of him in the wilderness, and by his attacks upon him in the garden, and on the cross, and found him to be an immovable stone, and were broken by him; and by his divine Father, who tried his faithfulness by trusting him with all his elect, and the salvation of them; and his great strength, by laying upon him all their sins, and the punishment due unto them.” And even today, the Old Covenant promise is in force: “...prove me now herewith, saith the LORD of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it.” This is a promise that stands not only in regard to the principle of tithing, but upon all of the Gospel principles. Christ is a precious corner stone and a sure foundation. Rabshakeh had one thing right when he said: “Lo, thou trustest in the staff of this broken reed, on Egypt; whereon if a man lean, it will go into his hand, and pierce it: so is Pharaoh king of Egypt to all that trust in him” (ISAIAH 36:6). Indeed, Christ is our true foundation, and if we put our trust in Him—and not in Egypt or the flesh of man—all will be well with us. ¶ He that believeth shall not make haste. In other words, all who put their trust in Christ can live in peace. Barnes explains: “The Hebrew word יָחִישׁ, from חָיֵשׂ, means properly ‘to make haste;’ and then to urge on; and then to be afraid, to flee. The idea is derived from one who is alarmed, and flees to a place of safety. The specific thought here is that of a man on whose house the tempest beats, and who apprehends that the foundation is insecure, and leaves it to seek a more safe position. The prophet says here, that the foundation on which Zion was reared would be so firm that if a man trusted to that he would have no cause of alarm, however, much the storms should beat around it. The same idea essentially is conveyed in the version of the Septuagint, and by Paul and Peter, where it is rendered ‘shall not be ashamed,’ or ‘confounded.’ That is, he shall have no reason to be ashamed of his confidence in the firm foundation; he shall not flee from it as a man does who puts his trust in that which fails him in the day of trial.” Calvin, after quoting Paul (Romans 9:33; 10:11) explains: “The design of the Prophet is to shew, that they who believe will have peace and serenity of mind, so that they shall not desire anything more, and shall not wander in uncertainty, or hasten to seek other remedies, but shall be fully satisfied with this alone. That is not a departure from the meaning, for the word signifying to make haste conveys the idea of eagerness or trembling.”

17 Judgment also will I lay to the line, and righteousness to the plummet: and the hail shall sweep away the refuge of lies, and the waters shall overflow the hiding place.

Judgment also will I lay to the line, and righteousness to the plummet: The Targum (ܬ) has, “And I will make judgment straight as a line of a building, and justice as a plummet, because you would hide yourselves from the coming distress, the nations shall lead you into captivity.” The LXX (Ϛ) reads, “And I will establish judgment for hope, and my mercy shall be for scales.” The Lamsa Peshitta (ܣ) has, for the first clause, “And I will make justice to the measuring line.” The Douay-Rheims (Ϛ) has, “And I will set judgment in weight, and justice in measure.” ¶ Barnes explains, “The line is used by a carpenter for measuring; the plummet consists of a piece of lead attached to a string, and is also used by carpenters to obtain a perpendicular line. A carpenter works exactly according to the lines which are thus indicated, or his frame would not be properly adjusted.” Wildberger observes, “Both the plumb line and the sounding lead are to be taken symbolically as well, since they refer to מִשְׁפָּט (justice) and צְדָקָה (righteousness). These two concepts provided the very measuring tool that Yahweh used when judgment was described in the song of the vineyard (ISAIAH 5:7).” Gill has, “A metaphor taken from builders, who in building use the line and plummet to carry on their work even and regular, retaining such stones as agree thereunto, and rejecting such as do not.” Luther similarly has, “I will weigh out justice with a balance, that is, I will make a distinction between the good and the bad. I will not be so rash that I will destroy the good with the bad, nor ... will [I] not punish the bad for the sake of the good, but I will first separate the good from the bad. As a carpenter, who marks off with the plummet what must be cut off, so I will put the measure and rule around this stone to determine who is to be saved and who is to be cast off.” Jenour explains: “So would God, as it were, measure the actions and characters of those who professed to belong to his church, by the line of his infallible justice, and with the plummet of his perfect righteousness.” Calvin here makes some interesting comments about the apostasy and restoration of the Lord’s Church—which fit so well with the subject of ISAIAH 28–29: “He shews that God has in his hand the ready means of forming the Church entirely anew. As he lately mentioned a building, so now, by a different metaphor, he shews that there is no reason to fear that God will not at length finish the work of building which has been begun. Yet indirectly he reproves the pride and insolence of those who wished to be accounted pillars of the Church, while they were endeavoring, as far as lay in their power, to raze it to the foundation. Although, in consequence of an almost total extinction of the light of faith, and a frightful corruption of the worship of God, the state of the people was hideous... I do not deny [regarding line and plummet] that he alludes to the examination of weights; but both metaphors are taken from buildings, in which the master-builders and masons try everything by a rule, in order to preserve a due proportion in every part. Thus it is said that the Lord administers equal judgment, when he restores the Church, in which otherwise everything is disordered and confused, as in a hideous ruin... He makes the same statement concerning ‘righteousness,’ ... The meaning is, that this foundation is laid, not only that the Church may be commenced, but that it may be perfectly restored, to use a common phrase, ‘from top to bottom’ (De fonds en comble).” ¶ And the hail shall sweep away the refuge of lies, and the waters shall overflow the hiding place. The LXX (6) reads, “But as for you who have vainly trusted in falsehood, that the tempest would not reach you.” The Douay-Rheims (9) has, “And hail shall overturn the hope of falsehood: and waters shall overflow its protection.” The expression waters shall overflow reminds us of the Assyrian invasion (ISAIAH 8:7). The refuge of lies is the leaning upon Egypt, Assyria, Babylon or any great force—intellectual, academic, or worldly—rather than upon the Lord. Also, the refuge of lies implies leaning upon false doctrine.

18 And your covenant with death shall be disannulled, and your agreement with hell shall not stand; when the overflowing scourge shall pass through, then ye shall be trodden down by it. ✓

✓ a treading down to it

And your covenant with death shall be disannulled, and your agreement with hell shall not stand. The LXX (6) reads, “And that it would not break your treaty with death; the hope which you have with respect to the grave shall not last.” The Douay-Rheims (9) has, “And your league with death shall be abolished, and your covenant with hell shall not stand.” Certainly, Satan will not stand by those with whom he has covenanted with. ¶ When it says disannulled (from כִּפֶּר, to cover over, expiate, destroy, make void), it means that this covenant will be utterly useless. In D&C we read: “And verily I say unto you, that the conditions of this law are these: All covenants, contracts, bonds, obligations, oaths, vows, performances, connections, associations, or expectations, that are not made and entered into and sealed by the Holy Spirit of promise, of him who is anointed, both as well for time and for all eternity, and that too most holy, by revelation and commandment through the medium of mine anointed, whom I have appointed on the earth to hold this power (and I have appointed unto my servant Joseph to hold this power in the last days, and there is never but one on the earth at a time on whom this power and the keys of this priesthood are conferred), are of no efficacy, virtue, or force in and after the resurrection from the dead; for all contracts that are not made unto this end have an end when men are dead” (D&C 132:7). ¶ When the overflowing scourge shall pass through, then ye shall be trodden down by it. The Targum (7) has, “When the stroke of the enemy shall come upon you, it shall be like an overwhelming river, and ye shall be unto them for a treading under foot.” The LXX (6) reads, “When the furious tempest cometh, by it you shall be beaten down.” Applying this verse to the time of Isaiah (for instance, see ISAIAH 8:7) as many exegetes do, Kaiser says, “Thus ISAIAH 28:18 explicitly states that the pact with death and the underworld will be of no use when the flood, or to abandon the metaphor, the Assyrian army, sweeps over the land and claims its victims.” ¶ The Doctrine and Covenants speaks directly to this overflowing scourge in the last days: “And in that day shall be heard of wars and rumors of wars, and the whole earth shall be in commotion, and men’s hearts shall fail them, and they shall say that Christ delayeth his coming until the end of the earth. And the love of men shall wax cold, and iniquity shall abound. And when the times of the Gentiles is come in, a light shall break forth among them that sit in darkness, and it shall be the fulness of my gospel; But they receive it not; for they perceive not the light, and they turn their hearts from me because of the precepts of men. And in that generation shall the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled. And there shall be men standing in that generation, that shall not pass until they shall see an overflowing scourge; for a desolating sickness shall cover the land. But my disciples shall stand in holy places, and shall not be moved; but among the wicked, men shall lift up their voices and curse God and die. And there shall be earthquakes also in divers places, and many desolations; yet men will harden their hearts against me, and they will take up the sword, one against another, and they will kill one another” (D&C 45:26–33).

19 From the time that it goeth forth it shall take you: for morning by morning shall it pass over, by day and by night: and it shall be a vexation only [to] understand the report.[✓]

✓ or, when he shall make you to understand doctrine

From the time that it goeth forth it shall take you: for morning by morning shall it pass over, by day and by night: The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “At the time of its passing by, it shall lead you captive, because each morning it shall pass you by, by day and by night.” The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “When it cometh it will overtake you. Early, very early in the morning it will come, and at night.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲯ) has, “Whensoever it shall pass through, it shall take you away: because in the morning early it shall pass through, in the day and in the night.” The overflowing scourge spoken about in the previous verse will be unrelenting, as shown by the expression day and night (see also ISAIAH 21:11–12). ¶ And it shall be a vexation only [to] understand the report. It is of interest that the words understand doctrine

[יְבִין שְׁמוּעָה] in ISAIAH 28:9 are precisely the same as those found here (see the margin ||) in a slightly different context, understand the report [יְבִין שְׁמוּעָה]. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “And it shall come to pass before the time of the curse shall have come, that ye shall consider the words of the prophets.” The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “Your hope will be wretched. Learn to hear.” The BPE (Ⲯ) has, for the last clause, “Only the message shall be understood.” Instead of vexation, the Lamsa Peshitta (Ⲯ) has, terror. The Douay-Rheims (Ⲯ) has, “And vexation alone shall make you understand what you hear.” The Masoretic text (ⲙ) has “And it shall be only vexation (וְהָיָה רֶק־זוּעָה) &c.” (of special interest to us as LDS, as וְהָיָה is often translated as either and it came to pass or and it shall come to pass), while the DSS 1QIsa^a (Ⲯ) is missing the expression וְהָיָה and we simply have רֶק זוּעָה. Rashi (in Rabbi Rosenberg) explains: “Terror for all those who hear, to understand the messages of the harsh retributions that I will bring upon you. Kay points out that the word vexation also appears in Rain in Due Season, i.e., in Deuteronomy 28:25 where we have to be removed, KJV, לְזַעֲוָה while here we have it as vexation זוּעָה [see BDB, “object of trembling, terror, fright”]. Both acceptations are correct, and indeed to be removed was a terror to the children of Jacob. Kaiser sees this and the coming verses as eschatological. The Prophet Joseph

Smith wrote about this verse in the context of preaching the gospel and helping people to “save themselves from this untoward generation.” Not infrequently the prophets have been permitted to see the future and have become ill with the visions of impending disasters over the earth or particular nations. The Prophet Joseph Smith said: “The servants of God will not have gone over the nations of the Gentiles, with a warning voice, until the destroying angel will commence to waste the inhabitants of the earth, and as the prophet hath said, ‘It shall be a vexation to hear the report.’ I speak thus because I feel for my fellow men; I do it in the name of the Lord, being moved upon by the Holy Spirit. Oh, that I could snatch them from the vortex of misery, into which I behold them plunging themselves, by their sins; that I might be enabled by the warning voice, to be an instrument of bringing them to unfeigned repentance, that they might have faith to stand in the evil day!”²³ Also see notes on President Wilford Woodruff’s vision under ISAIAH 2:12.

20 For the bed is shorter than that [a man] can stretch himself [on it]: and the covering narrower than that he can wrap himself [in it].

The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “For their strength shall be diminished by reason of mighty slavery; and the government of the oppressor shall increase their subjection. The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “We are straitened for room, we cannot fight. We are weakened by your pressing upon us.” The BPE (Ⲯ) has, “For the garment is too short to cover, there is not sufficient thread to finish it.” The Lamsa Peshitta (Ⲯ) has, “For the cloth is too short, and the warp grows weak and is insufficient for a garment.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲯ) has, “For the bed is straitened, so that one must fall out, and a short covering cannot cover both.” The Masoretic text (ⲙ) includes the word narrower (צָרָה) which is absent from the DSS 1QIsa^a (Ⲯ). Instead of stretching himself (מִדְשָׁתָרֵעַ) as in the Masoretic text (ⲙ), in the DSS 1QIsa^a (Ⲯ) we have stretching themselves (מִשְׁתַּרְיִם). For a little humor, we read: “Robert Teske of the Leiden Branch, The Hague Netherlands Stake, is a little over 6 feet, 8 inches tall. When he returned from serving a mission, he said in a sacrament meeting talk, ‘During my mission, a prophecy of Isaiah was fulfilled.’ He then turned to ISAIAH 28:20 and quoted, ‘For the bed is shorter than that a man can stretch himself on it ...’”²⁴

²³ Smith, Joseph, History of the Church, 2:263.

²⁴ C. de Bruijn, Amstelveen, the Netherlands. On the Bright Side, LDS Church News, 9 September 1995.

¶ Faussett explains: “Proverbial, for they shall find all their sources of confidence fail them; all shall be hopeless perplexity in their affairs.” Barnes has: “So it would be with those who sought protection in idols, in the promises of false prophets, and in the aid which might be obtained from Egypt.” Jennings rather, speaks of the apostates and their false doctrine: “The apostates had made a comfortable bed for themselves, as they assumed; it is too short to permit them to stretch themselves upon it.”

21 For the LORD shall rise up as [in] mount Perazim, he shall be wroth as [in] the valley of Gibeon, that he may do his work, his strange work; and bring to pass his act, his strange act.

For the LORD shall rise up as [in] mount Perazim, he shall be wroth as [in] the valley of Gibeon. The Targum (ܬ) has, “For as the mountains trembled when the glory of the Lord was revealed in the days of King Uzziah, and in the wonders which He performed for Joshua in the valley of Gibeon, taking vengeance on the wicked, who had transgressed against His Word.” The LXX (Ϛ) reads, “Like a mountain of wicked men the Lord will rise up; and he will be in the valley of Gabaon.” The Peshitta (ܫ) has mountain pass instead of mount Perazim. The Douay-Rheims (ܝ) has, “For the Lord shall stand up as in the mountain of divisions: he shall be angry as in the valley which is in Gabaon.” The DSS 1QIsa^a (ϙ) reads in mount Perazim (בְּהַר פְּרָצִים) while the Masoretic text (מ) has as mount Pertzim (כְּהַר-פֶּרְצִים). Likewise, the DSS 1QIsa^a (ϙ) reads in valley (בְּעֵמֶק) of Gibeon, while the Masoretic text (מ) has as valley (כְּעֵמֶק) of Gibeon. ¶ For as mount Peratzim, כִּי כְהַר-פְּרָצִים. This spot near the Valley of Rephaim, near Jerusalem, is considered to be the same as mentioned in 2 Samuel 5:20; 1 Chronicles 14:11, where David triumphed over the Philistines. It is there referred to as Baal-Perazim, “בַּעַל-פְּרָצִים; βααλ'φρασεῖν, ‘the lord of breakings through’” (ISBE). Barnes says, “The word ‘Perazim’ is from פָּרַץ, to tear, or break forth, as waters do that have been confined; and is indicative of sudden judgment, and of a complete overthrow.” The Targum (ܬ) makes reference to the great slaughter at Gibeon at the time of Joshua, when “the sun stood still, and the moon stayed, until the people had avenged themselves upon their enemies” (Joshua 10:10, 13). Either way, these victories are used as a type for his strange act—the restoration of the Gospel—to be manifested in the last days. Most all of the Gentile authors suggest that this verse refers to the punishments that God had in mind, as does Jenour, for instance: “I take these verses to a general denunciation of the wrath of God against all those Jews who should refuse to believe in the promised Messiah, and prefer rather to trust in an arm of flesh.” In reality, it is a prediction of the bringing forth of the Book of Mormon and the restoration of the Gospel. ¶ That he may do his work, his strange work; and bring to pass his act, his strange act. The Targum (ܬ) has, “So shall he be revealed to take vengeance on them, who work works, strange works, and on those who worship with idolatrous worship.” The LXX (Ϛ) reads, “With wrath he will execute his work—a work of bitterness; and his wrath will attack in a strange manner; and its severity will be unusual.” That he may do his work, his strange work: that he may perform his work, his work is strange to him.” ¶ Cowles says, “‘Strange’ is here in the sense of peculiar, extraordinary, wonderful.” This fits in perfectly with the coming forth of the Book of Mormon and the restoration of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. Jennings explains that the strange work is God’s work. Calvin says, “For my own part, I consider ‘strange’ to mean simply what is uncommon or wonderful; for this appellation is given to what is rare and unusual among men, and we know that they almost always view with astonishment whatever is new.” Young adds, “Apparently what Isaiah means (although the language is difficult and one must not be dogmatic), is that what it to take place is something unusual, foreign from the ordinary course of providence.” But here agreement ends. The exegetes think the strange work and act revolve around punishment, rather than upon the light of the Gospel that would shine in the night of apostasy. I only found that Alexander questions this view so prevalent with all the exegetes: “The English word strange is here the only satisfactory equivalent to the two Hebrew adjectives’ נִכְרִי²⁵ and נִכְרִיָּה. The idea that punishment is God’s strange work because at variance with his goodness, is not only less appropriate in this connection, but inconsistent with the tenor of Scripture, which describes his vindictory justice as an essential attribute of his nature.”

¶ Returning to the pruning and vineyard motif of previous chapters, we get a greater hint as to what this strange act may consist of in Doctrine and Covenants: “For the preparation wherewith I design to prepare mine apostles to prune my vineyard for the last time, that I may bring to pass my strange act, that I may pour out my Spirit upon all flesh” (D&C 95:4). The Prophet Joseph Smith said: “The Lord has a hand in bringing to pass his strange act, and proving the Book of Mormon true in the eyes of all the people.”²⁶ Brother Joseph continues to explain that “the world will prove Joseph Smith a true prophet by circumstantial evidence” and then goes on to quote the history of the Quiche people of Guatemala and their knowledge of their Hebrew heritage. (My daughter Cristina spent time among the Quiche in Guatemala and recognized one of the words I was learning in Hebrew as also used by these people.) Monte Nyman writes, “The Lord probably calls his work a strange event because the world does not usually rely upon the Spirit to prove things. Oliver Cowdery said the angel Moroni told Joseph Smith that this strange act would bring about a marvelous work and a wonder, and that the scripture in Isaiah was about to be fulfilled (see MA, February 1835, p. 79).” From Elder Neal A. Maxwell we read the following observations, “President Brigham Young, while testifying of the restored and living Church, gave this practical caution: ‘This is the kingdom that was to be set up in the last days. It is like a stone taken from the mountain without hands, with all its roughness, with all its disfigured appearance—uncomely—even a stumbling-block and a stone of offence to the nations of the earth’ (Journal of Discourses 5:75. We are, in fact, a part of what at least in some respects is regarded in the eyes of the world as a ‘strange work,’ ‘disfigured’ and ‘uncomely’ (see ISAIAH 28:21).”²⁷ Elder Maxwell further states on this matter of a strange act, “The Restoration cannot be ‘a marvelous work and a wonder’ without at the same time being seen by some as unlikely, unusual, and unexpected.”²⁸

²⁵ Although נִכְרִי also means peculiar (LHI).

22 Now therefore be ye not mockers, lest your bands be made strong: for I have heard from the Lord GOD of hosts a consumption, even determined upon the whole earth.

Now therefore be ye not mockers, lest your bands be made strong: The Targum (Ⓣ) has, “deal not wickedly” rather than “be ye not mockers.” The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “As for you therefore, be not filled with joy, yet let not your bonds gather strength.” Instead of bands be made strong, the Peshitta (Ⓢ) has lest your chastisement be severe (Lamsa) / that thy punishment might not be severe (BPE). The Douay-Rheims (ⓓ) has, “And now do not mock, lest your bonds be tied strait.” The Masoretic text (Ⓜ) has Lord LORD (Adonai YHWH), ²⁶ Teachings of the Prophet Joseph Smith (TPJS), p. 267.

²⁷ Maxwell, Neal A. If Thou Endure It Well. Salt Lake City, Utah: Bookcraft, 1996, p. 34.

²⁸ Maxwell, Neal A. Lord, Increase Our Faith. Salt Lake City, Utah: Bookcraft, 1994, p. 57.

אֲדֹנָי יְהוָה rather than just LORD (YHWH) יְהוָה, as is found in the DSS 1QIsa^a (Ⓢ).²⁹ Kay also sees a connection between ISAIAH 28:22, 29 and the marvelous work and a wonder in ISAIAH 29:14. Indeed “the wisdom of their wise men shall perish, and the understanding of their prudent men shall be hid.” ¶ For I have heard from the Lord GOD of hosts a consumption, even determined upon the whole earth. The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “For the things are complete and decisive which I have heard from the Lord of Hosts—which he will execute on all this land.” Instead of a consumption, even determined the Peshitta (Ⓢ) has devastation and judgment (BPE) / destruction and judgment (Lamsa). The Douay-Rheims (ⓓ) has, “For I have heard of the Lord the God of hosts a consumption and a cutting short upon all the earth.” Reference is again made of the judgment that would fall upon the whole earth in the last days, a vexation only to understand the report.

vv. 23–29. Regarding these next verses, Birks explains: “Here the solemn warning has a striking close. A parable is drawn from the various processes of husbandry, to teach us the deep and hidden wisdom of God in His moral government of the church and of the world. However strange some of those processes to the inexperienced, they all concur in securing one main result, the harvest. So too all the ways of God in His holy providence conspire to one great end, a blessed harvest of purified and ransomed souls.” We may take note, also, that not only does the Lord harvest with much care, but also plants each seed in the locale that best fits its needs (Jacob 5).

23 ¶ Give ye ear, and hear my voice; hearken, and hear my speech.

The Targum (Ⓣ) makes these words explicitly introduced by the prophet, and instead of my speech has my Word or to my Meimra, “לְמִימְרֵי.” The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “Listen and hear my voice; attend and hearken to these words of mine.” To give ear means to listen, as does hearken (see 1 Samuel 15:22). Behind the idea of listening and hearkening is that of obedience. Lowth writes: “The prophet concludes with an explanation and defense of God’s method of dealing with his people in an elegant parable or allegory; in which he employs a variety of images, all taken from the science of agriculture. As the husbandman uses various methods in preparing his land, and adapting it to the several kinds of seeds to be sown, with a due observation of times and seasons; and when he hath gathered in his harvest, employs methods as various in separating the corn from the straw and the chaff by different instruments, according to the nature of the different sorts of grain: so God, with unerring wisdom, and with strict justice, instructs, admonishes, and corrects his people; chastises and punishes them in various ways, as the exigence of the case requires; now more moderately, now more severely; always tempering justice with mercy; in order to reclaim the wicked, to improve the good, and, finally, to separate the one from the other.”

²⁹ The AV follows the Jewish tradition of reading these as Lord God, rather than repeating of the words Adonai ADONAI, Lord LORD.

24 Doth the plowman plow all day to sow? doth he open and break the clods of his ground?

The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “The prophets prophesied at all times in order to teach, if peradventure the ears of sinners might be opened, and receive instruction.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Will the ploughman plough the whole day? Or prepare seed before he hath tilled the ground?” Instead of open and break the clods the Peshitta (Ⲫ) has picking up and breaking up (BPE) / open and harrow (Lamsa). The Douay-Rheims (Ⲱ) has, for the second half, “Shall he open and harrow his ground?”

Henderson explains, “כָּל הַיּוֹם, literally all the day, an idiom for always, continually.” Gill explains it: “By ploughing he prepares the ground for sowing, that is his end in ploughing; and he may plough a whole day together when he is at it, but he does not plough every day in the year; he has other work to do besides ploughing, as is later mentioned; such as breaking of clods, sowing seed, and threshing the grain after it is ripe, and reaped, and gathered.”

25 When he hath made plain the face thereof, doth he not cast abroad the fitches, and scatter the cummin, and cast in the principal wheat and the appointed barley and the rie[✓] in their place?^{✓ ✓ ✓ ✓ ✓}

✓ or, spelt

✓ ✓ border?

✓ ✓ ✓ or, the wheat in the principal place, and barley in the appointed place

When he hath made plain the face thereof, doth he not cast abroad the fitches. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “Is it not so? If the house of Israel would set their faces to do the law, and repent (the Royal Polyglot reads אֶתְּנֶה, ‘I will return’), then behold, He would gather them (the Royal Polyglot reads אֶכְנֶשׁ, ‘I will gather them’)³⁰ from among the nations, amongst whom they were dispersed, like fitches and cummin that are scattered.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Doth he not, when he hath levelled the face of the soil, then sow the small dill or cummin?” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲱ) has, “Will he not, when he hath made plain the surface thereof, sow gith³¹.” ¶ And scatter the cummin, and cast in the principal wheat and the appointed barley and the rie in their place? The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “And, behold, he would bring their offspring together according to their tribes, as seed of wheat in the uncultivated field (the Royal Polyglot reads לְגִנֵּי, ‘garden beds’ or ‘cultivated land’), and barley in the appointed place, and spelt in the borders.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “And again sow wheat and barley and millet and rye in all thy borders?” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲱ) has, “And scatter cummin, and put wheat in order, and barley, and millet, and vetches in their bounds?”

26 For his God doth instruct him to discretion, [and] doth teach him.[✓]

✓ or, And he bindeth it in such sort as his God doeth teach him

The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “All these things are instruction of judgment (the Royal Polyglot reads לְחֹן אֱלֹפִין דְּרִין, ‘all these things are to their instruction, that the generations may know &c.’), that they may know, that our God shows them the right path, in which they ought to walk.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “So thou shalt be corrected by the judgment of God; and be made glad.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲱ) has, “For he will instruct him in judgment: his God will teach him.” Birks explains: “The word yasar [יָסַר] here, based on the root יָסַר, to chastise, or train by discipline, is here very fitly applied to the whole process of agriculture ; and mishpat [מִשְׁפָּט], judgment, refers to the wise, orderly method, in which the whole work needs to be carried on. The verse refers alike to what has gone before, and to that which follows; and thus connects the whole by the common lesson of man’s dependence on a wisdom that comes from God.” Rabbi Joseph Kimhi (in Rabbi Rosenberg) has, “The farmer, so to speak, chastens the earth by breaking the hard clods. Then his God causes rain to fall upon it.”

27 For the fitches are not threshed with a threshing instrument, neither is a cart

³⁰ Pauli suggests that it should rather be יִקְרֶב, “and he shall bring together.”

³¹ Gith is a type of pepper, see Noah Webster’s 1828 dictionary.

wheel turned about upon the cummin; but the fitches are beaten out with a staff, and the cummin with a rod.

For the fitches are not threshed with a threshing instrument, neither is a cart wheel turned about upon the cummin. Alexander explains: “Nothing more is necessary here to the correct understanding of the verse than a just view of the contrast intended between heavy and light threshing.” The Targum (Ⲯ) makes the threshing instrument iron. The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “For the dill is not cleaned with a corn drag; nor is the wheel of a wain to turn round on the cumin.” The Lamsa Peshitta (Ⲯ) has, “under the feet of oxen” rather than threshing instrument.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲯ) has, “For gith shall not be thrashed with saws, neither shall the cart wheel turn about upon cumin.” Henderson explains the general idea: “We have here a description of the different implements used in threshing [trilla in Spanish]. The תָּרִיץ [i.e., sharp] in full, מִזְרֵג תָּרִיץ [sharp threshing sled] ISAIAH 41:15, was a kind of sledge drawn by two oxen, in the front of which stood the driver on his knees, or sat on a piece of wood fixed crossways on the car. Under this machine were rollers of wood, with sharp stones, or pieces of iron, by which the straw was cut in pieces, and the grain separated from the ears. The עֲגִלָּה was also a cart [ISAIAH 28:28], but differed from the former by its having wheels instead of rollers, which, being serrated, produced the same effect, when drawn over the corn. Besides oxen, both horses and asses were employed in drawing these instruments; and, as appears from this passage, horses were made to perform the operation merely by treading out the grain, as they still do in different parts of the East [as well as the trilla de yeguas in Chile, where mares would trample over the cut grain and help separate the seed kernels from the straw]. When the quantity was small, or when more minute kinds of seed were to be threshed out, a flail or switch was used, with which it was beat.” ¶ But the fitches are beaten out with a staff, and the cummin with a rod. The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “But with a rod are beaten out the dill—and cummin.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲯ) has, “But gith shall be beaten out with a rod, and cummin with a staff.” Rashi explains that these do not need the harshness of a wooden threshing implement, “for its seed is easily extracted from within its straw, and, likewise, on cumin they do not turn the wheel of a wagon to thresh it, because the black cumin is easily beaten with a staff and the cumin with the rod.”

28 Bread [corn] is bruised; because he will not ever be threshing it, nor break [it with] the wheel of his cart, nor bruise it [with] his horsemen.

The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “Corn³² they tread out, yet they will not continue to tread it out for ever; but he will throw it into confusion with the wheel of his wain,³³ and would separate the corn, and blow away the chaff.” The LXX (Ⲯ) reads, “Yet with bread they will be eaten. For I, the I Am (Brenton and NETS do not fill the ellipsis) will not be angry with you forever, nor shall the voice of my severity destroy you.” The Lamsa Peshitta (Ⲯ) has, “Grain is threshed for our sakes because man would not otherwise be threshing it, nor break it with many wheels of his threshing instruments, nor crush it under the feet of his oxen.” The BPE (Ⲯ) has, “For our sakes the grain is threshed, but it shall not be threshed indefinitely with the many wheels of the thresher, nor with the hoofs of the beasts shall it be crushed.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲯ) has, “But bread corn shall be broken small: but the thrasher shall not thrash it for ever, neither shall the cart wheel hurt it, nor break it with its teeth.” The DSS 1QIsa^a (Ⲯ) reads and it [is] crushed (וְיִדָּק), 4QIsa^k (Ⲯ) reads and [the] grain [is] crushed (וְיִדָּק לֶחֶם יוֹדָק), as does the Masoretic text (ⲙ), except it is missing the and, thus we read [the] grain (i.e., bread, or grain seed) [is] crushed (לֶחֶם יוֹדָק). Ibn Ezra explains: “That he shall not bruise it always.” Regarding verses 27 and 28, Lowth explains: “Four methods of threshing are here mentioned, by different instruments; the flail, the drag, the wain, and the treading of the cattle... The drag consisted of a sort of frame of strong planks, made rough at the bottom, with hard stones or iron: it was drawn by horses or oxen over the corn sheaves spread on the floor, the driver sitting upon it... The wain was much like the former; but had wheels with iron teeth, or edges like a saw ... by which it would seem that the axle was armed with iron teeth or serrated wheels throughout... This not only forced out the grain, but cut the straw in pieces for fodder for the cattle; for in the eastern countries they have no hay... The last method is well known from the law of Moses, which ‘forbids the ox to be muzzled, when he treadeth out the corn;’ Deuteronomy 25:4.” Henderson explains, “The practical idea conveyed is, that God mingles mercy with his judgments. His design is not to crush his people, but to render them fit for becoming useful subjects of his government; so that when these judgments have answered their end, they shall cease.”

³² Not maize, but rather grains (see ISAIAH 17:5).

³³ “A wagon; a carriage for the transportation of goods on wheels,” in Noah Webster’s 1828 Dictionary.

29 This also cometh forth from the LORD of hosts, [which] is wonderful in counsel, [and] excellent in working.

The Targum (T) has, beginning with the second clause, “Who in the vast knowledge of His mind hath established the world; He hath multiplied His works in the beginning (בְּרִישִׁית),³⁴ occurs also in the sense of creation... hence, we may render here ‘He hath multiplied His works of the creation.’ מַעֲשֵׂה בְּרִישִׁית, ‘the work of creation’ is a common phrase in the Rabbinical writings) by His great wisdom.” The LXX (G) reads, “These wonders have indeed proceeded from the Lord of Hosts.” The Peshitta (S) renders excellent in working, as excellent in instruction. The Douay-Rheims (V) has, “This also is come forth from the Lord God of hosts, to make his counsel wonderful, and magnify justice.” ¶ Barnes writes: “This also cometh—That is, these various devices for threshing his grain comes from the Lord no less than the skill with which he tills his land (see ISAIAH 28:26). And excellent in working—Or rather, who magnifies (תַּגְדִּיל) his wisdom (תוֹשִׁיָה). This word properly means wisdom, or understanding Job 11:6; 12:16; 26:3; Proverbs 3:21; 8:14; 18:1. The idea of the prophet is, that God, who had so wisely taught the farmer, and who had instructed him to use such various methods in his husbandry, would also be himself wise, and would pursue similar methods with his people. He would not always pursue the same unvarying course, but would vary his dispensations as they should need, and as would best secure their holiness and happiness.” Redak (in Rabbi Rosenberg) explains that “The plowman is the Almighty, and the earth is Israel. Just as the plowman prepares the earth to receive seed, so did the Almighty prepare Israel to accept His words.” He goes on to explain how He took his people out of Egypt in the exodus and continues on until He gives them doctrine through the Torah. And we add, through the Book of Mormon.

20 June 2012

³⁴ See the King Follett sermon to see the Prophet Joseph Smith’s inspired exposition on Genesis 1:1 and בְּרִישִׁית.

Isaiah 29

This is one of the most glorious chapters in Holy Writ. It declares the coming forth of that book of books, as Elder Parley P. Pratt called the Book of Mormon. The Lord, in His mercy, made provisions for the descendants of the Lamanites to hear the word in the last days (see Enos 1:12–13). The writings of the Nephite prophets—as well as the Jaredites—were to come forth as the Book of Mormon many centuries after these prophets lived upon the earth. This book, together with the Bible, bears the most solemn witness of the divinity of Christ. To really understand ISAIAH 29 one must ponder and study 2 Nephi 25–33.

The following verses are intimately associated with ISAIAH 29, and are found in 2 Nephi 26:14–20. In them we see the setting of the coming forth of the Book of Mormon. There are many others also found in 2 Nephi 25–33.

14 But behold, I [Nephi] prophesy unto you concerning the last days [the time when the Church of Jesus Christ would once again be restored upon the earth]; concerning the days when the Lord God shall bring these things [the Book of Mormon] forth unto the children of men.

15 After my seed [the Nephites] and the seed of my brethren [the Lamanites] shall have dwindled in unbelief [as both the Nephites and Lamanites would turn away from the Lord and the Church of Jesus Christ], and shall have been smitten by the Gentiles [after the European colonists conquer the American continent and subdue the Lamanites]; yea, after the Lord God shall have camped against them [the Nephite nation] round about, and shall have laid siege against them with a mount, and raised forts against them; and after they shall have been brought down low in the dust, even that they are not [the Nephite nation shall be extinguished], yet the words of the righteous shall be written [the Book of Mormon will contain the words of the righteous prophets], and the prayers of the faithful shall be heard [such as the prophet Enos and others], and all those who have dwindled in unbelief [the Lamanite nation] shall not be forgotten.

16 For those who shall be destroyed [the Nephites] shall speak unto them out of the ground [representing the Book of Mormon, that would be buried and brought forth out of the ground], and their speech shall be low out of the dust, and their voice shall be as one that hath a familiar spirit [all of these are various ways of representing the Holy Ghost, speaking forth and bearing witness of the truth spoken by the Nephite Prophets long buried as well as the words of the Plates of Brass or the Bible]; for the Lord God will give unto him power [to the Prophet Joseph Smith, in terms of being able to translate the words into English so they transmit the message with power], that he may whisper concerning them, even as it were out of the ground; and their speech shall whisper out of the dust [through the Book of Mormon that will be unburied and the testimonies of the prophets of the Book of Mormon].

17 For thus saith the Lord God: They shall write the things which shall be done among them, and they shall be written and sealed up in a book [the Book of Mormon¹], and those who have dwindled in unbelief [the Nephite and Lamanite nations of old] shall not have them, for they seek to destroy the things of God.

18 Wherefore, as those who have been destroyed have been destroyed speedily [both those at time of crucifixion and final battles around Cumorah]; and the multitude of their terrible ones shall be as chaff that passeth away—yea, thus saith the Lord God: It shall be at an instant, suddenly—[both those at time of crucifixion and final battles around Cumorah]

¹ Not just the sealed portion of the plates is considered 'sealed.' Nephi also uses this word when describing the return of the Book of Mormon plates to the Lord after its translation: "For after the book of which I have spoken shall come forth, and be written unto the Gentiles, and sealed up again unto the Lord, there shall be many which shall believe the words which are written; and they shall carry them forth unto the remnant of our seed" (2 Nephi 30:3b).

 19 And it shall come to pass, that those who have dwindled in unbelief [the remnant of the Lamanite nation at the time that the European settlers arrive in America] shall be smitten by the hand of the Gentiles [the European settlers].
 20 And the Gentiles are lifted up in the pride of their eyes [the European settlers], and have stumbled, because of the greatness of their stumbling block [pride and blindness so they could not recognize Christ], that they have built up many churches; nevertheless, they put down the power and miracles of God, and preach up unto themselves their own wisdom and their own learning, that they may get gain and grind upon the face of the poor [thus requiring that the Lord re-establish the Church of Jesus Christ once again, rather than reform any of the existing churches of the time].

Nephi prophecies of the last days when the Book of Mormon shall come forth. This will happen after both the Nephites and Lamanites will have fallen away from the true Church. The Nephites will have been surrounded by the Lamanites and conquered despite all their former strength. The Nephite nation will be destroyed speedily about 400 BC and the inhabitants of the continent will also suffer great upheavals at the time of the crucifixion of the Savior. It will be after the European colonists conquer the American continent and subdue the Lamanites that the Book of Mormon will come forth. The Book of Mormon will contain the words of the righteous prophets and these words will testify to the descendants of the Lamanites and of the whole earth. The prayers of the faithful—such as Enos of whom we have already mentioned in ISAIAH 28:5—will be fulfilled in that the descendants of the Lamanites will receive this book and be moved by the Spirit. The words of the Book of Mormon shall “speak from the ground.” The Prophet Joseph Smith would play a key role in bringing forth these words in the last days. Through the power of the Holy Ghost, the words of the book will testify to all: Lamanite, Jew and Gentile. The Book of Mormon will be published at the last day (1) after the Nephites and Lamanites will have apostatized, (2) after the remaining Lamanites will have been humbled by the Gentile nations; and (3) at a time when the Gentile nations will be full of pride—at a time when they will have built many churches, but none unto God; at a time when they shall deny that God has any intercourse with man; at a time when miracles will be denied; and at a time when churches take advantage of the poor to build themselves up. At the last days all nations shall gather against Jerusalem. They will no more succeed than a hungry person can quench thirst or hunger in a dream.

vv. 1–8. Ariel (אֶרְיֶל), or Jerusalem (יְרוּשָׁלַיִם), or the City of David (עִיר דָּוִד), to include the Temple Mount, would be destroyed. One like Ariel, that is, the Nephite people, would likewise be destroyed. The people would continue to offer sacrifices upon the temple altar even after Christ would give His life for us. As a consequence, distress would come upon both of these Ariels (Jerusalem and the Nephite cities). After the destruction of the Nephites, in the latter days, the voice of the righteous prophets would come forth, as it were, from the ground (as the Book of Mormon plates were so buried).

1 ¶ WOE to Ariel, to Ariel, the city [where] David dwelt! add ye year to year;
 let them kill sacrifices.

✓ or, O Ariel, that is, the lion of God ✓ ✓ or, of the city
 ✓ ✓ ✓ cut off the heads

The Targum (ܬܪܓܡ) has, “Woe to the altar, the altar which is built in the city in which David dwelt; because of the assembly of the armies which are gathering themselves together against her year by year, because the festivals shall cease.” The LXX (Λ) reads, “Hold consultation; exalt vain comfort. Ah city Ariel, against which David fought! collect provisions year after year; eat; for you shall eat with Moab.” Instead of kill sacrifices, the Peshitta (ܫܬܬܐ) has keep festivals (Lamsa) / celebrate the feast [days] (BPE). The BPE footnotes explain that Ariel means Ari-El, or Ari of El (that is, Lion of Elohim or Abode/Home of Elohim). The Douay-Rheims (D) has, “Woe to Ariel, to Ariel the city which David took: year is added to year: the solemnities are at an end.” Ariel is spelled a bit different so that the Masoretic text (M) has אֶרִיאֵל, as also DSS 1QIsa^b (Q), אֶרִיאֵל, while the DSS 1QIsa^a (Q) has replaced the yod for a vav, אֶרְוֵאֵל.² ¶ הוֹי, Woe, greetings, or oh! Jennings says, “Nor is it without tenderness that He here cries, ‘O Ariel, Ariel,’ for the interjection will bear equally well the rendering ‘O’ as ‘Woe.’ Thus we ought to be well prepared to see judgment and mercy mingled in what follows.” See also ISAIAH 18, where הוֹי is given as a greeting rather than a warning. ¶ Ariel, אֶרִיאֵל. There are a number of interpretations for the meaning of this word. In Ezekiel 43:15, אֶרְאֵל it clearly refers to the altar of burnt offerings (see Gesenius, HAL) or an “altar hearth” (WZAT³) from אָרָה, to burn or kindle (Delitzsch); or אֶרֶב, light (Lowth). Since Jerusalem was burnt in 70 AD, it would be easy to think that this is what was meant. The Targum (ܬܪܓܡ) follows this perspective. Others also follow the margin || (e.g., Rawlinson, Barnes, Gill), i.e., the lion of God, for אֶרֶב. Gill suggests: “... it seems better to understand it of the city of Jerusalem, in which David encamped, as the word [dwelt, הִתְחַבֵּר] signifies; or ‘encamped against’, as some; which he besieged, and took from the Jebusites, and fortified, and dwelt in; and which may be so called from its strength and fortifications, natural and artificial, and from its being the chief city of Judah, called a lion, Genesis 49:9 whose standard had a lion on it, and from whence came the Messiah, the Lion of the tribe of Judah...” [Regarding encamped also see notes on ISAIAH 29:3.] Gill adds, “...the words may be considered as of one calling to Jerusalem, and lamenting over it, as Christ did, ‘O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, thou that killest the prophets,’ &c. Matthew 23:37 and the mention of David’s name, and of his dwelling in it, is not only to point out what city is meant, and the greatness and glory of it; but to show that this would not secure it from ruin and destruction.” A second very interesting point about Ariel is that a number of exegetes believe that reference is made to two Ariels. For instance, Gill suggests: “The words are rendered by Noldius, ‘woe to Ariel, to Ariel: to the city in which David encamped’; and he observes, that some supply the copulative ‘and; woe to Ariel, and to the city’, &c.” Clarke also speaks of two Ariels: “In the second verse it is said, I will distress Ari-el, and it shall be unto me as Ari-el. The first Ari-el here seems to mean Jerusalem, which should be distressed by the Assyrians: the second Ari-el seems to mean the altar of burnt offerings.” || Three LDS Apostles explain that two Ariels are meant (we will relate Elder Orson Pratt’s narrative under our ISAIAH 29:2 notes). Elder LeGrand Richards frequently reiterated: “Not only did Isaiah see the destruction of the great city of Jerusalem, but he also saw the destruction of another great center here in America eleven hundred years after he made that prophecy.”⁴ Elder Bruce R. McConkie speaks of the multiple attacks on Jerusalem or Ariel and says: “This proclamation [against Ariel] is the setting for like woes that shall come upon another people, a people who went out from Jerusalem to become a great nation, but who,

² This would be pronounced Aruel or Aroel.

in turn, through sin fell from grace and became ‘as Ariel.’ Those who are to be ‘as Ariel’ are the Nephites, as we learn from chapter 3 of Second Nephi, Nephi’s paraphrase of ISAIAH 29.”⁵ || Add ye year to year; let them kill sacrifices. The idea of adding year upon year (שָׁנָה עַל־שָׁנָה) here is similar to that of ISAIAH 30, adding sin upon sin (חַטָּאת עַל־חַטָּאת). Lowth has, “Ironically: Go on year after year; keep your solemn feasts; yet know, that God will punish you for your hypocritical worship, consisting of mere form destitute of true piety.” || Elder Orson Pratt has this to say, “... the Lord threatens Ariel, or Jerusalem, with judgment: he says, ‘woe to Ariel, to Ariel, the city where David dwelt! Add ye year to year; let them kill sacrifices; yet I will distress Ariel, and there shall be heaviness and sorrow.’ After the Messiah came and was sacrificed for the sins of the world, the Jews continued to ‘kill sacrifices’ when they should have been done away; they added ‘year to year’ to the law of Moses, until they brought down ‘heaviness and sorrow,’ and great ‘distress’ upon their beloved city. The Roman army encompassed the city—cast a trench about it and finally brought it down ‘even with the ground.’ The principal part of the Jews perished, and a remnant was scattered among the nations where they have wandered in darkness unto this day.”⁶ Barnes similarly has: “That is, ‘go on year after year, suffer one year to glide on after another in the course which you are pursuing.’ This seems to be used ironically, and to denote that they were going on one year after another in the observance of the feasts; walking the round of external ceremonies...” Lowth writes: “Go on year after year, keep your solemn feasts: yet know, that God will punish you for your hypocritical worship, consisting of mere form destitute of true piety.” Gill writes, “...the sense is, go on from year to year in your security and vain confidence; or keep your yearly feasts, and offer your yearly sacrifices; ... let the people bring them, and the priests offer them, for the time is coming when an end will be put to them; ‘the feasts shall be cut off’: so the words may be rendered; the festivals shall cease, and be no more observed; and so the Targum, ‘the festivities shall cease.’” || Let them kill sacrifices. Barnes has, “Margin ||, ‘Cut off the heads.’ The word here rendered ‘kill’ (נִקְּוָה) may mean to smite; to hew; to cut down ISAIAH 10:34; Job 19:26. But it has also another signification which better accords with this place. It denotes to make a circle, to revolve; to go round a place Joshua 6:3, 11; to surround 1Kings 7:24; 2Kings 6:14;

³ Wörterbuch zum Alten Testament.

⁴ Elder LeGrand Richards, A Testimony, Ensign (CR), November 1980, p.63. Also see Elder LeGrand Richards, Conference Report, April 1967, First Day-Morning Meeting, p.21–22.

⁵ Bruce R. McConkie, A New Witness for the Articles of Faith, pp.430–436.

⁶ Pratt, Orson. Divine Authenticity of the Book of Mormon, number 6, Prophetic evidence in favor of the Book of Mormon, Latter-day tracts, p. 87.

Psalms 17:9; 22:17; 88:18. The word rendered ‘sacrifices’ (זָבִיחַ) may mean a sacrifice Exodus 23:18; Psalm 118:27; Malachi 2:3, but it more commonly and properly denotes feasts or festivals Exodus 10:9; 12:14; Leviticus 23:39; Deuteronomy 16:10, 16:16; 1 Kings 8:2, 65; 2 Chronicles 7:8–9; Nehemiah 8:14; Hosea 2:11, 13. Here the sense is, ‘let the festivals go round;’ that is, let them revolve as it were in a perpetual, unmeaning circle, until the judgments due to such heartless service shall come upon you. The whole address is evidently ironical, and designed to denote that all their service was an unvarying repetition of heartless forms.” Compare to ISAIAH 1:11; and 66:3.

2 Yet I will distress Ariel, and there shall be heaviness and sorrow; for thus hath the Lord said unto me, and it shall be unto me as Ariel;

The Targum (ܬܪܓܡ) has, “And I will distress the city, in which the altar is, and she shall be desolate and empty; and she shall be surrounded before me with the blood of the slain, as the altar is surrounded round about with the blood of the holy sacrifices in the day of the festival.” The LXX (Λ) reads, “For I will bring distress upon Ariel, and her strength and her riches shall be for me.” Instead of heaviness the Peshitta (ܫܠܬܐ) renders it, lamentation. The Douay-Rheims (D) has, “And I will make a trench about Ariel, and it shall be in sorrow and mourning, and it shall be to me as Ariel.” ¶ Yet I will distress Ariel, and there shall be heaviness and sorrow. Gill says, “... this he would do, notwithstanding their yearly sacrifices, and their observance of their solemn feasts, and other ceremonies of the law, in which they placed their confidence, and, neglected weightier matters.” Cheyne translates, תַּאֲנִיחַ וְאֵיִלָּה, instead of heaviness and sorrow, as moaning and bemoaning, thus retaining the paronomasia. ¶ Elder Orson Pratt talks about the second Ariel (on this topic, also see ISAIAH 29:1): “The latter part of the second verse [of ISAIAH 29:2] speaks of another event that should be similar to the one which was to happen to Ariel, or Jerusalem: it reads thus; And it shall be unto me as Ariel’ [ISAIAH 29:2]. This cannot have reference to Ariel itself, but it must refer to something which should be ‘As Ariel.’ It would be folly to say that Ariel shall be as Ariel. Therefore the word ‘it’ must refer to a nation that should suffer similar judgments to those which should befall Jerusalem. In the three following verses the Lord describes more fully the second event; he says, ‘And I will camp against thee round about, and will lay siege against thee with a mount, and I will raise forts against thee. And thou shalt be brought down, and shalt speak out of the ground, and thy speech shall be low out of the dust, and thy voice shall be as of one that hath a familiar spirit, out of the ground, and thy speech shall whisper out of the dust. Moreover, the multitude of thy strangers shall be like small dust, and the multitude of the terrible ones shall be as chaff that passeth away; yea, it shall be at an instant suddenly.’ These predictions of Isaiah could not refer to Ariel or Jerusalem because their speech has not been ‘out of the ground, or low out of the dust’ but it refers to the remnant of Joseph who were destroyed in America upwards of fourteen hundred years ago. The Book of Mormon describes their downfall, and truly it was great and terrible. At the crucifixion of Christ, ‘the multitude of their terrible ones,’ as Isaiah predicted ‘became as chaff that passeth away,’ and it took place, as he further predicts, ‘at an instant suddenly.’ Many of their great and magnificent cities were destroyed by fire, others by earth thereby buried in the depths of the earth. This sudden destruction came upon them because they had stoned and killed the prophets sent among them. Between three and four hundred years after Christ they again fell into great wickedness, and the principal nation fell in battle. Forts were raised in all parts of the land, the remains of which may be seen at the present day. Millions of people perished in battle and they suffered just as the Lord foretold by Isaiah—And I will camp against thee round about, and will lay siege against thee with a mount, and I will raise forts against thee, and thou shalt be brought down, and shalt speak out of the ground,’ etc. This remnant of Joseph in their distress and destruction, became unto the Lord as Ariel. As the Roman army lay siege to Ariel, and brought upon her great distress and sorrow, so did the contending nations of ancient America bring upon each other the most direful scenes of blood and carnage. Therefore, the Lord could, with the greatest propriety, when speaking in reference to this event, declare that, ‘It shall be unto me as Ariel.’”⁷ ¶ LDS Scholar Philip Reynolds explains: “...remember that the Lamanites, about 100 B.C., built a city which they called Jerusalem (Alma 21:2), which was destroyed at the time of the crucifixion (3 Nephi 9:7).”⁸ We also need to turn our attention to 3 Nephi 8 in regards to the destruction of much of the Nephite civilization associated with that time period: “And it came to pass in the thirty and fourth year, in the first month, on the fourth day of the month, there arose a great storm, such an one as never had been known in all the land. And there was also a great and terrible tempest; and there was terrible thunder, insomuch that it did shake the whole earth as if it was about to divide asunder. And there were exceedingly sharp lightnings, such as never had been known in all the land” (3 Nephi 8:5–7) and “And there was a great and terrible destruction in the land southward. But behold, there was a more great and terrible destruction in the land northward; for behold, the whole face of the land was changed, because of the tempest and the whirlwinds, and the thunderings and the lightnings, and the exceedingly great quaking of the whole earth” (3 Nephi 8:11–12).

⁷ Pratt, Orson. Divine Authenticity of the Book of Mormon, number 6, Prophetic evidence in favor of the Book of Mormon, Latter-day tracts, p. 87.

⁸ Reynolds, Philip C., ed. Commentary on the Book of Mormon. Salt Lake City, Utah. 4:289–290.

3 And That I the Lord will camp against thee her round about, and will lay siege against thee her with a mount, and I will raise forts against thee her.

The Targum (ⓧ) has, “And I will encamp against thee with armies; and I will build a fortified camp (מִצְדָּה) against thee, and I will cast up a mound against thee.” The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “I will indeed encompass thee as David did; and surround thee with a rampire (i.e., ‘mount’ or ‘rampart’); and erect towers around thee.” The Peshitta (Ⓟ) renders it much like the Masoretic text (Ⓜ), “And I will encamp against thee &c.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⓣ) has, “And I will make a circle round about thee, and will cast up a rampart against thee, and raise up bulwarks to besiege thee.” The whole notion of encamping around (ISAIAH 29:3, 1) is very interesting to us as LDS, as we turn to 2 Nephi 26:15, 18 and read about the many fortifications to be built, to no avail, by the peoples in the American continent whose fall would be as abrupt as that of Jerusalem in 70 AD. ¶ That I the Lord will. Faussett, Gill, Barnes and many others agree with the Book of Mormon and the JST in making these the words of the Lord. ¶ ... camp against her round about, and will lay siege against her with a mount, and I will raise forts against her. Gill says, “This cannot be understood of Sennacherib’s siege, for he was not suffered to raise a bank against the city, nor shoot an arrow into it (ISAIAH 37:33) but well agrees with the siege of Jerusalem by the Romans, as related by Josephus (Joseph. de Bello Jud. l. 5. c. 7. sect. 1. &c. 12. sect. 1, 2.).” Faussett also suggests that the prophecy was more fully fulfilled by the “Roman siege (Luke 19:43; 21:20).” As we have said, this attack would take place not only against Jerusalem but also against the Nephites in the final battle. ¶ Mounts and forts. AMP translates as “and I will hem you in with siege works and I will set up fortifications against you.” LHI assigns to both מִצְדָּה and מִצְרָה the idea of siege works or apparatus that were used to overcome or destroy the fortified walls. ASV has “And I will encamp against thee round about, and will lay siege against thee with posted troops, and I will raise siege works against thee.” Regarding the מִצְדָּה (siege) we read in the ISBE¹⁰ a number of related operations. The process of besieging included (1) surrounding the city, (2) placing archers on forts to discharge their weapons, (3) an inclined road made of packed soil and other matter was constructed so battering rams could be brought against the walls of the city, (4) battering rams could now be used to tear down or breach the walls, and (5) finally rushing the breach through which the attacking armies could enter the surrounded cities.

4 And thou she shalt be brought down, [and] shalt speak out of the ground, and thy her speech shall be low out of the dust; and thy her voice shall be as of one that hath a familiar spirit, out of the ground, and thy her speech shall whisper out of the dust.

✓ peep, or, chirp

And she shalt be brought down. The Targum (ⓧ) has, “And thou shalt be brought low.” The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “But when thy words shall be brought down to the ground.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⓣ) has, “Thou shalt be brought down.” Gill writes, “To the ground, and laid level with it, even the city of Jerusalem, as it was by the Romans.” And no doubt Jerusalem was also intended as one that would be brought down. But the idea here is more correctly in line with the peoples of ancient America that were brought down after the great and last battle of the Nephites and the Lamanites around Hill Cumorah as well as the disasters that took place in the American continent at the time of the crucifixion of Christ. ¶ And shalt speak out of the ground, and her speech shall be low out of the dust; and her voice shall be as of one that hath a familiar spirit, out of the ground, and her speech shall whisper out of the dust. The Targum (ⓧ) has, “And shalt speak from beneath the earth, thy words shall gibber from the dust; and thy voice shall come like a necromancer out of the ground; yea, thy words shall gibber from the dust.” Chilton’s Targum (ⓧ) translation has: “From the earth you will speak and from the dust your utterances will whine, and your voice will be like a ghost from the ground, and from the dust your utterances will whine.” Stenning’s (ⓧ) translation renders it, “Out of the ground shalt thou speak, and out of the dust shall thy words whisper; and thy voice shall be as of one that hath a familiar spirit

⁹According to the Targum Lexicon, ‘Siege works.’

¹⁰ See SIEGE in ISBN for a very interesting and thorough article on this subject—in terms of the actions of both the attackers and the defenders.

coming out of the ground, and out of the dust shall thy words whisper.” The LXX (6) reads, “And shall be as if they sounded out of the earth; and thy voice on the ground shall be feeble.” The Douay-Rheims (9) has, “Thou shalt speak out of the earth, and thy speech shall be heard out of the ground: and thy voice shall be from the earth like that of the python, and out of the ground thy speech shall mutter.” Nägelsbach writes: “¹¹שָׁחַח is used by Isaiah with tolerable frequency (ISAIAH 2:9, 11, 17; 5:15; 25:12; 26:5). The word is used especially of a suppressed voice (Ecclesiastes 12:14)... The voice will, like that of the spirit of one dead, come forth out of the earth.” And if we follow Gesenius, not just come forth, but spring forth with the force of a wild beast who is low, ready to leap with much energy. ¶ The words of Elder Orson Pratt fill my eyes with tears of joy: “One of the most marvelous things connected with this prediction is that after the nation should be brought down, they should ‘speak out of the ground.’ [ISAIAH 29:4.] This is mentioned or repeated four times in the same verse. Never was a prophecy more truly fulfilled than this in the coming forth of the Book of Mormon. Joseph Smith took that sacred history ‘out of the ground.’ It is the voice of the ancient prophets of America speaking ‘out of the ground’; their speech is ‘low out of the dust’; it speaks in a most familiar manner of the doings of by gone ages; it is the voice of those who slumber in the dust. It is the voice of prophets speaking from the dead, crying repentance in the ears of the living. In what manner could a nation, after they were brought down and destroyed, ‘speak out of the ground?’ Could their dead bodies, or their dust, or their ashes speak? Verily, no: they can only speak by their writings or their books that they wrote while living. Their voice, speech or words, can only ‘speak out of the ground,’ or ‘whisper out of the dust’ by their books or writings being discovered.”¹² I wish to testify of the tremendous force with which the Spirit of the Holy Ghost will affirm the truthfulness of the Book of Mormon and of the divinity of the Lord and Savior Jesus Christ ... permitting the ancient Nephite and Lamanite prophets to whisper out of the dust. See my conversion story in the introduction to this book, as well as in the January 1992 Ensign, and February 1993 Liahona magazines, entitled “On Sacred Ground.” In ISAIAH 1:15, I speak of the perfect pattern of prayer wherein you may come to know that the Book of Mormon is true.

¹¹ Gesenius has, “To sink down, Habakkuk 3:6; used of beasts of prey couching down and lying in wait in their lairs, Job 38:40,” and LHI has low.

¹² Pratt, Orson. Divine Authenticity of the Book of Mormon, number 6, Prophetic evidence in favor of the Book of Mormon, Latter-day tracts, p. 87.

5 Moreover the multitude of ~~thy~~ her strangers shall be like small dust, and the multitude of the terrible ones [shall be] as chaff that passeth away; yea, it shall be at an instant suddenly.

The Targum (7) has, “Moreover the multitude of those scattering thee shall be like a small dust, and the tumultuous assembly of the mighty as chaff that passeth away; and there shall be a tumult suddenly.” The LXX (6) reads, “Then shall the riches of the wicked be as the dust of a wheel, and the multitude of thine oppressors as chaff blown away: and this shall be as in a moment, suddenly.” The Peshitta (5) has oppressors (Lamsa) / oppress thee (BPE) instead of strangers. The Douay-Rheims (9) has, “And the multitude of them that fan thee, shall be like small dust: and as ashes passing away, the multitude of them that have prevailed against thee.” In the DSS 1QIsa^a (9) we have presumptuous, rebellious or arrogant (BDB, for roots זָוַר and זָוַד), thy insolent (Swanson) or thy enemies (DSSB), זָוַר, while in the Masoretic text (11) we have thy strangers (זָוַר, for root זָוַר). The JST has her instead of thy.

¶ Moreover the multitude of her strangers shall be like small¹³ dust (כָּאֶבֶק קָטָן). Gill says “... the simile of ‘small dust,’ to which they are compared, is not used to express the weakness of them, but the greatness of their number.” Rawlinson says: “In primitive societies every stranger is an enemy; and hence language the formation of primitive men often has one word for the two ideas. In Latin hostis is said to have originally meant ‘foreigner’ (Cic., ‘De Off,’ 1:12).” Barnes writes, “The multitude of the strangers that shall besiege thee; called ‘thy strangers,’ because they besieged, or oppressed thee.” The Nephites, in the last battle in Cumorah were surrounded by an innumerable enemy or strange people. ¶ And the multitude of the terrible ones shall be as chaff that passeth away. Rawlinson says, “‘Chaff,’ in Scripture, is always a metaphor for weakness.” This clause refers not to the attackers (those were described as small dust because of their great numbers), but rather to the attacked, the Nephite nation who at one time had been great. Now, they were consumed as chaff. While a few were indeed scattered, most were killed on Hill Cumorah. Those who were left were hunted down and killed by the Lamanites. Moroni was the only Nephite who lived to tell the story (Moroni 1). ¶ It shall be at an instant suddenly. Elder Mark E. Peterson wrote:

¹³ HCSB, LHL, ISV, LBP, LITV, NASB, and RV use fine. Most others use small.

“Isaiah’s words were fulfilled to the letter. The people who wrote the Book of Mormon were indeed destroyed ‘at an instant suddenly’ (ISAIAH 29:5). The book was sealed and placed in the ground for safekeeping by the last survivor of the Nephite nation—Moroni.”¹⁴

But, behold, in the last days, or in the days of the Gentiles—yea, behold all the nations of the Gentiles and also the Jews, both those who shall come upon this land and those who shall be upon other lands, yea, even upon all the lands of the earth, behold, they will be drunken with iniquity and all manner of abominations—^{*}

6 And when that day shall come^{} Thou shalt they shall be visited of the LORD of hosts, with thunder and with earthquake, and with a great noise, and with storm, and with tempest, and with the flame of devouring fire.

^{*} Verse 6 in the KJV is verse 2 in the Book of Mormon version of this chapter, except that the Book of Mormon introduces the text of Isaiah with this verse, which is very important in terms of the time frame of the fulfillment of the revelation, and thus is included here.

^{} JST: The clause, “And when that day shall come” is replaced by the prophetic “for” in the JST.

But, behold, in the last days, or in the days of the Gentiles—yea, behold all the nations of the Gentiles and also the Jews, both those who shall come upon this land and those who shall be upon other lands, yea, even upon all the lands of the earth, behold, they will be drunken with iniquity and all manner of abominations. This speaks of the total apostasy that would prevail before the coming of the Book of Mormon (as indicated by the idea of being drunken with iniquity and all manner of abominations, as we also saw in ISAIAH 28). ¶ And when that day shall come they shall be visited of the LORD of hosts, with thunder and with earthquake, and with a great noise, and with storm, and with tempest, and with the flame of devouring fire. The Targum (ܬܠܡܝܬ) has, “Thou shalt be visited with thunder from (Chaldee, ‘from before’) the Lord of hosts, and with earthquake, and with a great noise; with storm, and tempest, and a flame of devouring fire.” The LXX (Ϟ) reads, “For from the Lord of Hosts there will be a visitation—a hurricane and a devouring flame of fire with thunder and an earthquake and a mighty noise.” The Douay-Rheims (Ϟ) has, “And it shall be at an instant suddenly. A visitation shall come from the Lord of hosts in thunder, and with earthquake, and with a great noise of whirlwind and tempest, and with the flame of devouring fire.” Faussett well says that these verses refer to the last days, a time where neither Jew nor Gentile shall be possessed of the truth. (Also see D&C 88:88–90.)

7 And the multitude of all the nations that fight against Ariel Zion, even all that fight against her and her munition, and that distress her, shall be as a dream of a night vision;

The Targum (ܬܠܡܝܬ) has, “And the multitude of all the nations, that are gathered together against the city, and the altar which is in her, and all their camps and their armies, that are oppressing her, shall be like a phantom (literally, as a dream of the imagination) of the night.” The LXX (Ϟ) reads, “And the wealth of all the nations which encamped against Ariel, and all they who are warring against Jerusalem, and all who have been assembled against her, and those distressing her, shall be like one dreaming dreams by night.” The Peshitta (ܣܠܬܐ), instead of munition, has all the armies and multitudes. The Douay-Rheims (Ϟ) has, “And the multitude of all nations that have fought against Ariel, shall be as the dream of a vision by night, and all that have fought, and besieged and prevailed against it.” The DSS 1QIsa^a (ϙ) has וּמִצְרֵתָהּ, spelled with a rosh (fortification) while the DSS 1QIsa^b (ϙ) has stronghold, spelled with a dalet, וּמִצְדָּתָהּ, as does also the Masoretic text (מסורה), וּמִצְדָּתָהּ. The LXX (Ϟ) uses Ἀριελ (Ariel) in the first instance but Ἱερουσαλημ (Jerusalem) instead of her in the same verse. The Book of Mormon has Zion (צִיּוֹן) here, rather than the Ariel (אַרְיֵאל) found in the Masoretic text, which makes the comments by Nägelsbach particularly interesting: “The concluding words of this verse ‘the multitude of all the nations that fight against Mount Zion,’ which correspond exactly to what we find in ISAIAH 29:7, except that there instead of ‘Mount Zion’ the name ‘Ariel’ occurs, furnish the key to the understanding of the enigmatical word Ariel. Can it be deemed accidental that the Prophet in ISAIAH 29:8 repeats those words of ISAIAH 29:7 with the sole change of substituting for ‘Ariel’ the words ‘Mount Zion?’” The Book of Mormon does have a small difference, Zion (צִיּוֹן) vs. Mount Zion (הַר צִיּוֹן). ¶ Govett, while also speaking of the early verses of this chapter, makes suggestions that fit well here: “These characteristics [i.e., dream of a night vision] point out that time as the day of the Saviour’s second advent. Moreover, as the enemies of Jerusalem are in the 7th verse stated to be ‘a multitude of all nations,’ this proves that the siege here spoken of will take place at the time of the Great Confederacy, so often alluded to. If the reader will compare this chapter with the twelfth and fourteenth chapters of Zechariah, he will discover the most evident harmony in the siege of Jerusalem there predicted; in its besiegers being ‘all nations,’ in the issue,—their utter discomfiture; and that too, after they have taken the city...” Elder Bruce R. McConkie said: “In the day when all nations are gathered at Jerusalem to fight against the chosen people; in the day when the house of Judah accepts Him in whose hands and feet are the nail marks of Calvary; when they look upon him whom they have pierced and ask, ‘What are these wounds in thine hands?’ (Zechariah 13:6); and when he identifies himself as their God—in that day, the Lord of Hosts, the ancient God of battles, shall again fight their battles. Israel shall triumph. Their enemies shall be destroyed.”¹⁵ Elder McConkie also says: “Let us be reminded that most of the wars fought from the fall of man to this hour have been religious wars. It was so before the flood; it was so in ancient Israel... and it will be so—a thousand times over—in the coming Armageddon. The nations that distress Jerusalem in that day will be in opposition to the Lord Jehovah. They will be fighting against Mount Zion.”¹⁶ Elder Orson Pratt has: “The kingdom of God, with its inspired prophets and Apostles, was rooted out of the earth, also the Priesthood with all its powers; and instead thereof churches, creeds and governments have been reared and built up by human wisdom; but the kingdom of God that is to be established in these last days, instead of being overcome and destroyed out of the earth, is to stand forever; it was not to be delivered to another people (Daniel 2:44), that is, it is never to change hands, but once established, once organized on the earth, it is to continue from that time henceforth and forever, while the kingdoms of this world will vanish away like the dream of a night vision.”¹⁷

¹⁴ Mark E. Petersen, Isaiah for Today, p.108.

8 Yea, it shall be unto them, even be as ~~when an~~ unto a hungry [man] which dreameth, and, behold, he eateth, but he awaketh and his soul is empty: or as ~~when~~ like unto a thirsty man which* dreameth, and, behold, he drinketh, but he awaketh, and, behold, [he is] faint, and his soul hath appetite; Yea, even so shall the multitude of all the nations be that fight against mount Zion.

* JST: uses “who” instead of “which.”

Yea, it shall be unto them, even as unto a hungry man which dreameth, and, behold, he eateth, but he awaketh and his soul is empty. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “And it shall be as when a hungry man dreameth, behold, he eateth; but he awakes, and he (Chaldee, ‘himself’) is in want.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “And like men who in sleep are eating and drinking, but when they awake the dream is vain.” The Peshitta (ܣ) instead of soul is empty, has not satisfied (BPE) / weary and famished (Lamsa). Have we not all experienced similar dreams at one time or another? Those who fight against the Lord will no more have power over Israel than to satisfy their hunger or thirst while they dream. The natural man may be ever searching to dictate to God but no satisfaction can be obtained—no enduring happiness—unless we align our desires with those of God. ¶ Or like unto a thirsty man which dreameth, and, behold, he drinketh, but he awaketh, and, behold, he is faint, and his soul hath appetite. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “Or as a thirsty man dreameth, and behold, he drinketh; but he awaketh, and behold, he (Chaldee, ‘himself’) is spent.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “Even as a thirsty man dreameth that he drinketh, and when he waketh he is still athirst, his soul having trusted in a shadow.” Rawlinson explains, “The entire host of the ‘terrible ones’ would melt away and disappear, as a night vision before the light of day it would dissolve into nothing, vanish, leave no trace.” This whole experience, although many of the exegetes attach it to a different historical point, speaks of the feelings of impotence that the enemies of Israel shall experience at not being able to conquer Jerusalem in that great battle when the nations shall surround her and the Son of Man shall come to her protection. ¶ Yea, even so shall the multitude of all the nations be that fight against mount Zion. The Targum (Ⲯ) has, “So shall the multitude of all the nations be, that gather themselves together against the mountain of Zion.” The LXX (Ⲅ) reads, “So shall be the wealth of all the nations, who have warred against mount Sion.” Once again, this has reference to the nations who in the last days will surround Jerusalem and will even succeed to some degree before the triumphal entry by the Lord of hosts who will stand in the Mount of Olives in Jerusalem and the mount will then split in two making possible the refuge and escape of the Lord’s people. A nation will be born in a day as they are converted to the Lord and recognize Jesus Christ as the Holy One of Israel (ISAIAH 66:8).

¹⁵ Bruce R. McConkie, A New Witness for the Articles of Faith, pp.430–436.

¹⁶ Bruce R. McConkie, A New Witness for the Articles of Faith, pp.435–436.

¹⁷ Pratt, Elder Orson, “The Restoration of the Jews, Etc.” Journal of Discourses, Vol. 14, No. 9, May 26, 1871, pp. 58–70.

vv. 9–16. A sense of complete spiritual darkness will prevail before the Book of Mormon comes to light. This apostasy was born of the rejection of the prophets that the Lord had sent through the ages until they were finally removed from the earth. The Book of Mormon would be translated by a humble unlearned boy rather than by the self-proclaimed wise and prudent. It would come at a time when the precepts of men are given more weight than those of God. The coming forth of this book and the subsequent establishment of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints would constitute a marvelous work and a wonder.

9 ¶ For behold, all ye that doeth iniquity, stay yourselves, and wonder; ~~ery ye for ye shall cry out, and cry;~~ [✓] they are ye shall be drunken, but not with wine; they ye shall stagger, but not with strong drink.

✓ or, take your pleasure and riot

For behold, all ye that doeth iniquity, stay yourselves, and wonder; for ye shall cry out, and cry; ye shall be drunken, but not with wine; ye shall stagger, but not with strong drink. The Targum (ⲧ) has, “Be astounded, wonder, be ye terrified, and muse, and marvel. They are drunk, but not with wine; they stagger, but not with old wine.” The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “Be sunk in dejection and stand astonished; be drunk and reel, not with wine nor strong drink.” The BPE (Ⲥ) has, “Be astonished and amazed, shake and wonder, because they are drunken, but not with wine; because they stagger, but not on account of intoxicating drink.” The Douay-Rheims (Ⲱ) has, “Be astonished, and wander, waver, and stagger: be drunk, and not with wine: stagger, and not with drunkenness.” The JST and the Book of Mormon give it the future—shall be—rather than present tense. The Masoretic text (ⲙ) has וַיִּשְׁכָּרוּ, wine, while 1QIsa^a (Ⲙ) has וַיִּשְׁכָּרוּ, from wine. Also, the Masoretic text (ⲙ) has וְלֹא שִׁכָּרוּ, and not strong drink, while DSS 1QIsa^a (Ⲙ) has וְלֹא שִׁכָּרוּ, and to strong drink, וְלֹא שִׁכָּרוּ. ¶ Regarding this drunkenness, Barnes says: “It is a moral and spiritual intoxication and reeling. They err in their doctrines and practice; and it is with them as it is with a drunken man that sees nothing clearly or correctly, and cannot walk steadily. They have perverted all doctrines; they err in their views of God and his truth, and they are irregular and corrupt in their conduct.” Elder Bruce R. McConkie explained: “In a spiritual sense drunkenness means apostasy” (ISAIAH 29:9–10; Revelation 17:2; 18:3).¹⁸

¹⁸ Bruce R. McConkie, Mormon Doctrine, 2d ed., p.209.

Also from Elder McConkie we have: “How shall the night of awful darkness that covers the earth come to an end? What light will pierce the enshrouding gloom? How shall those who are drunken but not with wine and who stagger but not with strong drink, be reclaimed? What will bring spiritual sobriety into their souls? Again the answer is a book—a book that contains the mind and will and voice of the Lord, a book that whispers from the dust. And so Isaiah speaks of the glorious restoration of the everlasting gospel, which is to take place in the last days, and he introduces that restoration by speaking of the book so long sealed and even now only partially opened.”¹⁹

10 For behold, the LORD hath poured out upon you the spirit of deep sleep. For behold, ye have ~~and hath~~ closed your eyes, and ye have rejected the prophets; [✓] and your rulers, [✓] the seers hath he covered because of your iniquity.

* JST: uses semi-colon after “rulers,” rather than after “prophets.”

✓ heads

(See also ISAIAH 6:10; and Romans 11:8.) For behold, the LORD hath poured out upon you the spirit of deep sleep. For behold, ye have closed your eyes, and ye have rejected the prophets; and your rulers, the seers hath he covered because of your iniquity. The Targum (ⲧ) has, “Because the Lord shall cast among you a spirit of error; and He shall hide the prophets from you, and he shall hide the scribes, and the teachers, who teach you the instruction of the law.” The LXX (Ⲭ) reads, “For the Lord hath drenched you with a spirit of stupefaction, and will close up the eyes of them and of their prophets and their rulers.” The Peshitta (Ⲑ) has the seers seeing hidden things. The Douay-Rheims (Ⲱ) has, “For the Lord hath mingled for you the spirit of a deep sleep, he will shut up your eyes, he will cover your prophets and princes, that see visions.” Barnes explains: “The word rendered ‘hath poured out’ (נִסַּךְ) is usually referred to the act of pouring out a libation, or drink-offering in worship Exodus 30:9; Hosea 9:4; ISAIAH 30:1. Here it means that Yahweh had, as it were, ‘drenched them’ (Septuagint, πεπότικε) with a spirit of stupefaction.” A spirit of deep sleep has a perfect translation into Spanish, un espíritu de aturdimiento, something to the effect of being in a daze, confused and disoriented. When people reject the prophets or the Book of Mormon it is as if they have shut their eyes to the truth and thus walk in this espíritu de aturdimiento.

¹⁹ Bruce R. McConkie, A New Witness for the Articles of Faith, p. 442.

¶ In John we read: “And this is the condemnation, that light is come into the world, and men loved darkness rather than light, because their deeds were evil” (John 3:19). The Savior said: “For had ye believed Moses, ye would have believed me; for he wrote of me. But if ye believe not his writings, how shall ye believe my words?” (John 5:46–47). Likewise, those who truly believe the Bible will believe in the Book of Mormon, for the Bible speaks of the Book of Mormon (2 Nephi 33:10). Anyone who reads the Book of Mormon with a sincere heart will know that this book is full of light and truth and will feel of the influence of the Holy Ghost bearing witness of its truthfulness. ¶ Nägelsbach notes: “Where a capacity to receive the divine word is wanting, there it works an effect the very opposite of what it should properly produce; it hardens, blinds, stupefies. It is as if the spirit of understanding had become in those who do not desire the knowledge of the truth, a spirit of stupefaction, of stupidity. תרדמה²⁰, which is found only here in Isaiah, has this ... sense.”

¶ In speaking about ISAIAH 29:9–10, Elder Orson Pratt says, “Here we perceive the dark and benighted condition of the multitude of all the nations ... they were to be drunken and stagger, but not with wine nor with strong drink; the prophets and seers were to be covered from them; and ‘the vision of all,’ that is, the revelations of all the holy prophets and seers, contained either in the Bible or any other place were to become as the words of the sealed Book of Mormon ... they are covered; they are not understood any more than the words of the sealed book were understood by the learned. When the events of the scripture prophecy are so clearly fulfilled before their eyes, they will not even then perceive it ... because they are drunken with every species of wickedness and abominations, and because they, draw near to the Lord with their mouths, and with their lips, while their hearts are removed far from Him, and because they are taught by the precepts of men they will reject it, and in so doing, they will reject the Lord’s great and last warning message to man, and bring upon themselves swift destruction.”²¹ ¶ For behold, ye have closed your eyes, and ye have rejected the prophets; and your rulers [i.e., your heads, ראשיכם], the seers hath he covered because of your iniquity. Many exegetes believe that the prophets and seers are a latter gloss or addition, but the Book of Mormon greatly clarifies this passage to make it clear that the Lord would cover or remove the prophets and seers from the presence of the people as they would no longer heed their words but had rejected them. Nyman well says, “The KJV reads as though the Lord were responsible for these problems, but the Book of Mormon shows that that it was the people’s choices which had brought upon them their conditions.”

We turn again to materials found in the Book of Mormon and Inspired Version not contained in today’s other ancient texts. But first, this from Church history: “Sometime in this month of February [1828], the aforementioned Mr. Martin Harris came to our place, got the characters which I had drawn off the plates, and started with them to the city of New York. For what took place relative to him and the characters, I refer to his own account of the circumstances, as he related them to me after his return, which was as follows: ‘I went to the city of New York, and presented the characters which had been translated, with the translation thereof, to Professor Charles Anthon, a gentleman celebrated for his literary attainments. Professor Anthon stated that the translation was correct, more so than any he had before seen translated from the Egyptian. I then showed him those which were not yet translated, and he said that they were Egyptian, Chaldaic, Assyriac, and Arabic; and he said they were true characters. He gave me a certificate, certifying to the people of Palmyra that they were true characters, and that the translation of such of them as had been translated was also correct. I took the certificate and put it into my pocket, and was just leaving the house, when Mr. Anthon called me back, and asked me how the young man found out that there were gold plates in the place where he found them. I answered that an angel of God had revealed it unto him. He then said to me, “Let me see that certificate.” I accordingly took it out of my pocket and gave it to him, when he took it and tore it to pieces, saying that there was no such thing now as ministering of angels, and that if I would bring the plates to him he would translate them. I informed him that part of the plates were sealed, and that I was forbidden to bring them. He replied, “I cannot read a sealed book.” I left him and went to Dr. Mitchell, who sanctioned what Professor Anthon had said respecting both the characters and the translation”’²² Note that Anthon was so convinced that these characters were authentic that he desired to see the plates even though he did not believe the angel narrative.

And it shall come to pass that the Lord God shall bring forth unto you the words of a book, and they shall be the words of them which have slumbered.

²⁰ Deep sleep.

²¹ Pratt, Orson. Divine Authenticity of the Book of Mormon, number 6, Prophetic evidence in favor of the Book of Mormon, Latter-day tracts, pp. 89–90.

²² JS–History 1:63–65.

The words that the Lord God would bring forth are those of the Book of Mormon. These will be the words of ancient prophets who lived in the American continent more than a millennia ago. We read that they have slumbered as a poetical way of saying that they have long since passed from their mortal existence into the world of spirits.

And behold, the book shall be sealed; and in the book shall be a revelation from God, from the beginning of the world to the ending thereof.

Besides the Book of Mormon there would be additional plates—plates that were sealed and that are to come forth at a future date. We understand that these words were seen by the brother of Jared and were also known to John the revelator (see Ether 4:4–7).

Wherefore, because of the things which are sealed up, the things which are sealed shall not be delivered in the day of the wickedness and abominations of the people. Wherefore, the book shall be kept from them.

Only the Book of Mormon would be delivered to the Prophet Joseph Smith for translation but not the sealed portion of the plates. The sealed portion of the plates would be kept from this undeserving generation.

But the book shall be delivered unto a man, and he shall deliver the words of the book, which are the words of those who have slumbered in the dust, and he shall deliver these words unto another;

The Book of Mormon would be delivered to Joseph Smith, the Prophet. The Prophet would, in turn, write some of the words found in the plates and hand them to another man, that is, to Martin Harris. Note that the Prophet would not hand the book or plates to Martin Harris, but rather, words from the plates. The words of the Book of Mormon represent the words of the ancient prophets of the American continent who are no longer living, but slumber.

But the words which* are sealed he shall not deliver, neither shall he deliver the book. For the book shall be sealed by the power of God, and the revelation which was sealed shall be kept in the book until the own due time of the Lord, that they may come forth; for behold, they reveal all things from the foundation of the world unto the end thereof.

* JST: uses “that” instead of “which.”

Elder Orson Pratt explains: “Mark this prediction; the book itself was not to be delivered to the learned, but only ‘the words of a book’; this was literally fulfilled in the event which has already been described [Martin Harris and Professor Anthon incident], as clearly testified of, not only by the ‘plain-looking countryman,’ namely Martin Harris, but by the learned professor Anthon himself. But Isaiah informs us in the next verse [ISAIAH 29:12] that the book itself should be delivered to the unlearned; he says, ‘and the book is delivered to him that is not learned, saying, read this, I pray thee: and he said, I am not learned.’ This was fulfilled when the angel of the Lord delivered the book into the hands of Mr. Smith; though unlearned in every language, but his own mother tongue, yet he was commanded to read or translate the book. Feeling his own incapability to read such a book, he said to the Lord in the words of Isaiah, ‘I am not learned.’”²³ The sealed portion of the book, on the other hand, shall come forth at a time that the Lord has set and contains “all things from the foundation of the world unto the end thereof.”

And the day cometh, that the words of the book which were sealed shall be read upon the house tops; and they shall be read by the power of Christ; and all things shall be revealed unto the children of men which ever have been among the children of men, and which ever will be, even unto the end of the earth.

At this future date the words from the sealed plates “shall be read from the house tops... through the power of Christ.” At that time these things shall be revealed to all humankind—past, present and future. Recall that housetops described the houses with a terrace on top of the houses (ISAIAH 22:1). This is to be fulfilled either literally or symbolically, the meaning being that all shall have these words.

²³ Pratt, Orson. Divine Authenticity of the Book of Mormon, number 6, Prophetic evidence in favor of the Book of Mormon, Latter-day tracts, p. 88.

Wherefore, at that day when the book shall be delivered unto the man of whom I have spoken, the book shall be hid from the eyes of the world, that the eyes of none shall behold it save it be that three witnesses shall behold it, by the power of God, besides him to whom the book shall be delivered; and they shall testify to the truth of the book and the things therein.

So—returning to the time when the Book of Mormon would be delivered to the Prophet Joseph Smith—these plates would not be shown to many others. Among these there would be three special witnesses and an additional eight witnesses. These witnesses would testify that indeed they had seen the plates and of the truthfulness of what they contained.

And there is none other which shall view it, save it be a few according to the will of God, to bear testimony of his word unto the children of men; for the Lord God hath said that the words of the faithful should speak as if it were from the dead.

Only a few individuals, besides the Prophet Joseph Smith and these three witnesses and eight witnesses would have the privilege of viewing the plates and bear testimony to the children of men based on this witness. Mary Whitmer (at times she is called the 4th witness and at others the 12th witness) was among them. The remainder of the children of men could obtain a witness of its authenticity through the Holy Ghost. The Holy Ghost has poured out upon me a sure witness of the truthfulness of the Book of Mormon.

Wherefore, the Lord God will proceed to bring forth the words of the book; and in the mouth of as many witnesses as seemeth him good will he establish his word; and woe be unto him that rejecteth the word of God!

The Lord God, through the Prophet Joseph Smith, would bring forth the words of these ancient prophets. He would establish the truthfulness of the words of the book through “as many witnesses as seemeth him good.” This includes not only those who were to see the plates but of each one of us who has received a witness of the Holy Ghost of the truthfulness of the Book of Mormon—to which I rejoice to be counted. I have received countless manifestations of the Spirit, most of them through the sweet comfort of the Spirit. Only a few times in my life has that manifestation been so very strong—I describe it as almost falling of my horse or of my bicycle! One such occasion took place when I opened the Book of Mormon and read Moroni’s promise in my home in Asturias 400, Santiago, Chile, before I turned 16. I have never tired of telling and retelling my conversion story (see introduction and ISAIAH 3:1 footnote).

~~11 And the vision of all is become unto you as the words of a book~~ ✓ ~~that is sealed, which [men] deliver to one that is~~
But behold, it shall come to pass that the Lord God shall say unto him to whom he shall deliver the book: Take these words which are not sealed and deliver them to another, that he may show them unto the learned, saying, Read this, I pray thee. And he the learned saith, shall say: Bring hither the book, and I will read them. And now, because of the glory of the world and to get gain will they say this, and not for the glory of God. And the man shall say: I cannot bring the book, for it [is] sealed. Then shall the learned say, I cannot read it.

✓ or, letter

Chilton’s Targum (Ⲛ) translation has, “And all prophecy has become to you like the words of a book that is sealed. When men give it to one who knows the book, saying, ‘Read this,’ he will say, ‘I cannot, for it is sealed.’” Similarly, Stenning’s Targum (Ⲛ) translation reads, “And all prophecy is become unto you as the words of a book which is sealed, so that if they give it to one that is learned, saying, Read this now, he will say, I cannot for it is sealed.” The LXX (Ⲙ) reads, “As for your seers of hidden things, all these prophecies will be to you like the words of a book which is sealed: which when they give to a man skilled in letters, saying, Read this: He will say, I cannot read it, for it is sealed.” The Douay-Rheims (ⲙ) has, “And the vision of all shall be unto you as the words of a book that is sealed, which when they shall deliver to one that is learned, they shall say: Read this: and he shall answer: I cannot, for it is sealed.” Whitehouse says, “Cheyne appropriately translates by ‘a man who is a scholar’”²⁴ ¶ And says, I cannot for it is sealed &c. The DSS 1QIsa^a (Ⲛ) has and he says (וַיֹּאמֶר) while the Masoretic text (וַיֹּאמֶר) renders it and says (וַיֹּאמֶר) where the he is implied. ¶ Philip Reynolds well says, “Isaiah makes the meaning of this vision so clear that it need not be misunderstood. He speaks of a book, or rather the book, for the Hebrew text has the definite article, to which the translators have not given the full force”²⁵ And so it is, as we have *the book*²⁶ סֵפֶר in the Masoretic text (וַיֹּאמֶר) and a book סֵפֶר in the Targum (סֵפֶר). Various exegetes (Rawlinson, Gill, Delitzsch) explain that learned (אֱלֹהִים יָדָע, to know, or one knowing) has to do with being literate or knowing how to read. This fits in very well with the idea of being able to know the ancient characters. ISAIAH 29:11 was among the scriptures that Angel Moroni quoted to Joseph Smith according to the Oliver Cowdery narrative (see note to ISAIAH 1:7). “Yet,” said he, “the scripture must be fulfilled before it is translated, which says that the words of a book, which were sealed, were presented to the learned; for thus has God determined to leave men without excuse, and show to the meek that his arm is not shortened that it cannot save.”²⁷ ¶ But behold, it shall come to pass that the Lord God shall say unto him to whom he shall deliver the book: Take these words which are not sealed and deliver them to another, that he may show them unto the learned, saying, Read this, I pray thee. And the learned shall say: Bring hither the book, and I will read them. And now, because of the glory of the world and to get gain will they say this, and not for the glory of God. And the man shall say: I cannot bring the book, for it is sealed. Then shall the learned say, I cannot read it. The Lord God would say to Joseph Smith, the person to whom the plates had been delivered to, and ask him to take some of the words from the plates—from the section that was not sealed—that these words might be shown to the learned. Charles Anthon was that learned professor to whom these words or characters would be shared with. Anthon asked that the plates be brought to him so he could read them—but he did this not because he believed in God or cared about the Book of Mormon, but because he cared about his scholarly status or the glory and riches of the world. Martin Harris told Anthon that he could not bring him the book because it was sealed. Professor Anthon responded that he could not read a sealed book. ¶ Non-LDS exegetes. A large number of commentators have spoken about the sealed book as being either the Book of Revelation or the book of Isaiah, or the Old Testament, or all of the Bible, suggesting that to many people these books are so difficult to read or understand—or of so little interest—that for all practical purposes they remain sealed.

²⁴ But not in my version of Cheyne.

12 Wherefore it shall come to pass, that the Lord God ~~And the book is delivered~~ will deliver again the book and the words thereof ~~to him~~ and the man that is not learned; ~~saying,~~ shall say: ~~Read this, I pray thee: and he saith,~~ I am not learned.

Wherefore it shall come to pass, that the Lord God will deliver again the book and the words thereof and the man that is not learned; shall say: I am not learned. At the end, it would not be the learned who would translate the ancient plates but the unlearned young man through the power of God. The Prophet Joseph Smith did not remain unlearned long. ¶ Chilton’s Targum (סֵפֶר) translation has, “And the book will be given to one who does not know the book, saying, ‘Read this,’ and he will say, ‘I do not know the book.’” Stenning’s Targum (סֵפֶר) translation reads, “And should the book be given to one that is not learned, saying, Read this now, he will say, I am not learned.” The LXX (Σ) reads, “And should the book be put in the hands of an illiterate man, and they say to him, Read that, he will say, I do not know letters.” The Douay-Rheims (Σ) has, “And the book shall be given to one that knoweth no letters, and it shall be said to him: Read: and he shall answer: I know no letters.” Rawlinson says, regarding the person who is not learned: “i.e. ‘that cannot read writing.’ Even in our Lord’s day the ordinary Jew was not taught to read and write. Hence the surprise of the rulers at his teaching the people out of the Law (John 7:15, ‘How knoweth this man letters, having never learned?’).” Gill, in part says this of the unlearned: “He does not excuse himself on account of its being sealed, but on account of his want of learning.”

Then shall the Lord God say unto him: The learned shall not read them, for they have rejected them, and I am able to do mine own work; wherefore thou shalt read the words which I shall give unto thee.

²⁵ Reynolds, Philip C., ed. Commentary on the Book of Mormon. 6 vols. Salt Lake City, Utah. Vol. IV, pp. 289–290.

²⁶ It is interesting to note that the Ketib has סֵפֶר; the Qere סֵפֶר, but compare to verse 12, where we have סֵפֶר.

²⁷ Cowdery, Oliver, et al., eds. Messenger and Advocate: The Latter Day Saints’ Messenger and Advocate. Kirtland, Ohio: Letter to W. W. Phelps from Oliver Cowdery, February 1835 and continued April 1835. Electronic text prepared by the Department of Church History and Doctrine, Brigham Young University (pp. 78–80, 108–112), 1991, p.80.

In summary, then, the Lord God not lean on the learned—the professors of religion and the scholars²⁸—to read and translate the plates. Instead He would make use of the weak things of the earth to accomplish His purposes.

Touch not the things which are sealed, for I will bring them forth in mine own due time; for I will show unto the children of men that I am able to do mine own work.

The Lord instructed the Prophet Joseph Smith not to touch the sealed portion of the plates. These would be brought forth in the Lord's due time.

Wherefore, when thou hast read the words which I have commanded thee, and obtained the witnesses which I have promised unto thee, then shalt thou seal up the book again, and hide it up unto me, that I may preserve the words which thou hast not read, until I shall see fit in mine own wisdom to reveal all things unto the children of men.

When the Prophet Joseph Smith would be done translating, and after the witnesses would be invited to view the plates, the time would come when the Prophet would be instructed to return the plates to the angel for safekeeping, and this is what is meant here by “seal up the book again.” The sealed portion of the plates that the Prophet Joseph Smith was not permitted to read would be revealed in the Lord's due time.

For behold, I am God; and I am a God of miracles; and I will show unto the world that I am the same yesterday, today, and forever; and I work not among the children of men save it be according to their faith.

The Lord God makes it clear that He is a God of miracles and unchangeable—and that humankind can only have intercourse with God according to their faith.

²⁸ Elder McConkie taught: “When there were no longer apostles and inspired men to give the Lord's message and word to living men, the world turned to interpreters—to scholars, to doctors of divinity, to theologians, to professors of religion—to set forth what they thought or imagined the divine word of former days meant.” Bruce R. McConkie, The Mortal Messiah: From Bethlehem to Calvary, pp.251–252.

13 And again it shall come to pass ~~Wherefore the Lord said,~~ that the Lord shall say unto him that shall read the words that shall be delivered him: Forasmuch as this people draw near unto [me] with their mouth, and with their lips do honour me, but have removed their hearts far from me, and their fear towards me is taught by the precept of men--

And again it shall come to pass that the Lord shall say unto him that shall read the words that shall be delivered him: The Lord would speak to the Prophet Joseph Smith. ¶ Forasmuch as this people draw near unto me with their mouth, and with their lips do honour me, but have removed their hearts far from me, and their fear towards me is taught by the precept of men. The Targum (Ⓢ) has, “Wherefore the Lord hath said: Because I am magnified by the mouth of this people, and with their lips they do honor me, but their heart is far from my fear, and their fear towards me is as the commandment of men teaching them.” The LXX (Ⓛ) reads, “The Lord hath indeed said, ‘This people draw near to me with their mouth; and with their lips they honour me; but their heart is far from me: and in vain do they worship me, teaching the commands and doctrines of men.’” The Peshitta (Ⓟ) has reverence rather than fear, and not only precepts but also doctrines of men. The Douay-Rheims (Ⓡ) has, “And the Lord said: Forasmuch as this people draw near me with their mouth, and with their lips glorify me, but their heart is far from me, and they have feared me with the commandment and doctrines of men.” ¶ Rabbi Rosenberg writes, “According to Rashi, the reading of נִשְׁׁנָה is with a ‘shin,’ meaning ‘came near’ or ‘approached,’ which he explains to mean that they raise themselves up to speak, as though approaching heaven.” Gill has, “Kimhi observes, there is a double reading of the word נִשְׁׁנָה, rendered ‘draw near’: in one reading of it, it signifies to be ‘afflicted’; and then the sense is, ‘when this people are afflicted, with their mouth, and with their lips, they honour me’; that is, when they are in distress, they pray unto him, and profess a great regard for him, speak honourably of him, and reverently to him, hoping he will help and relieve them; see ISAIAH 26:16 but the other reading of the word, in which it has the signification of ‘drawing near,’ is confirmed, not only by the Masora on the text, but by the citation of it in Mathew 15:7 and designs the approach of these people to God, in acts of religion and devotion, in praying to him, and praising of him, and expressing great love and affection for him, and zeal for his cause and interest; but were all outwardly, with their lips and mouths only... their worship of God was not according to the prescription of God, and his revealed will; but according to the traditions of the elders, which they preferred to the word of God, and, by observing them, transgressed it, and made it of no effect; see Matthew 15:3.” Regarding precepts of men, Barnes has: “That is, their views, instead of having been derived from the Scriptures, were drawn from the doctrines of mankind. Our Saviour referred to this passage, and applied it to the hypocrites of his own time Matthew 15:8–9. The latter part of it is, however, not quoted literally from the Hebrew, nor from the Septuagint, but retains the sense: ‘But in vain do they worship me, teaching for doctrines the commandments of men.’” Skinner writes: “Religion, being personal fellowship with God, cannot be ‘learned’ from men, but only by revelation (Matthew 16:17).” Regarding these verses, Jennings says, “And the most serious charge is that people set aside the revelation that God has given, and substitute for the revealed will of God their own precepts.” ¶ Oliver Cowdery, recounting what Moroni shared with the Prophet Joseph Smith included these words: “Wherever the sound shall go it shall cause the ears of men to tingle, and wherever it shall be proclaimed, the pure in heart shall rejoice, while those who draw near to God with their mouths, and honor him with their lips, while their hearts are far from him, will seek its overthrow, and the destruction of those by whose hands it is carried. Therefore, marvel not if your name is made a derision, and had as a by-word among such, if you are the instrument in bringing it, by the gift of God, to the knowledge of the people.”²⁹ ¶ The Prophet Joseph Smith shared this about angel Moroni’s visit: “I was answered that I must join none of them, for they were all wrong; and the Personage who addressed me said that all their creeds were an abomination in his sight; that those professors were all corrupt; that: ‘they draw near to me with their lips,³⁰ but their hearts are far from ²⁹ Cowdery, Oliver, et al., eds. Messenger and Advocate, 1835, p. 80. See note on ISAIAH 1:7.

³⁰ Elder Dallin H. Oaks taught: “The Book of Mormon applies this principle [of priestcraft] to those who seem to be serving the Lord but do so with a hidden motive to gain personal advantage rather than to further the work of the Lord: ‘Priestcrafts are that men preach and set themselves up for a light unto the world, that they may get gain and praise of the world; but they seek not the welfare of Zion’ (2 Nephi 26:29; see also Alma 1:16). Priestcraft is the sin committed by the combination of a good act—such as preaching or teaching the gospel—and a bad motive. The act may be good and visible, but the sin is in the motive. On earth, the wrong motive may be known only to the actor, but in heaven it is always known to God ... The sin of priestcraft is a grievous one. Time after time the Lord has condemned those who appear to men to be his servants, but who, though they draw near to him with their lips, have removed their hearts far from him. This description of those who have no true motive to serve the Lord appears in ISAIAH (29:13), in Matthew (15:8), in 2 Nephi (27:25), and in Joseph Smith’s History (JSH 1:19). In modern as in me, they teach for doctrines the commandments of men, having a form of godliness, but they deny the power thereof.”³¹

